We are writing in response to the article on computer crimes on campus entitled "Hacker hits campus over break," written by Stacey Shackford and printed on Jan. 26, 1999. As computer crimes become more common at the University, we feel the Daily Collegian should become more familiar with issues surrounding computer crimes, especially terminology, to clarify events to the readers.

There were many unanswered questions in the reporting of this incident. For example, the article states that the victim's "computer account" was "hacked," and yet the events described strongly suggest that the individual's personal computer was improperly accessed. This is an important distinction to make, as a "student's computer account" refers to the access and facilities available on University–owned equipment, whereas a "student's computer" refers to personally owned equipment.

The article also quoted OIT's Acceptable Use Policy that "OIT will take any action necessary, including unannounced inspection of a client's files, jobs and terminal sessions..." The policy leaves the definition of "client" unclear. If the "client" is interpreted to be the student using any of OIT's services (dial–in or Ethernet connections, computer labs, etc.), then this policy gives OIT the power to examine any and all files on a student's personal computer at will, as they belong to the "client."

However, if "client" is taken to indicate the student when using a University–owned computer (or an account on a University–owned computer such as Wilde), this policy becomes less draconian, as it allows OIT access only to those files residing on computers owned by the University.

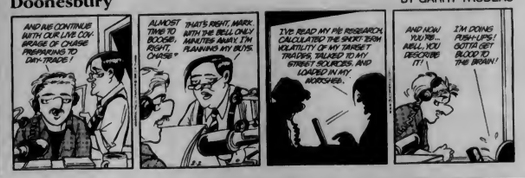
Also, the use of the term "uncrackable" when referring to choosing passwords might be misleading. Although it is sound advice, a better term would be "harder to crack," as any password can be cracked with sufficient effort.

Another issue we wish to bring forward is how OIT has chosen to administer the on–campus network. In the article, it was stated that the University Police, State Police and OIT were able to determine the IP number, or address, of the computer where the problem originated.

Does this indicate that OIT is keeping a record of the traffic that passes through every computer on the campus– wide network? We ask this because there are very few ways to trace network traffic that is not "live" (i.e. occurring while the investigation is being conducted). If OIT is maintaining a record of all traffic on the University network, the users have a right to know.

Brian Fealy
Northeast
Jason Malstrom
Sunderland

❤ write for ed/op ❤



Two important events this Wednesday, Feb. 3:

1. Photos will be taken for all Ed/Op columnists at 3 p.m. in the Collegian office.

2. There will be a brief, mandatory meeting for all current and interested Ed/Op writers at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office as well.

If you have any questions, call Tanya, Gary or Alexis at 545–1491.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Veldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannet Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Foriter News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Fialkow Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

COURTESY LL CAMP

Varsity Green

James Van Der Beek and the rest of the cast of Varsity Blues are still cashing in at the box office.

ARTS & LIVING MEETING

There will be a meeting for all those interested in writing for Arts & Living this semester this Wednesday, Feb. 3, at 6:30 p.m. in the Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center Basement. New writers are encouraged to attend. Returning writers should attend as well. Call 545–1361 and ask for Bryan, Rob, Emily or Kevin for more information.

Hip hop's all–timers debunked

After a seemingly dreary sojourn from the surreal world of academia, I have returned to tussle with contemporary issues concerning urban sound. During the academic intermission, I found myself evaporated in a particular segment of journalism, the February issue of Blaze magazine (If you haven't checked it out, do so as a priority!).

Flipping the pages, I was frankly flabbergasted by some of their decisions for the top 50 greatest MCs ever. The criteria for judgement was based on such aspects as "skills, longevity, innovation and impact." While I cannot fault their intentions, nor dispute their credibility, I have formulated some criticisms to their decisions.

First and foremost, Guru was excluded from the top 50 list?!?! Gangstarr has virtually carried the torch of unsaturated hip–hop for the last decade and Guru has assembled an astonishing resume of five stellar albums as well as two Jazzmatazz masterworks, which pioneered the fusion of hip–hop and live jazz.

Gifted Unlimited Rhymes Universal deserves his 'hard to earn' props yet he did not even make the 'Regrets' section, where Blaze writers acknowledged the emcees who did not make the list. Perhaps he is not as politically influential as a Chuck D or Ice Cube or as deeply philosophical as a Posdnuos or Pharohe Monche, but his 'king of monotone' vocals are a cornerstone in rap quality. For this alone he charts well above the likes of Treach, D.O.C., Kurtis Blow and Luke to name a few.

Secondly, Nas has proven that he is prolific, profound and primarily a lyrical leopard (in other words, he can't be touched.) His spot in Blaze is a bit baffling when considering that 14 artists charted ahead of him.

In terms of skills, few compete with Rass Kass, yet 44 MCs were more recognized, including Will Smith, Kool Keith and Too Short. Sure, Rass Kass' albums have been a bit watery, but his writing ability and competent flow is darn near comparable to Jay Z, who was No. 9 of all time.

While Blaze may be able to stake their claim as a hip–hop authority, there are some arguable discrepancies in their evaluation of all–time hip–hop. They continue their survey evaluating the top 10 producers, DJs, groups, labels, entertainers and executives, all of which are debatable.

Granted, formulating a 'hip–hop all–time list' is a dubious task for a collective of writers with individual opinions, but some aspects are certainly left open for further discussion. Consequently, before disclosing my own "greatest ever" list, I am encouraging an influx of feedback. If you have a top 10 list for MCs, DJs, producers and/or groups please submit it via e–mail. The address is: dynamic_uno@yahoo.com.

Help feed the fire of this heated topic. Stay tuned.

David Katzoff is a Collegian columnist.

~News & Events~

• BRASS RECITAL TONIGHT AT BEZANSON

Feb. 2 — A recital will take place at 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. Horn player Laura Klock, trombonist David Sporny and pianist Nadine Shank will play selections from Strauss and Handel, as well as Minstrel Man by T.J. Anderson and Sea Eagle by Peter Maxwell Davies.

• PULITZER–PRIZE WINNING AUTHOR TO LECTURE ON MUSIC

Feb. 3 — Douglas Hofstadter, author of the award– winning book Goedel, Escher, Bach will lecture on "Does Beautiful Music Spring from Life & Emotions, or is it Basically a Collection of Syntactic Tricks?" at 7:30 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. Hofstadter will talk particularly about computers and their role in the creation of art.

• ROYAL WINNIPEG BALLET TO PERFORM

Feb. 4 — The acclaimed ballet troupe comes to the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 p.m. to perform to the works of Tchaikovsky, played by the Royal Winnipeg Tour Orchestra.

• SPECTRAL VOICES IN NORTHAMPTON

Feb. 6 — Jim Cole and the Spectral Voices, one of the country's most celebrated harmonic singing groups, will give a concert at St. Mary's Church in Northampton on Saturday at 8 p.m. They will be playing selections for their auspicious debut CD, Coalescence.

design

Are you familiar with Quark, Photoshop, and Illustrator?

Graphics

UMass drops a tough one to UNH

By Matt Frascella
Collegian Staff

In the past five years, the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team has faced the University of New Hampshire five times. Each time the Minutewomen have proved successful, despite the fact that the meets have been closely contested.

That streak was put to a halt this weekend when the Wildcats upended the visiting Minutemen by a score of 193.450-190.725 and ended to the recent dominance that UMass has exerted over UNH.

Despite the loss, UMass coach David Kuzara points to several positive aspects in the Minutewomen's meet this weekend as important to their season.

"I felt pretty satisfied with our performance," Kuzara said. "Unfortunately we lost, but fortunately for us we received a score for NCAA qualification. We continued to improve. That was our first away meet and we were able to score well and help us qualify for regionals."

Leading the Minutewomen were Mary Moore and Michelle LoPresti. The tandem scored the highest in the all-around competition for UMass. Moore led the Maroon and White with total score of 38.050, including a 9.775 on the balance beam. LoPresti ranked next for Massachusetts with a total all-around of 37.950.

"Mary Moore and Michelle LoPresti really stood out for us," Kuzara said. "They were our top all-arounders. Michelle was outstanding on three events. Mary Moore was solid on all four events."

Also competing in the all-around for UMass were Mandy Mosby and Jobi Goldberg, recording scores of 37.900 and 37.575 respectively. Jennifer Pokrana notched a score of 9.800 on the uneven bars, the best on the team, as the Minutewomen struggled to keep pace with the Wildcats, who had performed well on their home floor.

Trailing by less than half a point after the first event, Massachusetts was slowly outdistanced by a New Hampshire team that gained momentum throughout the afternoon. UNH earned a higher score on each subsequent apparatus to seal the victory.

"The kinds of mistakes we are making are simple and should be worked out in practice," Kuzara said. "We had a couple of minor things go wrong this weekend. We are really close to reaching our potential. I feel like we are going to see continual improvements. Every weekend is a test for us."

The tests will continue this weekend for the Minutewomen as their road schedule takes them to Philadelphia for a pair of Atlantic 10 matches against Temple and George Washington. Kuzara is confident his team is up to the challenge.

"Our training has been really good," Kuzara said. "We're the best conditioned UMass team that I've ever coached."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team dropped a tough meet to regional rival New Hampshire over the weekend.

Minuteman track and field posts impressive win at UNH meet

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts men's indoor track and field team traveled to the University of New Hampshire this past Saturday to battle with the Wildcats, Holy Cross and Central Connecticut, coach Ken O'Brien knew what was going to happen.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Tom Toye

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

B.J. Cardoza

Before the Jan. 30 meet, he said it would be his UMass squad and UNH that would stay close and compete fiercely for the top two spots. When someone like O'Brien, who has been on the job for 31 years, says something is going happen, chances are it will.

Besides, it was more than his instinct doing the talking. UMass and UNH have had memorable clashes before, with one meet decided by a single point. However, no such drama would take to the stage this time around.

The Minutemen cruised to the top of the quad-meet as O'Brien had promised, finishing the day with 81 points while outpacing New Hampshire (68), Holy Cross (31) and Central Connecticut (13).

O'Brien's forecast applied to more than the final result. Although he is a big supporter of the team concept, and always has a squad that epitomizes the word, he wasn't afraid to point to a few key members of the squad that could be counted on in key meets.

Once again, it was no surprise that many of the names he mentioned earlier in the year placed consistently at the quad-meet.

Senior Dan LeBoeuf, a veteran of the cross-country circuit, finished first in the 800m with a solid time of 1:57.48. Fellow senior Tom Toye took the 200m, while sophomore Marc Sylvander won the 400m.

B.J. Cardoza and Vic Morency both made an impact in the weight events. Cardoza came close to his personal best of 55-feet-9-inches with a throw of 55-feet-8 1/2-inches, while Morency was right on his tail with a mark of 54-feet-11 1/2-inches.

Freshman Wes Shaw took to the air in a big way, winning the high jump with an effort of 6-feet-14-inches and placing second in the pole vault with a mark of 14 feet.

After a disappointing fifth place finish at the New England Challenge Cup Finals, the Minutemen are riding high once again. They will try to carry the momentum into Kingston, R.I. on Feb. 6 when they take part in yet another quad-meet with the University of New Hampshire, the University of Rhode Island and Rider.

Women's tennis opens spring season

By Jason Owens
Collegian Correspondent

A victory by freshman Alison Tross along with solid play from sophomore Robyn Lobovitz highlighted a trip to Cornell for the Massachusetts women's tennis team this weekend.

Tross, a native of Paoli, Pa., received a first-round bye, but was unseeded in the Flight C bracket before winning four straight matches, including a tough third-set tie-breaker in the third round.

The match, a semifinal battle with No. 1-seed Becky Sendnow of Cornell, started slow for Tross, who lost the first set, 6-1. She quickly rebounded though, winning the second set, 6-3, on her way to taking the match in an exciting third-set tie-break. The win set the stage for a three- set victory in the finals over Enelyn Macko of Seton Hall, that Tross won, 6-1, 6-7, 6-2.

Also making a strong showing was Lebovitz, who was seeded third in her division. After dropping her opening match, she came on strong to win three straight matches on her way to taking the championship in the consolation bracket for Flight C. Lebovitz defeated second-seeded Marquax Pierog of Cornell, before beating fourth-seeded Jamie Barker of Army in the finals.

Senior Ola Gerasimova of Greenfield, UMass' top singles player, advanced to the third round of the Flight A bracket before being defeated by Jan Perez of Penn State, 7-6, 6-4. Gerasimova is the top gun on what should be a talented team this spring, and was seeded No. 1 in the tournament before being upset by Perez, who went on to lose in the finals to teammate Rebecca Ho, who also won the Flight A doubles championship.

Annie Hamilton, a freshman playing in the Flight B bracket, also advanced to the semifinals before falling in straight sets to Elizabeth Scherer of Army. Hamilton, who was unseeded in the division, won consecutive matches before falling to Scherer, the No. 3 seed.

The UMass doubles tandem of Jackie Braunstein and Lebovitz were ranked third in the Flight B bracket and made it to the semifinals before being knocked off by the second- seeded team from Cornell.

The tournament kicked off the spring season for the team, which will next be traveling to New Haven, Conn. for a match with Yale at 2 p.m.

UM ski teams have fine weekend

By Sean Lavoine
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's and women's ski teams both took advantage of new snowfall to put impressive finishes at the Brown/UConn Carnival this past weekend at Loon Mountain, N.H.

The women continue to post high finishes, as they placed second in the slalom and fifth in the giant slalom. Their second place slalom finish was their best in the last five years.

In the slalom, the women were led by senior Katie Keane and freshman Tina King, who finished fifth and eighth respectively. Rounding out the top five for the women were Lauren Brodey (16th), Margaret LaBombard (23rd) and Erica Olson (28th).

The team totalled a score of 255.29, which was not far behind the winner, Boston College, which had a score of 245.43.

In the women's giant slalom, UMass was led by King (19th), Brodey (21st), Keane (24th) and Olson (25th).

Boston College also won the giant slalom with a team score of 332.39. UMass finished with a team total of 355.27.

While the women finished second in the slalom, the UMass men's ski team finished second in the giant slalom.

Freshman Ken Thomas took second place in the event to lead the team. Following Thomas in the giant slalom were senior Tom Holden in 12th place and freshman Rich Granger in 15th place.

UMass scored 322.37, placing second behind Plymouth State, which scored 313.27.

Holden placed an impressive third in the slalom to help UMass to a fourth place finish.

"Tom Holden is skiing very well, as is Katie Keane," junior Peter Glawischnig said of his teammates.

Granger finished 14th in the slalom, and sophomore Mike Hadden placed 25th overall to help the team point total.

UMass finished with 236.87 in the slalom race. Colby/Sawyer won the race with a total of 229.42, and Plymouth State finished second with a total 229.86.

While the men's team is racing well, Glawischnig believes the team can still improve.

"If we were to ever have everybody finish the race, I think the team would have a great chance to win some races," he said.

Both UMass ski teams will be in action this coming weekend as they travel to Ascutney Mountain, Vt. for the Boston College Tournament.

Thanks for reading Collegian Sports!

Collegian Sports rocks your world!

STRENGTH • FLEXIBILITY • EXHILARATION
CARDIO KICK BOXING
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB • 256-8000
Mon. @ 5:30
Thurs. @ 4:45
Fri @ 4:15
Sat @ 2:00
www.amherstathletic.com

BELLS PIZZA HOUSE
$1.00 off any large Grinder
Coupon Expires 5/31/99
549-1311

1/2 PRICE Appetizers
• Buffalo Chicken Wings
• Mozzarella Sticks
• Chicken or Beef Nachos
Sunday - Thursday
9 p.m. - Midnight
Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9.
2 miles East of Town Center
256-6446
JOIN NOW FOR OUR 15 WEEK
WINTER SPECIAL ($169)
AND GET A FREE HFC T-SHIRT

Gentle GIANT MOVING COMPANY
SUMMER JOBS!
EXCELLENT PAY – OVERTIME - TIPS
Gentle Giant, a leader in the moving industry, is interested in hiring intelligent, articulate individuals to work as movers. Strength and above average fitness are required. Great job for athletes looking to stay in shape over the summer. Help is needed in our Somerville, Weymouth, Framingham, Tewksbury, Acton and Beverly, MA locations. If you like physical work and like making money, check us out!
For more information call David at 800-466-8844 or 617-806-1008.
29 Harding Street, Somerville, MA 02143
www.gentlegiant.com
BOSTON MAGAZINE BEST OF BOSTON HALL OF FAME

Reason №2 why you should take our GRE course.
You'll score more...
2 Our students improve an average of 212 points. And they significantly out-score students who took that other course.
800-2-REVIEW www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

What is http://estore.aux.umass.edu?

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

• It is your online bookstore. Browse and buy your textbooks by academic department and course number. Every book for every course that's ordered at the Textbook Annex can now be purchased online.

• You can order your books for convenient on-campus pick-up at one of three locations at the start of school:

- Franklin Dining Commons
- Hampden Dining Commons
- University Store at the Campus Center

• Or have your books delivered to your home by UPS. [Sorry, UPS is not available on-campus.]

• Textbooks bought online can be returned or sold at the buyback the same way as purchases made at the Textbook Annex. You can find our return policy at the web site.

Your online textbook store.
Web Convenience/In-store Service

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Figure Skaters Want to get a better figure? Help us start a UMass figure skating club call Jamie at 6-6224

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sorority Open Rush Information session Tuesday FEB 2 @7:00pm in Campus Center RM 162 Call 545-2712 with questions. All University Women invited!

Fraternities/Sororities: Looking for a DJ for your next function? DJ Fooz is now booking, specializing in date parties and formals. Call Tim 549-9127

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease 1 bedroom apartment in Puffton Village. Gas heat & hot water included. 560 a month. Suitable for two Aviable Now!! 549-6434 Sabriya or Jamila

AUTO FOR SALE

'86 Camry 155,000 miles, New tires, Brakes, Timing belt excellent condition for age. Asking $1800. 586-1717

1994 GEO Prism LSI 180,000 miles, standard transmission, ABS, CD, and much more, Excellent condition throughout. Asking 5,000 586-1717

'88 Subaru 4x4 Wagon runs, drives, looks, decent $850. May Trade for motorcycle 773-8586

1988 Ford Festiva High miles well maintained current sticker $500 256-6087

WANTED: Toyotas, Novas, Prizms, Sentras. Any condition. Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

COMPUTERS

Mac Powerbook 520 modem/ethernet/software installed. Perfect for papers and emailing $600.00 NEG. 546-4517

EMPLOYMENT

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

FREE RADIO + $1250! Fundraiser open to student groups & organizations. Earn $3-$5 per Visa/MC app. We supply all materials at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box. 1800-932-0528 x 65. www.ocmconcepts.com

Mothers helper wanted 10-15 hrs/wk afternoons. Must have car and references. Call Jamie 549-7788

Personal Assistant for busy professional $7.00 an hour. Laundry, cat care, paperwork etc. 413-259-1227

Put up Posters in Amherst, Northhampton + colleges $6.00 An hour. Need car Extremely responsible 413-259-1227

Public Relations Jobs Apply now to be a Tour Guide, Admissions Rep or Summer Counselor. Exp'd guides, counselors, and reps on the Campus Center Councourse Feb.1-5 to answer questions.

Help Wanted Earn extra cash!!! Make your own hours!!! Responsible students to market/manage Citibank promotions on campus. Free giveaways! Earn $400+/Week. Call Joann at 1-800-950-8472 Ext. 117

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travell Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

Work Study Job: Peer Housing Counselor $6.50 per hour. Apply 428 Student Union or Call 545-0865

Personal Care Attendant Wanted 6 to 12 hours per week for a women in Amherst. Call Helen 545-1908 - 253-9462

Jobs At The UMass Annual Fund Flexible. Evening hours earn $5.50/hour plus fantastic bonuses gain computer and communications skills come to the basement of Memorial Hall and apply today students only 545-3509

Grill Cook Breakfast Experience Part Time day hours including weekends Apply 7am-3pm Nancy Janes 36 Main St. Amherst

General Labor $7.50 Amherst location needs your help all winter shoveling snow & sanding walk ways. Only available for work one or two days a week? This is the perfect job for you. Call United Personnel Services today to learn more about how snow+work=$$. 800-363-8200

Whitewater guides and River Photographers wanted for part,full time summer jobs outdoor and athletic background a must will train for both positions. Photography position requires some experience. Call Crab Apple Whitewater for info 413-339-0188

Counter Help + Drivers Wanted. Must be able to work 20 hrs a week. Apply at DP Dough

EMPLOYMENT

Males Wanted For Exercise Science Study- earn up to $125-Call Steve 549-3877

More Than Just SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. Camp counselors needed for a private, residential camp in the beautiful Pocono Mountains. We are looking for people with a dedication to children, enthusiasm for diversity, and a desire to share their passion and expertise in any one of the following areas: COMPUTERS, CIRCUS ARTS, BASKETBALL, MAGIC, VOLLEYBALL, TENNIS, DANCE, VIDED, CREATIVE WRITING, ESL, SOCCER,COOKING, RADIO, ROCK MUSIC, GDLF, SKATEBDARDING, ROLLERBLADING, ROCKETRY, NEWSPAPER, FINE ARTS, CREATIVE CRAFTS, MOUNTAIN BIKING, CLIMBING WALL. Call 1-800-399-CAMP Ask for Dan or Nigel

Fraternities-Sororities-Clubs-Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 922-5579

Childcare needed 4 hours a week. 665-7483

On Campus Spokes Person Positions Available CIS is currently hiring motivated outgoing college students for spokes person positions $10.00-$15.00 an hour 10 hours a week on campus call Jodi Grant 800-567-6247

Part Time Jobs with the Sierra Club work on an urgent campaign to protect wildlife and wilderness full time/career positions available earn 55-70$/day Call Alex 413-256-6434 Amherst Center

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted Wait staff/Driver Part Time. Kai Chi Restaurant 586-2774 Mountain Farms Mall

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire Dj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester. Call Tim 549-9127

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 546-1995.

LOCKERS FOR RENT: $5 for spring semester. Going fast! Come to Commuter Services, Room 428 Student Union

FOR SALE

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

Giant Mountain Bike. Bar ends, lock. Like new. $120. Call 546-1773

FURNITURE

Have used furniture or household items for sale? Are you looking for furnishings, appliances or entertainment equipment? Use the commter Services WEB Page bulletin board: http://home.oit.umass.edu/~cshrc

HEALTH & BEAUTY

ATHLETES: build muscles, endurance, burn fat with 100% pure Amino Acid formula Creatine Monohydrate, ect... Call 617-471-2366

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

PERSONALS

Make Lova Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

One Bedroom Available in 4 bdrm house. Begins March 1. Belchertown. $280/month. Call 323-9794. Matt

S Deerfield Country setting quiet + private. 10 miles from Amherst. 1 large furnished bedroom suite with private bath + study phone/tv/cable optional $475.00: 1 furnished bedroom $350.00 mature female grad students, share with single female, non-smoking 413-665-8318

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

Roommate Needed for Hobart Lane Call 549-7461-Jeff. Only $250 a month

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

TRAVEL

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

BOSTON SPRING BREAK'99 To Mazatlan from $599 To Cancun from $369 7 nights, 5 to 14 FREE meals 10 to 32 hours of FREE drinks CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463 Visit our web site www.collegetours.com

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

STOP! DON'T SWALLOW THAT CONDOM.

Save up to 70% on travel, or even travel free.

And no nervous feeling in your stomach when you go through Customs.

www.go4less.com/student

Do you have a sweetheart that you want to send a special message out to on Valentines Day?

Place an Ad in The Classifieds!

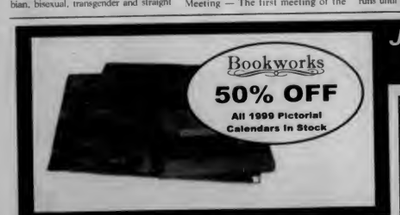
Let your sweetheart know exactly how you feel!!

Your Ad could fill this space!!
Place an Ad in The Classifieds Today!!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, FEB. 2

Community — There will be a blood drive in the Student Union Ballroom from 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Free frozen yogurt for each donor.
Film/Video — The Black History Film Series sponsored by the UMass Black Student Union is featuring Rosewood at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. The event is free and open to the public.
Information — A drop-in informational session on eating disorders will be held from 4-5:30 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Registration is not required. Call 577-5181 for more information.
Meeting — Pride Alliance, the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender and straight ally undergraduate student organization, will be holding an info-social at 7 p.m. in room 162-175 of the Campus Center. Call 545-0154 for more information.
Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.



WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3

Community — There will be a blood drive in the Student Union Ballroom from 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Free frozen yogurt for each donor.
Meeting — The UMass Student Film Society will hold a meeting at 8 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center. Contact Anna at 545-3659 for more details.
Meeting — The first meeting of the UMass Theatre Guild will be at 7 p.m. in room 101 of the Campus Center. Contact Jana at 545-0415 for more information.
Meeting — Pride Alliance, the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender and straight ally undergraduate student organization, will be holding a meeting for anyone interested in being involved in planning Queerfest '99 at 7 p.m. in 413B of the Student Union. Call 545-0154 for more details.
Show — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space will present "The Mid-Way Show," an annual group exhibition showcasing a variety of mediums, styles and themes produced by second-year graduate students in the UMass Department of Art. The show runs until Feb. 12, and there will be an opening reception from 4-6 p.m.
Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.
Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.
Conference — Share your experiences and learn more about learning communities at a conference entitled "Making Connections: Learning Communities for a Student-Centered University" on Feb. 5 from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. in room 165 of the Campus Center. To register for this free conference and lunch call Anne Malone at 545-0851.
Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.
Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. Also searching for the 1998-99 cover contest winner. Deadline is the end of December. Call 5-4220 for more information.
Volunteers — Volunteers are needed to train and facilitate workshops on contraception and sexually transmitted disease prevention during spring semester 1999. Men and women needed. Contact Karen or Day at 577-5188 for more information.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Bookworks
50% OFF
All 1999 Pictorial Calendars In Stock

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%
We give all of our profits to support University Programs
The University Store "Got Bike a mall... Better."

HSCN Mounting Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board		18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3	Hartford	19	UVC-TV19	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston	20	ABC/40	Springfield
5	ABC/5	Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57	Springfield	22	NBC/22	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	23	Syndicate
8	UPN/20	Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel		25	CTN
10	NBC/30	New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61	Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24	Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN		30	Univision
14	International		31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV		32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven		33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 2, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Surviving AIDS"		I'll Make Me a World (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3)				Colonial Era to the Civil War
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Act of Terror" (In Stereo)		"Family Blessings" (1999, Drama) Lynda Carter		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Act of Terror" (In Stereo)		"Family Blessings" (1999, Drama) Lynda Carter		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Home Imp.	Hughleys	Spin City	Sports Night	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Felicity "Finally" (In Stereo)		News		Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Clueless (R)	Malcolm-Edds	Between Bros.	News	Newsradio	Married...With
WTXX	6	Home Imp.	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lane	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Malcolm-Edds	Between Bros.	News	Newsradio	Tonight Show
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Mad Abt. You
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Fresier	King of the Hill "PJs (In Stereo)		Guinness World Records		News		Friends	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Surviving AIDS"		I'll Make Me a World (In Stereo)		(Part 2 of 3)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Home Imp.	Hughleys	Spin City	Sports Night	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Malcolm-Edds	Between Bros.	Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	"Married for Death" (1990, Drama) Steven Seagal				"Star Chamber" (1983)		Law & Order	Trophy
A&E	60	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Mammony"		Biography: Dr. Ruth		American Justice (R)		Late Edition Primetime		Sports	Moneyline
CNN	62	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein a Money
COM	63	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Protocol" (1984, Comedy)		Goldie Hawn, Chris Sarandon,				Martial Arts (R)
DISC	69	New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery: Grizzlies		Martial Arts (R)		New Detectivas: Case Studies		FBI Files
ESPN	64	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Michigan State at Penn State (Live)					College Basketball: Tennessee at Arkansas. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	65	Eileen	Eileen	Party of Five "In Loco Parentis"		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		Any Day Now (In Stereo)		Intimate Portrait "Faith Ford"		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	67	Countdown	Cut (In Stereo)	Beavis Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Silk & Silly	Video Clichés	Total Request Live (In Stereo)		Real World	Biorhythm	Ultra Sound	Back in the Day
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Sheester	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Laverne	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	66	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Xmas Stories	Star Trek "The Devil in the Dark"			Highlander: The Series		Friday the 13th: The Series		Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC	69	28 Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Hoping for a Miracle"		Trauma: Life in the ER		UFO/Apollo 13 (R)		Strange Science: Weird Places		Trauma: Life in the ER
TNT	65	Due South "The Edge"		ER "February 5, 1995"		"For a Few Dollars More" (1965, Western) Clint Eastwood, Lee Van Cleef						"Part 2, Walking Tall" (1975)
USA	70	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger				In "Beyond the Law" (1992, Drama) Charlie Sheen, (In Stereo)		New York Undercover
HBO	69	(4:45) "Zeus"	HBO Family	Little Curious	Crashbox	"Spice World" (1997) Melanie Brown, PG-13				"Braveheart" (1997) Kirt Russell, R		Sopranos "Meadowlands"
MAX	69	(5:00)		"In the Line of Duty: Kidnapped" (1995)				"Clear and Present Danger" (1994, Drama) Harrison Ford, PG-13			In "Uncle Sam" (1997)	Timothy Bottoms, R
SHOW	69	"Ringpin" (1996, Comedy) Woody Harrelson, PG-13				"Fled" (1996) Laurence Fishburne, R				"The Night Caller" (1998) Shanna Reed, R		"A Chef in Love" (1996)

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You may pass some people by in your attempts to reach a distant goal today, but some are likely to travel the entire distance with you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You cannot run away from the problem or problems that are currently plaguing you. You must be willing to face the music today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Something you've had simmering on a back burner for quite some time is now ready to receive your direct attention. Give it!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — "Relief" is spelled many different ways to you, depending on the circumstances today. You must know the type of remedy you'll really need at any given time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Creature comforts may be far less important to you than the learning you can enjoy as a result of getting as far from home as possible today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Spending your time with others can be quite enjoyable at this time, but there are some things you can only accomplish on your own. Don't procrastinate!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Someone close to you is likely to send up a signal that is meant for you, and you alone. Don't turn your back on someone who has gone to that kind of trouble.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Your prospects are good, but make sure that you know how to do it and what is required of you if you're in the position of making certain key decisions today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You're going to want to stay on schedule, regardless of the difficulties you may encounter during certain portions of the day. By all means, prioritize!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Something you observe by accident today is likely to affect you quite strongly, and cause you to rethink a recent decision.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You'll want to take part in something that many others are enjoying at this time, but it may involve something of a sacrifice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You'll find yourself traveling a long-distance today, literally or figuratively. If figuratively, get ready for some intellectual battles!

Quote of the Day

"Ah don't wahnt...your lahf!"

–the dude from Varsity Blues

Close to Home By John McPherson

A grim sense of foreboding struck Glenda and Ted as they opened the fourth copy of "Can This Marriage Be Saved?"

ACROSS
1 — away: travel for free
5 Happy
9 Comic Johnson
13 Exhort
14 Starlets' quests
16 Skyrocket
17 Bland
18 Shakespeare's forest
19 Italian wine city
20 Newspaper pg.
21 Actress Lupino
22 Most inactive
24 Lodges
26 Fraternal org.
27 Type of bean
30 Kipling's "— Courageous"
34 Missouri river
35 Ram or stallion
36 Ginger cookie
37 TV alien
38 Raise
39 Actress Gardner
40 Thailand's neighbor
42 A Chaplin
43 Used the VCR
45 Wilting
47 Mild and soft
48 Arm bone
49 Pier
50 Musical direction
53 Actor Brynner
54 Chat
58 Rell
59 Grill
61 Computer-screen graphic
62 Ms. Sommer
63 Fry quickly
64 Ore source
65 Beloved
66 Walked
67 Penmeter

DOWN
1 Japanese wrestling
2 Stumble
3 Act flirtatious
4 Marriage ceremony
5 Like unclear pictures
6 Parliament members
7 "M*A*S*H" star
8 Actress Ruby
9 Flowering shrubs
10 Stood up
11 Toddlers
12 Give off (heat)
15 Bit (of gossip)
23 Speck
25 Society-page word
26 Light wood
27 Eucalyptus eater
28 Muslim's religion
29 "Platoon" actor
30 "The — Mutiny"
31 Not appropriate
32 Type of orange
33 Tool for digging
35 Dinero
38 Hangs out (with)
41 More like a bug in a rug?
43 Herbal beverage
44 Whenever 46 "The Greatest"
47 Bamboozled
49 Ecuador's capital
50 Ripened
51 Former candidate Bob
52 "Diana" singer
53 Part of BYOB
55 Sour
56 Not short
57 Pistefia ate
60 Lab denizen

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	H	A	G		A	N	G	E	L		H	E	M	P
L	E	N	A		F	O	N	D	A		O	R	E	O
A	R	K	S		R	O	A	S	T		E	L	I	S	P
V	E	R	N	E	L		N	I	C	H	O	L	E
			O	A	S		S	H	O	E
A	B	L	U	S	H		T	I	G	R	E	S	S
R	O	O	S	T		G	R	I	N		G	A	I	T
B	O	P		P	R	O	N	S		A	Y	I	S
O	N	E		B	L	A	C	K		C	H	E	E	S	E
R	E	D	W	O	O	D		O	R	A	T	O	R
		A	C	N	E			P	A	Y
I	G	N	I	T	E		C	H	I	P	M	U	N	K
M	O	O	T		T	A	L	O	N		O	P	E	N
P	A	N	E		U	N	A	N	I	M	E		W	O	R	E
S	L	E	D		C	A	N	E	S		S	N	O	W

2-2-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hot & Spicy Chicken Wings
International Burger
Harvest Burger

DINNER
Veal Parmesan
Mandarin Chicken
Potato Mushroom Delite

Worcester
LUNCH
Hot & Spicy Chicken Wings
International Burger
Harvest Burger

DINNER
Veal Parmesan
Mandarin Chicken
Potato Mushroom Delite

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hot & Spicy Chicken Wings
International Burger

DINNER
Veal Parmesan
Mandarin Chicken
Potato Mushroom Delite

Berkshire
LUNCH
Hot & Spicy Chicken Wings
International Burger
Harvest Burger

DINNER
Veal Parmesan
Mandarin Chicken
Potato Mushroom Delite

sponsored by Mayor McCheese:

Night Editor — Casey McKane
Photo Technitian — Magnum McPhoto
Copy Editor — Ken Mc "space" Donald Production McSupervisor — Rob "Fifi" McSnow
Production Staff — David "beefcake" McPermenter, D.J. "Fifi Fresh" McCorey

WNBA point guard honored in Amherst

Amherst's Jamila Wideman looks beyond basketball

AMHERST — Her success simply cannot be measured in terms of basketball. It cannot be measured in assists or steals or NCAA Final Four appearances. No matter that she started for six years on the girls' varsity basketball team right here in Amherst, and went undefeated to win the state championship her senior year.

In fact, in the long run, her achievements off the court will far outweigh her contributions to the game of basketball.

Jamila Wideman, point guard for the WNBA Los Angeles Sparks, is one athlete who views her role in society as one that is larger than life. No, she doesn't think she is above everybody else, spouting off to the press about the lack of money or respect she earns. She just isn't one to forget her roots either.

Last night Jamila was honored at Amherst's Hickory Ridge Country Club by the Amherst Sports Advocacy Program as their 1999 Sports Woman of the Year for her community service and high level of success.

Growing up in both Laramie, Wyo. and Amherst, the little girl played hoops with her dad and her older brothers and the boys on the playground. Her role models were a mix of political, cultural and athletic figures who each seemed to share a secret bond with her. Whether it was simply the fact that she and Celtic point guard Kenny Anderson are both lefty point guards, or that she and Nelson Mandela both share in the African heritage, Jamila admired their success and achievement.

An esteemed student and athletic All-American, Jamila also excelled in track and field as well as tennis. She graduated from high school after being inducted into the National Honor Society with a 3.6 GPA, equipped with a scholarship to Stanford University.

With the Cardinal, she continued her academic success and was chosen captain of the women's basketball team an unprecedented four years. Jamila received the 1997 GTE Award for nation's Most Outstanding Academic and Athletic Student and the Ron Ciaraello Award for Academic Excellence and Leadership.

She graduated with a double major in political science and African-American studies. Jamila is no stranger to academia: her father, as John Edgar Wideman, a Rhodes scholar, is also an award-winning writer and a professor here at the University of Massachusetts.

So what is it that makes Jamila one of the most popular players in the WNBA? In two seasons she has averaged 2.5 points a game and shot just .248 from the floor. Is it because she is so widely endorsed and has a huge fleet of endorsement deals? No. Did she play on the 1996 Olympic gold-medal winning team that caused such a fuss in Atlanta? Nope. Not that either.

It all comes back to Jamila's belief that she can change society because of the role she has earned. Her ultimate goal is to become a civil rights attorney. She is highly involved in programs that assist inmates in prisons to adjust to the real world once they are released. But her most recognized work so far has been with young women.

When Jamila was chosen third overall in the 1997 WNBA draft, she was offered a contract with Nike, one in which she refused unless they agreed to sponsor her program, "Hoopin' With Jam."

Under her strict vision, its goal is to "arm young women with the freedom to imagine possibility and the courage to redefine their identity through self-expression." In simpler terms, she is teaching underprivileged girls ages 8-18 about Latino and African-American poetry, short stories and song lyrics along with basketball.

"I hope to continue to create more and better opportunities for young women," Wideman said in a quote from with the WNBA.

Unlike Charles Barkley and other superstar athletes, she is excited about the challenge of being a role model to children. She remembers all of the young girls who came to admire her skills on the court and embrace her spirit off it.

What's important to realize in the wake of the NBA's lockout, is that there is another league out there, its sister league, that is just dying for that kind of responsibility. And once again, Jamila is in the eye of the storm.

Her father accepted her award at last night's banquet because she had to report to veterans camp with the Sparks.

"Jamila has always been a spearhead, someone out in front of the crowd," John Wideman said. "She is not a big person [physically], but it's the spirit that's contagious and infects her teammates."

And that is what makes Jamila a role model.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian staff member.

KARA STOKES/ COLLEGIAN

UMass professor John Wideman accepts an award for his daughter, WNBA point guard Jamila Wideman, last night at the Hickory Ridge Country Club in Amherst.

Men's swim drops close meet against Rutgers

By Jimmy Chen
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team dropped a 121-114 decision to Rutgers last Saturday afternoon at Joseph R. Rogers Pool.

It was another defeat in the Minutemen's disheartening 4-3 dual meet record. UMass swimmers never seemed to be able to get on track as the faster swimmers from Rutgers were too much for the Minutemen.

"I was disappointed with all the losing, but not disappointed with the kids that swam. They were just swimming their hearts out," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said. "We gave all we could. The kids swam great."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

B.J. Brannan

They swam great but not great enough to earn victories. Only senior Brian Wisniewski and sophomore standout Chris Arsenault were able to win individual races.

Wisniewski topped all swimmers in the 200-yard individual medley by posting a career-best time of 1:42.06.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Geoff Gear

Arsenault also took an individual victory in the 200 freestyle (1:44.07).

The 400 free relay team, with Arsenault, Wisniewski, junior Henry Turner and sophomore Joe Martin, also won with a time of 3:10.10.

Sophomore Billy Brown was able to add points to the scoreboard with his two third-place finishes. Freshman Josh Kimball was also able to contribute.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

David Korikowski

Wisniewski, Dave Koritkoski, Geoff Gear and B.J. Brannan were honored before the meet for Senior Day. Together they have helped UMass to win the Atlantic 10 title for the past three years.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Brian Wisniewski

Brannan, who sat out the last meet due to an injury, is one of the strongest distance swimmers in UMass history.

He holds the school record in the 1650 free, ranks second in the 500 free, and fifth in the 200 free. He was also 1998 All- Atlantic 10 conference selection.

Geoff Gear, who was also out for the last meet, is an outstanding swimmer in the butterfly and freestyle. He is third on the all-time school list in the 200-yard butterfly and fourth in the 100-yard butterfly.

David Koritkoski is one of the school's best backstroke swimmer, as he is second all-time at UMass in the 100 back and fourth in the 200 back.

He has been the big part of UMass team since his freshman year, as his 200 medley relay team captured the 1995 New England Championship.

Brian Winniewski is one of the finest and most versatile swimmers in New England. He holds the school records in the 100 back and 200 back, and he ranks third in the 200 IM and fourth in the 200 free.

Wisniewski had a first-place effort at the 1996 New England Championships, and was ranked in three events for the 1998 Atlantic 10 championships.

Men's gymnastics picks up two wins

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

Last weekend the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team traveled to Cambridge and came away with crushing victories over both the Masssachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of Vermont.

UMass easily took first place with a score of 221.00 to the Engineers' 171.25 and Catamounts' 183.5.

This embarrassing spread should come as no surprise, as the Minutemen have dominated these two squads virtually every season.

Junior Jeff LaVallee won three individual events and took the all-around title in the meet. LaVallee won the parallel bars (9.65) and the high bar (9.8), while finishing with a tie for first on the still rings (9.55) adding to his all-around score of 56.2.

Senior Stephen Pryor won on the pommel horse (9.45) and tied LaVallee for first on the still rings (9.55), while placing second on both the vault (9.1) and all-around competition (55.0).

Senior Dan Young took the first place spot on vault with a 9.2.

Senior Phil Lieberman had a strong showing on the horizontal bar with the second place score of 9.35.

Sophomore powerhouse Bryan McNulty finished first on the floor exercise with a score of 9.45.

"I think that I did pretty well," McNulty said. "I focused on hitting my passes consistently and keeping good form, and I think that it paid off."

Although UMass won the competition, its score was not quite as high as it would have hoped. This meet was an opportunity to gain a high score, but a 221.0 was not quite what the Minutemen were looking for.

"The gym at MIT was not what we had expected. It was small and things were cramped together. The springboard wasn't great, and the horse was three feet away from the vault," McNulty said.

"We can't blame our performance entirely on the gym, but it definitely didn't help."

The poorly "engineered" gym can certainly explain the low scores on vault for the Minutemen.

"We are still learning new vaults, but these scores didn't reflect upon the team's true ability," McNulty said.

Although UMass came out on top in Cambridge, they were quite disappointed with the scores as a whole.

The nationally-ranked No. 5 team wants to move up in the standings in order to get a sure spot at NCAA regionals this year.

UMass women's track team has solid showing at BU's Terrier Classic

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

This past Sunday, the Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team competed in the Terrier Classic hosted by Boston University.

This meet played host to such powerhouses as Louisiana State University, Tulane University and the University of California-Los Angeles as well as some independent runners. Because of this format the meet was not scored.

"We were looking for more individuals to qualify for the New England meet.

So far we have 23 [qualifiers] with one more meet to go [before the New Englands]," UMass coach Julie LaFreniere said. "We're looking to qualify three more."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Rosey Bryan

Senior Nicole Way and junior Andrea Comeau led the way by placing second in the 1,000m and high jump, respectively.

Way ran a season best 2:52.57, a feat good enough to qualify her for both the New England Championships and the ECAC Championships.

Post-grad Rosey Bryan had another strong showing by placing fourth in the 55m high hurdles. This came on the heels of her Atlantic 10 Performer of the Week honors last week.

In the long jump, Melanie Bell had a jump of 17-feet-5 1/4-inches.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Nicole Way

The overall best showing for UMass came from senior Shelanda Irish, who was the top finisher in three events. She placed 61th in the 200m (26.08), 23rd in the 400m (59.42), and 10th in the long jump (18-feet-1 1/2-inches).

Also in the long jump, Melanie Bell had a jump of 17-feet-5 1/4-inches.

Johanna Lelke set a school record with her performance in the pole vault, with vault of 9-feet-1/4-inch.

Sally Hirsch placed 24th in the 3,000m. Kristin Cisowski ran a personal best 5:04.26 in the mile.

Tracy Meagher and Lizzy Sheptick turned in sound performances in the 5,000m. Sheptick ran a personal best 18:17.3, while Meagher ran a 18.05.92.

In the shot put, Carole LaPlante placed sixth with a toss of 41-feet-1 1/2-inches.

Alison Tostevin finished ninth with her throw of 38-feet-6 3/4-inches. The weight events saw Giselle Nicolas throw 47-feet-8-inches, which was good enough to place her sixth.

Women's swim team back on track with an easy win over RU

By Lawrence Redford
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team got back on track this weekend with a victory over the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers.

After losing for the first time this season to Boston College and the University of Connecticut in consecutive meets, the Minutewomen trounced Rutgers, 150-93.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Julie Alexander

The Minutewomen won 10 of the 13 total events, while cruising to victory.

The event that stood out the most was the 1000-yard freestyle, an event in which freshman Anne Dettloff set a UMass team record with a winning time of 10:20.41.

Coach Bob Newcomb had nothing but praise for his freshman swimmer.

"She continually gets better," Newcomb said.

According to Newcomb, junior Marci Hupp gave an "outstanding performance" en route to her 200 free victory (1:56.09).

Sophomore Julie Dragon won the 50-yard free in a time of 24.85, while the 200-yard individual medley went to junior Andrea Spencer, who posted a time of 2:11.13.

One of the most consistent swimmers for UMass this year has been junior Elizabeth Risotto.

"She continually performs well at every meet," said Newcomb of Risotto.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Amy Mullen

On Saturday, she did so again by winning the 200 backstroke in a time of 2:05.63.

The 200-yard breaststroke went to sophomore Sarah Newell, who won in a time of 2:27.44.

The divers for UMass also performed well in taking both boards. Senior Kim Schadt won from the three-meter board scoring a 237.30.

While Robin Velona won the one-meter board with a score of 231.60, Newcomb knows that every member of the team contributed to the victory.

"These are just some of the highlights, it was a complete team effort. It was a great meet against a very good team [Rutgers]," he said.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Kim Schadt

Being the last home meet of the season means it was the last time for a handful of seniors to swim at home.

Schadt is one of the four seniors leaving the team. While at UMass, Schadt was a three-time Athletic Director's Honor Roll selection.

Senior tri-captain Julie Alexander will leave UMass with the third fastest times in school history in the 100 breaststroke (1:09.97) and the 200-yard breaststroke (2:26.14).

Amy Mullen, the second of the senior tri-captains, was a member of the 400 free relay team in 1997 that took third place at the Atlantic 10 Championships.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Shana Strothers

In 1996, she helped the 200 free relay team to a second place finish at the A-10 Championships. In addition, she has been named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll all six of her semesters while at UMass.

Shana Strothers, the last of the tri-captains, will be sorely missed by the Minutewomen. She is third in the UMass history books in the 200 backstroke (2:09.39).

The meet this Saturday against Fordham is the team's last preparation before the Atlantic 10 Championships (Feb. 18- 20). Last year against Fordham the Minutewomen won easily with a score of 193-106.

(no more splitting headaches)

Free AT&T Call Organizer℠ Service. Say good-bye to the hassle of splitting phone bills between roommates. Plus, enjoy 10¢ a minute calls and get 100 FREE minutes.

Live off campus? Get FREE AT&T Call Organizer Service.

100 FREE MINUTES

AT&T One Rate℠ Off Peak*:

Sign up now and get 100 FREE minutes.*
Visit www.att.com/college
or call 1 800 654.0471 and mention offer code 66114.

It's all within your reach. AT&T

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 7 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Wednesday, February 3, 1999

Town awards female sports advocates

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

On Monday night, the Amherst Sports Advocacy Program awarded four local women athletes for their achievements at the Hickory Ridge Country Club, in Amherst.

The first recipient of the 1999 Sports Woman Community Service Award was Elizabeth Skeleton, a teacher and track and field coach at Amherst Regional High School, as well as a UMass alumnus.

In relating an experience she had with basketball player Jamila Wideman, another award recipient of the evening, Skeleton jokingly said, "Jamila became an excellent athlete after track and field [at Amherst Regional High School]. When she started she couldn't touch her toes."

Skeleton also pointed out Wideman's membership on the 1992 Western Massachusetts championship team.

Wideman, a member of the Women's National Basketball Association's [WNBA] Los Angeles Sparks team, could not attend the event because of her participation in WNBA veterans camp. Accepting the award on her behalf was her father, John Wideman, a UMass English professor and distinguished author.

"If you've watched her play, you know it's her spirit that is contagious. She has an amazing fan club all around the country. There'd be lines all around with 'Jamila' signs at her games," Wideman said.

Wideman also read a note his daughter wrote to the audience:

"I take all these memories with me as I move forward in my life. I want to create better opportunities for young women. This is a small town, but it has created its fair share of big people."

Another honoree not in attendance was Dale Hodges. After filling the position of assistant coach for the UMass women's basketball coach for two years, Hodges pursued her dream of playing professionally. At 30 years old Hodges joined the American Basketball League's [ABL] New England Blizzard team, and proved herself to be an asset to the team.

Because the ABL filed for bankruptcy in December, Hodges is currently playing ball in Tarbes, France. Anthony Martin, a friend of Hodges read a letter she wrote as well.

"Unfortunately the [ABL] filed chapter 11. This was a very devastating event for women pursuing hoop dreams like myself," Hodges wrote.

Her spirituality, she noted, has kept her positive.

"While we look not at the things that are seen, but at the things that are not seen," Hodges wrote, quoting a Bible passage.

Receiving an award for her work in Western Massachusetts girls' athletic organizations, Vice Chancellor for student affairs, Jo-Anne Vanin took the podium, along with her mother and daughter.

"This is fitting. This is another arm of [Vanin's] passions and her capabilities. I think back to the days of screaming 'that's my child,'" said Vanin's mother.

Vice-Chancellor Vanin said she coaches simply because she loves it.

"Success and achievement is not a personal thing or an individual thing, we are nurtured, criticized, and supported by other people," she said, "Through coaching you learn the values of life."

KARA STORES / COLLEGIAN

Elizabeth Skeleton, coach and teacher at Amherst Regional High School, accepts the 1999 Sports Woman Community Service Award Monday night.

UMass and Amherst prepare for Y2K

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

As the millennium computer glitch approaches, officials and residents of Amherst and the University of Massachusetts are finding out Y 2 worry about Y2K and taking action to prepare for possible problems.

"We definitely will be disrupted. What is unknown is the extent of the [breakdown]. All we need is a little disruption and the ripple effect [will cause problems]," said Dyan Wiley, a member of Amherst Area Y2K Citizen's Group which is working to help individuals prepare for the problem.

The glitch happens when a computer can't recognize the year 2000. To save space, some programs and computers have only two digits to keep track of what year it is, so 1999 is '99 to the computer. When the ball in Times Square finally comes down Jan. 31 1999 computers will think it is '00 and won't be able to function.

The University is keeping tabs on Y2K problem areas through quarterly reports.

"Progress for areas identified is certainly quite satisfactory," said John Dubach, assistant chancellor for information technologies.

Dubach said the areas are coded by color according to their status of Y2K compliance, blue being the most compliant then green, yellow and red. The Logicraft Served CD Databases was listed as red. It is noted in the report that the system has not been evaluated in detail because it may be replaced or upgraded but either solution is expected to be done before 2000. Housing Services Cable Network was listed as Yellow/Red because it has not been evaluated because of "staff transition." But it is expected to be evaluated in the next report due in the next two weeks.

As far as a contingency plan if the power, water or other essentials become unavailable, Dubach said, "they're all still trying to formulate them." But he does not feel there will be chaos when the New Year arrives.

"I think we're going to be in good shape," Dubach said.

Because of the University's heating system, electricity can be generated even if it goes out in Amherst. Dubach said if that happens, electricity will only be used in some buildings.

The Town of Amherst is also preparing for the new millennium by working with the citizen's Y2K group as well as utilities and others to limit breakdowns in Amherst.

"The Town Manager is working with our office to update the Emergency Management Plan so that it is modern and can accomodate Y2K," said Nancy Maglione, director of administration and finance. "Amherst is very, very dependant on electricity. It makes our waste water treatment plant work."

Maglione said there have been meetings between Amherst and electric companies to ensure power doesn't go out.

"We're somewhat encouraged they are on top of it," Maglione said. "If we continue to fix what we need to fix I think we'll be OK"

While Amherst worries about overall problems, the citizen's group is puzzling over how to help individuals.

"We've got people who can't be transported very easily. Old people will sit in their houses and freeze. We've got low income people who can't stockpile food," Wiley said. "A lot of us [in the group] want to go back in denial stages we feel most people are in."

But she said Y2K is problem for everyday people.

"We are a group of very practical people... We have senior citizens to college kids," Wiley said.

In their first major event, the citizen's group is holding a forum about Y2K on Feb. 28 from 1 p.m.–4 p.m. in Grace Church. It will address individual, business and government preparedness as well as telecommunications, power, banking and other questions.

Power plants, ATMs next up for MassPIRG

By Natty Yagudin
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) started the semester with an environmental recruitment drive at the Campus Center concourse yesterday afternoon.

"We're collecting signatures to Governor Cellucci. We're trying to get him to move on a promise he made to clean up the five dirtiest power plants in the state," said Jay Rasku, a campus MassPIRG coordinator.

The five plants, one of which is on Mount Tom, have not been subject to current environmental standards, said Rasku.

So far 200 signatures have been solicited, Rasku estimated.

"We want to get 1,000 signatures from UMass. We'll also talk to town officials to get them to endorse the campaign," said Rasku.

The petition is also a local reaction of a national federal budget study which exposed corporate welfare and environmentally dangerous practices of companies.

"These programs fund efforts that

Turn to PLANTS, page 3

Hollywood hopefuls: grant and equipment awarded to UM dept

BETH KERKORIAN / COLLEGIAN

Professor C.A. Griffith and Marta Carlson, along with their students, await the arrival of some new film equipment.

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The same high-tech Panasonic film equipment used in Hollywood will now be used in a University of Massachusetts communications course, offered for the first time in 20 years.

The opportunity for the course comes due to a grant worth $350,000 in Panasonic/Kodak film equipment.

The grant was awarded to C.A. Griffith, a Five College assistant professor of film/video production, who teaches in the University's Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies and at Smith College.

Griffith "aggressively pursued it [the award]," and feels it will help greatly in preparing students for careers in the film industry.

"This is a highly competitive grant," Griffith said. "Schools from across the country compete for this grant, and it's a little magic that's happened on campus. They [students] are excited to get the class going."

Students in Griffith's class, "Film II: Intermediate/Advanced 16 millimeter [mm] Production" will work with a Panaflex camera for two weeks, beginning with a two-day seminar taught by a representative from Panavision's New Filmmaker program and followed by discussion on film stocks by a Kodak representative.

The final product will be a 10–15 minute long film shot by a 16-mm Panavision camera and using film stock donated from Kodak.

Senior communications film major Andrew Portnoy said the experience will be a cummulation of all his film studies and can apply all he's learned to it.

"I think this it a great opportunity for me," Portnoy said. "It's a great way to go out and bring something to life and take something tangible with me from my education."

Also involved in the project is teaching assistant (TA) Marta Carlson, an anthropology graduate student, whose credentials include working in the motion picture industry and having worked on many television series, including "The Cosby Show."

Griffith feels this is a historic event on many levels, creating great opportunities for students to gain experience.

"They're having access to the type of equipment they would never see unless they were on a large budget independent film or even a Hollywood picture," Griffith said. "This is a really unique opportunity."

Catherine Portuges, interdepartmental program director in film studies, feels the grant is a great honor.

"This grant shows that in less than a decade, our program has come to rank among the top film studies programs in the country," Portuges said in a press release.

Currently, Griffith and the class are looking for cast members including: a lead Vietnamese American woman, an Asian American, a 20–year–old teen, and a 40–year–old man, as well as extras.

The film will be shot with the new camera and film equipment around the surrounding areas.

Senior education/communications major Michelle Harris stresses the benefit of getting involved.

"It's definitely a humongous opportunity that not everyone gets to experience," Harris said. "Once you graduate you'll never have another opportunity like this again."

Auditions for roles in the film will be held Sunday, Feb. 7 at noon in 108 South College.

BETH KERKORIAN / COLLEGIAN

Keeping Dry?
Sophomore English major Abby Cahill and sophomore Japanese major Holly Reis avoid the wet weather yesterday.

Lewinsky video viewed; Jordan gives deposition

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senators got their first chance to see Monica Lewinsky's videotaped testimony Tuesday and came away underwhelmed, seemingly dimming the chance that she will be called to the Senate floor. Presidential friend Vernon Jordan was questioned in a new deposition.

While the Lewinsky tapes were being played at four closed Capitol sites for senators and their aides — printed transcripts were available as well — House prosecutors were questioning Jordan in a secure room elsewhere in the building about his assistance for the one-time White House intern.

The Jordan deposition was contentious at times, according to sources familiar with the deposition. White House lawyers asked two questions at the end after asking none of Ms. Lewinsky.

On one issue of possible conflict, Jordan adamantly denied he ever asked Ms. Lewinsky to destroy drafts of love letters to Clinton, the sources said. Ms

Turn to VIDEO, page 3

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 42 LOW: 35	HIGH: 38 LOW: 26	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30

SOURCE: CNN.COM

NEWS

Pope's plea produces pardon

Pope John Paul II helps Darrell Mease, a man convicted for the shooting of a parapelegic, get off death row.

PAGE 3

ARTS

Who's the man?

Oasis badboy Noel Gallagher has The Masterplan, and Primus' EP gives more than auditory delights in this week's Trax. Also, college comedy comes to town.

PAGE 5

SPORTS

The sinking ship limps onward

Senior center Lari Ketner and the Massachusetts men's basketball team are in danger of failing to qualify for the NCAA tournament.

PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 8
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
FYI 8
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

~NEWS BRIEF~

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Parking Garage Building Committee will be doing some quick accounting and fast talking this month after a motion was passed last night to start the process of holding a special Town Meeting about the garage.

It's crunch time for the subcommittee which will have to meet with architects Feb. 16 to get final costs for the garage then the same day put together a spread sheet of the garage's finances and submit it to the Town Meeting finance committee that night.

The Select Board will have to sign the warrant article, that will list the price of the garage at $4.5 million, in order for there to be a special Town Meeting on the issue.

There was considerable debate over whether to request $4.5 million or the more probable cost of $4.3 million, both of which are over the original $4 million projection. If the warrant article for $4.5 million is accepted by Town Meeting the committee members plan to actually ask for $4.3 million but having $4.5 million will offer some leeway.

"I understand the difficulty of getting an extra $500,000 from Town Meeting but it is true we were not doing this to spend $4 million. We're doing this to get some parking," said Elisa Campbell, co-chairperson of the committee.

"You're dealing with a two-thirds vote [for Town Meeting approval]," said Fred Hartwell a committee member. "As soon as you go beyond 4.3 [million] it looks like, 'Didn't anybody know what they were doing when they put in the warrant?'"

The additional $300,000-$500,000 would be in contingency costs for things like an automatic drip irrigation system or more attractive paving. But the original figure of $4 million was said to have been "pulled out of a hat," by several committee members who wondered if going over the figure was necessary.

The more expensive garage would have a reinforced deck and more spaces, approximately 211. A cheaper version has no reinforcement and fewer spaces.

Amherst Police Log

Arrests

Feb. 1

Jason Sprague, 22, of 18 Pleasant Ln., East Falmouth, was arrested at 1:30 a.m., and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol. According to police reports, Sprague was traveling northbound on North Pleasant Street at a high speed. While attempting to turn into Pufton Village Apartments, his vehicle hit a snowbank and struck a vehicle travelling southbound on North Pleasant Street, resulting in extensive damage to Sprague's vehicle. The officer on the scene, detecting an odor of alcohol, instructed Sprague to exit his vehicle and administered a field alcohol sobriety test, which Sprague failed.

Jan. 31

Bernard Monkiewicz, 25, of 33 Dell St., Turners Falls, was arrested at 6:42 p.m. on Hobart Lane and charged with disorderly conduct, failure to submit to an officer, and leaving the scene of an accident with property damage. According to the police, an officer was dispatched to respond to a hit-and-run accident. Monkiewicz's vehicle was still in the area, but he had left the scene. He emerged from a nearby residence, and an officer asked to see his license and registration. Monkiewicz became belligerent, "ranting and raving," and created a scene.

Noise Complaints

Jan. 31

A warning was issued for a "loud party" at Brandywine Apartments, shortly after midnight.

A noise complaint reported shortly after midnight at Colonial Village Apartments, was unfounded.

Warnings were issued for loud parties shortly after 1 a.m. at Townhouse Apartments, Pufton Village Apartments, and Brandywine Apartments.

Jan. 30

A $100 citation was issued for a "loud blaring radio" at Village Park Apartments, on Jan. 30 at 4:22 a.m.

Jan. 29

A noise complaint reported at 7:11 p.m. at the Boulders Apartments was unfounded.

A warning was issued for a "loud party" at Townhouse Apartments at 11:31 p.m.

A warning was issued for a noise complaint at Mill Valley Estates.

Other Incidents

Jan. 31

A snowball struck a police cruiser on Sunset Ct. at 12:50 a.m.

A disturbance was reported outside the Dairy Mart on Triangle Street at 2:10 a.m. The individual was gone when police arrived. A fight was later reported at 2:41 a.m. at the same location between two groups of individuals. All refused medical treatment and declined to press charges.

A woman, unable to contact her son, requested that a message be delivered to him at the Phi Mu Delta fraternity house, 389 North Pleasant St., by the police at 10:36 a.m. While delivering the message, the police discovered and confiscated a bong.

A windshield was reported smashed overnight at Pufton Village Apartments. Nothing was stolen.

Four tires were reported slashed at the Boulders Apartments at 12:08 p.m.

Jan. 30

Pruddy's Tropical Bar and Grille was cited at 1:58 a.m. for overcrowding and operating after 1 a.m. According to police reports, building inspector William Start was checking the facility when he counted 140-150 people crowding into the 124 person capacity building.

An individual at the Morrill Science Public Health Building was reported pointing a laser pointer at car drivers at 10:49 a.m. Police who spoke to the individual said he was very cooperative, and handed over the pointer.

A smoking enforcement officer was refused entrance to Delano's at 11:23 p.m.

Jan. 29

A yellow beer tap was recovered at 1040 North Pleasant Street. It will be destroyed, police said.

Be a cool cat.....
Write for the collegian!

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139
4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

Check out today's Collegian online at www.dailycollegian.com

Write for news!!!!!

Bookworks
50% OFF
All 1999 Pictorial Calendars In Stock

$3.79
12oz. Size

Campus Cassettes
20% OFF
All Regularly Priced UMASS Shorts!
Spring's just around the corner!

ONE STOP
20% OFF
All In-Stock 1999 Planners and Calendars

ONE STOP
25% OFF
All In-Stock UMASS Spiral Notebooks

M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4 (413) 545 - 2619
University Store
Not like a mall... Better

WELCOMING BACK STUDENTS

UNIVERSITY ST
Textbook Annex
AMHERST

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

University Store • Textbook Annex
SAVE YOUR RECEIPT

Our Refund Policy
If you purchase an incorrect title you may return it for a refund within 7 calendar days of the first day of classes. Thereafter, incorrect titles may be returned within 48 hours of purchase providing the book is new and unmarked.

1. Textbooks from destroyed courses may be returned throughout the month of February. Present your sales receipt and a copy of your updated course schedule obtained from the Registrar. Any new books must be unmarked.

2. Keep your receipt(s). Refunds on textbooks cannot be made unless the sales receipt(s) accompanies the book.

3. Always have valid current I.D. available. This is required for any refund transaction.

The return of unsold books to the publisher begins seven weeks after the beginning of the semester. After the seventh week you might not be able to purchase the book you need.

RETURN YOUR TEXTBOOKS WITH YOUR RECEIPT FOR A "NO QUESTIONS ASKED" REFUND THROUGH FRIDAY FEBRUARY 12TH, 1999.

Beginning Tuesday, February 16, 1999 textbooks from this spring's courses can be returned with a sales receipt and a copy of their current schedule.

These books may be returned to the University Store Textbook Annex department only for the refund.

New books must be in new condition. No writing, highlighting, water damage, etc.

Any incorrect titles purchased during the first week of classes (Jan. 9th-15th) must be returned within 48 hours of purchase. Schedule changes and other proof of incorrect purchase must be presented along with sales receipt.

Remember the last day to return textbooks with no questions asked is FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12TH

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

textbook annex
Spring '99 Schedule

We accept cash, personal check, Ucard, Visa, MasterCard as forms of payment.

We begin to return unsold books to the publishers in the middle of the semester. Students are encouraged to get the books they need for the semester as soon as possible after official enrollment in a course.

buyback

SECOND WEEK - February 2-4

Monday-Wednesday 9am - 5pm

Thereafter, Monday-Friday 9am-4pm at the Textbook Annex, beginning February 12, 1999

annex rush

Spring 1999 Book Rush Hours

Monday, Feb. 1 -Friday, Feb. 5 9am - 6pm

Feb. 8- 12 Mon.- Fri. 9am- 5pm

Thereafter - Monday - Friday 9am - 4pm

Gov. hears plea from pope

By Jason Strait
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — With help from Pope John Paul II, convicted murderer Darrell Mease got taken off death row. The move may be temporary.

Prosecutors are considering additional murder charges against Mease, who was sentenced to die for the fatal shooting of a paraplegic man, only to be saved last week when Gov. Mel Carnahan commuted his sentence at the urging of the pope.

"If my boss tells me to sic 'em, I'll go get him," said prosecutor Jim Justus, who handled the case in 1990.

Mease was convicted of gunning down 19-year-old William Lawrence. He also was charged with murdering Lawrence's grandparents, but was never tried for the two killings.

In earlier stories, The Associated Press erroneously reported that Mease was convicted of all three murders.

Prosecutors began reviewing the case Monday after two members of the victims' family pleaded for new charges. A daughter, Rosemary Brown, met with prosecutors for over an hour Monday, and did not return a call Tuesday seeking comment.

Justus said the family, which is large and scattered, was split on whether to try Mease again after Carnahan commuted his sentence to life without parole.

"Some of them have been just vehemently against it, saying 'No it's behind us,'" Justus said. "Some don't care, as long as he never gets out."

The governor drew widespread criticism last week when he commuted Mease's sentence after a meeting with the pope. Carnahan has insisted that he is not bound by his "act of mercy" for Mease.

The governor's spokesman, Chris Sifford, said it was "highly unlikely" that the governor would ever again be faced with a plea from the pope.

BETH KIBORNIAN / COLLEGIAN

Smile!
The newly installed photo booth in the Campus Center replaces the Captain Video machine.

Sides at odds in Yugoslavian weekend talks

By Katarina Kratovac
Associated Press

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Ethnic Albanian rebels reluctantly agreed yesterday to take part in weekend peace talks aimed at ending the bloody 11-month conflict in Kosovo - a decision that focused international pressure on the hard-line Yugoslav government. Rebel participation had been thrown into doubt after spokesman Adem Demaci recommended against sending delegates. However, the main Kosovo Liberation Army [KLA] spokesman, Jakup Krasniqi, told reporters in central Kosovo that the KLA would name its delegates Wednesday.

"We have some objections to the proposed document, but we are certainly ready to go," Krasniqi said in comments welcomed by Clinton administration officials.

Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic has sent the matter over to the Serb Parliament, which meets Thursday, and resisted giving any signal on whether the Serbs will send delegates to the talks organized by the United States and five European countries. The government has been against any terms that would erode its control over Kosovo, a province in Serbia, the main republic in Yugoslavia. Both sides face the threat of NATO strikes if they haven't started talks by Saturday in Rambouillet, France, and reached a deal by Feb. 19 to end the conflict over Kosovo Albanians' demand for independence.

More moderate Kosovo Albanian political leaders already have said they would attend, but the key negotiating parties to any settlement are Milosevic's government and the KLA, the warring parties in the conflict over ethnic Albanians' demand for independence.

Krasniqi said the KLA wants to send four delegates as part of the ethnic Albanian negotiating team, expected to number about 15. The proposed U.S. peace plan at the talks in France would give Kosovo greater autonomy for the first three years. Political parties would decide what happens after that.

Krasniqi said KLA representatives will demand that Kosovo become an international protectorate for three years while negotiators work out a final status for Kosovo. They also want any decision on Kosovo's future to be put to a referendum by the people of Kosovo.

■ plants

continued from page 1

destroy the environment", said Rasku.

MassPIRG is also involved with three other campaigns. One of the campaigns focuses on surcharges imposed on ATM users, such as the one-and-a-half dollar fee charged to Fleet Bank customers, who use the BankBoston ATM at the Campus Center.

"We're going to work with people at Student Government to ban the ATM surcharge, and we hope to ban it across Massachusetts," said Rasku.

Another campaign works on stopping the development of oil fields in the Wildlife Refuge of Alaska.

"We're going to focus on the BP stations. We'd like them to endorse the campaign," said Rasku. Other planned activities will include educational lectures and protests.

The last campaign topic will try to eliminate hunger and homelessness. MassPIRG is planning a Hunger Cleanup in April, in which 500 students will help out in soup kitchens. The group is also hoping to receive pledges and raise $3,000 for homeless people.

New interns and volunteers to MassPIRG, such as JoAnn Wang, are excited about this semester's prospects.

"They have really good causes," said Wang, a freshman volunteer who solicited people for signatures. She heard about the group through a representative who came to her biology class.

Other volunteers want to bring personal input to their work.

"I just want my opinion to mean something," says Megan Kelley, a sophomore intern. With four campaigns and a planned kick-off meeting coming up in a few weeks, MassPIRG members plan to have their concerns heard this semester.

■ video

continued from page 1

Lewinsky has previously testified he told her, "Go home and make sure they're not there."

Jordan's appearance aside, much of the talk at the Capitol was about Ms. Lewinsky, who had been questioned on tape a day earlier.

"Based on what my staff told me, there is nothing new. If there in fact is nothing new, I would not expect her to be called" to testify in person, said Robert Bennett, a Republican from Utah.

And Larry Craig of Idaho, a member of the Republican leadership, responded "probably not" when asked whether there was anything to be gained in calling Ms. Lewinsky to appear before the Senate after the trial resumes Thursday.

If the Senate's 45 Democrats oppose live testimony, as expected, only six Republicans would have to join them to move the trial toward beginning closing arguments as early as this weekend. The goal of both parties is to vote on the perjury and obstruction of justice charges by Feb. 12.

One Republican senator who viewed the Lewinsky videotape, Orrin Hatch of Utah, said he believed it would be helpful to have her testify in person.

"It's far better for the public to meet her and make up their own minds," Hatch said. "Personally, I found her to be young, vulnerable and credible. I think she'd make a very effective witness."

And the House prosecutors kept up their push.

"It will be our intention to request live witnesses," said head prosecutor Henry Hyde (R-Ill.), but none beyond the three providing depositions. Hyde said the Lewinsky and Jordan testimony had "strengthened some points" of the prosecution case. Evan Bayh (D-Ind.), after watching the tape, suggested the decision on whether to call her to testify wasn't a major issue.

"It won't rank among the great constitutional struggles in the history of our country," he said.

Craig, while not expecting Ms. Lewinsky to be called in person, said that if all or portions of the videotape were shown "in no way would it offend the sensibilities of the American people, nor would it offend the decorum of the Senate." Separately, senators and the White House were talking about a Republican proposal to allow some sort of trial statement that would declare Clinton had done wrong but would not remove him from office.

PBS must pay up to Nesmith

By Robert Jablon
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Public Broadcasting Service must pay nearly $47 million to Michael Nesmith, a member of the 1960s band The Monkees, and his defunct company for defrauding him in a home video deal that sank the firm.

A federal jury decided Monday that PBS went behind Nesmith's back to steal the home video rights to such popular fare as "Sesame Street" and the Ken Burns documentary The Civil War while promising to keep his faltering firm afloat.

Jurors rejected PBS' breach-of-contract lawsuit that claimed Nesmith owed the nonprofit corporation millions of dollars. They upheld a counterclaim of fraud, breach of contract and contract interference.

"It's like catching your grandmother stealing your stereo," Nesmith said through a publicist. "On one hand, you're happy to get the stereo back. On the other, you're sad to find out you're grandma's a thief."

Stu Cantor, a PBS spokesman, said the association of public television stations will appeal.

"PBS firmly believes that the facts and the law in the case merited a ruling in our favor and we are frankly shocked at the verdict," he said, reading a statement from PBS headquarters in Alexandria, Va.

The case is the latest controversy over PBS' aggressive net moneymaking techniques. In the mid-1990s, as Congress threatened deep funding cutbacks, PBS turned to the marketplace, offering among other things expanded commercial spots to corporate donors.

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game& System Rentals
2 movies $2
w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent
Video Games
Best Selection In Town
9 E.Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst • 549-4606

Massachusetts is looking for 50 outstanding individuals to TEACH in our public schools.

Could this be YOU?

Teach in Massachusetts

- $20,000 signing bonus
- Intensive summer training
- Placement
- Ongoing support

All Majors Welcome!
Current Seniors • Mid-Career Professionals

Information Sessions

UMASS/Amherst
Wednesday, February 3
6:00 pm
The Career Center
Room 904.08

SMITH COLLEGE
Thursday, February 4
7:00 pm
Wright Hall
Common Room

Massachusetts Signing Bonus Program for New Teachers website: www.doe.mass.edu/tqe • call at: 781.388.3300 ext. 323
A program of the Massachusetts Department of Education

MULLINS CENTER
UNIV. of MASSACHUSETTS, AMHERST
★ WEDS. FEB. 24th - 8:00PM ! ★

PLUS
NATALIE MERCHANT

Advance tickets available at the Mullins Center box office and all TicketMaster locations. To charge by phone call TicketMaster at (413) 733-2500. For additional information call the Mullins Center at (413) 545-3001.

★ DON'T YOU DARE MISS IT! ★

Presented by MassConcerts

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The women are coming!

Okay, guys, your time is up. Let's face it, you're an outdated model of human anatomy. According to the Bible, the first woman was created after the first man as a sort of alternate model. So as a student of the modern capitalist economy, I interpret that action as God's way of creating a superior model to correct the imperfections of the prototype.

Way back when, before the Bible was even written, women had an equally powerful, though perhaps different, sphere of influence in society compared with men. At some point, men decided to take over the world and start wearing pants. The biblical story of creation reflects that new status of women in society: woman was created, she tempted poor innocent man, and the future of the human race went down from there.

Alexis Pushkar

Looking back in time from 1999, it seems that perhaps the world declined when the men took over. I mean, they did an okay job, but it could have been better. Don't get me wrong — the modern world is cool in a lot of ways. I like Pringles. Suspension bridges show some good innovation, and where would the human race be without Teflon? So maybe men should get a B or maybe an AB.

After all, they did cause an awful lot of wars and human suffering. They sort of ruined the environment. They were restrictive and cruel to women, and they smelled funny before cologne was invented.

But all things — good, bad, or mediocre — must come to an end. The new decade, century, and millennium seem like a convenient point in time to institute a change. I think that change should start with a woman president of the United States.

Hillary Clinton has proved to us that a woman president is an idea whose time has finally come. This was obvious when Bill Clinton was first running for the presidential office. Many men and women denigrated her for the same reason that straight men denigrate homosexuals: they are scared of the truth being other than what they can accept. The truth is that Mrs. Clinton would probably have made a good president, and the truth is that more men are gay than will admit it.

Anti–Hillary rhetoric had been widespread until the publicity of Bill Clinton's sexual indiscretions caused public support to rally around her. The issue these days is not whether she is over–stepping her boundaries as a first lady, but instead, people focus on her marvelous composure and grace in adverse circumstances because as the Bard put it, "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

Why should we have a woman president? As I said, it is time. Eventually, in another millennium or so, there will be no need for men. The world is moving away from all that hard physical labor stuff that their brawn was supposedly superior for doing. Also, men like to make wars, and wars in the next century and beyond would probably have many civilian casualties because a regular war would most likely escalate into a nuclear war. All the men would be trying to figure out who had the biggest nuclear war head.

Women don't like wars. Xena has proved that the idea of women warriors is still alive and well, but women choose to talk things out rather than beat people up all the time. And women are less preoccupied with size.

Women are also more organized; they have learned how to have a career and take care of a household. In fact, women can change a roll of toilet paper in the bathroom and talk on the phone and reorganize the Tupperware containers all at once. Men can never do more than one thing at a time.

Women dress better, and in this superficial world that men have created, good clothes are all that matter. Women also smell better even without perfume.

Also, women have more body fat, on average, and I feel more comfortable knowing that my president would last longer in a famine.

Finally, women can be more devious, and politics is a devious game. With a smart and sexy woman playing with a Congress of nitwits like we have now, more would get done. By the time the men zipped up their pants after a lunch break with their mistresses, a woman president would have solved the poverty problem and paid off the national debt and still had time to get her nails done and pick up the kids from day care.

As the quality of American life improved, more and more women would realize that men really did get us into a lot of trouble. The power and influence of men would decline, and they would begin to be phased out. The science that so many of them helped to shape would render them obsolete in terms of reproduction. Their mistakes since biblical times would be perceived as evidence of their faulty minds.

Some would still be tolerated because they are good for a few things like cuddling and certain sexual positions, but after a while, even these "supermen" would go the way of the dodo bird.

Now, I don't mean to imply that women are the ultimate human form. I think women have it coming when we are replaced by the hermaphrodites.

Alexis Pushkar is a Collegian columnist.

Get your cure here!

On Monday, I read an interesting little nugget of information is this here Daily Collegian that really got that old ball of thought in my head a–rollin'. It was the piece, in case any of you managed to catch it, with the headline "Ex–Gay conversion a possibility?"

Apparently, a group of religious fundamentalists have reached the conclusion that it is possible to cure a person of that dreaded disease (insert hushed whisper voice here): homosexuality.

As I often like to say, "Hmmm, very interesting."

Now, as a journalist, I'd like to stay neutral on this one and refrain from the rantings that a discovery such as this might induce in those minds not trained in the art of objective reporting. I will merely ponder the questions, reflect upon the potential long–term effects that this may have on future generations.

Elsa Allen

So, lets say that these "religious fundamentalists" have made a sincere discovery, and for the bargain price of $39.95 (or whatever they will eventually charge for the miracle cure), you too can learn to view the opposite sex as really neat–o. Okay, no more gay people. Now what?

If we can cure an "undesirable" lifestyle trait such as (hushed whisper again) homosexuality, just think of the possibilities. There are just so many icky things out there... I mean, where would we even begin?

I don't like Capri pants. It is certainly a lifestyle choice when one chooses to wear Capri pants, and thus perhaps with a bit of compassion and understanding, we can rid people of their desire to wear them. Much like homosexuality — oops, I said it aloud that time — we could cure undesirable fashion choices. I think that sweatpants and flip flops would be a much more practical choice. Yeah, everybody should wear those. We will show those Capri pants wearers the softness and full length of the sweatpant, and the neat feeling of the flip–flop in the shower (using love and compassion, of course).

My roommate drinks these gross protein shakes. I think that they're bad. I think he is making a poor lifestyle choice by drinking these and that he should eat more macaroni and cheese instead. I think macaroni and cheese would make him happier because it makes me happy. With this new lifestyle cure, this would be no problem. I could talk to him, love him, and show him the error of his ways. I'll let him taste the Kraft and let him experience the creamy goodness for himself. He will soon be cured.

Soon enough, there will be wave after wave of new "conversion cures" for people who are unhappy with the lifestyles that they have chosen. There will undoubtedly be people taking advantage of this new method in order to earn a quick buck promising a quicker, easier cure than the last guy. Soon we will see Florence Henderson flashing her pearly whites on cable access shows saying things like " I used to be a lesbian, but then I got The Cure." She'll hold up a bottle and a price will flash on the screen.

What am I getting at, you may ask? What do Capri pants, protein shakes, macaroni and cheese, and Florence Henderson have to do with homosexuality?

Well, nothing. But that's not my point. The point that I am trying to get at is that you cannot cure lifestyles. You cannot cure human nature. You should not want to cure human nature.

I guess it's an age–old question that I am by no means even qualified to begin addressing, so I won't go into the whole "we should love and accept everybody" spiel. Maybe I have an overactive imagination, and by the way, for all you Florence Henderson fanatics out there, I don't have an opinion about her sexual orientation either way. Perhaps I am naïve and this is an important discovery for the GLBT community. I simply don't know anymore. I think that the idea of a cure for something such as homosexuality just sounds absurd when you say it out loud.

Here we now have a group of people who feel that they know something that can provide people with a "better life." My question is this: a better life according to whom? I know gay people that have some damn good lives and I also know some straight people whose lives could use a little boost.

A homosexual lifestyle is not something that affects the rest of us in a way that the lifestyle of a person who doesn't recycle can affect us. You can agree or disagree with it, but in the long–run, at least homosexuality won't harm you or the air you breathe.

Elsa Allen is a Collegian columnist.

Ed/Op is currently taking submissions for editorial cartoons. Please come down and see Tanya, Gary or Alexis with any submissions or questions

Two important events today:
1. Photos will be taken for all Ed/Op columnists at 3 p.m. in the Collegian office.
2. There will be a brief, mandatory meeting for all current and interested Ed/Op writers at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office as well.
If you have any questions, call Tanya, Gary, or Alexis at 545-1491.

Letters to the Editor

"Affordable" Flexible Child Care

To the editor:

This letter is in response to your coverage of the new child care center on campus. The new Affordable Flexible Child Care Center located in Skinner Hall is the result of five years of grass roots pressure on the administration to recognize the needs of student parents who cannot afford the cost of regular child care.

I want to clarify a few points raised in the article ["Flexible Child Care at UM," in the Jan. 28 Daily Collegian] concerning the center. You stated in the article that the priority for enrollment is students with part–time child care needs and the second priority is for University employees with part time child care needs. However, the center is designed solely for part–time day care needs, not full time. The agreement between GEO [Graduate Employee Organization] and the administration is that "[e]nrollment priority is given to undergraduate and graduate families based on financial need. Lowest income student families will receive first priority. Next enrollment priority is given to University employee families based on financial need. Lowest income families will receive first priority," and a student parent making under $14,500 will have a fully subsidized spot."

Second, you quoted the director of the new center saying that evening hours will be implemented when the staff accesses the childrens' adjustment to the flexible schedule. In fact, the reason for the omission of evening hours is due to the lack of teacher's assistants [TAs] who fit the qualifications defined by University Child Care. If and when "qualified" TAs are hired, the center will stay open until 9:30 p.m. and not upon the adaption of the children to the flexible curriculum.

I want to clarify these two important points to stress the main purpose of the center: to have a quality child care center that is accessible to students and employees based on financial need while simultaneously flexible enough to account for the shifting schedules of student families. By reporting on the center without stressing those two points misrepresents the mission statement of the Affordable Flexible Child Care Center.

Lastly, the center will be offering toddler care this coming fall but we are still fighting for toddler care this semester, so if you have a toddler, please apply now for this fall with the possibility of having toddler care this semester.

Jon Zibbell
AFCC Advisory Board Member

The joy of pre–registration

"The action you have requested could not be processed," the automated voice tells me. "The section you have requested is over–enrolled."

[Insert loud expletive and phone slamming here.]

The voice may sound nice and friendly and may even resemble James Earl Jones' sister working at a fast food drive–thru, but it still doesn't ease the pain. After hearing that same expression repeatedly it begins to gnaw on you.

How can every class I need be over–enrolled? And it is not like these are some wild and interesting classes like scuba diving in Florida, table tennis, or My Body, My Health. I am in a major that will remain nameless, where they made public service announcements about how boring this class is when you are in high school and how schools should bring in professionals to liven it up.

Foreseeing potential problems with registration this semester, I decided that it would be prudent to register for an extra class just in case. You never know when a class that you're in could be unsuitable. Sometimes the room it meets in is overly hot and too conducive to napping and semi–conscious note–taking that is illegible when you are awake. Other times, the large and overcrowded room makes you feel like you are sitting in the upper deck at a sporting event, trying to squint to see the professor.

Look at what I get for thinking ahead this semester: over–subscribed, oversubscribed. This is the point at which all hell breaks loose. That schedule that you spent hours rearranging to ensure that you did not have to run from some building over by Parking Services to another near the School of Management is suddenly a shadow of its former self. Now you have a momentous decision to weigh: Do you sacrifice your hopes of getting into the class you originally wanted in order to find new classes? Or worse yet, do you start to find classes that meet on Fridays and erase all dreams of a semester of three–day weekends?

Matthew Frascella

With time running out before actual classes begin, I frantically looked over my latest installment of the course guide to see what choices I had, and luck was on my side. Every class that I wanted and needed to put another plus sign on my audit conflicted with the classes that I actually made it into.

Now I resorted to begging for admittance. I am not very proud of begging, but the alternative is not being a full–time student, and there are some insurance issues with that, so I begged. When I attended the class to try to get in, I couldn't even get in the door. "Must be a popular class," I thought. The professor was very kind and even offered another section. I was saved. Then I went to the new section only to find out that the new section was, you guessed... over– enrolled. One course, three sections, all over–enrolled.

Attempting to register for classes this semester was worse than the time I completely forget to pre–register. (Yes, that kind of stupidity is possible.) I had all my classes picked out but I thought that I had more time. Whitmore gives you months. Cleaning my room, however, took priority. All I had to do was call my favorite hotline, put in a branch code and then I would have classes. But I couldn't accomplish this in the 20–something days they gave me to pre–register.

I called up and my favorite voice told me that I missed my time. I checked my watch and it was 1:10. Ten minutes too late. Hoping for some sympathy, I called Whitmore. The voice on the phone greeted me with laughter and then tried to convince me she was laughing with me.

So I began to wonder why this semester was different than previous ones. Then it hit me like a bad DC meal — this is David K. Scott's fault. He is the genius with the master plan. In principle, it sounds like a wise move to raise money. Step One: Eliminate faculty to decrease costs so that tuition does not rise and UMass stays affordable. Step Two: Increase enrollment to bring in more funds.

This plan is flawed, and if you think that it does not affect you, you are wrong. Look around your classroom. Chances are, it is filled to capacity. There are probably other people waiting to get into that class, too. Class size is growing. I take primarily 300 level courses and my classes are packed. I am simply a number and a name on a list.

Logically, It doesn't take a math major to figure out what is wrong with the chancellor's policy. Fewer teachers and more students make larger classes. Larger classes are harder to get into and are the standard by which all major universities are evaluated and measured against each other. A large student body does create an amazingly diverse learning environment with countless opportunities, but a large student body in a class creates nothing but problems for students.

Chancellor Scott, stop the nonsense. If you truly believe in the statements you spout forth at convocation about this University being one of the top institutions in the country, then take some action that benefits the student body and hire some qualified people to teach us. We are here to learn, yet your philosophy seems to be the exact opposite of this mentality. "You make it happen," you told me at convocation, but to a large extent, what I can do depends on what you do.

Cutting back on staff may make money, but it does not make sense. In a time when corporations are downsizing to maximize profits, I guess that it is only fitting that the University of Massachusetts has chosen to do the same. My education is hampered by greed, and that is not a fact that I am proud of.

The real world is tough. Companies cut workers and ship them overseas so that the newest CEO can make a few more million. If you are lucky, they will keep you on long enough to train your replacement. Fortunately for me, I get to learn this first hand at the University of Massachusetts. And now maybe I see your point of view, Mr. Scott. This was all a clever ruse to teach us valuable life lessons about the hostile environment we will immerse ourselves into once we leave the confines of the University. Why do we even need faculty when you can teach us just as well?

Matthew Frascella is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Fialkow Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prester Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Primus' new EP and Oasis' Masterplan please; 4AD covers, and Goth Rock 3 shine

RHINOPLASTY
Primus
Interscope

Primus have always been goofy fun if nothing else. That's why it's impossible not to like their latest EP, Rhinoplasty. Consisting mostly of covers, including Peter Gabriel's "The Family and the Fishing Net" and Metallica's "The Thing That Should Not Be," the few original cuts are brilliant, especially "Too Many Puppies." Les Claypool's bass is, as always, the musical centerpiece of this nine–track disc, which also includes two live tracks and enhanced material to "slam in your computer." B
(Kevin Monahan)

...SMILE'S OK
The Hope Blister
4AD/ Mammoth

4AD label founder Ivo–Watts Russell follows up his last project, This Mortal Coil, with another cover band devoted to resurrecting some of pop music's moodier pieces. Select songs from the likes of Slowdive, David Sylvian, Brian Eno and Heidi Berry are stripped down to near nothingness. Cello, viola and violin swirl around Louise Rutkowski's voice. Fans of Dead Can Dance and Loreena McKennitt take note. B (Matthew Nixon)

GOTHIC ROCK 3
Black on Black: Best of 80's Collection
Cleopatra

Trax On Trax Off

The third installment in the musical companion to Mick Mercer's book catalouging this decadent subculture is a comprehensive study of the 80's indie–goths. So what's different about this third compliation? Not very much. Mercer focused on indie bands for the first two collections leaving the more popular goth bands (The Cure, Siouxsie and the Banshees, The Sisters of Mercy) conspleuously absent. Bauhaus and Gene Loves Jezebel make welcome returns to the lineup with "The Passion of Lovers" and "Desire" respectively. The Cult, with "Spirit Walker," and Christian Death, with "Church of No Return," are also highlights. But the jewel of this two–disc compilation is the Alien Sex Fiend classic "I Walk the Line." If you don't already own this song, this collection is more than worth checking out. A– (K.M.)

TWO PAGES
4Hero
Talkinloud/Mercury

What were these guys trying to do? 19 tracks, 78 minutes of music. Two Pages is an attempt at a concept album having something to do with the destruction of Mother Earth as the new millenium approaches. There are several fun acid jazz tracks that sport cool drum and bass rhythms. The sounds are suggestive of the music of Jamiroquoi at times. Things fall apart past the half point of the disc when industrial instrumental find their way in amongst the more soulful tracks. Ish a.k.a. "Butterfly" from Digable Planets pops up on an out of

Turn to TRAX, page 6

COURTESY JOSEPH PLOCHAND

Primus from left: Brain, Les Claypool, and Larry LaLonde

ARTS & LIVING MEETING

There will be a meeting for all those interested in writing for Arts & Living this semester this Wednesday, Feb. 3, at 6:30 p.m. in the Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center Basement. New writers are encouraged to attend. Returning writers should attend as well. Call Bryan, Rob, Emily or Kevin for more information.

PREREQUISITE: ADRENALINE

Drive. Intensity. Those aren't words you're likely to see in many course requirements. Then again Army ROTC is unlike any other elective. It's hands-on excitement. ROTC will challenge you mentally and physically through intense leadership training. Training that builds your character, confidence and decision-making skills. Again, words other courses seldom use. But they're the credits you need to succeed in life. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about five hours per week. Register this term for Army ROTC.

LEADERSHIP EXCELLENCE

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

MS113 – Introduction to Military Science, 1 credit per semester
Contact Captain Patrick Maloney
545-2321

Fresh beats

Sweet and juicy!

FRONT 243
Headhunter 2000
12.99

QUEENS OF THE STONE AGE
Queens Of The Stone Age
13.99

HOUSE OF BLUES SWINGS!
Various Artists

CLUB 69
Re-Styled
13.99

BIGGER DIRTIER BEATS, BDB 2
Various Artists

LEON RUSSELL
Face In The Crowd
NEW
13.99

COLIN JAMES
Colin James And The Little Big Band II
13.99

OUR FRIEND, MARTIN
Soundtrack

MUSIC • SOFTWARE • MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
Your Entertainment Superstore

For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-606-3342

Sale dates: January 31–February 13, 1999. Select titles not available on cassette.

■ trax

continued from page 5

COURTESY ALL FOR ANDREW SKY

Oasis' Noel Gallager rocks out at Maine Road in Manchester, England.

place rap number. There are some great sounds here: a cello solo on one track and a melding of strings and tabla on another. Ultimately, an uneven piece of work. C (M.N.)

DAPPER SLAPPER
Gregory Isaacs
RAS

Reggae music is a wonderful soundtrack to sipping neon- colored drinks with plastic monkeys hanging off the side; lounging on white sand and dancing under a bamboo gazebo. Good reggae music will transcend gray-skyed reality and let you float away. Bad reggae music makes you want to hurt people. Dapper Slapper by Gregory Isaacs spits on Bob Marley's grave. Isaacs uses the same uninspired steel- drum rhythm throughout the album, and interjects all too frequently with lyrics like: "She said please Mr. Dapper/ Will you take control?/ Give me some of your Dapper Slapper." One song on the album, "For Your Love," does have a kind of trippy, fun beat, but also has lyrics that make one laugh harder than they are able to groove — "Don't you ever try to kill the goose/ lay the golden egg/ for your lovin' I'd do anything." Now, I know telling, captivating lyrics have never been a necessary component of reggae music, but when the background music sucks, it's hard not to take notice of the words. What Isaacs does best actually is kind of a Barry White rapping kind of thing. He's just talking in a naturally low, sexy voice over the music. It's mildly amusing, but makes for easier listening than his warbly "Uhhhhhh" s and "Oh looord"s. So very not sexy. D- (Julie Fialkow)

BACK IN THE U.S.S.A
The Interpreters
RCA

A reissue of an album from a Philadelphia pop-punk trio that garnered a four-star review from a well-known music magazine when it first appeared on an indie label was then ignored by the record-buying public and seems to have met the same fate this time around. It is definitely something to check out. There are 16 little nuggets of pop fun crammed onto this disc. All of the songs are extremely short. Most bands would weep at what is packed into the one minute fifteen second long "Lucky Day." "Glorious" is all about the words "hey, hey, hey." "Ironic... Blowout" brings to mind The Who. Four sections of "surveillance" or band banter only add to the good time. B+ (M.N.)

BIG BIG WORLD
Emilia
Universal

Emilia's debut signals that the labels are scraping the bottom of the "Swedish talent" barrel. The title track has lodged itself in Top 40 charts around the world. It is a song with enough pop polish to guarantee the loyalty of teenage girls everywhere. Nothing else here even comes close. There is a track for every hot radio format of the moment. There are songs that are hi-energy, Europop, Spanish-tinged and Sixties-sounding. Things must be a little off when yellow is pronounced as "jello." You have been warned. D (M.N.)

THE MASTERPLAN
Oasis
Epic

More than just a compilation of one-time b-sides, this is a great collection of tunes by England's biggest band. Almost better than a proper album of theirs due to the inclusion of their take on The Beatles "I Am The Walrus" and Paul Weller's harmonica solo on the all instrumental "Swamp Song." The album is named after main songwriter Noel Gallagher's favorite track which is included here. Good stuff. B+ (M.N)

Movie cruises into Amherst

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

Everyone knows that the key to success in the independent film business is hard work, hard work, hard work. But for the five-man sketch comedy group Broken Lizard, hard work is not enough. An insane amount of work instead is required.

Broken Lizard is the New York-based group now semi-famous for Puddle Cruiser, their 1997 comedy film about college life, campus relationships and dating. Made in the tradition of such cult classics as Animal House, Caddyshack, and Stripes, the feature film won the top prize at the Hampton film festival and was an official selection at last year's Sundance Film Festival.

But even with all the praise, it was not immediately picked up by a distributor. So Broken Lizard had the ingenious idea to take their show on the road and tour across college campuses, performing comedy sketches, screening the film and talking to the audience afterwards.

That tour stops at UMass tomorrow night, at the Amherst Cinema in downtown Amherst, at 8 p.m. Broken Lizard, fresh out of college themselves (they all met and graduated from Colgate University), assure us broke college students that the event is completely free of charge.

UMass is only one of the 20 colleges — including Yale, Dartmouth, and Syracuse — that the group will visit this winter as part of their Broken Lizard College Rodeo tour. In addition to promoting Puddle Cruiser, the group will create a documentary of their travels, start production on their latest film, Super Troopers, this spring, and develop a primetime television series for NBC.

It's this kind of do-it-yourself promotion that makes people take notice. After creating a buzz at Sundance, but failing to have their movie picked up, the group decided to take their film directly to its target audience — college students, as well as garner praise from the likes of Airplane and Naked Gun creator David Zucker and There's Something About Mary's Farrelly brothers.

Puddle Cruiser is first and foremost an ensemble piece, written and performed by Jay Chandrasekhar, Kevin Heffernan, Steve Lemme, Paul Soter and Erik Stolhanske. It concerns the antics of college life — "Guys breaking into the dining hall... big epic battles on the rugby field," described Heffernan in a brief telephone interview. The main story is of a love triangle that climaxes in a showdown between the participants. But one senses, fortunately, that any kind of plot takes second to hilarious farce and generally goofy behavior.

Chandrasekhar, who serves as the film's director, also attended New York University's prestigious film school and shot five commercial spots for Coca-Cola. But he made his start at Colgate, where the group met and started producing short videos and creating their trademark comedy. Heffernan and the rest of the writers/cast didn't attend film school, but he insists that doing it yourself brings success and experience.

"There's no substitute for making your own films," he commented. "Getting the technical education helps, but you need practical knowledge, too."

Broken Lizard's influences include films like Animal House, as well as early "Saturday Night Live" and Monty Python. After making Puddle Cruiser, they took the film to various film festivals, where it was an instant but surprising hit.

"Usually the darker films win [the film festivals], but we just made people laugh," said Heffernan. It has since visited various colleges with the same response, selling out screens at Syracuse and other northeast colleges.

The group's next project, Super Troopers, to be shot, most likely, in North Carolina, and featuring a budget 10 times greater than that of Puddle Cruiser.

Puddle Cruiser will screen at the Amherst Cinema at 8 p.m. The event will include sketch comedy and a panel discussion featuring the filmmakers, and is free and open to the public.

ARTS & LIVING MEETING

There will be a meeting for all those interested in writing for Arts & Living this semester this Wednesday, Feb. 3, at 6:30 in the Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center Basement. New writers are encouraged to attend. Returning writers should attend as well. Call 545-1361 and ask for Bryan, Rob, Emily or Kevin for more information.

There's a whole world out there!
Explore it with Contiki-
The #1 tour for 18-35 year olds
Cheap tickets Great advice Nice people

Boston/Sydney	$1407
Boston/Nairobi	$955
Newark/Quito	$290
New York/San Juan	$255
Boston/Paris	$344

Council Travel
Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone: 413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

Valentine's Day
is just around the corner
Let them know how special they really are to you...
for the mere price of ten cents a word you can give the one you love something to cherish forever..
Their very own Collegian Classified from you
... won't you look good. Of course you will, as long as you get your message in by the deadline of Tuesday Feb.9th.

Meet on the Web
CampusChat
24/7 live chat for students
www.masslive.com/chat

Eat on the Web
PizzaCam
24/7 live cam at Antonio's
www.masslive.com/campuscam
mass LIVE
www.masslive.com
Where Western Mass meets on the Web!

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Ringing in the Liberty Bell

Tez Kraft and the Massachusetts women's basketball team will head to Philadelphia this weekend for a pair of road games with Temple and St. Joe's.

UConn is No. 1 no more

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun fully expected Syracuse to come out with its zone and trapping defense. He didn't expect his top-ranked Huskies, playing without two injured starters, to wilt under the pressure.

But the result was a 59-42 Syracuse victory Monday night in UConn's worst offensive performance in 27 years.

The Huskies, who were without leading scorer Richard Hamilton and leading rebounder Jake Voskuhl, were the last unbeaten Division I team. They saw their 16-game Big East winning streak end as well as their 31-game home winning streak.

Calhoun didn't go looking for excuses.

"We did dress five people who could play. Richard and Jake didn't make any mistakes so they were no factors in the game," Calhoun said. "I thought the guys on the floor would do a better job.

"We just played St. John's without injured leading rebounder Tyrone Grant and we were lucky to win. We had other guys who could have stepped up and tried to stop penetration and hit shots. There's nothing wrong with our record, but there is something wrong with what happened tonight."

The No. 16 Orangemen simply outhustled the Huskies.

"Obviously I feel bad for Richard and Jake, two very good kids and two very good players," Boeheim said. "But we just needed to get a win. I didn't care who was playing.

Hamilton, the reigning Big East player of the year, has a bruised right thigh and is listed as day-to-day. The 6-foot-6 junior is averaging 22.1 points and 4.8 rebounds. He was injured during the second half of Saturday's 78-74 victory over No. 9 St. John's.

Voskuhl, a 6-11 junior, has a stress fracture in his left foot and is out indefinitely. Voskuhl, averaging 6.5 points and 7.2 rebounds, had the same injury in high school and the latest fracture was revealed through a bone scan on Monday. He will go to his hometown of Houston on Tuesday for further tests.

Freshman Damone Brown scored all 14 of his points in the second half as Syracuse (16-6, 7-5 Big East) won for the fourth time in five games by shooting 43 percent (23-for-54) and outrebounding the Huskies 37-26.

The Huskies (19-1, 11-1 Big East) struggled all game on the offensive end against Syracuse's zone, shooting just 36 percent (16-for-45), including 3-for-15 from 3-point range.

"We would have played the zone whether Hamilton was there or not," Boeheim said. "We wanted to be in the game late and have their guys looking for Hamilton and he wasn't there."

The game was tied 25-25 at halftime, but Connecticut was just 7-of-22 (32 percent) from the field in the second half as the Orangemen built a lead of as many as 19 points, 54-35, with 3:10 to play on a jumper by Jason Hart.

Connecticut's starting backcourt of Khalid El-Amin and Ricky Moore combined for six points, all by El-Amin in the first half.

"We weren't shooting well, fine, but we still should have stepped up the defense," Moore said. "The shots weren't there tonight because they had four guys on the perimeter.

"We didn't have enough guys stepping up to the foul line asking for the ball. But that's not what why we lost. We just let up on defense."

Calhoun couldn't hide his disappointment.

"We didn't get any loose balls and players other than Hamilton and Voskuhl are allowed to get loose balls," he said. "We had some guys out there tonight we can play and they didn't."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

The stretch run begins

Sophomore defenseman Joe Culgin and the Massachusetts hockey team are faced with a pair of key Hockey East matchups this weekend against Boston College and Merrimack.

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 585-0155

Reason №2 why you should take our GRE course.
You'll score more...
2 Our students improve an average of 212 points. And they significantly out-score students who took that other course.
800-2-REVIEW www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WMCC as well.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

GET IN SHAPE
IN SHAPE NUTRITION
•Fat Burners •Creatine •Protein Powders
20%-50% Off Retail Prices Everyday
•Andro •Vitamins/Herbs •Food Bars and more...
65 University Dr. Amherst 549-7434

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

The Pub welcomes back students
Weekly Drink Specials
Corona Bottles $2
20oz. Miller Lite Drafts $1
All Sam Adams Pints $2
Bucket of Rocks
4 12oz. Rolling Rock $6
22 oz. Rolling Rock 2.00
Over 40 Hand Crafted Beers
THE PUB amherst
15 East Pleasant Street • Amherst

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
By Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Part Time Evening Classes start February 8, 1999
Call UMASS, Continuing Education at:
545-0474

Why become tomorrow's leader when you're ready today?
On-Campus Interviews
Management Trainee Program
All majors are welcome. Highly competitive salaries
You're already a proven leader. Academically. In extra-curricular endeavors. In literally every facet of your life. Now, you're ready to challenge the business world. But finding an opportunity that will use and cultivate your leadership right from the start is difficult.
In the Cintas Management Trainee Program, you'll have the chance to make an immediate impact. Taking on meaningful responsibilities for a $1.3 billion corporation. Gaining insight through personal mentoring with an upper-level manager. Being exposed to every aspect of our business over the two years of the program. Then, choosing the area that best fits your interests including General Management, Industrial Engineering, Operations Management, Human Resources Management, or Sales/Marketing.
If you would like to speak to a recent grad currently participating in the program, please call Amy at our toll free number:
1-877-9-CINTAS
CINTAS
www.cintas-corp.com

Baruch Summer
TWO SESSIONS June 7–July 15 / July 19–August 26
Convenient Manhattan Location
Affordable day and evening undergraduate and graduate courses
212-802-2056
Fax 212-802-2190 to request a Summer Session Bulletin
To download the Summer Session application, visit our website at www.baruch.cuny.edu
For information on fall undergraduate admissions, call 212-802-2300
Tuition for Visiting Students:
Undergraduate: NYS residents $160/credit; non-residents $325/credit
Graduate: NYS residents $185/credit; non-residents $320/credit
Baruch College/The City University of New York
17 Lexington Avenue (at 23rd St.), New York, NY 10010

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Free Karate Instruction offered in Southwest. All welcome. Interested? Call Mike 546-2658

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease 1 bedroom apartment in Puffton Village. Gas heat & hot water included. 560 a month. Suitable for two Aviable Now!! 549-6434 Sabriya or Jamila

Belchertown 1 bedroom. Three miles from Amherst Center 253-9081

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Olds Cierra Well-maintained. Low miles $850 256-3004

'86 Camry 155,000 miles, New tires, Brakes, Timing belt excellent condition for age. Asking $1800. 586-1717

1994 GEO Prism LSI 180,000 miles, standard transmission, ABS, CD, and much more, Excellent condition throughout. Asking 5,000 586-1717

'88 Subaru 4x4 Wagon runs, drives, looks, decent $850. May Trade for motorcycle 773-8586

WANTED: Toyotas, Novas, Prizms, Sentras. Any condition. Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

COMPUTERS

Mac Powerbook 520 modem/ethernet/software installed. Perfect for papers and emailing $600.00 NEG. 546-4517

Compaq Laptop 233, modem, cd-rom, 32 RAM, 2HD, active matrix, 3year full warranty. Call Sergiy 413-529-0583 evenings

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

EMPLOYMENT

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

PRESTIGIOUS NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, Nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool, Musical Director and General Counselors. INERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd Trail's End Camp 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99? College Pro, a $25 million company, seeks highly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goal-oriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

Public Relations Jobs Apply now to be a Tour Guide, Admissions Rep or Summer Counselor. Exp'd guides, counselors, and reps on the Campus Center Councourse Feb.1-5 to answer questions.

EMPLOYMENT

Undergraduate Business Consultant Gain Accounting Experience, Leadership Skills, and General Business Experience. 10-15 hrs. per week, flexible schedule. Must be self motivated; able to work as part of a team. Sophomores and Juniors are encouraged to apply. Pick up an application at the Center for Student Business, 406 Student Union. Questions, call 545-2166. Deadline for apps Monday Feb. 8

New Student Program Seeks extroverts from '99-'01 class with 2.5+ GPA.May 26 to July 17. Salary,room,meals,health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions CTR. Deadline FEB 5.

Mothers helper wanted 10-15 hrs/wk afternoons. Must have car and references. Call Jamie 549-7788

Personal Assistant for busy professional $7.00 an hour. Laundry, cat care, paperwork etc. 413-259-1227

Put up Posters in Amherst, Northhampton + colleges $6.00 An hour. Need car Extremely responsible 413-259-1227

Help Wanted Earn extra cash!!! Make your own hours!!! Responsible students to market/manage Citibank promotions on campus. Free giveaways! Earn $400+/Week. Call Joann at 1-800-950-8472 Ext. 117

Work Study Job: Peer Housing Counselor $6.50 per hour. Apply 428 Student Union or Call 545-0865

Personal Care Attendant Wanted 6 to 12 hours per week for a women in Amherst. Call Helen 545-1908 - 253-9462

EMPLOYMENT

Jobs At The UMass Annual Fund Flexible. Evening hours earn $5.50/hour plus fantastic bonuses gain computer and communications skills come to the basement of Memorial Hall and apply today students only 545-3509

Grill Cook Breakfast Experience Part Time day hours including weekends Apply 7am-3pm Nancy Janes 36 Main St. Amherst

General Labor $7.50 Amherst location needs your help all winter shoveling snow & sanding walk ways. Only available for work one or two days a week? This is the perfect job for you. Call United Personnel Services today to learn more about how snow+work=$$. 800-363-8200

More Than Just SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. Camp counselors needed for a private, residential camp in the beautiful Pocono Mountains. We are looking for people with a dedication to children, enthusiasm for diversity, and a desire to share their passion and expertise in any one of the following areas: COMPUTERS, CIRCUS ARTS, BASKETBALL, MAGIC, VOLLEYBALL, TENNIS, DANCE, VIDEO, CREATIVE WRITING, ESL, SOCCER,COOKING, RADIO, ROCK MUSIC, GOLF, SKATEBOARDING, ROLLERBLADING, ROCKETRY, NEWSPAPER, FINE ARTS, CREATIVE CRAFTS, MOUNTAIN BIKING, CLIMBING WALL. Call 1-800-399-CAMP Ask for Dan or Nigel

Part Time Jobs with the Sierra Club work on an urgent campaign to protect wildlife and wilderness full time/career positions available earn 55-70$/day Call Alex 413-256-6434 Amherst Center

EMPLOYMENT

Fraternities-Sororities-Clubs-Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,00 this semester with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 922-5579

Childcare needed 4 hours a week. 665-7483

On Campus Spokes Person Positions Available CIS is currently hiring motivated outgoing college students for spokes person positions $10.00-$15.00 an hour 10 hours a week on campus call Jodi Grant 800-567-6247

Whitewater guides and River Photographers wanted for part,full time summer jobs outdoor and athletic background a must will train for both positions. Photography position requires some experience. Call Crab Apple Whitewater for info 413-339-0188

Counter Help + Drivers Wanted. Must be able to work 20 hrs a week. Apply at DP Dough

Males Wanted For Exercise Science Study-earn up to $125-Call Steve 549-3877

Help Wanted Wait staff/Driver Part Time Kai Chi Restaurant 586-2774 Mountain Farms Mall

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

EMPLOYMENT

OJ For Hire Oj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester. Call Tim 549-9127

EMPLOYMENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Mountain Bike 98 Marin Muirwoods Exc. Conditions. $350 or B/O Call Ed 546-7055

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

Giant Mountain Bike. Bar ends, lock. Like new. $120. Call 546-1773

FURNITURE

1 Oesk And 1 Cheir For Sale. $30 OBO Call 256-6351

GREEK AFFAIRS

Sigma Kappa Open Rush 2-7 Sunday 5to7pm. 2-8 Monday 4to6. 2-9 Tuesday 7to9. 2-10 Wednesday 8to8. All UMass women welcome. 19 Allen St (behind Hillel) Call 256-6887 for info and rides

Fraternities/Sororities: Looking for a DJ for your next function? DJ Fooz is now booking, specializing in date parties and formals. Call Tim 549-9127

HEALTH & BEAUTY

ATHLETES, build muscles, endurance, burn fat with 100% pure Amino Acid formula Creatine Monohydrate, ect... Call 617-471-2366

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST & FOUND

Found: Keys on VanMeter Hill, Sat 1/30. Call 546-2796

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

One Bedroom Available in 4 bdrm house. Begins March 1. Belchertown. $280month. Call 323-9794. Matt

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

Roommate Needed for Hobart Lane Call 549-7461-Jeff. Only $250 a month

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99! Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710 / www,sunsplashtours.com

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

BOSTON SPRING BREAK'99 To Mazatian from $599 To Cancun from $369 7 nights, 5 to 14 FREE meals 10 to 32 hours of FREE drinks CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463 Visit our web site www.collegetours.com

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

STOP! OON'T SWALLOW THAT CONDOM. Save up to 70% on travel, or even travel free. And no nervous feeling in your stomach when you go through Customs. www.go4less.com/student

It is not too late to tell that someone special how you feel !!

Place an ad in The classifieds and let them know exactly how you feel!

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3

Cancellation — The Poetry Society meeting tonight is cancelled.

Community — There will be a blood drive in the Students Union Ballroom from 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Free frozen yogurt for each donor

Meeting — The UMass Student Film Society will hold a meeting at 8 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center. Contact Anna at 545-3659 for more details

Meeting — The first meeting of the UMass Theatre Guild will be at 7 p.m. in room 101 of the Campus Center. Contact Jana at 545-0415 for more information.

Meeting — Pride Alliance, the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, and straight ally undergraduate student organization, will be holding a meeting for anyone interested in being involved in planning Queerfest '99 at 7 p.m. in 413B of the Student Union. Call 545-0154 for more details

Show — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space will present "The Mid-Way Show," an annual group exhibition showcasing a variety of mediums, styles, and themes produced by second-year graduate students in the UMass Department of Art. The show runs until Feb. 12, and there will be an opening reception from 4-6 p.m.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

THURSDAY, FEB. 4

Community — There will be a blood drive in the Student Union Ballroom from 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Free frozen yogurt for each donor

Lecture — Leslea Newman will present a lecture entitled "Nice Jewish Dyke" at 12:30 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

NOTICES

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Conference — Share your experiences and learn more about learning communities at a conference entitled "Making Connections: Learning Communities for a Student-Centered University" on Feb. 5 from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. To register for this free conference and lunch call Anne Malone at 545-0851.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is February 12. Also searching for the 1998-99 cover contest winner. Deadline is the end of December. Call 5-4220 for more information.

Volunteers — Volunteers are needed to train and facilitate workshops on contraception and sexually transmitted disease prevention during Spring semester 1999. Men and women needed. Contact Karen or Day at 577-5188 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

University Store "Not like a mall. Better."

HSCN 24 Hour Service Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	24 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	25 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	26 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	27 Gavel to Gavel
6 PBS/57 Springfield	28 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.	29 Sundance
8 UPN/20 Hartford	30 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	31 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	32 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	33 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	34 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	35 Univision
14 International	36 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	37 Cartoon
16 WB/New Haven	38 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 3, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	16	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Performance at White House		I'll Make Me a World (In Stereo)	Part 3 of 3			Tina Turner-Rollbwsh
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Nanny	Maggie	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Maggie	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Whose Line?	20/20	News	Friends
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Charmed "Fire Wendigo"		News	News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		"Exiled: A Law & Order Movie" (1998, Drama) Chris Noth.		News	Newsradio	Married... With
WTXX		4	Home Imp.	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lane	7 Days "Last Card Up"		Star Trek: Voyager "Gravity"		News	Newsradio	Married... With
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Dateline (In Stereo)		"Exiled: A Law & Order Movie" (1998, Drama) Chris Noth.		News	Friends	Mad Abt. You
WTIC		61	Simpsons	Friends	Frasier		Dateline (In Stereo)		"Exiled: A Law & Order Movie" (1998, Drama) Chris Noth.		News		Tonight Show
WWLP		22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		Charmed "Fire Wendigo"		News	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY		6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Performance at White House		I'll Make Me a World (In Stereo)	Part 3 of 3		News	Nightline
WGGB		28	News	ABC News	Frasier		Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Whose Line?	20/20		Frasier
WSBK			Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days "Last Card Up"		Star Trek: Voyager "Gravity"		Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier
WTBS			Family Matters	Family Matters	Rosanna	Rosanna	National Geographic Explorer				Wild Life Adventures		Cheers
A&E			Northern Exposure "Roots"		Law & Order "Switch"		Biography: Tony Robbins		American Justice "Hot Pursuit"		"Fist Chance" (1991)	Law & Order "Savior"
CNN			Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand: Fortune	Sports	Moneyline
COM		38	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Dana Carvey: Critic's Choice		Saluta to Andy Kaufman		South Park (R) Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC			New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Weird Connections	Polar Bears	Inside the Secret Service (R)		Discover Magazine (R)		In the Grip of Evil (R)	Inside the Secret Service (R)
ESPN			Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Miami at St. John's (Live)				College Basketball: Maryland at Duke. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE			Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five "Who Cares"		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		"A Kiss to Die For" (1956, Drama) Yasmine Bleeth, James Wilder.		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV			Countdown	Biorhythms (R)	Ultra Sound "Back in the Day"		Sift & Dirty	Video Clashes	Total Request Live (In Stereo)	Dera (R)	Fanatic	Lovelina (In Stereo)
NICK			Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Allen Strange	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Laverne	I Love Lucy
SCIFI			Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Amaz. Stories	Star Trek "Errand of Mercy"			Highlander: The Series		Friday the 13th: The Series	Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC		29	Home Again	Home Again	68 Hours "Acora Ltd" (R)		Extreme Machines "Carriers"		Pearl Harbor'D-Day (R)		Strange Science-Skites	Extreme Machines "Carriers"
TNT			Dua South (In Stereo)		Elf "Mass of Two Hearts"		★½ "Firefox" (1982, Adventure)		Clint Eastwood, Freddie Jones			★½ "Firefox" (1982)
USA			Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Welker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Paramhood" (1989, Comedy-Drama) Steve Martin. (In Stereo)			Undercover
HBO			(4:30)		★★ "Head Above Water" (1996) Harvey Keitel.		★★ "A Life Less Ordinary" (1997)		★½ "Fallen" (1998, Suspense) Denzel Washington.		Mike: First	Tracey Takes	★★½ "The Locusts" (1997) Kate Capshaw.
MAX			★★½ "Cop's" (1998, Fantasy) Robin Williams. (In Stereo)		PG-13		★★½ "Falling Down" (1993, Drama) Michael Douglas.		★★ "A Stranger is Watching" (1982)		Rip Torn.	★★ "A Stranger is Watching" (1982)	Rip Torn.
SHOW			★★½ "Desperately Seeking Susan" (1985) Rosanna Arquette.				★½ "Red Company" (1994, Drama)		Ellen Barkin. (In Stereo)		★★★ "Safe House" (1998, Suspense)	Patrick Stewart.

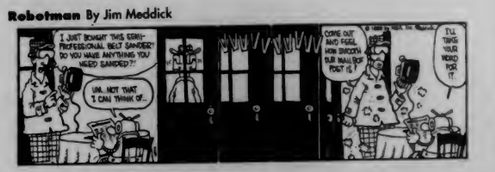
Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

For Those About To Rock By James Shaker

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — One minute you may feel you have everything going for you, and the next all seems lost. Don't be so dramatic! Today is a routine day.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Keep your judgments to yourself today, lest you risk being judged prematurely yourself. Try not to rub a friend the wrong way.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Everything can change in a blink of an eye today. However, If you cling to the few things that really mean the most to you, all will be well. Avoid overreaction.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Don't let environmental influences affect your mood in a negative fashion today. If it's sunny, you'll be sunny. If it's cloudy, you'll still be sunny.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — That "fraud-complex" may creep up behind you today, making you doubt your own veracity. Take comfort, you really do know what you're doing.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You may have trouble locating something that you've been searching for some time. You're very close today, but you must keep looking.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Your belief structure may be challenged today by a chain of events which has you acknowledging a truth that seemed impossible only yesterday.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Take care that you only repeat yourself when absolutely necessary today. Otherwise, you'll want to be original in thought and deed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — News you receive from afar today is likely to affect you in ways that you don't entirely understand. You'll receive an important message during the evening hours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — A smile is worth more today than usual. It may actually pave your way as you try to navigate some difficult new territory. Stay positive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You needn't be as sober and serious today as you have been in recent days or weeks. Lighten up, and let someone "in" before nightfall.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — The going may get tough today. You must strive to avoid any kind of frustrated outbursts. Cross any lines and you risk losing all.

Quote of the Day

"I'd like to think of everyday of my life as being just a bit homoerotic."

–Overheard

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Macaroni & Cheese
Sloppy Joe
Vegetable Sloppy Joe

DINNER
Roast Beef
Chicken Breast w/ Rice Stuffing
Fettuccini w/ Red Peppers,
Eggplant & Spinach

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Macaroni & Cheese
Sloppy Joe
Vegetable Sloppy Joe

DINNER
Roast Beef
Chicken Breast w/ Rice Stuffing
Fettuccini w/ Red Peppers,
Eggplant & Spinach

Hampshire

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Macaroni & Cheese
Sloppy Joe

DINNER
Roast Beef
Chicken Breast w/ Rice Stuffing
Fettuccini w/ Red Peppers,
Eggplant & Spinach

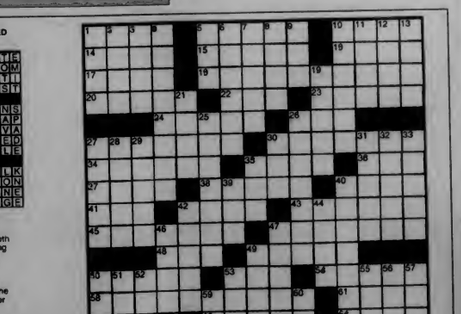
Berkshire

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Macaroni & Cheese
Sloppy Joe
Italian Grilled Cheese Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Beef
Chicken Breast w/ Rice Stuffing
Fettuccini w/ Red Peppers,
Eggplant & Spinach

Night Editor — Mike Messaros
Photo Technician — Beth Krikorian
Copy Editor — Kathleen Rolfs
Production Supervisor — Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff — John Burt, Vlad Zakoshansky

ACROSS



1 Arduous trip
5 Slope
10 Press
14 Abominable Snowman
15 Old cattle town
16 Egypt's river
17 Hourly fee
18 Initiative
20 Some gems
22 Sleeping place
23 Expression of praise
24 Water softener
26 Type of bran
27 Mexican foods
30 Eavesdropping method
34 Brand-new
35 Leave at the alter
36 Pub brew
37 Mono —
38 Borscht veggies
40 Film pooch
41 "— a date!"
42 Raises
43 Out of — misaligned
45 Profitable find
47 Tuna factory
48 Finale
49 Fad
50 Coined words
53 Qty. of gas
54 Loud kiss
58 Scott Adams, e.g.
61 Azure
62 Girlfriend for Yves
63 Flusters
64 Judge's attire
65 Hoover Dam's lake
66 Insignificant one
67 "The Mammoth Hunters" author

DOWN

1 Beginner
2 Harvest
3 Singer James
4 Spicy sausage
5 Sly resident
6 Tiny animals
7 Paint ingredient
8 Dull sound
9 Drain
10 Natural
11 Astronaut Sally
12 Gymnast Korbut
13 Electric sign
19 Not together
21 Only
25 Cardinal
26 Waterproof material
27 Dutch flower
28 Actress Ekberg
29 Rumpled
30 Clever one
31 Preference
32 Change
33 Polar explorer
35 O'Hare sight
39 Salamander
40 Granada tourist attraction
42 Jargon
44 Egyptian goddess
46 Made an impression?
47 Less sincere
49 Indian corn
50 Rip-off
51 Glittery cloth
52 Opera song
53 Act like a beaver
55 Matty of baseball
56 Raise to the third power
57 — over; capsize
59 Many times, to a poet
60 Cookbook amt.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	T	O	W		G	L	A	I	D		A	R	T
E	A	R	E		R	O	B	E	S		Z	O	O
M	I	L	D		A	B	O	R	E		A	S	H
		O	P	E	D		I	D	A		T	O	P
E	S	T	E			I	N	N	S		B	P	O
K	I	D	N	E	Y		C	A	P	I	T	A	L
O	S	A	K	A		M	A	I	L		S	N	A
A	L	F		H	O	I	S	T		A	V	I	A
L	A	O	S		O	O	N	A		T	A	P	E
A	M	E	N	A	B	L	E		G	E	N	T	L
E				J	I	M	M	Y		D	U	K	E
A	D	A	P	T		O	U	L		M	A	L	K
G	O	N	G		B	R	O	I	L		I	C	E
B	I	K	E		S	A	U	N	A		G	A	S
E	A	R		T	R	O	D		H	E	R	E

SPORTS

Wednesday, February 3, 1999 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Syracuse knocks Connecticut off undefeated pace

Dry your eyes Connecticut fans. Your precious Huskies weren't going undefeated anyway.

In case you have been under a rock for the past 48 hours, here's the news: The vaunted UConn men's basketball

Casey Kane
College Basketball

team, the No. 1 team in the nation (or should I say former No. 1), lost to 10th-ranked Syracuse Monday night during a Big East showdown.

The loss, 59–42 in Hartford, was the worst piece of offensive production the Huskies (18–1, 11–1) have mustered in 27 years. Of course, UConn fans can argue that their team was without Richard Hamilton, the team's leading scorer at 22.1 points per game, who is day–to–day with a bruised right thigh.

They can argue that the team was without leading rebounder Jake Voskuhl, who is out indefinitely with a stress fracture left foot (Voskuhl had the same injury in high school and flew home to Houston today for X–rays).

But those are the breaks in the big leagues, kids. So your two best players are out with injuries. You're the No. 1 team in the nation — deal!

Oh yeah (I'm revolting in this), point guard Khalid El–Amin had six points, all in the first half. Edmund Sanders was the only UConn player in double digits with 14. Ricky Moore was practically non–existent.

The loss matched the Huskies' lowest point total since their first year in the Big East, when they lost to Georgetown 60–42 on Feb. 27, 1982. It is their worst offensive showing since a 41–39 loss to Boston College on Feb. 29, 1972. UConn's lowest final total before Monday had been in its 59–54 win over Massachusetts in December.

• With UConn's loss, next week's Associated Press Top 25 should look a bit different, of course there is still a lot of time left in the week. Duke, currently No. 2 at 21–1, 19–0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, faces Maryland tonight.

Of course, there was some movement on the polls that can't be overlooked. For the first time in eight years, Kansas is not among the nation's 25 best programs, breaking a string of 145 consecutive poll appearances. The last time the Jayhawks (15–6, 7–2 Big 12) were not in the poll was the week of Jan. 21, 1991.

On the other hand, the College of Charleston made a return to the AP list for the first time in nearly two years. Sporting a 19–2 overall record and a 11–0 mark in the Southern Conference, the Cougars have climbed to No. 22. Charleston's last appearance came in the final poll of the 1996–97 season.

The College of Charleston also has the distinction of co–holding the nation's longest current win streak. The Cougars and Duke have each won 16 games in a row.

• UCLA coach Steve Lavin earned the distinction of his first ejection last weekend, as his No. 13 Bruins were upset by Washington 93–83 in Seattle.

Lavin became, ahem, animated after point guard Baron Davis fouled out. Criticizing calls to the referees, Lavin was hit with one technical. He picked up his second rushing onto the court, dragging one of his assistant coaches behind him.

Davis was then hit with a technical, setting up Washington's Deon Luton for eight free throws. Luton hit five, giving the Huskies a big lift in a season that has seen them lose to Boise State, Gonzaga and Washington State.

• Showing an incredible amount of faith in his junior guard, Indiana coach Bob Knight didn't think A.J. Guyton's last–second three–pointer had any shot of hitting paydirt.

But Guyton had a line on the hoop and the shot gave the Hoosiers a 98–95 double–overtime victory over the Nittany Lions Sunday.

"I thought Guyton's shot had no chance of going in. I think it got caught in a wind current," Knight told the AP after the game.

• Ten years after giving up a shot at NCAA glory and a NBA future, Larry Bland is back in the game.

In 1986, Bland graduated from Glastboro High after setting a South New Jersey–record 2,339 points. As a high school senior he averaged an amazing 36.5 ppg. But his grades weren't as good as his game, and Bland attended Central Arizona Junior College for two years before transferring to Seton Hall.

The unplanned birth of daughter Althena forced Bland to leave school before the start of the Pirate's Final Four season. And the birth of son Larry Jr. turned him back to school.

Now the sixth man at Division III power Rowan Bland, who teammates call "Uncle Larry" and "L–Train" averages 12.4 ppg and has helped Rowan to a 15–0 start.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

UMass hoop squad walking on thin ice

Minutemen will need to hit a hot streak to reach NCAA's

At this point in the college basketball season the Massachusetts student body is usually making plans as to see where their team will be playing in the NCAA Tournament.

However, this season at 9–11, the men's basketball squad will likely need to win the Atlantic 10 Tournament to make that assumption a reality. After inexcusable losses to Marshall, Davidson, Iona, Fordham and St. Bonaventure, they are looking to possibly sneak into the NIT... if they care to.

Paul Teves

The "big wins" for the Minutemen include victories over Boston College, whom they pounded 75–45, St. Joseph's and Virginia Tech. The only games the Minutemen can point to as monumental victories were the wins over Detroit and then–No. 15 Kansas. But in the grand scheme of things, those triumphs mean little when you factor in the aforementioned losses.

UMass coach Bruiser Flint said after the Fordham defeat that his team is capable of winning the last 10 games to make a serious run at the NCAA tournament, but now after the most recent loss to Texas, the number of games stands at eight. When does the countdown end? If Flint doesn't light a spark under his lackluster team right now, the streak of eight consecutive tournament appearances for UMass will effectively be terminated.

Under the Bruiser regime, which includes the last three seasons, the Minutemen have never been a tournament–ready group. They have failed to put together a streak of wins when they had to. This was evidenced by a pair of second round losses in the A–10 tourney to George Washington, and by two first–round losses in the A–10 tourney to Louisville and St. Louis. The bad news for Bruiser and his team is that a second–round loss in the A–10's this year would probably end their campaign.

The recent slide can't be just thrown on the shoulders of Flint, however. The team must also accept a significant portion of the blame. The problem stems from the team's ineffective play on offense. The Minutemen average 63 points per game, and it's clear that it's difficult to win many games with that sort of production.

The UMass woes begin with the disappointing season that Lari Ketner has put together. The pre–season All–American who was expected to mirror last year's production, has instead averaged 10.7 points and 7.2 rebounds per contest. The bottom line on Ketner this season is that the senior center has not withstood the pressure. Ketner will need to be one of the cornerpieces if the Minutemen look to assemble a resurgence during the last eight games.

Senior Charlton Clarke has provided solid numbers for the team (10 points, four assists), but Flint has been increasingly disappointed with Clarke's leadership abilities, or lack there of. This was evident when Bruiser pulled Clarke for seldom–used reserve guard Jonathan DePina for the last 10 minutes of the Texas game last Sunday.

While averaging 11.5 minutes per contest, DePina has only posted 2.1 points per game and a meager 39 percent while shooting from the field.

For the Minutemen to make a season–saving run, they will need Clarke to perform at the beginning, middle and end of games down the stretch.

Additionally, Ajmal Basit has not performed consistently and gave up his starting role in favor for a spot off the pine right before the Davidson disaster. Basit, averaging 15 minutes per game, has contributed 4.5 points and 3.9 rebounds per contest. Entering the season he was expected to be one of the focal points of the Minutemen offense.

In regards to other options on offense, Rafael Cruz, who collected 16 points against Duquesne on 5–of–6 shooting, has seen very few minutes since that game. If the team continues to struggle for offense, Cruz should be a name to surface in the rotation.

While some players have not lived up to expectations, Mike Babul and Chris Kirkland have far exceeded them. They have pitched in with solid defense, stellar rebounding and by giving 110–percent every time out on the floor this season. While they have contributed a combined 12.8 points per game, they're simply not the offensive weapons either Clarke or Ketner have the potential to be. Both junior forwards have improved their outside shooting and ability to take it the basket, but UMass will still rely on the senior co– captains (Ketner and Clarke) to complement Monty Mack on offense.

It needs to be stressed that Mack has provided superb outside shooting and an improved attitude on defense. Mack, who averages 17.8 points per game, also leads the team with 19 steals (roughly one per game).

However, it simply will not be enough for one man to lead this team into the A–10 tournament or any other post–season play. The Minutemen will need the type of effort they put forth against ranked teams like Kansas and UConn every game from here on out. They need to reinstill the "refuse to lose" attitude that was prominent during the John Calipari era. This will be crucial for this program to return to national prominence.

Paul Teves is a Collegian columnist.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

While Lari Ketner (foreground) has struggled to find consistency on the court, Monty Mack (background) has been the most dependable player for UMass this season.

Pro hockey still trying to find answers

In the prolonged absence of the National Basketball Association over winter break, I was hoping for a moment that the National Hockey League would try to reinvent itself. Well, maybe not reinvent, but at least make a strong commitment to changing the poor image that it currently drags with it.

What better chance did it have when there was no professional basketball to contend with? Or with the number of National Football League teams in competition dwindling, leaving open plenty of markets that were hungry for sports?

Matt Despres
on

But alas, basketball returns, and what does the NHL have to show for it? Better ratings... in Canada. Now there's a surprise, eh?

The NHL is sitting on top of a very marketable goldmine. Every night during the season, in any given city, some of the greatest athletes in the world are lacing up the skates and pushing themselves to the edge. The NHL has at its disposal an arsenal of players that cover every angle of the game, from the finesse aspect to the physical one.

However, like any business (and sadly, the NHL is a business before it is a sport), it sees only an opportunity to make money. This desire to make a buck has resulted in some very poor choices that could have gone in other directions had someone actual thought been put into it.

Here are some of my thoughts and suggestions on what the NHL should in this new year to turn itself around.

• The biggest enemy of the game has been, ironically, the one thing that is supposed to be building it: expansion. Moving the NHL to uncharterted markets would seem like an obvious move, right? With new markets come new fans, revenue, etc. But plunking down a team in a locale like Nashville does not constitute success or improvement of the league by any means.

Continued expansion into the late 1990's has done nothing but dilute the pool of talent waiting to make the big step. More and more 18 year–old junior and college players are hurting their chances to develop at a normal and healthy pace because roster spots need to be filled. They arrive with unacceptable expectations placed on their shoulders, and more often than not crumble under the media blitz.

The formula these teams follow, with the exception of maybe the Panthers in this: take the first few seasons, pick up some draft picks, and build from there. Meanwhile, players from around the league are being shipped from place to place via the expansion draft, leaving little chance for any roster to remain stable for a period of time.

New fans, under this system, have no chance to get attached to the team that competes in their hometown. If Commissioner Gary Bettman and the rest of his NHL cohorts had any smarts, they would stop expansion after the new class arrives. The bleeding has to slow down before it can be stopped, and this is a big step in that direction. League officials have to stop thinking big and work to improve what they already have. Smaller steps are the way to proceed, and are what will get you bigger results in the long run.

• The two–referee system has seen positive reviews while being run on a trial basis this season. An extra set of eyes out on the ice can't hurt, but at the same time will not be a cure–all. The league shouldn't be afraid to go upstairs to the replay official and make sure that the call made was done in the right one. It may take a minute or two out of the game, but it also removes a chunk of uncertainty.

• Cutting the "wings" off the sides of the crease has also opened up play around the net, allowing players to do what they have every right to do — be more physical.

• Eliminate the red line. Old time purists may disagree with this one, but give it a chance. How many times have you see the momentum of a game pick up, only to be brought to a sudden stop with the whistle of a two–line pass?

This rule will benefit the flashy players like Jaromir Jagr, Sergei Samsonov and Paul Kariya, and make the defensemen in the league work that much harder.

• Allow contact to be made with the goaltender. Again, another one that may not go over that well. As soon as the goalie leaves that crease, make him fair game. If a 5–foot 7–inch Theoren Fleury can get cranked into the boards as part of the play, then someone considerably larger with twice the equipment can too. Fans want to see action; let's do something to give it to them.

• The last thing I want to address concerning the state of the NHL is the All–Star Game. The move last year to a North America vs. the World was a smart one. Although it hasn't magically transformed the event into a hard hitting affair, playing for your country certainly has meant a lot more to the players than just representing your conference.

Also, get rid of the circus atmosphere surrounding the game. Sure, fireworks and bright lights might make the little kids smile, but adds zero to the quality of what is supposed to be a showcase of the world's greatest talent.

The history of this league is steeped in tradition and excellence. What's happening now is a sideshow, and it hurts to watch. Dump–and–chase hockey does not bring in viewers. Hopefully the league takes notice of the NBA, which resembles the Sunday comic page, and also looks in the mirror. What they see should be enough to make them want to change. Quickly.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian staff member.

John Elway, Broncos honored with parade

DENVER (AP) — A distinct chant arose from the fans who came to see the NFL champions come home: "One more year!"

The crowd at Monday's parade and rally for the Denver Broncos voiced a collective plea to quarterback John Elway, asking him to play for one more year before retiring.

And behind that hope was a hunger for an unprecedented third consecutive Super Bowl victory.

"He will come back because he wants to be the only quarterback to three–peat," Cindy Unrein Chengery, a season ticket holder like her parents before her, said of Elway.

Many of Elway's teammates had said they expect him to retire, but that was before Sunday night's 34–19 victory over the Atlanta Falcons. Elway was named the game's MVP.

Speaking to the crowd after doing a little dance to Billy Idol's "Rebel Yell" when he was introduced, Elway gave the fans a spark of hope that he could be back for more — but no guarantee.

"That three–peat does sound interesting," Elway said. "But we'll talk about that, but right now we're going to enjoy this win we had last night."

Even coach Mike Shanahan, who usually avoids putting any public pressure on his quarterback, urged Elway to stay, saying, "One more time for Elway" and starting a crowd chant of "One more year! One more year!"

Elway would say nothing more about his plans.

"We thought last year was great, this year was even better," the quarterback said. "As I said two weeks ago, I love you."

Monday's exuberant festivities were in direct contrast with Sunday night's violent post–Super Bowl celebrations, which resulted in at least 20 arrests and dozens treated for tear gas exposure. Property damage was estimated at $160,000 after the crowd turned over trash cans and cars, broke windows and set off bonfires.

"I think it could have been a lot worse," Andrew Hudson, a spokesman for Mayor Wellington Webb, said Monday. "I think if police had not done as well in organizing their efforts, a lot more people would have gotten hurt."

Monday's parade and rally wasn't all about Elway.

"It's not just Elway anymore. We have a whole team now," Chengery said. "Terrell Davis, Bill Romanowski, Rod Smith."

The fans were filled with pride for the whole team, which in the past had broken hearts in Denver so often that some started calling them "the Donkeys."

"You can't call them the Donkeys anymore," said Fran Cronin, 40, a Denver native and lifelong Broncos fan who watched her team lose four Super Bowls before finally winning two in a row.

The Broncos initially said they wanted only a rally because nine players needed to get to Honolulu for the Pro Bowl by yesterday. But fans and Mayor Webb convinced the team to hold a parade, saying they should show some gratitude to the city that voted last November to give them a new stadium.

The Broncos traveled down Broadway on fire trucks and in buses, starting downtown and continuing about a mile to Civic Center Park for the rally. Police and a spokesman for the mayor estimated the crowd size at 375,000.

Payton diagnosed with rare liver disease

By Rick Gano
AP Sports Writer

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Walter Payton, gaunt, tearful and barely resembling the dashing, durable Chicago Bears' Hall of Famer who rushed his way into the NFL record books, got to the point quickly on yesterday:

He has a rare liver disease and needs a transplant to live.

"To the people that really care about me, just continue praying," said the 44–year–old Payton, who choked up when he embraced his 17–year–old son, Jarrett.

The disease, primary sclerosing cholangitis, afflicts just three in 100,000 people, said Payton's physician, Dr. Joseph Lagattuta.

The cause of the disease, which blocks the bile ducts, is unknown, but isn't related to alcohol, steroids, hepatitis or immune deficiency, he said.

Patients in Payton's condition survive an average of two years unless they receive a liver transplant, Lagattuta said. Symptoms include fatigue and jaundice - yellowing of the pigment of the eyes and skin.

Asked if he was scared, the NFL's all–time rushing leader snapped: "Am I scared? Hell yeah. I'm scared. Wouldn't you be scared?"

"But it's not in my hands anymore," he added. "It's in God's hands."

In 13 years with the Bears, Payton's trademarks were his vaulting goal line leaps and a punishing running style. He stiff–armed and barreled past tacklers in the open field almost as often as he dodged them.

Rumors about Payton's health spread last week after he appeared at a news conference where his son announced he would play college football for Miami. Payton said those rumors prompted his disclosure.

"We wanted to get everything straight before things got bad," said Payton, who wore sunglasses and an NFL jacket and bluejeans that couldn't hide his thinness.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 8 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Thursday, February 4, 1999

Racist graffiti appears in dorm

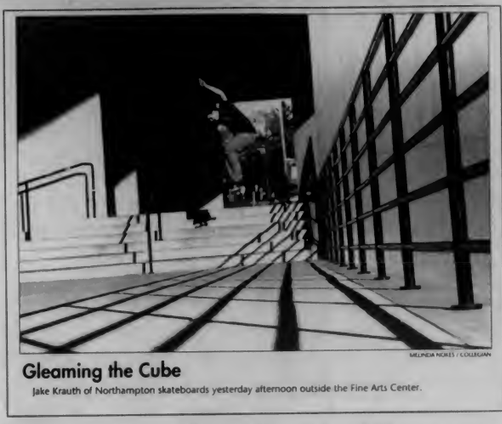
By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Many residents of Thatcher Residence Hall have been waking up to find swastikas drawn on their dry–erase boards.

The latest incident was reported last Wednesday, but at least three incidents were reported at the end of December. According to Eunice Ro, Resident Director of the Thatcher Johnson–Lewis cluster, "the activity has been going on a lot longer than we were aware of."

In some incidents, she said, students discovered the graffiti and erased the swastikas before anyone could be offended. A resident assistant was eventually made aware of the problem, and the University of Massachusetts Police Department has responded to the recent incidents.

"Individuals should be aware [that offensive graffiti] may carry with it serious consequences, not only with this department, but also with the district attorney," said UMass Police Chief John Luippold.



It may also be considered a criminal offense, he said, and punishable by a maximum fine of $5,000 or up to two and a half years in jail.

"There are no suspects and no real evidence, which is too bad because we want it to stop," said Jake Dunlap, a resident of the second floor, where the incidents have taken place. "I wouldn't think the person doing it is a hard–core nazi or anything... I personally think it's someone just looking for attention."

"Whether intended or not, swastikas can be quite threatening, especially if they appear on your door," said Larry Goldbaum, coordinator of the Jewish Awareness Program.

Goldbaum and Ro agreed that the graffiti does not seem to be targeting any individuals in particular, but many students have been offended by the appearance of the

Turn to GRAFFITI, page 3

MELINDA NUNES / COLLEGIAN

Gleaming the Cube

Jake Krauth of Northampton skateboards yesterday afternoon outside the Fine Arts Center.

Groups to try to nix marijuana laws with local ballot question

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

Regional and University groups are gathering signatures to place a marijuana–related Public Opinion Advisory Question on the Amherst town ballot.

The proposed ballot question, as it states, would "urge members of the Select Board and the Town Manager to persuade our state representative, state senator, U.S. representative, and U.S. senators to repeal the prohibition of marijuana."

It would also request that the Amherst Police Department "deprioritize the enforcement of laws covering the possession of marijuana against persons over the age of eighteen." Citizens for a Sensible Marijuana Policy, the University of Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC), the Amherst Cannabis Educational Organization, the Pioneer Valley chapter of the National Organization to Reform Marijuana Laws have all pledged support for the initiative.

On November 23, 1998, the Amherst Town Select Board declined to place the question on the ballot. "The way it was written, we didn't feel we could support it," said Eva Schiffer, a Select Board member. "We had problems with the second article. We thought it was entirely too vague. Deprioritize — just what does that mean? We urged [the question's supporters] to consider separating the articles, but they refused."

However, Massachusetts state law allows questions to be placed on the ballot by petition without the consent of the Select Board. "We weren't expecting them to pass it," said Liz Rising, the Vice President (and acting President) of CRC. "The Select Board meeting was just a necessary step to getting the question on the ballot."

In response to Schiffer's criticism of the second article, Rising stated, "Other towns have held votes on this issue using the same language. If there were two separate questions, the first [involving support for legalization] would almost definitely pass, whereas the second [involving deprioritization] almost definitely wouldn't."

A full 10 percent of the approximately 19,000 registered Amherst voters need to sign the petition by Tuesday, February 16, for the question to appear on the town ballot for the March 30 elections.

Proponents of the measure hope to collect 3,000 signatures. They claim to have collected between 700 and 900 signatures thus far.

In 1976, attendees of an Amherst Town Meeting passed a similar measure to request that their representatives support marijuana legalization. CRC hope that Amherst voters will continue to support the issue of marijuana legalization. "People care about this issue," Rising said. "Polls have shown that 75% of Americans agree with our policy."

Phil Milson, a former president of the UMass Republican Club, feels differently. "I adamantly oppose such an effort," he said. "It is especially disturbing that University students would devote such a great deal of free time and effort to a cause as worthless and wasteful as this."

"The police are obliged to put the general well–being of their jurisdiction as a top priority, not to deprioritize it," said Milson.

The question itself is non–binding, meaning that it does not effectively change Amherst law. Despite this, both proponents and opponents of the law agree that passage could receive national attention.

Project rejects volunteers

By Natty Yagudin
Collegian Staff

The Boltwood Project, an on–campus community service organization, conducted its first general meeting at the Campus Center last night.

The program gives students a chance to receive academic credit for volunteering in shelters and houses for people with special needs.

Only 200 people will be accepted to the program out of about 500 prospective volunteers, said Heather Loitherstein, the program coordinator.

"We can't take more volunteers than there are participants," said Loitherstein.

Lack of funding has prevented the program from expending to accept all applicants.

The project started 30 years ago and is an effort of the Environmental Design Program at the University of Massachusetts Amherst, as well as other state and private institutions in the area. Now the project is also available to students from the five colleges.

The project serves two purposes, which are to provide community service to disabled people, as well as to create a unique educational experience for students.

Students choose to participate in one of 16 programs, and volunteer for about two hours every week. Their grade is derived from attendance, active participation, and a final paper. Students also keep a journal of their experiences and hand it in as a part of their grade.

"It's a totally different experience. You go into these people's homes and you see the way they live," said Jann Neumann, a senior who participated in the project. "You get personally involved. You walk away with so much more than two credits."

Many students who volunteered in past semesters come back as program supervisors. One of them is senior, Beth Seligman.

Seligman volunteered at Jessie's House, a homeless shelter in Northampton. Volunteers at Jessie's House work with children of homeless families and take them out on field trips.

"They [children] see your face and they light up," Seligman said.

"Getting attached to the kids was the big thing," said Tim Bonito, a senior who also volunteered at Jessie's House.

Bonito said he was disappointed when some of the children left in the middle of the semester. He is planning to volunteer again, possibly at "Young At Heart", a group that visits older adults.

Board witholding vote

Private club's fate still up in air

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The debate over allowing a private club into the space currently occupied by Pruddy's restaurant and bar ended last night after adamant arguments from both sides, but the verdict from the Amherst Planning Board won't be in for two more weeks.

Joanne DeLong, an attorney representing the One and All Society of International Souls (OASIS) club, advocated for OASIS to be approved to use the space on 30 Boltwood Walk.

"The essential purpose of this organization is for people to socialize. People who will populate the premises on Boltwood Walk will be members. They will have a relationship with each other," DeLong said. "Keep your eyes on the issue before you. Do not allow yourself to go on tangents that are being caused by some fear or loathing."

The issue that the Board did focus on was what the "chief activity" would be in the non–profit club. Board members did not want the activities to be the same as they were in Pruddy's.

Board member William O'Neil said other towns had allowed groups to use the title "club" to hide their activities.

"They were restaurants. They were bars. They were pubs, but they called themselves clubs," O'Neil said.

He said the Board should not "replicate that fiction."

But DeLong stressed that OASIS is a social club and not a guise for running a bar or restaurant.

"It's non–profit. How many actual real restaurants are going to want to turn and do that? Say 'I'll forgo my profits, I'll answer to a board of directors, to members,'" DeLong said.

"...How you are organized in terms of business organization is not relevant," said Fred Hartwell, a Board member. "It is what activities will take place in that location."

But besides controversy over what would actually take place in the space, was an accusation of racism in OASIS's by–laws, by the Board.

After the Planning Board met with representatives of OASIS on Jan. 27, some Board members expressed concerns in a memorandum, one of which was that the clubs by–laws would exclude African–Americans.

"... the bylaws of the club, as they currently appear," stated the memorandum, "may have what Authority members presumed to be the unintentioned effect of discriminating against African–Americans and members of other minorities or federally protected classes. If left unchanged, this would contradict the stated purpose of the club."

One bylaw of the club states that a member must have "one parent, grand–

Turn to MEETING, page 2

Final witness answers questions; impeachment seems unlikely

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Democrats threatened yesterday to turn President Clinton's impeachment trial into a party battle if the Republicans go through with plans to vote on a declaration of wrongdoing before deciding his fate.

As House GOP prosecutors questioned the third of three witnesses in the case, Democratic leader Tom Daschle said his party's rank–and–file lawmakers were solidly opposed to any live trial testimony on the Senate floor. He also raised objections to the immediate public release of Monica Lewinsky's videotaped deposition.

But what sparked the Democrats' sharpest criticism was a GOP proposal for a formal finding of wrongdoing, a measure that would require a simple majority for passage rather than the two–thirds needed for conviction on impeachment.

"If Republicans persist in demanding live witnesses and demanding more depositions, and demanding extra legal devices like findings of fact, the more it becomes a Republican trial," Daschle told reporters.

The White House also renewed its objections to the proposal, at the same time spokesman Joe Lockhart pledged a restrained response if — as expected — Clinton is acquitted on the two articles of impeachment.

"I now declare in a post–impeachment era, this is a gloat–free zone," he said.

Republican senators met privately late in the day, pondering their next moves in the trial, which is scheduled to resume on Thursday.

John Crwartzki, a spokesman for Majority Leader Trent Lott told reporters he expected a vote at that time on a proposal to release the depositions of Ms. Lewinsky and two other witnesses, both the written transcripts and the videotapes. He suggested they could remain under seal for a limited period of time.

For their part, House prosecutors met to weigh the results of the three depositions. They said an attempt would be made to have witnesses testify in the Senate in person. But GOP aides conceded it would be difficult to secure enough votes to prevail on that issue, particularly with public

Turn to IMPEACH, page 3

MELINDA NUNES / COLLEGIAN

Volunteer fair at the Campus Center

A volunteer fair was held in the Campus Center Auditorium yesterday for students interested in helping out with community organizations and planning a semi–learning internship for next semester. Here Larry Redmond distributes information about the Big Brothers/Big Sisters organization of Hampshire County.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 42 LOW: 27	HIGH: 30 LOW: 28	HIGH: 46 LOW: 28

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Back from Iraq

After a recent trip to Iraq, story–teller and UMass alumni George Capaccio will be at Smith College tonight speaking about the effects of bombing and sanctions.

NEWS PAGE 2

Shape up or ship out

The Valley offers plenty of help for working out this Spring. Look inside for our guide to fitness around campus.

ARTS PAGE 5

The Dean of dunk

Senior Antonio Reynolds–Dean will lead the charge as his Rhode Island Rams butt heads with the Massachusetts Minutemen at the William D. Mullins Center tonight.

SPORTS PAGE 14

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 12
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
FYI 12
News 3
Sports 14

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

UM alumni speaks out about Iraq sanctions; firsthand accounts given at Smith College

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts alumni, actively involved in the campaign to lift the United States/United Nations economic sanctions imposed on Iraq, will be speaking tonight at Smith College.

For the past seven years, George Capaccio has visited the country of Iraq against U.S. law and policies prohibiting such actions, in attempts to deliver medicine and food to Iraqi families.

Capaccio, a Springfield native, graduated from UMass with an English major and has been a writer, actor, and storyteller for the past 25 years.

In 1990, prior to the Gulf War, Capaccio worked as an award-winning broadcaster. The war had a huge impact on Capaccio's life and caused it to change dramatically. Iraq's illegal invasion into Kuwait forced economic and military sanctions to be imposed on the Iraqi country.

The sanctions crippled Iraq's economy and limited the amount of oil Iraq could sell. Relying highly on oil as a commodity with which to sell to other countries, Iraq was limited to the amount of money they could make. The economy suffered extremely and Capaccio, aware of the effects the sanctions were having on the Iraqi people, was determined to take action against it.

In 1997, he conducted a visit to Iraq as part of a peace delegation sponsored by Voices In The Wilderness, a Chicago-based organization. Capaccio, along with four other delegates, brought aid to starving families. The delegation delivered over $40,000 worth of medicine to hospitals in Baghdad and Basra, Capaccio said.

According to Capaccio, such trips were undertaken despite threats issued by the U.S. Treasury Department, warning that citizens who travel to Iraq risk fines of $1 million dollars and up to 12 years in prison. Already, Voices In The Wilderness has been fined more than $120,000 for illegally entering Iraq and for illegally delivering medicine and toys, Capaccio said.

He feels his main purpose in becoming involved is to witness first-hand effects of sanctions and then return to his community to educate people on the foreign policies occurring overseas.

Capaccio has also become dissatisfied at the amount of press coverage on the issue and hopes to get attention by illegally entering Iraq.

"We're challenging the government of the United States to firstly prosecute us for breaking the law," Capaccio said. "Very little attention is paid by the press until some bombing occurs with very little attention to the people."

Voices in the Wilderness' hope for drawing attention is to get sanctions lifted. Capaccio says Iraq was a targeted country and one that was a threat to other countries.

"It's entire industrial base was targeted. It had become to much of a threat to the area," Capaccio said. "It was a highly developed country reliant on high technology."

According to Capaccio, more than one million Iraqi people have died as a result of the sanctions. More are dying every day, and he feels there is great concern over the issue.

"It's almost like ten million people dying in the United States," Capaccio said. "They [sanctions] are a blunt instrument, and they target the weakest, the oldest, and the poor."

Presently, he has been to Iraq four times to provide support and with every return to the States, he delivers messages to Americans by appearing on radio shows, television, and churches. In 1998, he produced his own documentary and took almost a year to edit it.

In addition, he's written poems and stories of his experience and shares them with people.

"It gives moral support for the people of Iraq in knowing that there are Americans who don't feel the same way Clinton does," Capaccio said.

He feels many Americans aren't aware of the kinds of suffering going on and only of Clinton's decision to bomb Iraq.

"I believe one of the motives behind bombing Iraq was to snub the faces of the U.N.," Capaccio said. "They [U.S.] must have known that by bombing there would be no more on-site weapons inspectors. It would give them more room to get rid of Saddam and go to war in the future."

With every visit, Capaccio has seen little advances made in lifting the sanctions. Instead, he has seem more desperation and hopelessness.

Meanwhile, he feels he has never witnessed such family values and support as he did in Iraq.

"I've become a better person to myself, a son to my father, and a better husband to my wife from my visits to Iraq," Capaccio said.

Having appeared at Smith College on numerous occasions, Capaccio is excited to return to the area and share his experiences once again in hopes or raising awareness on the issue and effects of sanctions.

Capaccio will be speaking at 7 p.m. tonight in Graham Auditorium at Smith College.

COURTESY OF SUSAN MILLER

George Capaccio speaks to an audience on his experiences in Iraq.

~Local News Briefs~

The Campus Activities Office and the Student Government Association (SGA) held a Student Leadership Mini- Conference to discuss plans for a programming board. The purpose of a program board, according to the proposal, is to plan consistent activities and better utilize the resources available. Through the better coordination of activities, we should begin to see campus based events and activities that are fun for students.

The Program Board will facilitate the planning of events, while adding a sense of community building across campus, as well as offering to Program Board members an excellent opportunity for leadership development.

The conference lasted two days and invited a cross section of student leaders. Those invited to attend the conference included members of the Student Government Association, leaders from all Registered Student Organizations (RSOs), and all the staff of the Cultural Centers. According to Delphine Quarles, Director of Campus Activities Advising Center, "One of the goals of the conference was to have the appropriate parties present and provide a good foundation for the Program Board."

At the conference, according to Quarles, a technique call Continuous Quality Improvement, or CQI, was used to collect data from the students on what a Program Board at UMass should do. The process included student writing down their different ideas and categorizing them under different headings. "Now we have the data from the students and the SGA will take the initiative to get it up and running," said Lisa Cook, Speaker of the Senate.

According Cook, there has been a reallocation of money over the past three years and there is already a budget of $141,604 for the Program Board, and the fund should continue to grow.

The administration that works closely with the students feel this will be a wonderful way to have consistent programs on campus that compliment the RSOs, said Quarles. "We're one of the few schools that don't have a programming board. Were trying to take the best of other Program Boards at others schools and design one unique to our campus and one that will best service our students, it will be an evolving process," said Quarles.

— Compiled by Danielle Fugazy

■ meeting

continued from page 1

parent or great-grandparent who was born outside the United States."

DeLong said the bylaw was not written with the intention of discriminating against African-Americans.

"Our only purpose is to be multicultural." DeLong said. "We have a black on our board... We want to be inclusive but also have some limits on membership."

Some residents of the Boltwood Walk area, in particular Clark House which provides housing for the elderly, spoke in opposition of allowing OASIS to move-in citing past problems with Pruddy's patrons.

"They like to cut through Clark House park. They like to play games on our lawn at 1:30 or 2 [a.m.]," said Clark House resident Mary Wentworth. "Our relationship with that area has been somewhat troubled with students running up and exposing themselves and urinating in public," said Walter Stethaniv, a resident of Tyler Place.

Stethaniv also said he had had problems while walking past "belligerent," patrons waiting in line at Pruddy's.

Wentworth and Stethaniv, along with 33 other Amherst residents and business owners, signed a petition requesting alcohol not be served where Pruddy's is located.

However, according to Amherst law, the location must be used for a bar or restaurant but the law is expected to be either expanded or changed this month.

After the public hearing, Board members discussed the issue but tabled further discussion until their next meeting Feb. 17 so written statements turned in this week could also be considered.

In the Feb. 3 issue of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian the brand of camera and the description of cast were misidentified in the article "Hollywood Hopefuls, greats and equipment awarded to U.M. dept." The camera is a Panavision, and the cast is all Vietnamese. The Collegian regrets the error.

In the Feb. 3 issue of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, award recipient Elizabeth Skelton was incorrectly identified. The Collegian regrets the error.

BUB'S BAR-B-Q

'Pig Out In Style'

VOTED BEST BARBQ AND BEST RIBS FOR THE PAST 14 CONSECUTIVE YEARS BY THE ADVOCATE

- (413) 548-9630

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD

starting under $20.00

silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY

One King St., Northampton 584-3324 • M-Wed 10-6, Th-Sat 10-9, Sun 12-5
364 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324 • M-Sat 10-6, Thurs till 8, Sun 12-5

DUNKIN' DONUTS
MULLINS CENTER PRACTICE ICE RINK
introduces the
OMWICH™

Try our Bacon & Cheddar, Veggie or 3-Cheese Omelet Sandwich on a Bagel, Croissant or English Muffin.

breakfast like you've never tasted before.
Available at Palmer, Ware, Monson, Granby and UMass Locations.

STUDENT AFFAIRS SPECIAL SERVICES
STUDENT SPEAKER
UNDERGRADUATE COMMENCEMENT

Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Who Is Eligible: Graduating Amherst campus senior (Class of 1999).

Subject Matter: Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests, and address your impressions and experience(s) both academic and extracurricular.

Format: Submit approximately three word-processed/typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered.

Selection Process: Author's names will be deleted (by a non-voting staff person) after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. 3-5 individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.

Deadline: Wednesday, February 10, 1999, 4:30 p.m.

Submit Proposals To: Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Natural Light & Ice" $8.97 CSE CANS.

Brewry Hill Pale Ale, Black & Tan, Amber Lager, Porter $3.99 6PK
MILWAUKEE'S BEST $9.99 30 PK
BECK's BOTTLES $9.99 12 PK
Guiness "Pub Cans" 4/pk $4.99
6/pk Bonanza
CATAMOUNT PETE'S SUTFIELD SEA DOG $4.99 6PK ALL FLAVORS
WOOD CHUCK $4.99 6PK
Ernest & Julio Gallo WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.99 750ml
Vodka 80 EVERYDAY PRICE! $8.99 1.75 lt
Check Out Russell's Indoor Wine Specials!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

Hate crime bill fails to pass in Wyoming

By Robert W. Black
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Four months after gay college student Matthew Shepard was beaten to death, a move to pass hate crimes legislation in Wyoming was scuttled Wednesday by a committee. Supporters said that ended their hopes for the year.

Wyoming is one of nine states without bias crimes laws, and lawmakers have rejected similar measures four times since 1995. After Shepard's death in October, calls for a bias crimes law increased — Republican Gov. Jim Geringer for the first time supported it.

Geringer said Wednesday that he was disappointed the legislation did not reach the Senate floor for debate, but he added that no law can change how people think about each other.

"What I call on the people of Wyoming to do it to recognize that there are 480,000 of us that have unique capabilities, limitations whatever they might be and let's not hold that against each other," the governor said. "Let's find a way to build the community of Wyoming."

Two measures died in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Both would have increased the maximum fine for a felony by up to $5,000 and raised the maximum prison sentence by up to five years if prosecutors could prove the crime was motivated by bias.

State Sen. John Schiffer, the Judiciary chairman, said he hoped supporters of bias crime legislation would come back in future sessions with legislation that would have broader support. Opponents said they objected to listing motivating factors, such as race, religion and sexual orientation, saying the bills offered special protection to certain groups. Others said no new laws are needed, just strict enforcement of existing measures.

Wende Barker, state coordinator for the Wyoming Bias Crimes Coalition, said she was disappointed but not surprised and planned to try to push for such laws again next year.

The only other bias crime-related bill before the legislature is one that would set up a task force to examine how many bias crimes are committed in Wyoming. It has passed the House and is pending in the Senate.

MELINDA NORES / COLLEGIAN

Mapping the pond...

Will Stork, a senior earth systems science major, and Michael Fitzpatrick, a sophomore geology major, make a topographic map for class yesterday.

■ graffiti

continued from page 1

symbol on their doors.

According to a Project Pulse survey conducted by Student Affairs Research Information and Systems (SARIS) in 1997, over 50 percent of 379 Jewish students interviewed said they have observed anti-Semitic graffiti. But Goldbaum notes that swastikas are not exclusively anti-Semitic symbols.

"[The swastika] symbolizes not only the Nazi's hatred of Jews," he said, "but also [the hatred of] blacks, gays, lesbians, disabled people, gypsies... basically anyone not considered Aryan, with blue eyes and blond hair, or physically and mentally healthy."

He said many people do not fully understand the meaning of the symbol or its significance for many individuals. For this reason, the focus of the University response to the incidents in Thatcher has been mostly educational.

In addition to posting signs and organizing floor meetings, Public Safety, Housing, and the Dean of Students Office are working together to compose a letter to Thatcher residents, Goldbaum said.

Thatcher is not the first dorm targeted this year. Last semester, swastikas appeared consistently in the elevators of McNamara Residence Hall.

"It is disturbing that in the past two years, there have been a couple of incidents where specific dorms or hallways have been targeted," Goldbaum said. "They seem to be isolated situations, but we are certainly taking them seriously... and we hope it does not become a trend."

MELINDA NORES / COLLEGIAN

Summer?

Rachel Kuc writes in a journal as a way to enjoy the warm weather while Joshua Streeter plays the harmonica in Amherst yesterday afternoon.

■ impeach

continued from page 1

opinion in favor of a swift end to the proceedings.

The Democratic maneuvering came as Sidney Blumenthal, a White House aide, was questioned in a heavily secured room in the upper reaches of the Capitol.

A source familiar with the deposition, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Blumenthal repeated the testimony he had given a grand jury last year concerning a conversation he had had with Clinton about the president's relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. The president lied to him, Blumenthal said.

Presidential friend Vernon Jordan and Ms. Lewinsky submitted to depositions earlier in the week as prosecutors probed for information that could buttress their case against the president. White House lawyers also attended the depositions but gave no indication they heard any revelations that caused them alarm. Clinton is accused of perjury and obstruction of justice for attempting to conceal his sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. Republicans have been working in recent days on a "finding of fact" that would formally declare that Clinton had "willfully provided false and misleading testimony" to Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's grand jury.

~National News Briefs~

Lawsuits levelled at company; claims say tainted meat led to deaths

ZEELAND, Mich. (AP) — Allegations about unclean conditions at a western Michigan meat processor were raised in a wrongful death lawsuit filed after the death of a woman who apparently ate tainted hot dogs.

Tainted meat from the Bil Mar plant has been linked to 11 deaths, five miscarriages and still births and about 72 illnesses in 14 states, according to the Federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Bil Mar, a division of Chicago-based Sara Lee Corp., on Dec. 22 recalled 15 million pounds of hot dogs and other packaged meat products sold under a variety of names. It said they could be tainted with listeria bacteria.

Listeria are common bacteria but can pose a serious risk to people with weakened immune systems, as well as to the elderly, diabetics and pregnant women.

On Tuesday, Chicago lawyer Kenneth Moll filed the suit — his second — saying he interviewed former Bil Mar employees who talked about unsanitary conditions at the plant and faulty cooking processes.

Sara Lee spokeswoman Theresa Herlevsen declined to comment on the allegations about unclean conditions. Ms. Herlevsen said Sara Lee is aggressive about good sanitation practices.

The lawsuit filed in Chicago accuses the company of negligence in the death of Helen Bodnar, a 74-year-old woman from Memphis who died Oct. 19 of meningitis brought on by a strain of listeria. Bodnar died after eating hot dogs authorities suspect may have been processed at Bil Mar Foods.

Moll's other suit, a class-action effort, seeks to collect for anyone who claims to have eaten the tainted Sara Lee products. In another suit, a Phoenix woman is blaming Sara Lee for a miscarriage she had after eating tainted meat. The lawsuit alleges Sara Lee officials discovered listeria contamination at the Bil Mar plant.

Study: Detention helps cure TB in hard-to-treat patients

(AP) — Nearly six years after New York City health officials got the power to detain tuberculosis patients who repeatedly refused treatment, a study finds that the controversial tactic helped control the disease - and was used sparingly.

The program helped reverse a decade of increases in tuberculosis cases, and despite fears from civil libertarians and AIDS activists that officials would not use detention as a last resort, only 2 percent of TB patients have been subject to the drastic measure, the study found.

"People were afraid we would abuse that power. We never did," said Rose Gasner, the lawyer formerly in charge of the detention program. She is also the lead author of the study in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Tuberculosis, a highly infectious lung disease transmitted by airborne bacteria, was once thought to be under control.

But New York saw a sharp increase in TB cases during the late 1980s and early '90s, including an alarming number of patients infected with strains that killed quickly and were resistant to several antibiotics.

TO APPLY FOR THIS BANK ACCOUNT, WE'LL NEED SOME INFORMATION FROM YOU.

MUSTARD OR MAYO?

Buy one get one free at Subway Restaurants. Only the Student Value Package gives you so much for so little.

Get Free SUBWAY Sandwiches

There's a whole world out there!
Explore it with Contiki-
The #1 tour for 18-35 year olds
Cheap tickets. Great advice. Nice people.

Boston/Sydney	$1407
Boston/Nairobi	$955
Newark/Quito	$290
New York/San Juan	$255
Boston/Paris	$344

Council Travel
Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone: 413-256-1261

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst. 256-0080

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game& System Rentals
2 movies $2
w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent Video Games
Best Selection in Town
9 E.Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst • 549-4505

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Wicked Wal–Mart

Buyers beware!

Recently, I was watching a television program and I was a little surprised. The host was interviewing an economist (one of those talking heads who would normally talk for 30 seconds) about how the world would be affected by the latest disaster before being kicked off the air to make room for whom or whatever was about to begin its 15 minutes of fame.

Anyway, this economist, freed from having to speak in a sound–byte, talked for a while on the rapid growth of Wal-Mart and how it has achieved its impressive corporate structure and dominance. Now, I was never truly a fan of Wal-Mart, as I found that the few things that were truly amazing deals in the store had a tendency to become broken pieces of plastic after I brought them home. In any case, I really didn't know much about Wal-Mart other than the fact that their value matched their prices. That was, until I heard what this expert had to say about the company.

Chris Collins

His most interesting point was that Wal-Mart (before they grew to be as large as they are now) spearheaded the "Buy American Movement." The company advertised that it only sold goods made in America and that, by implication, other discount stores were selling out American companies. You may remember one of the "Buy American" commercials. It was a mother and child packing moving boxes. The little child asks his mother, "Why are we moving, mommy?"

The mother replies, "Because daddy lost his job, honey."

"Why?"

"Because the factory closed."

Then, the scene faded out to a sign that essentially said, "Buy American because you are breaking little Timmy's heart and taking food out of his mouth."

I probably saw this commercial when I was eleven, but it was obviously effective because I can still remember it.

Back to the present: the economist brought up these commercials and explained that although America's perception of the company was that it was saving American jobs and industry, it really wasn't. When it began the campaign, Wal-Mart used its bargaining position to make sure that the often exclusive contracts they made with the companies would leave the discount store in a highly profitable position. In other words, the contracts ended up doing in the American companies that Wal-Mart had implied that it was saving.

Of course, after extracting its profit from American companies, Wal-Mart was forced to move to overseas suppliers that were cheaper. This move would have never been necessary had they not forced the Americans out of business, but those are the joys of capitalism.

So what's the point? Why bring up Wal-Mart's shady past? Why talk about the way that Wal-Mart manipulated the emotions of the public for its own corporate gain? Why consider how the American people would feel if they knew that they were simply maneuvered as if they were pieces on a gigantic chess board?

Just a simple reminder of the power of television and the way that it can be used to bend or break rules that should never be broken. To those who are entering any form of the media, I urge you to use it as responsibly as possible because just as every mistake in the media reduces the trust that people offer it, every correct use of the power we have is one step toward restoring that same trust.

To everyone else, remember that television and all media are produced by people — people who can abuse the power they have just as easily as anyone else. The only problem is that television's abuses aren't always as noticeable as others. For the most part, abuse of power in newspapers is usually caught the day they are published, yet I had never heard of this particular abuse until it had been off the airways for a significant period of time.

So, do I want to boycott Wal-Mart? No, not really. In fact, I would be upset if because of a corporation's decision, regular people lost their jobs. What I really want is for the buyer to beware, when buying anything — be it a toaster oven, the message on a television, or a political candidate — because you can never be sure if something is going to break until you get it home and see what it is really made of.

Chris Collins is a Collegian columnist.

The write decision

Call me Jerry Maguire. Call me what you'd like, but Tuesday night I laid in bed for three hours, unable to fall asleep because I was sick to my stomach.

Last semester I had enjoyed the excitement of covering the UMass men's basketball team. Now I know that I do not have the stomach to be an agressive journalist. I just found out that I'll never make it in that world — a world in which I'd spent the past three–and–a–half years doing everything I can just to break through.

This nausea of mine stems the recent woes of the hoops team, which (I have been told countless times) I'm covering incorrectly. Over the past three months, I have been approached by a handful of people ordering me to write the truth. I thought that's what I was doing, but I guess the public feels that the truth consists only of that which it wants to read.

Aaron Saykin

The truth is that I don't have the heart to write that. I don't have the heart to tackle topics which include Bruiser Flint's job status, Monty Mack's legal troubles, and all other off–the–court problems. Nor do I want to take any part in trashing the team and the way it's playing right now. Every other paper under the sun seems to be doing it. Just look at the effect it's having on the players.

Here's a simple analogy. Picture a snowball rolling down a hill. It's gathering more and more snow as it gets bigger and bigger, and rolls faster and faster. Now picture the kids on the UMass men's basketball team. They started the season much like the small snowball, and have picked up extra weight during the downward decline. They are rolling faster and faster into self–destruction, and what makes me sick is that the entire campus, including myself, has made their snowball even larger and more difficult to stop.

We have very fickle fans here at UMass. We do. Admit it. We were spoiled by the John Calipari era. And now we're thanking the program for finding him by biting the proverbial hand that has fed us for the past 10 years. But don't take my word for it. Just look at all the empty seats, especially the student seats, in the Mullins Center each game (except when Kansas and UConn came to town). There is no way this program can stop its downward spiral with a campus full of mostly fair–weather fans, booing their peers and screaming for Bruiser's job.

In other words, I believe the members of this campus are playing a significant role in the recent struggles of the team. That's one of the truths I'm hoping to communicate today. As a result, I refuse to lay the blame completely on the team. I am sick of listening to people bad–mouth the program, and I'm sick of people telling me to do so in my articles, especially when it can have only a detrimental effect.

But that's the problem with being a journalist. I am burdened to write the "so–called" truth no matter what the ramifications may be. I'm a wimp. There, I said it. I've spent the past three months writing articles and trying to keep people happy at the same time. I'm done with that. I'm done writing things that could emotionally ruin a person. Yes, a person. Journalists often forget that they are writing about human beings. I have nothing against exposing that which is wrong. My dilemma occurs when I have to expose and hurt the people responsible for those alledged wrong– doings. That part of the job sucks, and happens to put me in a very depressed, cynical mood.

I used to believe in the inherent good that is inside most people. I used to be the type of kid who trusted people until they gave me a reason not to trust them. Now, I'm turning into a stressed–out monster, who is looking over his shoulder everything 30 seconds, waiting for someone to attack me or steal from me. I have learned (from my three–and–a–half years of experience in the world of journalism) that to reach the summit of this world, one must attack or plan on being attacked. It is cut–throat, and I am glad I've learned that it's not for me.

So where do I go from here? I can't go into a business where I have the power to emotionally ruin lives. I'll die of an early heart attack if I do. I want to be positive. I want to work for People and fly to Liverpool, England to interview Paul McCartney for a happy feature story. I've had enough exposure to the art of muckraking.

I also want this campus to enjoy some of the great games its hoops team has provided this year. I want to see the fans stop their bickering and get off their asses to help this snowball of a team start rolling back up the hill. I do understand where the pessimism comes from. This campus wants to maintain its reputation as having a top–notch program, but it must remember that premier programs have premier fans.

It's a marriage of sorts, for better or for worse. To me, hard–core journalism is much the same. I've seen the better, and I've certainly seen the worse. I've seen almost enough.

But I'm still going to write. I love to write. I'm just going to do it my way.

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian staff member.

Take care of your kids

I love kids, don't you? The innocent little people look at the world with open eyes, just waiting to learn everything. Children treat everyone equally with a smile. Children are the examples of the "ideal" person because they have no prejudices or stereotypes in their minds. That is, until we put them there.

Gary Mendese

With all of this in mind, something is troubling me. Kids are cute, cuddly, and funny, right? I don't know anybody who would say that they are not. Then why is there even the expression "child abuse?" It's truly sad that children get beaten up so often by adults that there is actually a term used to describe the disgusting behavior. I know that discipline is necessary for the learning process, but abuse is a different matter. It makes my stomach turn.

There are three types of abuse: physical, mental, and sexual. The first is the one that people are most familiar with. It consists of hitting a child to the point where he or she bleeds, becomes bruised, blistered, etc. Significantly damaging a child's mind and/or perceptions of the world defines mental abuse. And sexual abusé is a combination of the other two. Not only is it physically detrimental, but it is also mentally crippling and debilitating. These acts are completely inexcusable. Period. I don't want to hear, "My parents did it to me, so I can't help but do it to my children." Save it for Freud. I'm sure that he'd have a field day with you and your "reasoning."

What age group commits the most child abuse? Alarmingly enough, it is young parents between the ages of 16-25. Well, it shouldn't come as a shock. We've all watched the Jerry Springer Show and laughed. Well, that's great, but don't you see the huge issues present? Fifteen-year-old kids are having kids, and it's wrong. Yes, many young parents that have successfully raised a family, but they are the exceptions to the rule. Most young parents are psychologically and financially unstable, and they should not be contributing to the gene pool quite yet. They should be playing with Transformers and G.I. Joe's.

This leaves us with two choices for treatment. Either we can educate and help support our young people so they don't have children until they're ready, or we can help out young parents with both emotional and financial support. I know that everyone (especially Republicans) would prefer the first of the two, because it costs less, but we should do whatever works regardless of the financial cost, because our current efforts to rid society of the problems of underaged parenthood have proven to be unsuccessful.

> "I thought that I was hallucinating. I couldn't fathom the idea of a father doing that to his son, his flesh and blood."

Even though a high percentage of child abuse cases involve young adults, let us not forget about the Emmy Award–winning middle-aged adults. You know, the post-Quaalude era by–products. People in their 40s also contribute to the disease, which brings me to my second reason for writing this article.

A few months ago, I was in a Barnes and Noble Bookstore when I heard a child not more than 4 years old screaming at the top of his lungs and making quite a scene. I kind of chuckled at this, because I just assumed that he needed a nap or that his dad wouldn't buy "War and Peace" for him. But then, his father — who looked aggravated and embarrassed — violently picked him up and left the store. The kid screamed louder and louder.

But the thing that really got my attention was that before leaving, his father threw him to the ground. His father actually slammed him like a football to the turf. The tot made no sound for a few seconds because he obviously got the wind knocked out of him, and then he screamed. Then his father picked him up and rushed out of the store.

But as Daddy Dearest was doing all of this, I thought that I was hallucinating. I couldn't fathom the idea of a father doing that to his son, his flesh and blood. So I looked around me to see if anyone else was seeing what I was seeing. To my horror, everyone in the three-story bookstore had turned away from the situation as if it didn't occur. At that point, I knew that I wasn't imagining things; I actually saw a pure act of evil. When I finally realized what was going on, my reaction was to go over to the guy and lay into him (and I'm no Hercules, but I could have shown him a thing or two).

But when I turned to where the event had occurred, the man and son were gone. What happened when they got home? That was the only thing in my mind for the whole day. I couldn't even think because I was so frustrated with myself for not saying anything.

We know that the problem of child abuse exists. But the problem, as usual, is that people just turn the other way. There are unstable kids having kids and there are unstable adults having kids. Prison doesn't cure anything. It just punishes the offender. It partially treats the result and not the cause, which is ignorance. More education, less time devoted toward the sexual behaviors of politicians, and more energy devoted toward improving the values of this country are the only "vaccines" that we have available. They're right here within our grasp. All that we have to do now is administer them.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian columnist.

Free–fallin'

"Oh my god! Did you see that girl fall right on her ass? Dude — her head, ass and back hit the ground all at the same time! That was the funniest thing that I have ever seen." I realize that the previous quote is rather sadistic and promotes a "Three Stooges" type of humor, but damn it, seeing someone completely lose their balance and become one with the ground is absolutely the funniest thing you can ever see in this lifetime.

Dan Viens

There are some occasions when falling is not a funny thing. So let's get those out of the way right now. If the person who falls actually dies then that is not funny. However, you can't help but laugh before you find out that they died. Another time that falling isn't that funny is when the victim is really young and just learning to walk. The falls are sort of funny, but not really because they are more or less expected. If you are the type of person who laughs when you see an elderly or handicapped person fall, then you are just a sick individual who should rot in hell. Well, maybe that is a little extreme. Let's say that if you are the type of person who laughs out loud or doesn't even try to hold it in when you see a disabled person fall then you should rot in hell. I tried to find some scenarios when falling isn't funny, but I guess that I failed. The reason is that falling is just too darn funny.

When you think about it there are a lot of people who really love falling. Let's face it, the best part of ABC's Wide World of Sports is seeing that ski jumper fall at the beginning. I mean he falls off the jump, goes over some kind of tent, slides for about three hundred yards, and is probably experiencing great pain and terror — but man does it look cool. When you are on a chair–lift there is nothing better than seeing someone wipe out really bad right below you. It's great to see them lose all their skis and poles. When this happens it is your duty as a skier to yell, "Yard sale!" In doing this you get a good laugh and the person who fell feels like he's not worth the snow under his bum.

Another time that falling is very useful is measuring people's drunkenness. Whenever someone is so drunk that they fall they will be sure to tell you the next day when you ask how their night was.

Seeing a businessman with a three–piece suit fall: funny. Seeing Big Bird fall during a performance of Sesame Street Live: funny. Seeing my friend John or any other UMass student slip and fall on the Ice: funny. If Neil Armstrong fell when he first stepped on the moon: hysterical.

For everyone out there who still thinks that laughing at someone who has fallen is a cruel thing to do then listen up. It is alright to laugh at someone who is falling or has fallen because someday it is going to be you. No matter how careful you are, no matter how slow you walk, no matter if you always wear shoes with spikes for extra grip, you will fall sometime between now and your death. Falling, much like the weather, is a universal thing. Everyone falls and because of that it is OK for everyone to laugh. Don't think for a minute that if you switched places with the kid under the chair lift that he wouldn't laugh at you. However, one must understand that by screaming, "Yard Sale!" you are opening yourself up to future embarrassment if you happen to be in that position.

Laughing at someone who has fallen is a lot like getting into a poker game. Once you laugh it is like anteing up. If anyone who saw you laugh sees you fall then they can laugh that much harder. Also if someone who knows that you are cruel and prone to laughter at other people's misfortune sees you laugh they can also laugh a little harder than normal. From there the laugh scale goes up and up and up. It would be a very beautiful thing if we could unite all people into one giant competition.

Since there is no one who goes through life without falling I feel that there must be some higher power behind the whole thing. Sure, gravity plays a part, but I think that there is more to it than that. I am pretty sure that there is someone sitting up in the mythology land next to Santa and God named Sir Fallstrom. Each day he looks down on a bunch of people and makes them fall. Sometimes he teams up with Cupid to make them fall in love, sometimes he teams up with the tooth fairy to make kids fall and lose their teeth and sometimes he teams up with The Grim Reaper to make people fall to their death. Sir Fallstrom is a hilarious prankster and nobody can escape him. You better just hope that he hasn't been drinking when he decides that it is your turn.

Falling is funny. I hope you have learned to appreciate this. If anyone fell while they were reading this then please call me so I can laugh at you. Also please don't think that I am a jerk for laughing because let's face it I am only being honest. Remember, you will fall: again and again.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

This is your student voice... so if you have a gripe let it be known!!!! Come down to the Collegian Offices and write for Ed-Op. Your opinion makes a difference. Contact Tanya, Alexis or Gary at 545-3500.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Flaikow Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Presties Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marry Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Forin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

In the past year and a half, I've changed from "the girl who works for the newspaper" to "the girl who goes to the gym." I've changed from someone with a free hobby to someone willing to pay 60 bucks a semester to walk nowhere for 20 minutes three times a week.

Armed with my Sports Walkman (athletically yellow) and windpants, I head to the Totally Body Shop Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings.

Like a little hamster running around her wheel, I now have a mechanized workout. I used to play soccer, a sport which requires only a large expanse of grass and something to kick. Now I have become entirely dependent on electricity for my fitness.

It's a silly, backwards dependency though. I walk 10 minutes to get to the gym. Then I walk 20 minutes on a machine. I ride 10 minutes on a bike which is plugged into a wall and then climb for 10 more minutes on a machine called a Stairmaster, but which doesn't look anything like stairs. And I lift weights, or, if you've ever play with metal. Then I walk back to my dorm, up a hill which a treadmill can't even compensate.

What's silly about the whole thing is that I could save myself $120 a year and abandon it all for a walk around campus, an invest

Turn to PAY, page 6

5 College News and Events

• BROKEN LIZARD COLLEGE RODEO AT AMHERST CINEMA TONIGHT

FEB. 4 — Broken Lizard, a five-man comedy group, comes to Amherst tonight to present Puddle Cruiser, their film about college life and relationships. Sketch comedy precedes the screening, and the cast will answer questions afterward.

• ROYAL WINNIPEG BALLET AT FAC

FEB. 4 — An all Tchaikovsky evening is presented at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 p.m.

• MAGIC TRIANGLE JAZZ CONCERT SERIES: REGGIE WORKMAN

FEB. 5 — The concert series, sponsored by WMUA and Residential Arts, features a performance by Reggie Workman's African–American Legacy Project in Bowker at 8 p.m. Tickets are $6 for students and $9 for the general public. Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for ticket information.

• OPRAH'S BELOVED SCREENS AT HAMPSHIRE

FEB. 5 — The acclaimed film based on the Toni Morrison novel screens at Hampshire College's Franklin Patterson Hall (Main Lecture Hall) at 1 p.m. A facilitated discussion follows at 4:30 p.m.

• PAUL ROBESON WITH FLOYD PATTERSON

FEB. 6 — The Northampton Center for the Arts presents a chronicle of the life of the athlete/lawyer at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., costing $8 and $12, respectively, at the Bart Gordon Performance Hall. Call 584–7327 or 800–244–MIFA for more info.

• HONOR BAND HIGHLIGHTS BEST IN HIGH SCHOOL MUSIC

FEB. 6 — The best high school bands in the Northeast come together for a performance under the organization of UMass band director Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr. It takes place at the Fine Arts Concert Hall at 7 p.m.; tickets are $5 for students and $10 for others.

• SPECTRAL VOICES VISITS NORTHAMPTON

FEB. 6 — Jim Cole's Spectral Voices, one of the leading harmonic singing groups in the country, arrive at St. Mary's Church in Northampton at 8 p.m. Suggested donation is $5.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Malcolm Rowell, Jr., UMass director of bands, organizes the Honor band playing this Saturday at the Fine Arts Concert Hall.

Eccentric poet visits Noho

By Matthew Call
Collegian Correspondent

NORMAN B
Fire and Water Cafe
Feb. 2

What can one possibly say about Norman B, a stand-up poet who has been performing his act, "Deviations from the Norm" across the nation for the past ten years or so, most recently at the Fire and Water Cafe in Northampton last Tuesday night.

"Deviations" does not easily fall into any category of description.

In front of an intimate crowd at the vegetarian cafe, the 43-year-old Florida native and recent Amherst resident used avant-garde singing, rapid-fire word association, and fables worthy of the Brothers Grimm to color his one man melee. Sporting a long, graying beard and dressed in a tattered monk's habit, Norman B looks like a cross between George Carlin and Obi-Wan Kenobi, and his act falls somewhere in between.

Fairy tale narratives and social commentaries blended into a lyrical whirlwind make up the

Turn to NORMAN B, page 8

■ pay

continued from page 5

ment in a bike (which, given that I really lack the ability to ride a bike that isn't attached to the ground, would last me the rest of my life) and the regular use of the stairs in my building.

As for weights, I can use those in the weight room in the basement of Boyden Gym for free.

As a student, I have two main privileges: I get lots of free stuff, and I get suckered into buying a bunch of things that I could probably get for free with my student status. Apparently, the Body Shop is one of them.

That isn't to say that I don't love the Body Shop and all it provides for me. Everything I need is in one place and in good condition. And since I'm paying for it, I'm really motivated to use it all.

But UMass in itself gives it all to me for free (if you disregard that tiny little $17,000 out-of-state tuition thing I have to pay). I have lots of hills and paths to choose from, and even a pond to walk around. If I so choose. Because there are over 25,000 students at UMass, I have met people who have bikes that I could borrow if I really had to. And UMass has allowed me to live in a dorm which has a love for repairing the elevators at least once a week, so I also have the gift of stairs.

So I feel a little dumb that I have bought into the fitness craze, what, with my Sports Walkman and my Body Shop membership, when I can do it all for free as a UMass student. But the fact that I am a student is not motivation for exercising. It is more of an excuse, if not a motivation, for behaviors which are not particularly fitness-oriented. Like ordering pizza at two o'clock in the morning. As a student, I get coupons delivered to my door.

Elena Premack is a Collegian staff member

COURTESY JIM COLE

Perfect harmony
Jim Cole and Spectral Voices perform Saturday in Northampton.

ARTS IS MORE.

Get the business through with willingness to bring the everything to the area

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
We have over 30,000 pints of fresh ales & lagers.
WE SHARE!!
Thurs- John Sheldon (Acoustic)
Fri- Schwa (Funk Rock)
Sat- Trarles Park (Sweaty Funky Horns)
Sun- Conclave (Jazz)
• Fully Stocked Bar
• Late Night Menu Till Midnight
24-36 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-4400

Attention Business, Communications & Liberal Arts Majors!
Pencom Systems is an international provider of IT professionals specializing in the technical recruiting industry.
Opportunity within your reach!!
Campus interviews will be held on March 9, 1999
at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst
If you are unable to sign up with the Campus Career Network, please send email to:
hireme@pencom.com
Pencom Systems Incorporated Visit Our Web Site at www.pencom.com/recruiter
Boston • New York • Atlanta • Austin • Chicago • Metro LA • San Jose • Metro DC • Toronto

What's Left
SALE! up to 75% off Winter
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

FANTASTIC SELECTION OF MICROBREW KEGS
Spirit Haus
500 BEERS & WINES FROM
BEER SPECIALS
GROLSH 12pk btls $ 9.49
BUD ICE 18pk cans $ 9.49
LOWENBRAU Special Beer 12pk btls $ 7.29
MILWAUKEE'S BEST 30pk cans (Best, Best Light, Ice) $ 9.99
MICROBREW SPECIALS
PAPER CITY 6pk btls (Holyoke DAM, Ireland Porter, IPA) $ 5.99
RED HOOK 6pk btls (ESB, IPA, Blackhook) $ 4.99
MAGIC HAT 6pk btls (Ale, #9, Blindfolth, Heart of Darkness) $ 5.99
THREE STOOGES/Curly Light 6pk btls $ 4.99
WINE SPECIALS
VIÑA BORGIA
CONCHA Y TORO Sunrise Chard 750ml $ 5.99
BUENA VISTA Zinfandel 750ml $ 6.99
VINA BORGIA Spanish Red 750ml $ 4.99
1.5L $ 8.99
LIQUOR SPECIALS
MYERS RUM 750ml $ 12.49
SCHENLEY WHISKEY 750ml $ 7.99
STOLI VODKA (Peach, Coffee, Cinnamon) 1 Liter $ 14.99
GOLDSCHLAGER 750ml $ 15.49
SAUZA GOLD TEQUILA 1 Liter $ 12.99
338 COLLEGE ST, RTE 9 - 1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER
MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER - (413) 253-5384

The real Super Bowl winners

This past Sunday was the biggest day of the year for companies to show their stuff, and shell out big bucks to have their products advertised during the most important annual American sporting event. Like almost every year, 1999 broke all sorts of records when it comes to Super Bowl advertisements. The price tag of almost $1.6 million for a thirty second commercial is the highest in history, and when taken into consideration that most major companies that advertised bought a 60 second spot, the cost really added up.

Each year, the Super Bowl is dominated by the melodrama of its advertisers which tend to be a very exclusive bunch. Mostly due to the cost of an ad, many companies do not advertise during the big game. Historically, there have been more ads about junk food, cars, and upcoming films than anything else.

This year, the Anheuser-Busch corporation contributed more ads than any other company. It is no surprise that Anheuser-Busch had a lot of ads during the Super Bowl. Many Americans make the connection between football and beer, and the Super Bowl is the perfect opportunity for a beer company to try to make more money. In the past, Anheuser-Busch has been popular for its commercial involving Clydesdale horses. However, it was Super Bowl XXIX in 1995 that Anheuser-Busch revealed their newest stars, which have been the brunt of the company's ads ever since.

The Budweiser Frogs which were introduced in Super Bowl XXIX did nothing but simply croak "Budweis-er," and it was an instant hit. In the past four years, Anheuser-Busch has released an entire series of frog ads that have introduced new characters such as lizards and owls to try to sell beer. It sounds ridiculous to connect frogs to beer, and in fact during this Super Bowl, one of the lizards exclaims "how are we ever going to sell beer doing this!"

In a study done by USA Today, in which 150 volunteers' Initial responses to Super Bowl commercials were polled, the top three commercials were all Budweisers ads that contained very different types of animals. Perhaps the most clever commercial during the Super Bowl involved two Dalmatian puppies that were fighting in their litter box to be brought home by a firefighter. The Dalmatian that fought hardest, and was picked, stuck his tongue out at the other dog and took off with its new owner; the other puppy was purchased by an old woman. The dogs were shown two years later for 14 dog years as the commercial exclaims) driving down a country road, and when the firedog spots his long lost brother, he is greeted with the same taunt of a tongue in the face, because the family that adopted him was riding on a horse and carriage with boxes of Anheuser-Busch in the back seat. The commercial was extremely funny, and a big hit among those polled.

Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris

Of the next two top ads, one involved a lobster that took a bottle of Budweiser hostage so that it would not be placed in a boiling pot of water, and the other had two men that had to choose between a six pack of Bud Light, and a role of toilet paper. Obviously, they chose the beer. Budweiser was clearly the winner in this year's Super Bowl. However, there were other companies that helped dominate the advertisements.

Every year, it seems like there is a war between Coca-Cola and Pepsi. This year, the war was non-existent. After a strong showing last year from Pepsi, they did not advertise all that much, and it will be interesting to see if that affects their sales in the next year.

Car companies had a big share of the advertising this Sunday as well. There was a memorable ad for Volvo Trucks (which have recently been bought by Ford) that had a truck driving through a community and everyone that it passes gives it the "arm pump" which signals the driver to pull the horn, as we all remember from the fourth grade. There was a scene in the ad where a nurse lets go of a patient's wheel chair to give the truck an arm pump, and the wheel chair ended up rolling down the street.

Something that is commonly seen during the Super Bowl are ads for the upcoming films of the year. The new films included, Universal Pictures EdTV, The Mummy, Warner Bros. Wild, Wild West and New Line Cinema's Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me. Noticeably missing was a commercial for the new Star Wars film entitled The Phantom Menace.

Of course, free advertising dominated the Super Bowl. The only company that is allowed to advertise for free (with some exceptions) is the company that is airing the Super Bowl. Fox ran tons of ads for everything from their new series, "The Family Guy" (which was excellent in its own drug–induced sort of way) to a guarantee that everything you've ever wondered about "The X-Files" will be revealed next month.

So after watching all of these commercials this Sunday, what was your favorite? I was extremely partial to the Budweiser Dalmatians, and I really enjoyed the Master Card commercial that had various cartoon characters making purchases. Even if you hate football, it's plain to see that the Super Bowl is much more than just two teams battling for the Lombardi trophy.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist. UMass student Michael Driscoll contributed to this column.

~Film Clips~

COURTESY DREAMWORKS

Director Steven Zaillian on the set of A Civil Action with John Travolta.

A CIVIL ACTION (dir Steven Zaillian, with John Travolta, Robert Duvall, playing at Mountain Farms) Based on Jonathan Harr's bestseller, the story of Boston personal injury attorney Jan Schlichtmann taking on two large corporations translates well to film. Director Zaillian keeps the movie taut and tense, and elicits terrific performances from Travolta, Duvall, William H. Macy and Kathleen Quinlan. One of the most well crafted films to come out of Hollywood in a while. A– (Kevin Monahan)

PATCH ADAMS (dir Tom Shadyac, with Robin Williams, Monica Porter, playing at Mountain Farms) At times, Williams is boyish and timid, magnanimous and courageous at others in another amazing performance. He plays Patch, a middle aged medical student with a passion for curing people through humor. Avoiding its sometimes melodramatic storyline, Patch Adams, with Williams help, becomes the feel good movie of the year. B+ (Adam Martignetti)

SHAKESPEARE IN LOVE (dir John Madden, with Joseph Fiennes, Gwyneth Paltrow, playing at Academy of Music). Art and life have had a chaotic history, alternatively frustrating and inspiring each other. In Shakespeare in Love, the Bard (Joseph Fiennes) is suffering writer's block at the dawn of the first performance of the yet-unwritten Romeo and Juliet, until he finds his muse in Paltrow. Wit, enchantment, high comedy and passion follows. A marvelous supporting cast, led by Judi Dench and Geoffrey Rush, and an impeccable script, co-written by noted playwright Tom Stoppard. A (Bryan McAllister)

THE THIN RED LINE (dir Terrence Malick, with Sean Penn, Ben Chaplin, playing at Mountain Farms) An hour into the film, it becomes painfully obvious that director Malick hasn't made a movie in 20 years. The filmmaking is archaic, obtuse and virtually inaccessible. The story is segmented and disjointed to the point of being non-existent.

COURTESY SAM EMERSON

John Cusack, star of Terrence Malick's return to filmmaking, The Thin Red Line.

4 out of 5 kids prefer Arts to Brussel Sprouts.

Are you looking to make a difference in the community?
Well, here's your chance!
B.U.D.D.I.E.S.
The BUDDIES Program is a way of organization that is committed to spending time at several community based organizations. BUDDIES is a fun way to make the difference, while earning credits at the same time.
To learn more about BUDDIES and join us at our first meeting
THURSDAY FEB. 4 AT 7:30PM IN SOM

Meet on the Web
CampusChat
24/7 live chat for students
www.masslive.com/chat

Eat on the Web
PizzaCam
24/7 live cam at Antonio's
www.masslive.com/campuscam

mass LIVE
www.masslive.com
Where Western Mass meets on the Web!

Campus Career Network
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Do you want a paid position for the summer or next semester?
COME TO THE CO-OP JOB FAIR!!
Thursday, February 18, 1999
10-3pm
Campus Center Auditorium
Employers will attend from:
Arthur J. Gallagher
Boston Globe
Doubltree Islander Hotel
Federal Reserve Bank
Fidelity Investments
Friendly's
General Electric
Pratt and Whitney
Toys R Us
Walt Disney World
And many, many more!
The Co-op Job Fair is a Campus Career Network event. Call the Field Experience Office for more information at 545-6265.

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
GREAT EXPECTATIONS. GREAT PERFORMERS. GREAT REWARDS.

The Bat Takes Flight
LONDON CITY OPERA IN DIE FLEDERMAUS
BY JOHANN STRAUSS

World-class voices, a full orchestra, sparkling Viennese settings, and the Waltz King's delightful music make for an astonishing night at the Fine Arts Center. In this beautifully staged and costumed production, a celebrated UK company soars in one of the world's best-loved operettas.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9
CONCERT HALL, 8PM
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF WGBY TV57

TICKETS ONLY $7.50 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

Klezmer for the New Millenium
THE FINE ARTS CENTER AND WFCR'S JAZZ A LA MODE PRESENT
Europe's Klezmer Band Kol Simcha

Fresh from Carnegie Hall, this engaging quintet bridges traditional Yiddish folk music and thoroughly modern influences that range from American jazz to Middle Eastern rhythms. Expertly blending old styles and new, Kol Simcha ("Voice of Joy" in Hebrew) is unique musical alchemy you won't want to miss.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, BOWKER AUDITORIUM, 8PM

A Breed Apart
AWADAGIN PRATT PIANIST

Awadagin Pratt's brilliant, unconventional approach to the classics makes every concert a transcendent experience. His program will include Bach, Brahms, and Pictures from an Exhibition by Mussorgsky.
"Pratt's performance is sublime." – The Pittsburgh Tribune-Review

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, BOWKER AUDITORIUM, 8PM

WE'RE LOBBYING FOR THE FUTURE!
What our new lobby is under construction, please enter the Concert Hall via alternate entrances. On-site signage and guides will show you the way.

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Where does music come from?

David Sporny answered that question Tuesday night in Bezanson Recital Hall in a evening of lecture and music.

Bill Murray winning acclaim for Rushmore

By Douglas Rowe
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Nick the oily lounge singer would be dedicating a song to him, though not really meaning it. The name-dropping movie critic probably wouldn't have seen the movie, but would have something arch to say anyway. And the old "Weekend Update" gossip commentator would simply conclude: "Get outta here."

You can just picture Bill Murray's various wiseacre characters from "Saturday Night Live" registering disbelief over Bill Murray the movie star getting raves as a serious actor.

That's OK. Murray's skeptical, too.

"It's funny," he says. "After all this time, all of a sudden I'm legit."

It's not that Murray hasn't tackled dramatic roles before. One attempt at a serious starring role came in The Razor's Edge, a 1984 remake of a 1946 film starring Tyrone Power and based on the Somerset Maugham novel. But most critics hated it, and filmgoers stayed away.

Now, though, the 48-year-old actor is being singled out for his performance in the quirky coming-of-age comedy Rushmore.

He has been named best supporting actor by the Los Angeles and New York film critics as well as the National Society of Film Critics. He also received a Golden Globe nomination, and he's touted as a possible Academy Award candidate.

With a disheveled look and wild hair that make him a look like a younger Professor Irwin Corey, Murray says he doesn't quite know how to take all the plaudits. "It isn't of knocks you off kilter a little bit," he says.

He admits that when the Golden Globe went to Ed Harris (for The Truman Show) he felt a little pouty, and demonstrates by comically protruding his lower lip like Charles Laughton in Mutiny on the Bounty.

■ Norman B

continued from page 6

main ingredients of his performance.

"When the waiting times are over, the rich'll have to pay/ When the waiting times are over, we'll disband the CIA," B sings in a tale about political reform. Norman's broad range of topics extend from police abuse and politics to mythology and philosophy, all interwoven into poems and stories.

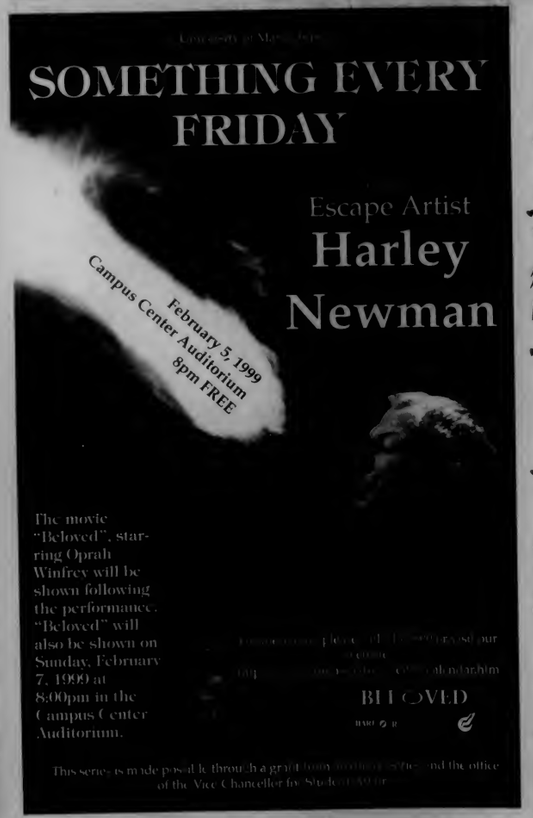
Norman also uses his deadpan logic to explain the war on drugs saying, "We wouldn't be going to war if the world were on drugs."

His methods are unorthodox to say the least. In addition to the habit, Norman B also wears a black and white skirt with construction boots and a hat reminiscent of a Dr. Seuss book. He also uses a dreadlocked tube-sock puppet to illustrate a parable about Native Americans. The props only added to the surreal nature of his poems which are in themselves both bizarre and logical at the same time.

"I think college students like it because it reminds them of their parents yelling at them," Norman says of his act. Although I can't remember my parents ever lecturing me about a "mackerel from the sea," I'm sure it would have been much more interesting if they had.

Whether talking about religion, criticizing government, or skewering the "norm," Norman B's eccentric act is a throwback to 1970s activism with a jaded 90s edge that any open-minded poetry fan would appreciate.

WRITE FOR ARTS.
Contests, Coupons, & Giveaways
AmherstOnline.com
Bookmark It!



COURTESY AMHERST COLLEGE

Defying definition

Trapeze artist Ruby Rowat performs this Saturday at Amherst College.

University of Massachusetts
SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

Escape Artist
Harley Newman
February 5, 1999
Campus Center Auditorium
8pm FREE

The movie "Beloved", starring Oprah Winfrey will be shown following the performance. "Beloved" will also be shown on Sunday, February 7, 1999 at 8:00pm in the Campus Center Auditorium.

BELOVED

This series is made possible through a grant from the Massachusetts Cultural Council and the office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs

Valentine's Day
is just around the corner

Let them know how special they really are to you...
for the mere price of ten cents a word you can give the one you love something to cherish forever..

Their very own Collegian Classified from you

... won't you look good. Of course you will, as long as you get your message in by the deadline of Tuesday Feb.9th.

When FOX reality-based specials attack!

By David Bauder
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Television changed the night of Jan. 25, 1996, and it's only now becoming clear how much.

It was a Thursday. CBS needed to schedule something for a TV graveyard shift, opposite "Seinfeld," so it aired an independently produced special called "World's Most Dangerous Animals."

The show collected film clips of horrifying moments from nature documentaries — an elephant stomping on a trainer, a bear attacking a woman, sharks swallowing prey. They built toward a punch line endorsed by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals: that man is most dangerous for what he's done to nature.

In his Los Angeles office the next day, Fox executive Mike Darnell scanned a printout that showed nearly one-fifth of people watching television the night before had tuned in to "World's Most Dangerous Animals." Those are hard numbers to ignore. That day, Fox ordered its own special of the most visceral video, minus the message.

"When Animals Attack" aired four months later, and a new television genre was born.

Reality shows, which appeal to Hollywood's love for cheap thrills and the just plain cheap, are the hottest and most controversial form of TV on today.

Its makers are Hollywood's renegades.

***

Shocking! Deadliest! Scariest! True!

The titles of many reality shows scream like headlines in a tabloid newspaper. Some are more entertaining than the programs: "World's Deadliest Swarms" or "When Good Pets Go Bad." They are truly the first TV shows created with the remote control in mind. What channel surfer would click away when he or she sees a building collapsing or a man putting his head in an alligator's mouth?

The most dramatic segments share characteristics with forbidden fruit and horror movies: You shouldn't be watching, you want to cover your eyes, but it's too hard to resist.

A car races through an intersection, trailed by the police. An officer ducks behind his cruiser door to avoid gunfire. A soaked survivor dangles above raging floodwaters on a rope ladder suspended from a helicopter. A woman, thinking no one is watching, urinates on the desk of her boss.

"We're basically tapping in to people's emotions — adrenaline, fear, excitement," Darnell said. "I think it's what all of television does, whether it's fictionalized or whether it's reality."

Through Darnell and his staff, Fox has perfected the genre. People gather in living rooms with their friends to watch their specials, like they would a football game.

Fox is also familiar with "When Critics Attack!" No one admits to respecting the shows and they make many people angry. NBC executive Don Ohlmeyer called Fox's video of animal attacks "one step short of a snuff film."

"They're reprehensible," said George Gerbner, a Temple University professor who studies violence on television. "They exploit the worst fears and nightmares of people."

Darnell said he's simply trying to entertain. "If I were doing news, then I would have some sort of social responsibility," he said.

Lines between news and entertainment had already been blurred by shows like "COPS" and "A Current Affair" when the current crop came in vogue. The roots stretch even deeper through the lowbrow entertainment of tabloids and freak shows. "Candid Camera" was a television ancestor, as well as those home video shows in which dad plays catch with his son and gets smacked in the head by a baseball.

Now they've been turbocharged for the late 1990s.

"What are the worst of these shows but a carnival barker trying to get you into the tent? Look at the man piercing his tongue; look at the 500-pound woman," said Erick Nelson, who runs Termite Art Productions in Hollywood.

COURTESY VAN BEEK

Leader of the pack

Jason Schwartzman in Rushmore, a new acclaimed comedy opening tomorrow.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, THIS GUY IS IN CLASS.

Excitement and adventure is the course description, and Army ROTC is the name. It's the one college elective that builds your self-confidence, develops your leadership potential and helps you take on the challenge of command. There's no obligation until your junior year, so there's no reason not to try it out right now.

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

MS113 – Introduction to Military Science, 1 credit per semester
Contact Captain Patrick Maloney
545-2321

CALVIN
THEATRE & PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

Sat. Feb. 6 • 8 pm
Chick Corea & Gary Burton Duets

Fri. Feb. 19 • 8 pm
An evening with Sir George Martin
The Making of Sgt. Pepper, a multi media keynote address

Wed. Feb. 24 • 7 pm
the Iron Horse's 20th Anniversary Concert
featuring
Maura O'Connell, The Bobs, Tuck & Patti, The Nields, Salamander Crossing, Dave Van Ronk

Sat. Mar. 6 • 2 & 7 pm
Calvin Kids Series
Cirque Eloize

Fun for the whole family!

JUST ADDED: 4/6 BRUCE HORNSBY TIX ON SALE MON, 2/8

2/6 Chick Corea & Gary Burton Duets
2/7 The Northampton Arts Council's Silver Chord Bowl
2/11 Ladysmith Black Mambazo
2/19 An evening with Sir George Martin: The Making of Sgt. Pepper, a multi-media keynote address

2/24 • CALVIN

Coming Soon: 2/24 Iron Horse Anniversary Concert, 3/6 Cirque Eloize, 3/7 Arcadia Players, 3/18 James Galway, 3/27 Citizen Kane®, 3/28 The Wizard of Oz, 4/6 Bruce Hornsby, 4/10 Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Co., 4/11 The Adventures of Corduroy, 4/16 Cassandra Wilson, 4/23 Sonny Rollins, 4/24 Terry Gross, 4/25 Ravi Shankar, 5/2 Laura Ingalls Wilder: Growing Up on the Prarie, 5/15 Vertigo®, 5/23 Phantom of the Opera, 6/19 West Side Story®, 7/15 Gone With the Wind®, 10/15 Cesaria Evora

® Management Group Presents ™ Presented by Mass Calvin ™ Copyright

CALVIN THEATRE - 19 KING STREET, NORTHAMPTON, MA 413-584-0610
Tickets for the Calvin Theatre are available at the Northampton Box Office, Thornes Marketplace in Northampton.
To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK. Visit www.massolive.com for more information.

all shows Pearl Street Nightclub all ages!

ONLY AREA APPEARANCE! THU. FEB. 11 • 8:30 PM
PEARL ST. BALLROOM
FROGWINGS
is
Kofi Burbridge (from Aquarium Rescue Unit) on keys & flute
Oteil Burbridge (From the Allman Brothers Band) on bass
Jimmy Herring (from A.R.U. & Jazz is Dead) on guitar
John Popper (from Blues Traveler) on vocals & harmonica
Marc Quinones (from the Allman Brothers Band) on percussion
Butch Trucks (From the Allman Brothers Band) on drums
Derek Trucks (from the Derek Trucks Band) on guitar

JUST ADDED! THU. FEB. 18 • 8:30 PM
PEARL ST. BALLROOM
THE SAMPLES

FRI. FEB. 5 • 8:30 PM • CLUBROOM
LAUREL AITKEN WITH THE N.Y. SKA-JAZZ ENSEMBLE
SAT. FEB. 6 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
MAX CREEK
WED. FEB. 10 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
LUCIANO
THU. FEB. 11 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
FROGWINGS
featuring Kofi Burbridge, Oteil Burbridge, Jimmy Herring, John Popper, Marc Quinones, Butch Trucks and Derek Trucks
THU. FEB. 11 • 8:30 PM • CLUBROOM
PAT MCGEE BAND
FRI. FEB. 12 • 8:30 PM • CLUBROOM
BIM SKALA BIM
THU. FEB. 18 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
THE SAMPLES
TUE. MAR. 2 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
SOUL BRAINS
COMING SOON: Lou "Scratch" Perry with Mad Professor: The Dr. Lee Phil Tour, Sebadoh, Israel Vibration, Robin Trower, Miriam Makeba

all shows music alone shall live all ages!
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL

SUN. FEB. 14 7 PM IRON HORSE
Respond: a woman's benefit
Mary Lou Lord
MERRIE AMSTERBURG
JULES VERDONE
DEB PASTERNAK

WED. FEB. 3 • 7 & 9:30 PM
Country giant explores his roots
RICKY SKAGGS & KENTUCKY THUNDER
THU. FEB. 4 • 7 PM
Rad hot Creole accordionist
TERRANCE SIMIEN
FRI. FEB. 5 • 9:30 PM
The Valley's best party-rock band
TRAILER PARK
SAT. FEB. 6 • 7 PM
A voice to die for
JENNIFER KIMBALL
SAT. FEB. 6 • 10 PM
Southern blues-rock jamming
GIBB OROLL
Plus Rockwell Church
SUN. FEB. 7 • 7 & 10 PM
Swamp-rock pistoneer
DR. JOHN
MON. FEB. 8 • 7 PM
Amazing multiphonic singing
THROAT SINGERS OF TUVA: HUUN-HUUR-TU
TUE. FEB. 9 • 7 PM
Our jazz perfection
MATTHEW SHIPP/ WILLIAM PARKER DUO
WED. FEB. 10 • 7 PM
Singer songwriters to watch for
CHRISTIAN BAUMAN, KEVIN SO & MARK ERELLI
COMING SOON: Virtual Consort

THU. FEB. 11 • 8:30 PM
Canadian guitar-pop sensations
SLOAN Plus Local Rabbits
FRI. FEB. 12 • 10 PM
Late 60s style roots-reggae
WINSTON GRENNAN & SKA ROCKS
SAT. FEB. 13 • 10 PM FREE SHOW!
Creation Gaithers presents:
PRESTON REED
With special guest Jeff Pevar
SAT. FEB. 13 • 7 PM
Boston's best acoustic rockers
MELISSA FERRICK
Plus Lori McKenna
SUN. FEB. 14 • 7 PM
Respond: a woman's benefit
MARY LOU LORD, MERRIE AMSTERBURG, JULES VERDONE & DEB PASTERNAK
TUE. FEB. 16 • 7 PM
We're having a party
SOUTHSIDE JOHNNY AND FRIENDS "STRICTLY ACOUSTIC"
WED. FEB. 10 • 7 PM
Jazz piano double bill
DANILO PEREZ AND PATRICIA BARBER
THU. FEB. 18 • 7 PM
Country cajun up and comers
BALFA TOUJOURS
FRI. FEB. 19 • 7 PM
Compelling songwriter/ great entertainer
SUSAN WERNER
Plus Connie Kaldor
SAT. FEB. 20 • 7 PM
Blues guitar master
MIKE WELCH

PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB, 10 PEARL ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA • THE IRON HORSE, 20 CENTER ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA
Tickets for all shows available at the Northampton Box Office, 2nd Floor, Thorne's Marketplace, Northampton. 1-800-THE-TICK or 413-586-8686. Tickets for the Iron Horse are available at For The Record in Amherst. Tickets for Pearl St. are available at For The Record, About Music in Greenfield and Platterpus Records in Westfield. 24-Hour Concert Info: (413) 584-0610 or visit www.massolive.com

Irish dominate Eagles

By J.R. Ross
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Ruth Riley scored 15 of her 18 points in the second half to lead No. 6 Notre Dame past No. 20 Boston College on Wednesday night.

After winning their last four games by an average of 37.5 points, the Irish (18-2, 10-2 Big East) struggled to keep Boston College at bay most of the second half.

Notre Dame jumped ahead 50-34 on a 14-3 run early in the period, only to go scoreless for the next six minutes. Alissa Murphy pulled Boston College (17-4, 9-4) within 50-46 on a free throw but missed her second attempt.

Kelly Siemon's layup on the ensuing fast break ended Notre Dame's dry spell, and the Irish slowly built their lead back up to double digits.

UM coaches stick to guns

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

According to both head basketball coaches, UMass hoop fans can rest assured that their squads have a legitimate chance of returning to the NCAA tournament this season.

Men's basketball coach Bruiser Flint and women's basketball coach Jeanie O'Brien both spoke at the weekly sports luncheon yesterday at the Campus Center, and both have remained decidedly upbeat through tough times.

Flint's Minutemen enter tonight's showdown with Rhode Island at 9-11 overall, and 5-3 in the Atlantic 10.

Many observers have counted this team out in the NCAA tourney picture, but Flint believes there is enough talent to turn the ship around.

"The window for opportunity is still open for us," Flint said. "Temple has given us a chance to sneak up on them in the conference first and foremost. Winning the A-10 is still our main concern right now."

O'Brien's bunch has undergone an entirely different set of circumstances than their male counterparts. While the Minutemen have enjoyed great health this year, the women have seemingly seen at least one player go on the injury list every week.

After losing guards Kelly Van Huisen and Jaswana Bradley early, the team endured a foot injury to Caroline Nehls, and as she was set to return, senior center Yolanda Rayside separated her shoulder.

"It seems as if God figured he was ready to give us Caroline back, but then decided to take Yolanda away first," O'Brien said.

"But in all seriousness, the kids that are here playing have been tremendous. We are almost right where we want to be despite the obstacles."

Flint has led UMass into the Big Dance his first two seasons at the helm, and O'Brien has overseen the only two NCAA tournament appearances in Minutewomen history.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts men's basketball team is still in contention for the A-10 title, as they sport a 5-3 conference record, tied for second with Rhode Island.

Their track records are certainly impressive enough to keep supporters loyal, but the coaches are urging even the non-believers to make their presence felt at the Mullins Center during the stretch run.

"We want everyone to come out and act like fools," Bruiser joked. "We need the fans to help get us through, especially against teams like Rhody and Temple when they come to town."

O'Brien pointed to a key matchup with Virginia Tech next Friday as a great opportunity for fans to rally behind her team.

The Hokies are currently 19-1, but O'Brien feels her team matches up well with them, leaving them vulnerable as potential upset victims.

"The game against Tech will be great chance for fans to see what we are capable of doing," O'Brien said.

Texas brings in top class

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Texas finally hooked 'em on national signing day, and the Longhorns came away as undisputed champions in Recruiting Wars '99. With an incoming class of stars led by quarterback Chris Simms and linebacker Cory Redding — USA Today's offensive and defensive players of the year as well as Parade All-Americans — Texas was the top choice of three national recruiting gurus.

"More than any coach in the country, Mack Brown has awakened a sleeping giant," Allen Wallace, publisher of Laguna Beach, Calif.-based SuperPrep magazine said yesterday, the first day high school seniors were able to sign letters-of-intent.

Ricky Williams' record-setting Heisman Trophy season and a 9-3 record capped by a 38-11 win over Mississippi State in the Cotton Bowl didn't hurt, either.

"Hook 'em horns! Texas simply has the best group from top to bottom," said Bobby Burton of Austin, Texas-based The National Recruiting Advisor.

Brown was satisfied, to say the least.

"It's a class that can jumpstart us back to where we want to be," Brown said, "and that's the elite of college football."

The biggest shocker came at the expense of Notre Dame. C.J. Leak, a highly-touted quarterback from Charlotte, N.C., chose Wake Forest over the Irish, who for months expected the 6-foot-4, 210-pounder in the mold of Randall Cunningham to sign on with coach Bob Davie.

The Irish, who did not sign a quarterback yesterday, were still rated third by Burton and Tom Lemming of Schaumburg, Ill.-based Prep Football Report, but eighth by Wallace.

"This has to be the biggest surprise of the recruiting season," Burton said. "That kid was penciled in at Notre Dame for months."

The Irish, though, came away with such standouts as defensive back Gerome Sapp from Houston as well as defensive lineman Cedric Hilliard from Arlington, Texas, and offensive lineman Jeff Faine from Florida — both 300-pounders.

Ohio State, with a haul that included USA Today All-American offensive lineman Bryce Bishop, defensive lineman Tim Anderson, defensive back Michael Doss and defensive back/wide receiver Kelton Lindsay, was ranked second by Burton and Wallace and fourth by Lemming.

"A lot of people overlooked Ohio State, but they filled most of their needs," Wallace said.

National champion Tennessee was a three-time loser yesterday. First, Simms de-committed to Tennessee last week and signed with Texas on Wednesday; Derek Watson, South Carolina's Mr. Football, changed his mind about the Vols and signed with the Gamecocks; and finally Santonio Beard, a top-rated running back from Nashville, went for Alabama.

Everything went right for Texas, which landed its first top-rated class since Lemming began his rankings 20 years ago.

"They had a combination of a new coach, a Heisman Trophy and a winning season that was tough to beat," Lemming said. "And, they kept kids at home while going out and signing the nation's top talent, too."

Simms, the 6-5, 218-pound son of former New York Giants quarterback Phil Simms, was the Longhorns' biggest catch. He made a verbal commitment to national champion Tennessee, but changed his mind last week.

Simms, from Franklin Lakes, N.J., threw for 2,239 yards and 18 touchdowns in his senior season at Ramapo H.S. He's expected to challenge immediately for the backup spot behind Major Applewhite. Redding, 6-5 and 240 pounds from North Shore H.S. in Houston, had 123 solo tackles, including 22 for losses, and 112 assists. He also caused six fumbles and recovered five.

Other Texas All-American signing with Texas included Bo Scfaie, a 6-4, 225-pound wide receiver from Denver, and Alfio Randall, a 6-6, 270-pound offensive lineman from Houston.

Tennessee was ranked eighth by Burton and not in the top 10 by Lemming or Wallace.

NBA, life without Jordan

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

With the lockout-shortened NBA season opening on Friday, there is but one question to ask... can the NBA flourish without its star player in uniform? If you don't know who he is then you've been living under a rock for the past thirteen years. His name has become synonymous with "Air." His name is Jordan, Michael Jordan. Does that ring a bell by any chance? I sure hope it does, because if not, you missed out on the most polished athlete of our time.

There will never be another Jordan, just as there will never be another Larry Bird or Magic Johnson. These three men brought the NBA to the flourishing level at which it stood in June of 1998, but at present is not.

There was never a more inopportune time for the game's star to decide never to lace up his Nike's again. The time was right for his Airness, but it was another sour grape on the vine, for the fans of the NBA.

Will somebody step up and take Michael Jordan's title as the king of basketball? The answer is "not likely." The NBA has had its share of "poster boss" enter the league in the past few years (Grant Hill, Shaquille O'Neal, Tim Duncan, to name a few), but none bring to the game the personality that Jordan brought. He brought grace, heart, a franchise out of shambles (Sam Bowie who?), six titles to Chicago, and individual accomplishments that are too plentiful to list. The most important thing that Jordan brought to the game was fans. After all, the fans are what fuel the league.

Without the fans the NBA would be nothing (like the CBA). Michael sold out almost every arena that he stepped into, not including a ridiculous number of consecutive sellouts between the old Chicago Stadium and the United Center. Fans came out to see this true artist display his skills. Just as people go to the Louvre in Paris to see the Mona Lisa, they came to such desolate places as Reunion Arena (the home of the Dallas Mavericks) to catch a glimpse of "the man."

The so-called "poster boys" of the NBA will have a difficult time trying to bring back the enthusiasm that was lost in the midst of labor negotiations, contract disputes, talks of the season being cancelled and general lack of business sense (I don't think Bill Gates would be disputing his $47 billion salary). The players are getting paid astronomical figures for doing something they love to do.

The 12th man on the Los Angeles Clippers makes a six-figure salary, not bad for playing five minutes a season. The "poster boys" are making at least $5 million. What is the point of disputing over $500,000. The only thing that their greediness does is inflate ticket prices. A quick news flash — if ticket sales decrease, so will your salaries. If players keep demanding these types of contracts, just how long will it be before someone is making $100 million a season? The fans are the ones who will be suffering in the short-run, but the players and the franchises get the worst in the long-run.

Michael, Larry, and Magic played the game the way it was supposed to be played, on the court. They left it all on the line every time out, which is why they are seen in the light that they are. The game today is being played by high priced lawyers behind closed doors doing all the negotiating for its supposed "poor clients." The up-and-coming stars need to create an image that the aforementioned guys did.

The bad boy attitude that players like Allen Iverson bring to the game needs to be stopped. They are on the court to win games and entertain the fans. Without a strong fan base the game will fall to pieces.

Grant Hill, Shaquille O'Neal and Tim Duncan have big shoes to fill. The torch has been passed on to them now to lead the NBA into the new millennium. The fans are bitter and it will show on Friday when attendance is not what was expected, but it could all change as quickly as the players want it to.

The players should be thanking the fans in every way possible, every chance they get. There should be no more "Kenny Anderson not signing an autograph for a little kid" incidents. The players should do whatever it takes to get the reputation back. They are looked up to by many and should promote a standard that the people that look up to them feel comfortable with.

Jordan, Bird, and Magic left a mark on the game. The new guys are leaving a scar. This can all be cured by the full compliance of players and owners. The next chapter in the story is yet to be written. NBA in 2000... or NBA 2000 "Leagues Under the Sea?"

Bryan Smith is a Collegian staff member.

■ signee

continued from page 14

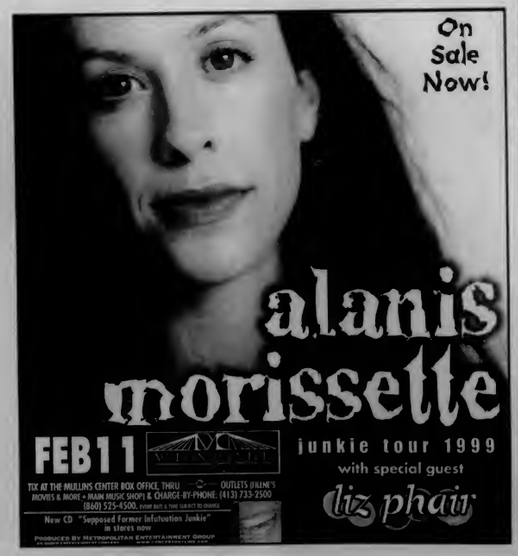
Other signees to watch will be Cover, tight end Rich Palmese, and fullback Darrell Shabazz, who will be looked upon to fill the void left by the graduation of pro-prospects Khari Samuel, Kerry Taylor and Matt Jordan at those respective positions.

The jury is still out on whether or not record-breaking senior wideout Jimmy Moore can reclaim a year of eligibility after his transfer to UMass from Southern Methodist University in 1997. If he cannot, the development of Milford Academy recruit James Howard will be crucial and, if possible, accelerated.

Whipple was also excited about offensive linemen Ryan Woods, who has transferred from Golden West Junior College. Woods is one of a handful of signees who are already currently partaking in the UMass system.

"The nice thing is we have three kids that are here now, for second semester, which will strengthen us that much more," Whipple said.

Murray will be expected to produce right away as well, as he was approached by a number of Division I-A teams previous to his signing with Whipple.



"Shawn Murray is a kid that signed with Iowa last year," Whipple said. "He was a partial qualifier who took the test over the summer and found that he really liked it here."

Overall, it appears that Whipple and the Minutemen will continue to keep the competition at bay.

EDUCATION FILE PHOTO

It's coming back around again

Laura Korutz will resume her raging attack on the Minutewomen record books when lacrosse season starts up in just about a month.

R&P LIQUORS 240 West St. (RT 116) 253-9742
250 SELECTIONS OF FINE WINES
(including UMass Old Chapel Wines)
GREAT SELECTION OF BEERS AND 30-PACK SPECIALS!

A World of OPPORTUNITIES
NORTHWESTERN COLLEGE OF CHIROPRACTIC can provide you with an education uniquely focused on the 21st century. Just ask our 3,000 alumni. They are practicing from America to Zimbabwe, as solo practitioners and in interdisciplinary settings. They know that our FOCUS ON EXCELLENCE has earned us an international reputation as a pioneer in chiropractic education, patient care and scientific research. Northwestern is a single-purpose, limited enrollment, private institution featuring a well-rounded, RIGOROUS EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM integrating the basic and clinical sciences, diagnosis, X-ray, chiropractic therapeutics, wellness care and practice management. Our pioneering clinical internship program, interdisciplinary study opportunities and a state-of the art student clinic provide our graduates with an UNPARALLELED CLINICAL FOUNDATION. Add our Career Services Center, where we assist our graduates in job placement, and you can understand why our graduates have such a high satisfaction level with their careers. For a personal visit or more detailed information, call a Northwestern admissions counselor at 1-800-888-4777...Or go virtual at www.nwchiro.edu
NORTHWESTERN College of Chiropractic

GET IN SHAPE IN SHAPE NUTRITION
•Fat Burners •Creatine •Protein Powders
20%-50% Off Retail Prices Everyday
•Andro •Vitamins/Herbs •Food Bars and more...
65 University Dr. Amherst 549-7434

Reason №2 why you should take our GRE course.
You'll score more...
2 Our students improve an average of 212 points. And they significantly out-score students who took that other course.
800-2-REVIEW www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0080

■ NBA

continued from page 14

at the helm, success can't be too far behind. Prying Ike Austin from the hapless Clippers could mean the difference between postseason and the lottery. Austin is clearly the best postman in Florida since Shaq himself, as he can deliver both points and rebounds.

7. Miami Heat — (26-24) Last year's Atlantic Division champs will fall from grace quickly this year. Pat Riley was intent on either bringing Sprewell or Mitch Richmond to Miami, but he failed on both counts. Either player would have likely dreaded a reunion with Tim Hardaway anyway. The loss of Vashon Leonard (8-10 weeks) won't help matters, but they will finish strong.

8. Boston Celtics — (25-25) The Celts will make their long- awaited return to the post-season... by the skin of their teeth. The Celts will be a great team a few years down the line, make no mistake about that. The Green and White will be riding the luck of the leprechaun this year, or more specifically the benefits of the shortened season. Either way, a potential first round matchup with Bird's Pacers will be one tough ticket in Beantown.

Close, but No Cigar:

Washington Wizards: Unless they lock up point guard Rod Strickland by tomorrow, his agent has made it clear he will be leaving the nation's capital. With Mitch Richmond in town, he and Strick had a chance to form one of the conference's best backcourts.

Detroit Pistons: They have added a few wannabe "bad boys" in Laettner and Loy Vaught, but with Laettner sidelined, and Vaught being... well Loy Vaught, the Pistons will simply not have enough up front to make a major impact. They may chase Kevin Johnson to bolster the backcourt which would help.

Wait Till Next year:

Charlotte Hornets: The questionable move of signing Derrick Coleman (5 years, $40 million), now looks reasonable with Anthony Mason (elbow) out for the season. Scoring machine Glen Rice will also be sidelined indefinitely, leaving both DC and the Hornet brass quite perturbed to say the least.

Milwaukee Bucks: Look for George Karl to have his troops ready to make a playoff run... in the next century. The talent is there with Glenn Robinson and Ray Allen in particular. It will take a few seasons to put all the pieces together in cheese country.

Philadelphia 76ers and Toronto Raptors: Both of these teams have their work cut out for them. The Sixers are clearly in the better position of the two by virtue of Tim Thomas and Allen Iverson alone.

Next Week: The Wild, Wild, West.

Sanford Appell is a Collegian columnist.

A Bull with nowhere to run

By John Nadel
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Dennis Rodman's options for the upcoming season appear to be diminishing by the day, with the Los Angeles Lakers perhaps the only team still interested in him.

The 37-year-old Rodman, the NBA's top rebounder in each of the last seven seasons, wanted to play for the Orlando Magic, who are coached by Chuck Daly — Rodman's coach in Detroit from 1986-92. But Magic general manager John Gabriel indicated yesterday the chances of that happening are slim, mainly because Rodman has made it clear he wishes to receive special treatment.

"Based on one phone call, this thing had a pulse a couple days ago," Gabriel said from Orlando, Fla. "It's coming close to dying out here real fast as we get ready to start our season [tomorrow night against the New York Knicks].

"We wanted to meet with him. We respect him very much as a player, but there was a process for this organization in regard to issues off the floor that we're going to stick to. If that process doesn't happen, this signing won't happen. We're going to stick to that."

Lakers executive vice president Jerry West has expressed an interest in Rodman, but said he was uncertain whether Rodman would be interested in the Lakers, who can offer him a veteran minimum starting salary of $1 million under the new labor deal.

Rodman, who has played on five of the last 10 NBA championship teams — including the last three with the Bulls — recently mentioned the Lakers as one of the teams he was interested in joining.

Shaquille O'Neal has pushed in recent days for the Lakers to sign Rodman.

"Any team can use his physical ability," said first-year Lakers guard Derek Harper, who like Rodman is 37 years old and nearing the end of his playing career. "The problem with Dennis is how he's going to conduct himself off the basketball court." West reportedly spoke Tuesday with one of Rodman's new agents, Steve Chasman, to see if there was interest on Rodman's part in playing for the Lakers.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Can't fight the Geever

Ray Geever and the Minuteman hockey team get one more shot at the Eagles when they travel to Boston College tomorrow. See last Friday's Collegian for a preview.

GOT THE WINTER "BLAHS," COME IN TODAY & SAVE!!!
LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive
Everyday Pricing
1/2 KEGS NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $34.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, ROLLING ROCK $36.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE $40.99 + DEP
LITE & LITE ICE CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS $15.49 + DEP
KEYSTONE LIGHT $10.99 + DEP
MILLER GENUINE DRAFT REGULAR & LIGHT CASE 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.99 + DEP
BECK'S BEER REGULAR & DARK 12 PK. BOTTLE $9.99 + DEP
MAGIC HAT 6 PK. BOTTLES ALL FLAVORS $5.99 + DEP
CORONA REGULAR & LIGHT CASE 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES $16.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
HARDY'S IMPORTED FROM AUSTRALIA CHARDONNAY, SHIRAZ, MERLOT 750ML $5.99
Almaden RHINE, BURGUNDY, ROSE, CHABLIS, GOLDEN BLUSH 3 LTR $5.99
VENDANGE CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5LT $6.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5LT $6.99
MARCUS JAMES ALL FLAVORS 1.5LT $5.49
SEAGRAM'S COOLERS 4 PK. $2.99 + DEP
POPOV VODKA 1.75L $10.99
Smuggler SCOTCH 1.75L $14.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75L $16.49
BACARDI LIMON RUM 750ML $9.49
GORDON'S GIN 1.75L $13.99
PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS DEKUYPER 750ML $6.99
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 2/4/99 THRU WEDS. 2/10/99
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Valentine's Day
It's right around the corner and we've got the gifts that could save your life!
Post Holiday Sales Now!
Shopping.com
Sign up for a Membership Account Today! Free Home Delivery Free Email Build your own Website at Shopping.com!
500 Minute Pre-Paid Phone Cards $59.99
11.9¢ per Minute
All Bestsellers 30% Off List Price... EVERY DAY!
We also carry VIDEOGAMES at Incredibly Low Prices!
All Billboard Top 40 CDs only $8.97 each... EVERY DAY!

University Health Services
Mental Health Groups Spring '99

MONDAY
Coed Self Exploration Group
(for Undergraduate Students)
In this group members will be able to address their relationships such as: friendship; intimacy; family issues; work and school, etc. MEMBERS MAY JOIN THIS GROUP AT ANY POINT IN THE SCHOOL YEAR (as space permits).
Monday, 1:00 - 2:30 p.m.
Supporting Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Identities
Exploring such issues as coming out, building community, dating relationships, family of origin and stress management.
Monday, 3:45 - 5:00 p.m.
MORE GROUPS BEGINNING IN THE FALL

TUESDAY
Time Limited Therapy Group
(for Undergraduate Students)
This semester-long group will provide a safe environment for looking at relationships. There will be opportunities to learn ways to make changes in interpersonal patterns.
Tuesday, 3:30 - 4:30 p.m.
Groups are conducted by Mental Health Division staff. Group sessions are covered under UHS Basic Health Plan and Kaiser pre-paid plan. Groups require an initial screening which can be arranged by calling 545-2337 or by stopping by at 127 Hills North Mon - Fri. 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
For further information refer to the Mental Health web site at www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth

THURSDAY
Women's Self-Exploration Group
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members.)
This group provides as opportunity for women to explore personal relationships, work, studies, family of origin, health, acculturation and other relevant concerns. THIS GROUP IS ONGOING WITH MEMBERS ADDED AS SPACE PERMITS.
Thursday, 9:00 - 10:30 a.m.
Coed Self-Exploration Groups
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members.)
This group provides an opportunity for men and women to explore their interpersonal relationships. THIS GROUP IS ONGOING WITH MEMBERS ADDED AS SPACE PERMITS.
Thursday, 3:30 - 5:00 p.m.
Food Matters
This group will provide a safe and confidential environment for women who want to work towards changing unhealthy eating and exercise habits, and creating a positive self concept. Self-esteem enhancement and alternatives to emotional eating will also be addressed.
Thursday, 3:30 - 4:50 p.m.
CALL 545-2337

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Free Karate Instruction offered in Southwest. All welcome. Interested? Call Mike 546-2658

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Come see the Women's Ice Hockey team play St.Michael's this Saturday Feb.6 at 1pm. The game is being played at the Mullins Center practice rink and is sure to be action packed!

Fraternities/Sororities: Looking for a DJ for your next function? DJ Fooz is now booking, specializing in date parties and formals. Call Tim 549-9127

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Belchertown 1 bedroom. Three miles from Amherst Center 253-9081

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car?Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

1986 Olds Cierra Well-maintained. Low miles $850 256-3004

'86 Camry 155,000 miles, New tires, Brakes, Timing belt excellent condition for age. Asking $1800 586-1717

1994 GEO Prism LSI 180,000 miles, standard transmission, ABS, CD, and much more, Excellent condition throughout. Asking 5,000 586-1717

'88 Subaru 4x4 Wagon runs, drives, looks, decent $850. May Trade for motorcycle 773-8586

WANTED: Toyotas, Novas, Prizms, Sentras. Any condition. Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

COMPUTERS

Computer Laptop 233,Modem,CD-ROM,32RAM 3.2HO,Active Matrix,3year Full Warranty Call Sergiy 413-529-0583 Evenings

EMPLOYMENT

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY—Camp Wayne, NE PA (3 hrs/NYC)—Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video, Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or waynebovs@aol.com.

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA, overnight Jewish Federation camp - 3 hours from NYC- General, Sports, Drama, H20 & Arts. 1-800-973-3866 poyntell@ix.net-com.com or www.poyntelle.com

"LEADERS NEEDED. Summer teenage bicycling trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, Ashfield Rd., CONWAY, MA 01341 (800) 343-6132."

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

New Student Program Seeks extroverts from '99-'01 class with 2.5+ GPA.May 26 to July 17. Salary,room,meals,health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions CTR. Deadline FEB 5.

Mothers helper wanted 10-15 hrs/wk afternoons. Must have car and references. Call Jamie 549-7788

EMPLOYMENT

PRESTIGIOUS NORTH-EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, Nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool, Musical Director and General Counselors. INERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd Trail's End Camp 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99? College Pro, a $25 million company, seeks highly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goaloriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

Undergraduate Business Consultant Gain Accounting Experience, Leadership Skills, and General Business Experience 10-15 hrs. per week, flexible schedule. Must be self motivated; able to work as part of a team. Sophomores and Juniors are encouraged to apply. Pick up an application at the Center for Student Business, 406 Student Union. Questions, call 545-2166. Deadline for apps Monday Feb. 8

EMPLOYMENT

Personal Assistant for busy professional $7.00 an hour. Laundry, cat care, paperwork etc. 413-259-1227

Put up Posters in Amherst, Northhampton + colleges $6.00 An hour. Need car Extremely responsible 413-259-1227

Public Relations Jobs Apply now to be a Tour Guide, Admissions Rep or Summer Counselor. Exp'd guides, counselors, and reps on the Campus Center Councourse Feb.1-5 to answer questions.

Help Wanted Earn extra cash!!! Make your own hours!!! Responsible students to market/manage Citibank promotions on campus. Free giveaways! Earn $400+/Week. Call Joann at 1-800-950-8472 Ext. 117

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

General Labor $7.50 Amherst location needs your help all winter shoveling snow & sanding walk ways. Only available for work one or two days a week? This is the perfect job for you. Call United Personnel Services today to learn more about how snow+work=$$. 800-363-8200

Whitewater guides and River Photographers wanted for part,full time summer jobs outdoor and athletic background a must will train for both positions. Photography position requires some experience. Call Crab Apple Whitewater for info 413-339-0188

EMPLOYMENT

More Than Just SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. Camp counselors needed for a private, residential camp in the beautiful Pocono Mountains. We are looking for people with a dedication to children, enthusiasm for diversity, and a desire to share their passion and expertise in any one of the following areas: COMPUTERS, CIRCUS ARTS, BASKETBALL, MAGIC, VOLLEYBALL, TENNIS, DANCE, VIDEO, CREATIVE WRITING, ESL, SOCCER,COOKING, RADIO, ROCK MUSIC, GOLF, SKATEBOARDING, ROLLERBLADING, ROCKETRY, NEWSPAPER, FINE ARTS, CREATIVE CRAFTS, MOUNTAIN BIKING, CLIMBING WALL. Call 1-800-399-CAMP Ask for Dan or Nigel

Fraternities-Sororities-Clubs-Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,00 this semester with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 922-5579

Childcare needed 4 hours a week. 665-7483

On Campus Spokes Person Positions Available CIS is currently hiring motivated outgoing college students for spokes person positions $10.00-$15.00 an hour 10 hours a week on campus call Jodi Grant 800-567-6247

Counter Help + Drivers Wanted Must be able to work 20 hrs a week. Apply at OP Dough

Males Wanted For Exercise Science Study- earn up to $125-Call Steve 549-3877

Help Wanted Wait staff/Driver Part Time. Kai Chi Restaurant 586-2774 Mountain Farms Mall

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire Dj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester. Call Tim 549-9127

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR RENT

Mountain Bike 98 Marin Muirwoods Exc. Conditions $350 or B/O Call Ed 546-7055

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

Giant Mountain Bike. Bar ends, lock. Like new. $120. Call 546-1773

FURNITURE

1 Desk And 1 Chair For Sale. $30 OBO Call 256-6351

GREEK AFFAIRS

Sigma Kappa Open Rush 2-7 Sunday 5to7pm. 2-8 Monday 4to6. 2-9 Tuesday 7to9. 2-10 Wednesday 8to8. All UMass women welcome. 19 Allen St (behind Hillel) Call 256-6887 for info and rides

HEALTH & BEAUTY

ATHLETES build muscles, endurance, burn fat with 100% pure Amino Acid formula Creatine Monohydrate, ect... Call 617-471-2366

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST & FOUND

Tickets to Mullins Event. Found on Rte 9 by Big Y. Name it & Date of event and its yours. Call 549-6021 and leave message.

Found: Keys on Van Meter Hill, Sat 2 1/30. Call 546-2796

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

One Bedroom Available in 4 bdrm house. Begins March 1. Belchertown. $280month: Call 323-9794, Matt

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6995.

Furnished Room in house in North Amherst. $285 everything included. Call Ines, 253-3670

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Needed for Hobart Lane Call 549-7461-Jeff. Only $250 a month

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99! Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED Blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 www.classtravel.com

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-breaks

Your Ad Could Fill This Space!!

Place an Ad TODAY!!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, FEB. 4

Community — There will be a blood drive in the Student Union Ballroom from 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Free frozen yogurt for each donor.

Lecture — Leslea Newman will present a lecture entitled "Nice Jewish Dyke" at 12:30 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center.

Meeting — The UMass Ballroom Dance Club will meet from 8:45-8 p.m. in room 101 of Totman.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting for 5 H.A.R.F. (Students Helping Area Reach-out Efforts) at 7 p.m. in room 504 of Goodell. There will be free food and drinks.

Meeting — University Productions and Concerts will have a committee meeting in Earth Foods Cafe in the Student Union at 8 p.m. Volunteers are needed for stage, security, hospitality, and promotions.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

FRIDAY, FEB. 5

Auditions — Auditions for the Theater Guild's musical "Lil' Shop of Horrors" will be at 6 p.m. in room 162 of the Campus Center. Call backs will be held Sunday at 11 a.m.

Community — There will be a weekend of works by Amherst College alumni artists beginning from 1-5 p.m. with a panel discussion entitled "Walking the 'Career' Tightrope: Careers in the Performing Arts" in the Experimental Theater. A performance piece entitled "Six Shorts" will follow in Webster Studio One at 7 p.m., and "Double Thrill" will begin at 9 p.m. in Webster Studio One.

Conference — Share your experiences and learn more about learning communities at a conference entitled "Making Connections: Learning Communities for a Student-Centered University" from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. To register for this free conference and lunch call Anne Malone at 545-0851.

Lecture — As part of the Geoscience Lecture Series, Ian Tullis of Brown University will give a lecture entitled "Ductile Strain Localization in the Crust: Insights from Experimental Deformation of Feldspathic Rocks" in room 131 of Morrill II South at 3:30 p.m.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is February 12. Also searching for the 1998-99 cover contest winner. Call 5-4220 for more information.

Volunteers — Volunteers are needed to train and facilitate workshops on contraception and sexually-transmitted disease prevention during Spring semester 1999. Men and women needed. Contact Karen or Dan at 577-5188 for more information.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSA, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Bookworks 50% OFF All 1999 Pictorial Calendars In Stock

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs — University Store "Not Just a mall... Better."

HSCN — Hampshire Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	16 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	18 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	21 Govel to Govel
6 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Mowa Ch.	23 Syndance
8 UPN/20 Hartford	24 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	25 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International	31 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
16 WB/New Haven	33 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 4, 1999

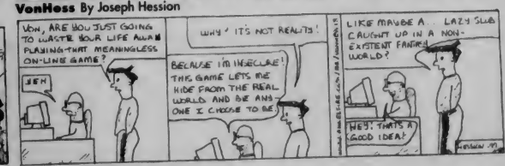
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEOH	2	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Legendary Lighthouses		Mystery! "Heat of the Sun"	Keeping Up	Well for God	Is It Legal?	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Turks "Hearts of Fire"	48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Turks "Hearts of Fire"	48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Vengeance Unlimited "Critical"		"Nerforce" (1999, Drama) Scott Bakula, Joanna Going			News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News	Friends	Tonight Show
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's CL	ER "Choosing Jo" (In Stereo)	Newsradio	Married...With
WTXX	8	6	Home Imp.	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lane	"Roswell: The Aliens Attack" (1999, Science Fiction) Steven Flynn,			News	Newsradio	News	Tonight Show
WVIT	9	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Mad Cow	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's CL	ER "Choosing Jo" (In Stereo)	Friends	Mad Abt. You
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Robbie Knievel Building Jump		Most Shocking Moments		News	Friends	Mad Abt. You
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's CL	ER "Choosing Jo" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	8	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Doctors	Mystery! "Heat of the Sun"		Jonathan Creek (In Stereo)	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Vengeance Unlimited "Critical"		"Nerforce" (1999, Drama) Scott Bakula, Joanna Going			News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Roswell: The Aliens Attack" (1999, Science Fiction) Steven Flynn,				Mad Abt. You	Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	72		Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder		Conn.	"The Punisher" (1999, Adventure) Dolph Lundgren,
A&E	32		Northern Exposure		Wheel-Fortune		Biography: Ann Landers		Unexplained (R)			Sherlock Holmes Mysteries	Law & Order "Intolerance"
CNN	30	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live			Newsstand: Entertainment	Moneyline
COM	35	26	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Tirecchio: Differences"		1994, Comedy) Ryan O'Neal		Comedy Showcase	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	48		New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Who's Alfred of...	Beta	Inside the Secret Service (R)		Coma – The Silent Epidemic		Into the Unknown (R)	Inside the Secret Service (R)
ESPN	31		Up Close	Sportscenter			College Basketball: Kentucky at Florida, (Live)				College Basketball: Memphis at Louisville, (Live)		Sportscenter
LIFE	45		Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five "Brother's Keeper"		Chicago Hope "Cutting Edges"		a/k/a "Changes" (1991, Drama) Cheryl Ladd, Michael Hoult,		Celebrity	New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	33		Countdown		Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity Dth	Celebrity	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	46		Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Sleeter	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Lavarne	I Love Lucy
SCIFI	63		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Amaz. Stories	Star Trek: The Next Generation	"The Alternative Factor"		Highlander: The Series		Friday the 13th: The Series	Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC	49	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Hospital" (R)				Medical Detect Without Warn.		What Happened?	Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	55		Due South "Siberian"		ER "The Birthday Party"				★½ "Hang 'Em High" (1968, Western) Clint Eastwood, Inger Stevens,			★★★ "Coogan's Bluff" (1968) Clint Eastwood
USA	62		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Back to the Future Part II" (1989, Fantasy) Michael J. Fox,			New York Undercover
HBO	51		★★½ "Robin Hood: Men in Tights" (1993) Cary Elwes			★★½ "Jerry Maguire" (R)			Real Sports (R) (In Stereo)		★★ "Sniper" (1993, Drama) Tom Berenger (In Stereo)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	52		★★ "Fools Rush In" (1997, Comedy) Matthew Perry		PG-13		★★★ "Murder in the First" (1995, Drama) Christian Slater,				★½ "The Night Caller" (1998) Shanna Reed		"Wild Medicine"
SHOW	50		★½ "Dream a Little Dream 2" (1994) Corey Feldman			PG-13	★★ "Caught Up" (1998, Drama) Boleskin Woodbine				Unc's (R)	Nude Awaken	★½ "Physical Evidence" (1989)

408Ville By Louis & Allan

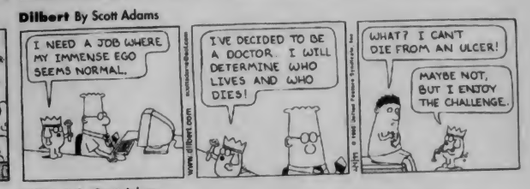
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley



University By Frank Cho



Non- Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

VonHoss By Joseph Hession

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Leedeo By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Something planned with a loved one today may have to be a solo endeavor when all is said and done, courtesy of an unexpected turn of events.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You are likely to discover something quite surprising about yourself before the day is out, but you can rest assured that a secret remains intact.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Take care that you don't drive yourself so hard that others begin to accuse you of being "obsessed" with your work. Relax and put your feet up!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may actually have the chance to relive a past experience today, and do things just a bit differently. Maximize your enjoyment!

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Someone may be trying to take advantage of you in some way today. You must use all your wiles to avoid being put in a position of vulnerability.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Transportation may be the most pivotal issue you face today, despite all the personal matters that are currently on the table. You must get around!

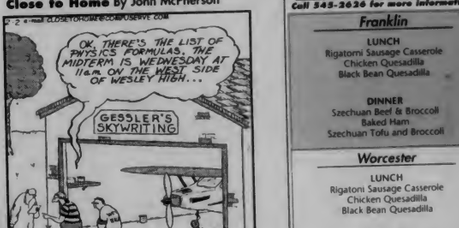
LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — The new and the untried are not for you today. You're far more interested in those things that have worked for you and others in the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Keep your judgements to yourself today, and avoid "spouting off!" No one is interested in hearing your share of biased beliefs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Today's schedule may not allow you to "step out" after dark as you had hoped. You must be willing to get your work done no matter what.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You can do a great deal today to help someone who doesn't even know that he or she needs assistance. When all is said and done, you'll be rewarded for your efforts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You'll be called upon to assist someone you hardly know today, but you can bet that there will be something in it for you.



CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You're not likely to be affected by those who are unwilling to "give an inch" today. You can accomplish a great deal without any cooperation.

Quote of the Day

"He's not getting any. He's a troll."

-Overheard

Close to Home By John McPherson

Stu and Reggie orchestrate an elaborate cheating scam.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Rigatorni Sausage Casserole
Chicken Quesadilla
Black Bean Quesadilla

DINNER
Szechuan Beef & Broccoli
Baked Ham
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli

Worcester

LUNCH
Rigatoni Sausage Casserole
Chicken Quesadilla
Black Bean Quesadilla

DINNER
Szechuan Beef & Broccoli
Baked Ham
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli

Hampshire

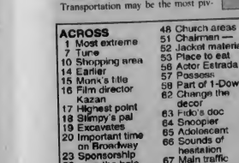
LUNCH
Rigatoni Sausage Casserole
Chicken Quesadilla

DINNER
Szechuan Beef & Broccoli
Baked Ham
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli

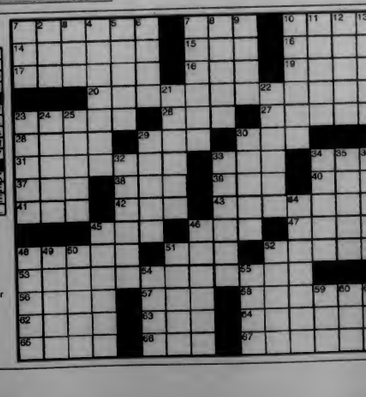
Berkshire

LUNCH
Rigatoni Sausage Casserole
Berkshire Breakfast Sandwich

DINNER
Szechuan Beef & Broccoli
Baked Ham
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli



Collegian Staff



Night Editor — Michael Perry
Photo Technician — Melinda Nokes
Copy Editor — Mike Messaros
Production Supervisor — Joseph D. Savitch Production Staff — Jeanette Santoro, Lisa Metcalf

ACROSS
1 Most extreme
7 Tune
10 Shopping area
14 Earlier
15 Munk's title
16 Film director Kazan
17 Highest point
18 Slimpy's pal
19 Excavates
20 Important time on Broadway
23 Sponsorship
26 — in the hole
27 Close relatives
28 Fiber source
29 Doctors' org.
30 Goal
31 Paper-folding art
33 Orthodontist's arm
34 Curvy letter
37 Knots or Johnson
38 Cal. abbr.
39 Spanish hero El —
40 CEO, e.g.
41 Chicago trains
42 Insect
43 Fried tortilla
45 Prickly seedcase
46 Not hers
47 Baltic Sea leader
48 Church areas
51 Chairman —
52 Jacket material
53 Place to eat
56 Actor Estrada
57 Passes
58 Part of 1-Down
62 Change the decor
63 Fido's doc
64 Snoopier
65 Adolescent
66 Sounds of hesitation
67 Main traffic route

DOWN
1 Neighbor of Cain
2 Summit
3 Elsie's sound
4 In progress
5 Oozes
6 Part of a grove
7 Giraffe's home
8 Peace goddess
9 Chimed
10 T-shirt size
11 Straighten
12 Type of meter or opera
13 Endures
21 Tilling
22 River nymphs
23 Residence
24 Actor Flynn
25 Profits
29 Love, in Paris
30 Amigo's good-bye
32 Break attack
33 A piece of the —
34 Circumvent adroitly
35 — with: supported
36 Extra tire
44 Slightseer
45 Summon
46 Frequents
48 Wide-awake
49 Fruit pulp
50 Like some remarks
51 Yard tool
52 Mexican mister
54 Inlet
55 Salad ingredient
59 Clavial
60 Ending for ballad
61 Thirsty

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

2-4-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

Thursday, February 4, 1999 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Kraft is key in saving UM season

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Massachusetts forward Tez Kraft has been a huge contributor to a Minutewomen team that has come on strong as of late.

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The road to success has not been smoothly paved for the Massachusetts women's basketball team during her years in Amherst, but Tez Kraft has always risen above the circumstances surrounding her to become one of the team's most valuable assets.

"Tez is the most versatile player I have coached here," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "She has brought a great ability to be both a force on the inside and outside, greater than even Octavia Thomas when she was here."

O'Brien's assessment of the senior forward stands as quite a compliment considering Thomas is the second all-time scorer in UMass history with 1791 points.

Kraft notched her 1000th point as a Minutewoman this season against Temple, which is one of her most impressive achievements right alongside her Most Outstanding Player Award for last year's Atlantic 10 tournament.

Kraft's play in the tourney, in which she averaged 16 points per game, helped catapult the Minutewomen into their second ever NCAA tournament last March.

"Making the NCAA's last year was one of the most thrilling experiences of my career," Kraft said. "The win over Stanford my sophomore year is right up there too."

None of these memories would have been possible for Kraft or her teammates if she had chosen to play college ball closer to home, as she originally figured on doing.

Kraft, a native of Logan, Ohio narrowed her choices down to UMass and the University of Cincinnati.

"My mother wanted me to go to Cincinnati since it's nearby," Kraft said. "But I immediately fell in love with UMass upon coming to campus. Both Joanie and (Assistant Coach) Jill Rooney were also influential in my decision."

In regards to her relationship with O'Brien, Kraft stated that they relate to each other well, because they have very similar goals and experiences.

"Our relationship has continually improved," Kraft said. "She only wants to get the most out of her players, and be as successful as possible. We also both blew out our knees, which is one of the ways we have mirrored each other".

Kraft was referring to the season ending injury sustained in January 1996, when she tore her ACL in practice. The ailment also caused Kraft to miss the following season entirely.

That injury may have properly prepared Kraft for the pressure that has been placed upon her shoulders the past two seasons.

UMass lost star guard Kelly Van Huisen early on in the last two campaigns, leaving Tez as the most viable option on offense.

Her response to the burdens have been undoubtedly positive, as she posted 14.2 points and 8.4 rebounds per game last season.

As of now, Kraft holds similar numbers this year at 14.0 points, and 7.6 rebounds per contest.

"Tez has assumed a leadership role on this team," O'Brien said. "Her contributions have helped us maintain the level of play that we strive for."

Kraft has also exhibited an ability to stay focused both on and off the court, which enables her to remain positive in times of crisis.

"We could have packed it in, and felt sorry for ourselves," Kraft said. "However, that is not the way I handle things, and now the whole team is coming together and realizing what we can still accomplish."

Whether or not Kraft and her mates are able to extend their responsibilities into March, Tez is fully aware that a new chapter in her life will commence upon season's end.

A sport management major, Kraft is interested in both sport marketing and advertising at of now, but she has not ruled out the possibility of pursuing a professional basketball career first.

"I'm not quite ready to give up on the game yet," Kraft said. "Traveling overseas to play is definitely something I would consider. Basketball has given me so much, and I don't think I'm willing to let go just yet."

Short season tips off; SA picks 'em

After four months of waiting for the owner-imposed lockout to run its ugly course, NBA fanatics around the world must only countdown to Friday night for their heroes to return to the court.

After the all-important battle between millionaires and billionaires was concluded, an all-out frenzy for free agents was tipped off, which in many cases leaves your favorite team with an entirely different outlook since you last saw them.

Some teams are much better off (i.e. the Houston Rockets), and will look to challenge for a World Championship after an intense fifty game season, while others (i.e. the Chicago Bulls) will be scrambling to even play competitive basketball after drastic makeovers.

With the retirement of Michael Jordan, one of the top five players ever to don a basketball uniform, teams that never even bothered to view the NBA Finals on television, likely could be competing in that showcase at an arena near you.

To kick off the season, I will break down the two conferences, and analyze where the teams stack up after all of the wheeling and dealing. First, the Eastern Conference, forever the home of scrappy, hard-nosed, half-court roundball.

The Playoff Teams:

1. Indiana Pacers — (35–15) The people's choice to replace the Bulls as Conference champs. They are one of the only squads to practice as a unit during the lockout, and 1998 Coach of the Year Larry Bird simply won't settle for mediocrity. Pacers added key veteran Sam Perkins who will likely provide a much needed spark off the bench and a compliment to the inside play of the Davis boys (Dale and Antonio).

2. New York Knicks — (32–18) After bidding adieu to Charles Oakley and John Starks, the Knicks collected as many more thugs as they could to help fill their shoes. Leading this pack of degenerates will be Latrell Sprewell, who, while impressive in the two preseason games, has no business ever playing another game in the NBA. The Knicks have also enlisted upon Dennis Scott, Marcus Camby, and David Wingate to handle the team misconduct department.

3. Atlanta Hawks — (31–19) The "sleeper" in the Eastern Conference. The only major addition was LaPhonso Ellis, to replace Christian Laettner (torn Achilles) who may not even touch the court this season. With a new arena in place, and Lenny Wilkens hungry for another title, the Hawks will be certain contenders as long as Mookie Blaylock stays healthy, and Alan Henderson continues to produce.

4. New Jersey Nets — (29–21) This shortened season could have been a prime opportunity for the swamp–dwellers to capture their first Atlantic division crown. However, early injuries to Kerry Kittles and Rony Seikaly could hamper the team's production in the early going. Both stars will miss up to four weeks, but the addition of Erick Murdock will bolster Coach Cal's bench, as he will add scoring punch, and superb defensive ability.

5. Cleveland Cavaliers — (28–22) As this team matures, they will become major players on the east coast. The Cavs feature a solid nucleus of youngsters including Brevin Knight and Derek Anderson. If Shawn Kemp, who reported to training camp at 303 pounds can get anywhere near playing shape the Cavs will surprise teams throughout the season.

6. Orlando Magic — (27–23) Many observers are counting Disney's finest out of the running, but with Chuck Daly

Turn to NBA, page 11

UM football announces new signee

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Some say, "If its not broken, don't fix it."

Massachusetts football coach Mark Whipple disagrees. He opts to believe the adage, "If you're not moving ahead, you're falling behind."

Rather than sitting on his laurels after winning a Division I-AA National Championship in December, the popular coach vigorously pursued several prospects over the past five weeks in an effort to improve on his already talented ball club.

Among the 16 announced 1999 signees were kicker Doug White from Claremont, California, transferring linebacker Julian Cover from Freeport, N.Y., and defensive back Shawn Murray from Brick, N.J.

"Almost all these guys could get playing time," Whipple said. "We think they're that quality.

"It's easier to close the deal when you're not talking about dreams. When we were 2–9 [a year ago], we talked more with [the recruits] about what I did with Brown. This time, we could show them the ring..."

One major point of concern for the coach was special teams and defense. White, an All–C.I.F. first-team kicker and punter while at Claremont High School, will challenge streaky incumbent Jason Cherry for the place–kicking duties. White visited Northwestern, where he was charmed by coach Gary Barnett. When Barnett departed for a job in Colorado, Whipple and his staff were worried that the kicker would get a scholarship there, instead.

"Doug is an exceptional kicker and punter with great leg strength," UMass recruiting coordinator Dave Hoover said. "He is one of few athletes who is able to excel at both place–kicking and punting. Doug will make an immediate impact on our program."

Turn to SIGNEE, page 10

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

UMass football guru Mark Whipple has added sixteen signees to his 1999 roster in his drive for a repeat national title.

Second place Minutemen to host Odom and Rams

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The Atlantic 10 competition is about to get interesting in men's basketball. To finish up the year, the schedule for nearly all the teams in the conference will be strictly intra- conference, causing several key matchups between teams with similar A–10 records.

In particular interest to the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts is tonight's 7:00 matchup between UMass and the Rams of Rhode Island.

The Minutemen enter the game at a somewhat disappointing 9–11 overall, but they aren't quite as far out of A–10 title contention as many believe.

"As crazy as it sounds, we're tied for second place in the league, and we're tied with Rhody, so this game is huge," UMass Coach Bruiser Flint said.

"We still have a shot to win the regular season, but we have to show up to play."

The Rams will come to the William D. Mullins Center with a 12–8 record and a two–game winning streak. They will also bring two of the most highly touted players in the nation, Antonio Reynolds–Dean and Lamar Odom.

Reynolds–Dean is currently averaging 14.2 points and 6.6 rebounds a game, while Odom is going about his much– anticipated first year of collegiate play proving that he is worth all of the preseason press he received.

"Rhode Island is very big and very athletic," Flint said. "If you've ever seen Rhode Island, [you know] Lamar Odom is everything they say he is."

Odom, a celebrated rookie, is reminding onlookers of a young Magic Johnson by playing effectively at any one of the five positions on the floor. In addition to his team–high 16.2 points and 9.1 boards a contest, Odom has tallied 83 assists and 37 blocks. His six–foot–nine height causes problems at nearly any position, especially at shooting guard and small forward, where he plays most frequently.

"We might double–team tomorrow more than we usually do to try and counteract their size," Flint said. The coach added that Rhode Island has been posting up Reynolds–Dean significantly less this season because of the effectiveness of Odom underneath.

On the UMass front, forward Mike Babul will most likely be commissioned to try and contain the rookie superstar. Babul has faced the most potent offensive player on nearly all of the Minutemen's opponents this year, and has fared well to date.

Depending on the defensive alignment, Babul's front–court mate, Chris Kirkland, could see himself matched up with Odom or Reynolds–Dean as well.

"Chris Kirkland, I can't ask much more from him," Flint said. "Since he's been in the starting lineup, he's averaged 11 points and eight rebounds [a game.]"

Also, Charlton Clarke will return as the starting point guard for Massachusetts after being benched for the final fifteen minutes of last Sunday's loss to Texas. Clarke was disciplined because Flint said the guard was not playing like the team leader he was claiming to be "in the newspapers."

Unfortunately, the coach has received little help from his bench when the starters have been ineffective. Flint expressed frustration with back–up point guard Jonathan DePina and power forward Ajmal Basit until recently.

"We can win all these games if we come out to play like [we did against Dayton in a 59–57 overtime win]," said Flint.

PREVIEW

MEN'S BASKETBALL

UMASS VS. RHODE ISLAND
THURSDAY @6:45 P.M.

WMUA, 91.1 FM
JUSTIN RUBY — PLAY BY PLAY
SETH KOENIG — COLOR COMM

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 9 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Friday, February 5, 1999

Student fees to increase; Cellucci angry at Board

By Jake Ulian
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees approved a slight increase in student fees for the 1999–2000 academic year on Wednesday.

Under the newly approved budget, in–state undergraduate students at UMass–Amherst would pay $3,922 in tuition and curriculum support fees for the Fiscal Year 2000, $13 less than the current price of $3,935. However, a $91 rise in other mandatory fees (from $1,294 for the current academic year to $1,385 for 1999–2000) will result in an overall increase of $78.

The tuition–and–fees rate of out–of–state residents will rise more sharply. Out–of–state undergraduate tuition rates will rise 8.2 percent, from $9,018 to $9,756. Out–of–state curriculum support fees will rise 4 percent, from $2,138 to $2,224, resulting in an overall increase of 7.3 percent, or $915.

There will also be an increase in the price of room and board. The average room cost for an on–campus resident will rise $150, from $2,488 to $2,638, while the average board cost for an on–campus resident will increase from $2,032 to $2,152.

Massachusetts Governor Paul Cellucci expressed anger at the increase, threatening to cut $4.6 million from the University budget as well as deny the Board of Trustees the right to set the rate of tuition and fees.

According to a Thursday Boston Globe article, Cellucci said, "We've been trying to get college and state universities to be more affordable, more accessible to citizens of this state. Now all of a sudden the University of Massachusetts wants to increase the costs of going to that university for the students, and I don't think it's right."

"I think there may be some confusion as to what exactly has been done," said Chancellor David K. Scott. "The main increases from our campus concern the room and board and health services fees, which the student trustee supported.

"We've got to maintain a balance between cost increases, quality programs and a quality environment," he went on to say.

Elly Court, the Student Government Association student trustee, agrees.

"The Board of Trustees and President Bulger's stance is that students' tuition and fees shouldn't increase more than the rate of inflation, and this increase is consistent with that policy," she said. "Basically, all of the increases in fees reflect salary increases for the staff, which were bargained with the unions."

Despite the increases, student charges are still lower than they were in 1994, when the total cost of tuition and fees was $5,510. Chancellor Scott claims that the 1994 rate was, at the time, the second–highest in the country, while the current rate of $5,307 is the fifth–highest in New England.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Posters

Students take cover from the rain and browse through the poster sale in the Campus Center yesterday afternoon.

Committee suggests changes in administrative structure

By Christie Vincent
Collegian Staff

The Student Affairs Review Committee has released a report to the Chancellor recommending changes that it thinks would enable the University to better serve the needs of students and other members of the campus community.

Chancellor David K. Scott announced he was forming the committee last summer, looking for what the report stated as "suggestions for redesign of the administration." The committee's purpose was to determine if changes were needed, and if so, recommend what kinds of changes.

Consisting of faculty, students and staff, the committee met several times as a group and in sub–committees covering specific areas of Student Affairs.

Over a five–month period, the committee interviewed 250 members of campus faculty, staff, and students.

The committee recommends changing the name of the office of Student Affairs to "Campus Life" because it includes faculty, staff and students, according to Margarat (Peg) Jablonski, visiting assistant professor of education and chair of the committee.

The committee also recommends that Public Safety and University Health Services report to the Student Affairs Office from now on.

"They [campus community members] all use them. These things are part of life on campus," said Jablonski.

Jablonski stressed that the committee's recommendations go "without losing emphasis on the needs of the student."

Another committee recommendation is that the senior Student Affairs officer "should continue to report directly to the Chancellor" rather than to the Provost (Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs.) This is contrary to the recommendations of the Faculty Senate's Ad Hoc Committee on the Organization of the Research function, discussed at a meeting last fall.

"The Committee feels that students deserve to be represented by their own Vice Chancellor," Jablonski said.

Another issue that stands out is concern for the quality of campus life for graduate students.

The report reads, "Unfortunately, the majority of graduate programs actively discourage participation in activities not directly related to program requirements."

"In general," Jablonski said, "it seems that faculty do not encourage graduate student participation in campus committees or student government, fearing it might take away from the student's research and teaching. The committee feels that this needs to change."

The report recommended the following, which would affect organizational structure:

1) Continue a Vice Chancellor position reporting directly to the Chancellor, with a new title of Vice Chancellor for Student and Campus life;

2) Incorporate enrollment services into Academic Affairs, reporting directly to the Provost;

3) Have Auxiliary Services, which includes the Campus Center and Dining Services and the Employee Assistance program, report to either Student Affairs or Administration and Finance;

4) Create a new office of Family Resources, and an office of Judicial Programs;

5) Increase support for graduate student life;

6) Recognize student governance, both undergraduate and graduate, in the new executive area;

7) Continue exploration of links between Bursar, Registrar, Financial Aid, and Housing Assignments to create a "One–Stop Shopping" opportunity for students. This would allow students to settle three of the offices' business at one time.

The report also recommended that the Student Government Association (SGA) and the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) be included in "the organizational structure of the University." Jablonski said that this does not mean the group now has to report to anybody.

This was recommended, according to the report, because "Many students feel that the SGA and the GSS are accorded less respect than the faculty senate, despite the SGA's equal treatment in the Wellman document," — a trustee document that describes them as formal governance body — and the fact that the GSS "is generally approached as the governance body of the graduate students."

The report will be discussed by the SGA, GSS, and the faculty senate in their meetings this month.

Jodi Bailey, committee member and associate speaker of the SGA, said what surprised her while working on the committee was the way some parts of the administration were organized, and the reasoning behind the

Turn to AFFAIRS, page 2

Student Jose Figueroa missing

UMass senior last seen in Turners Falls on Jan. 29

University of Massachusetts senior Jose Figueroa has been reported missing since the early morning hours of Friday, Jan. 29. According to a press release from the UMass Department of Public Safety, Figueroa was last seen in Turners Falls leaving the home of a friend. He never returned to his dormitory.

Figueroa is a 22–year–old male, 5 feet 9 inches tall, 200 pounds, with short black hair.

The UMass Police are cooperating with the State Police and the Montague Police in the investigation. If you have any information contact the UMass Police Department at 545–2121, the State Police Detective Bureau at 773–5361, or the Montague Police Department at 863–8911.

— Stacey Shackford

Jackson to speak at Amherst College

One of the nation's most prominent political figures — Rev. Jesse Louis Jackson — will be the featured speaker at Amherst College Sunday afternoon as part of a Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Interfaith Service.

Along with Jackson's speech will be musical presentations by the Amherst College Glee Club and the Gospel Choir. The service will be held in Johnson Chapel at 3 p.m.

Tickets are sold out. However, the service will be simulcast on video to Stirn Auditorium and Merrill I at Amherst College. It will also be aired on the Amherst College Channel 8 video network.

Jackson is president and founder of the Rainbow/ PUSH Coalition. He began his activism as a student leader in the sit–in movement, continued assisting Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and was an organizer for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Jackson also founded People United to Save Humanity (PUSH) in Chicago in 1971 and the National Rainbow Coalition in 1984. The two groups merged in 1996. He was also a third–party U.S. presidential candidate in 1984 and again in 1988.

— Laura Forster

Wine labels may soon get new look

By Kalpana Srinivasan
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration plans to propose changes in existing wine labels that would include references to the health benefits of drinking wine.

The Treasury Department is expected to announce the proposed new wording for the labels today, according to a senior administration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "I think it's a very major accomplishment," said John DeLuca, president of the San Francisco–based Wine Institute, which has pushed for several years to add wording about the health effects of wine. "We have every expectation it will be done."

DeLuca said the approved statement would read: "To learn the health effects of wine consumption, send for the federal government's Dietary Guidelines for Americans." He said it would give a mailing address and a Web site.

Wine labels already warn that pregnant women shouldn't drink and that alcohol can impair driving and cause health problems. But they say nothing about studies suggesting that moderate alcohol intake can reduce the risk of heart disease in some people.

According to DeLuca, the new wording would not supplant the existing warnings on wine bottles, but would simply indicate that health benefits are also attributed to drinking wine.

"We just want to give our people a choice," said DeLuca, who argued that it is not a marketing scheme to boost sales. "This is a complex subject, but if science is saying this, the public has a right to know it."

Federal health officials and some senators already have voiced their concern that such a label would purport to make a health claim about wine or would encourage excessive drinking.

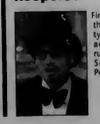
Surgeon General David Satcher has communicated his concern that mentioning health benefits on a bottle would send "mixed messages," according to a senior administration official. Sen. Strom Thurmond (R–S.C.) who helped craft the alcohol warning labels that have been in place for a decade, urged federal regulators in the spring of 1998 not to approve any watered–down label. He went one step further and introduced a bill that would strengthen the required warning labels.

And in July 1997, the Health and Human Services Department sent a letter to officials at the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which is part of the Treasury Department, urging them to delay approval of the labels.

DeLuca said findings of consumer surveys suggested a majority of people believed the label would not induce them to drink more. "It negated the charge that this was going to lead to excessive drinking," he said.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Just hit the ball man!

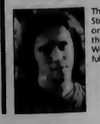


Jon Maki and Robin Greenspan enjoy a friendly game of pool yesterday afternoon.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 37 LOW: 14	HIGH: 41 LOW: 29	HIGH: 42 LOW: 22

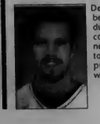
SOURCE: CNN.COM



Brothers' keepers?

Find out what students thought about fraternity members having to adhere to the same rules as dorm residents. See Campus Perspectives inside.

NEWS PAGE 3



Noho welcomes Strangefolk

The jammin' sounds of Strangefolk left a memorable impression on the Pearl St. audience Wednesday night. For a full review, see inside.

ARTS PAGE 5

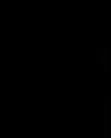
Stork continues to deliver

Dean Stork, who has been the offensive production during the last couple of games, will need to be a major factor on both sides of the puck for UMass this weekend.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 8
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
FYI 8
News 3
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com



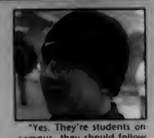
Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Stacey Shackford• Photos by Roberto Delgado

Do you think fraternity members should have to adhere to the same policies as dorm residents?

"Yeah. They're not any better than the rest of us."

Kathy Beehler
Senior
Sociology

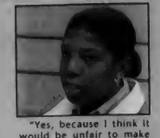


"Honestly, I think they should not be considered on-campus [residents]... Sure, they should be regulated. But if all the brothers are 21, why couldn't they buy a keg?"

Danie Demers
Senior
Art/Computer Animation

"No, because they live off campus and should enjoy the freedoms of not being on campus — within reasonable boundaries."

Eric Marshall
Junior
Environmental Science



"Yes. They're students on campus, they should follow the same rules as other students."

Benjamin Loi
Sophomore
Psychology

"No, because when you join a fraternity to live with people, you go through the process and you pay the price of entrance. You need to be rewarded in some way for your independence."

Kevin Weiss
College Graduate from Broken Lizard College Radio

"Yes, because I think it would be unfair to make things special for them. We're all students of the same university, we should all follow the same rules."

Nakisha Sanders
Sophomore
Psychology

~News Briefs~

Everywoman's Center offers a variety of programs

During the 1999 Spring semester the Everywoman's Center at the University of Massachusetts will sponsor several support groups for women in the UMass and Hampshire County communities.

The Counselor/Advocate Program, which deals with issues of violence against women, will sponsor the Rape Survivors Support Group and Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Group. Both will be directed by Elisabeth Brook, M.Ed. and examine issues that are common to many survivors.

Director of the Counselor/Advocate Program, Sage Freechild, said the support groups are particularly effective in the survivor's healing process.

"There is something about groups that really breaks isolation," said Freechild. By meeting other people with similar experiences, "people are able to heal exponentially."

The Rape Support Group will meet on Wednesdays from 7:30–9:30 beginning March 10, and the Sexual Abuse Support Group will meet on Thursdays from 7:30–9:30 beginning March 11.

The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center will also be offering support groups to women this spring. Divorce, self-esteem, health issues and a coming out group for lesbian and bisexual women, are among the offerings. All groups are facilitated by either outside professionals, graduate students or Everywoman's Center employees.

Schachne also feels that the support groups are an asset to community women. "Groups are a very positive experience for most women," she said. They allow women "to connect with others" and "feel less alone."

Schachne commented that although the number of participants vary from year to year in each support group, there are new groups being added this spring. These include a "Mother's Empowerment Group: Exploring the Light and Dark Side of Mothering and Discovering Your Self," and a seminar to accompany the "Separation, Divorce, and Post-Divorce Drop-In Support Group" entitled "A Look at Separation and Divorce Issues from Financial and Parenting Perspectives."

For those who are uncomfortable in a group, the Everywoman's Center also offers individual counseling and referral services. The center relies on volunteers to staff a 24–hour rape crisis hotline (545–0800 and 1–888–337–0800), as well as to provide medical and legal advocacy.

Interested candidates should call the Counselor/Advocate Program at 545–0800 by February 15 to receive more information and set up an initial interview. The Counseling Services Program can be reached at 545–0883.

— Rebecca Sablo

SGA announces Spring Concert date

At their first meeting of the semester, the Student Government Association (SGA) announced Wednesday night that there will be a Spring Concert this year. The date is set for May 8th, but the location is still unknown.

Sources say it may be held in the William D. Mullins Center instead of the campus lawn, due to what the SGA says are insurance reasons.

According to Lisa Cook, speaker of the SGA, the Ways and Means Committee budgeted $100,000 for the concert, which will ensure that high profile bands will be playing at the Spring Concert this year.

"We have put out bids for approximately 15 bands, and were hoping to get four that satisfy all the different groups on this campus to come," said Cook.

Damion Eden, Production Manager of University Productions and Concerts (UPS), is working with SGA, Black Mass Communications Project, Campus Activities, and WMUA, in hopes of bringing the Spring Concert back to its full potential.

"It's cool that SGA wants to make sure the students getting what they pay for, and it's going to be better as far as talent is concerned. Lots of good people are working on this," said Eden.

The concert will be free to all University of Massachusetts students, which, according to Cook, has not been the norm for the last spring concerts. "There was a small fee of a dollar or two, but this year it will be completely free," she said.

— Danielle Fugazy

Police Log

Larceny
Feb. 1
An individual reported a bookbag stolen from the Textbook Annex.

Liquor Law Violations
Jan. 30
Jonathan E. Buchalter, 19, of 135 Beacon Hill Dr., Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., was arrested at Infirmary Way and charged with underage possession of liquor.

Edward P. Vale, 18, of 3 Bantry Ct., Huntington, N.Y., was arrested on Infirmary Way and charged with underage possession of liquor.

Noise Complaint
Feb. 2
An individual was reported yelling outside of Coolidge Residence Hall.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 2
Jason W. Sullivan, 21, of 50 Meadows St., was arrested on Kennedy Road and charged with speeding and unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.
Jan. 31
A juvenile, 16, was arrested on North Pleasant Street and charged with equipment violation of a miscellaneous motor vehicle and unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.
Jan. 30
Kelly A. Ogden, 20, of 57 Nandina Dr., Tyngsboro, was arrested on North Pleasant Street and charged with unlawful transportation of liquor, underage possession of liquor, and failure to stop/yield.
Jan. 29
Jose R. Rolon, 21, of 147 King St., Littleton, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue and charged with operating a motor vehicle with a revoked license and failure to stop/yield.

Vandalism
Feb. 1
Threatening graffiti was written on a wall in Baker Residence Hall.

■ affairs

continued from page 1

organization. For example, she said, the Physical Plant is currently under the Office of Student Affairs.

Bailey said that more research time for the committee would have helped.

"Our conclusions had a very wide spectrum, and gave a very overall opinion," Bailey said. "There was so much work that specific things which could have been done were not."

Jablonski says she realizes that not everyone will be pleased with the committee's findings, as it is difficult to please everybody and the committee had a five month time limit.

"We [the committee] met with as many people as we could in the five month period," she said. "Now it's the Chancellor's turn to talk to the community."

Jablonski said the Chancellor plans to present the findings to the community to get its feedback before he makes his final decision.

Collegian Graphics is HIRING

PREREQUISITE: ADRENALINE

Drive. Intensity. Those aren't words you're likely to see in many course requirements. Then again Army ROTC is unlike any other elective. It's hands-on excitement. ROTC will challenge you mentally and physically through intense leadership training. Training that builds your character, confidence and decision-making skills. Again, words other courses seldom use. But they're the credits you need to succeed in life. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about five hours per week. Register this term for Army ROTC.

LEADERSHIP EXCELLENCE

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

MS113 – Introduction to Military Science, 1 credit per semester
Contact Captain Patrick Maloney
545-2321

18+ WELCOME Fri. and Sat

fun·food·spirits

THE PUB
amherst

18+ WELCOME Fri. and Sat

Friday
House Night
w/ DJ's
Bon Bons & Hush
10 - 1 am

Saturday
Hip Hop
w/ DJ from Western Mass
DJ Association
9:30 - 1 am

WEEKLY DRINK SPECIALS

Check out Newly Renovated "Pub Bar"

"Come Feel The EARTHQUAKE" w/ the new sound system

COVER CHARGE AT DOOR

Alum ad scores in Super Bowl

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

After spending more than $4 million dollars for the Super Bowl, a former University of Massachusetts student hopes his commercials bowled over viewers last Sunday.

Jeff Taylor, founder and CEO of Monster.com, created three commercials that aired for about three minutes during the Super Bowl.

Taylor's company is a job-seeking agency which posts free job opportunities and resumes on the world wide web. Monster.com has more than 30,000 internships, and houses over 1 million job-seeking resumes at the site.

During his time at UMass from '78 to '83, Taylor worked on his Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration (BDIC). He worked as an advertising manager for the Daily Collegian, ran the tour guide service, and was a Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity member.

Taylor says he never graduated from the University, but feels quite successful having gone on and founded his own business.

"I had a very positive experience at UMass," Taylor said. "Having experience as advertising manager at the Collegian helped me gain valuable job experience."

Taylor, who will be receiving his executive MBA degree from Harvard Business School this summer, has a full-time job at the company and cares for three children.

"We will do a little less than $50 million for the year," Taylor said. "It's a great experience and we're getting good results."

Because Taylor's company is a free service for job searches and resume listings, most of the profit the company makes is through the fees employers pay to post their advertisements.

According to Taylor, on an average Sunday, his business will receive about 500 job searches per minute online. After his commercial aired during the Super Bowl, his business received over 2,900 job searches a minute.

"It's gotten a lot of good coverage," Taylor said. "Our traffic has grown about tenfold at the site since the ad."

In going about getting his commercial aired, Taylor says he had to contact Fox early in October. After clearing airing negotiations, an additional 2,500 hours worth of work was required to put together three ads, each running an average of only a minute.

"I was relieved they [Fox] remembered to put it on when I told them to air it," Taylor said.

The experience has been a positive one for Taylor. He says he plans on running another ad during next year's Super Bowl and stands by his logo, "There's a better job out there."

Author Newman speaks of experience as Jewish lesbian

By Chanel Dubofsky
Collegian Staff

What's a "faygele?" Is there really such a thing as a "nice Jewish dyke?"

As part of a Stonewall Center Lecture Series, Northampton author Leslea Newman shared her experiences as a Jewish lesbian with a reading of her short stories, "A Letter to Harvey Milk," and "Right Off the Bat."

"A Letter to Harvey Milk" is Newman's award–winning short story about a Holocaust survivor asked to write a letter to someone in his past. He chooses Harvey Milk, the openly gay mayor of San Francisco who was murdered in office at the age of 48.

"Right off the Bat" is told from the point of view of a twelve–year–old girl who lives with her lesbian mother and her mother's partner. She confronts the conflict of being different, not just from her peers with "traditional" families, but also of being Jewish.

In the question–and–answer period which followed Newman's reading, she confronted issues such as gender discourse in Judaism.

Growing up in a traditional Jewish home in New York, Newman says she was confronted with the images of "the strong Jewish woman," and "the wimpy Jewish man." Her identity as a lesbian conflicted with her upbringing, where she was expected to become a Jewish wife and mother.

Both Judaism and homosexuality "are very centered around community," said Newman. In spite of this ideal of a close–knit family, Newman admitted that she has faced both anti–Semitism in the queer community and homophobia in the Jewish community.

She relayed the story of a talk she gave at a conservative New York synagogue surrounding her controversial children's book Heather Has Two Mommies.

"There were these two women in the front who were your typical bubbes," Newman said. "When I was done, they said to me, 'You're so pretty. Are you married?' It was like they hadn't been listening to anything I said."

Attending High Holiday services at the lesbian–gay synagogue in New York City provided Newman with a comforting and welcoming atmosphere. She characterized it as "a place where everyone could totally be themselves."

Newman also tackled the controversial subject of interfaith relationships. She classified her past experiences with Jewish women as being overwrought with resentment towards what they felt to be a patriarchal religion.

Newman describes her non–Jewish partner and spouse of 10 years to be open to learning more about Judaism. The subject of Judaism and sexuality has been addressed by integrating religious and cultural events into their daily life, such as a yearly Passover Seder at their home.

In conclusion, Newman said that a positive part of an interfaith relationship is that "there is no baggage around being Jewish."

Graphics is HIRING

University of Massachusetts

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

Escape Artist
Harley Newman

February 5, 1999
Campus Center Auditorium
8pm FREE

The movie "Beloved", starring Oprah Winfrey will be shown following the performance "Beloved" will also be shown on Sunday, February 7, 1999 at 8:00pm in the Campus Center Auditorium

BELOVED

This series is made possible through a grant from the Fine Arts Series and the office of the Associate Chancellor for Student Affairs

Jordan's Hussein returns home after a failed treatment

By Jamal Halaby
Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — A gravely ill King Hussein left a U.S. hospital yesterday after an unsuccessful bone marrow transplant and flew back to Jordan, accompanied by his wife and family members.

The king's trip home came only 10 days after he had abruptly traveled to the United States seeking care for a relapse of lymphatic cancer.

The condition of the 63-year-old Hussein "has become critical due to the failure of the function of internal organs," the king's private physician, Lt. Gen. Samir Farraj, said yesterday.

Farraj's statement, issued at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., gave no further details on the king's health. But an official in Amman said Hussein's body had apparently rejected a bone marrow transplant performed on Tuesday.

Yesterday, Hussein left the clinic where he has been receiving treatment for recurrence of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma cancer since Jan. 26. His plane took off Thursday afternoon.

In Amman, a royal palace statement read over the state-run Jordan Television said: "Upon King Hussein's persistent wish, he will return home tomorrow morning."

The announcement was the first item on the evening news, which was preceded by film clips of the king being greeted by thousands of Jordanians from an earlier trip abroad.

Just before leaving for America, the king named his oldest son as his successor in an apparent move to ensure Jordan's future stability.

Hussein is the Middle East's longest ruling monarch; he has been on the throne 46 years. He is known as a force for moderation in the volatile Middle East and, after Jordan's 1994 peace with Israel, he has pushed for a broader regional peace.

In Washington, President Clinton urged prayers for the king who had helped forge the Wye River peace accord between Israel and the Palestinians in October.

"I ask you to pray for our King Hussein, a wonderful human being, a champion of peace who, I promise you today, is fighting for his life mostly so he can continue to fight for peace," Clinton said.

Senate agrees to televise Lewinsky trial deposition

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Trial-weary senators moved briskly yesterday to wrap up President Clinton's impeachment proceedings, voting to permit the showing of portions of Monica Lewinsky's videotaped deposition after dealing a bipartisan brush-off to a personal appearance.

Parts of her recorded deposition are to be played at the nationally televised trial session on Saturday. As lawmakers settled that issue, Republicans retreated from their plan to find Clinton guilty of wrongdoing without removing him from office.

With those decisions, the senators moved to bring the trial to a conclusion by the end of next week.

"I do think it's time we get to a vote and we move on" to other issues, said Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss.

Clinton's acquittal is assured on the charges of perjury and obstruction of justice, which stem from his efforts to conceal a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky.

At the White House, press secretary Joe Lockhart said in a written statement: "Today's vote rejecting the House managers' request for live witnesses indicates the Senate appears ready to bring this trial to a conclusion."

Judy Smith, a spokeswoman for Ms. Lewinsky, said the former White House intern "and her family are pleased that she does not have to go through the painful and humiliating ordeal of having to testify on the floor of the Senate."

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

The two faces
The masslive.com camera scans the scene, while an unknown woman enjoys her meal at Antonio's.

Valentine's Day
is just around the corner

Let them know how special they really are to you...

for the mere price of ten cents a word you can give the one you love something to cherish forever..

Their very own Collegian Classified from you

... won't you look good. Of course you will, as long as you get your message in by the deadline of Tuesday Feb.9th.

— The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian —

Victory on V–Day

The cold weather has the girls in sweatshirts and baggy pants, the basketball team is 9–11, and there is still no smoking in the bars. Yes, it's a tough time of year to be a guy at UMass, but the toughest challenge has yet to come. The nemesis of all men will be upon us in only a week, and, as usual, Valentine's Day will be taking no prisoners.

Maybe you think that I'm being a little harsh. V–Day is a time to celebrate your feelings for a future, new, or long–time significant other. Well, that's what the cardmakers say (and yes, I know that it is possible to get into this spirit and have a wonderful time with someone you care about). But Valentine's Day can also mean the end of anything you two have going for you. The wrong plans, gift, or even comment, could leave you looking like an obsessive psycho– path or an insensitive jackass. These pitfalls and perils can be avoided, however, with a little–careful planning and by following a few special guidelines.

James Bachman

For starters, let's discuss the major no–no's of this festive occasion. First of all, if you are thinking of buying your girlfriend those infomercial silk roses that are on television 27 times a day, put the paper down right now, because you are beyond my help. Fresh flowers are a relatively cheap way of expressing your feelings, and they are special because of their natural look and fragrance. No substitutes.

Let's move on to another major V–Day blooper, the dinner. Taking her to her favorite restaurant can run up bonus points for you, as long as you plan ahead. If you wait till next week to make reservations, however, the last conversation you two ever have will end in, "But honey, KFC has a really nice buffet."

So call today, and save yourself some agony (and a stomachache).

While researching for this column, the two biggest no–no's from those polled were anything but unusual. Perfume and lingerie led the list with flying colors. Perfume bottles never end; I still have cologne from ninth grade. So buying a bottle of something she already has is a useless gift that will most likely last a lot longer than you will. Buying a different scent is an even worse idea because if she wanted to smell like that, she would. Stay out of the perfume aisle, and while you're at it, bypass the underwear section as well. Lingerie is a gift for you, not her. If she wants sexy panties or a new bra, you are better off leaving the shopping up to her. All the buttons, zippers and see–through material in the world will mean nothing if she doesn't wear it, so let this one go.

Really, you just need to use your head. Think before you buy. Edible underwear may seem like a great surprise at first, but wrapping your significant other up in an oversized Fruit Roll–up may need some pre–discussion. Also, anything you can get in the back of Spencer Gifts is a risk. You shouldn't necessarily avoid this option, but if you choose it, you're on your own.

So what can you do? The old stand–bys are still good starters. Candy, balloons, and teddy bears can all be positive if you don't go overboard. No one needs the 4–foot–tall $70 box of candy from CVS. Jewelry has also always been an expensive alternative which is almost never turned down if you have the cash. My suggestion though is for you to do something for her.

Take her out for a night of things she wants to do. Keep your gifts simple and close to home. Another idea is to give her a really good framed picture of the two of you. Then maybe make her a dinner with her favorite bottle of wine, followed by an evening of doing something that she likes. Maybe go to a show, out for a drink or just stay at home and talk over a bottle of wine and a slow massage.

Valentine's Day doesn't have to be a "grand event" to be successful, only a meaningful one. So give yourself some time this weekend to plan and you, too, can survive this precarious yet fulfilling holiday.

James Bachman is a UMass student.

The age of excess

I am a staunch supporter of technology. I relax by meandering amidst the internet, I shave using an electric razor, and I listen to digitally recorded music. Technology is such an influential factor in my life that I dread its absence. However, nothing is without flaw and technology is not exempt from this notion. The bane of technology, caller ID, is the black sheep of the digital family.

Bill Larkin

I despise this wretched innovation, a tool which purportedly improves communication by allowing the owner of the caller ID box to identify the source of an incoming call. A small digital screen displays for the user both the phone number and the listed name of the caller, allowing such a user to screen calls. It is the scourge of humanity, the epitome of shallowness and immaturity. Instead of improving communication between individuals, this crutch distances men and women everywhere. It encourages machine to replace man. In my opinion, caller ID is nothing more than an usurious attempt by the phone company to extort more from the peons we as a society have become, and we would do well not to fatten the phone lords any further.

This crutch fetters us to our own insecurities. Mankind in general has become more introverted over the years, preferring the shelter of its own solace to the brazenness of confrontation. I find it masochistically amusing to track the fall of humanity. Starting with Adam and Eve, men and women have been punished with the perpetuation of their insecurities. We cannot expect our children to grow, to become closer as a community, as they will only follow that shallow path which we their parents have lain for them.

Has this introversion crescendoed to the point where we are afraid to pick up the phone? A faceless foe? Have we become so afraid of each other that our backbones have been rendered impotent against confrontation? I readily admit that I, too, am a victim of this all–encompassing malaise which has gripped the American populace. However, my hypocrisy aside, I choose to blame the tool, not the user, for this rot. Perhaps we might not be so afraid of each other were not we surrounded by such detrimental aids. Perhaps without these symbiotes, we as a people might be able to move out from the darkness, the shadows that ravage our confidence.

Defenders of the beast claim that caller ID is a great aegis — it shields them from the taunt of the telemarketer and the spleen of the stalker. In an age where nearly everyone has access to your phone number, it is a simple matter to acquire one's telephone information for myriad questionable purposes. Some people say that such a sieve is a great means to avoid such nonsense. But I say, to hell with Machiavelli. To hell with you, if you lack the temperance to dismiss the telemarketer. To hell with you if you cannot hang up on the prankster. And to hell with you if you cannot present those of an obsessed mind with the stark reality of rejection. Stalkers and pranksters will not stop at the mere annoyance of ignorance. Rather, it will only compel their obsessions further toward the brink which they are so rapidly approaching. And what Herculean task is it to unlist your number, or to hang up the phone? Please put the indolence away, America. Get off your lax behinds and embrace effort. You remember effort, labor which places a toll upon the body yet yields unparalleled feelings of confidence and closure. I do believe it was that same hard work that made America the dominant force it is today. And it is that same lack of hard work which is destroying the memories of our ancestry.

I am what some might deem a paranoid individual. I lament what others think about me, what reactions my presence might stir. Were you so schizophrenic, would you want to be ignored by some party who held the object of your affections? Tell me, what reaction would that crudity elicit from your insabilities? Positive? I truly think not. Would you want your honor trampled upon? I certainly abhor the notion. If anything, I would think that ignoring someone who is interested in your company, romantic or platonic regardless, would drive them to further frustration. Frustration is not the emotion you want resting atop the hierarchy of feelings for the disturbed or the needy. A person so inflicted does retreat upon first casualty. Instead, seeking to fill that void within, they would only irritate you further, and thus the grief of both parties is continually perpetuated.

We all really need to stop running. No one can run forever and it never improves the obviously wretched situations with which we are faced. Confronting problems is the key to dealing with them, and hiding from your fear or hiding from yourself only digs the hole further; it only turns the hilt more. If we faced conflict instead of cowering among the shadows, perhaps both this article and this innovation would be unnecessary.

The caller is not the only victim in this calamity. The user of the caller ID box faces a certain mystery element. In that the user of the box often answers calls with something to the extent of "Hello, (insert name here)?". Not only is this terribly vexing, but it could lead to several problems. Perhaps you might have a friend with whom you are extremely comfortable. You know the type of relationship to which I refer. Everyone has that friend whom you greet with "Hey, (insert expletive here)." Now imagine that someone at your friend's residence calls and you greet the person with that same discourse, only to discover that it is the parent or younger sibling of said friend. Not an optimal situation for most people. Is all this subterfuge productive? Do we really need to be suave and debonair? Listen Odysseus, take your wile and your cunning and turn it into something useful. Until then, please use some tact and greet me in the traditional manner, or things might get drastic. I might even call you and hang up.

Bill Larkin is a UMass student.

Have something to say? Then write for Ed/Op!!

The true soldiers

"If feelings could kill, it would have been a blood bath," said my friend and former teacher who had been provoked in an unanticipated confrontation. Richard is a practicing clinical psychologist, as well as a highly accomplished martial artist and a pioneer in emerging human technologies. A number of years ago, he was at Ft. Devens as a member of a team engaged to instruct two detachments of U.S. Special Forces in Aikido — meditation and techniques of biofeedback. Richard was a U.S. Marine during the '60s.

He described a weekend party at the home of acquaintances in Amherst. The people at the party were professionals, who shared his liberal sympathies and were actively engaged in developing their spiritual lives. It should have been a pleasant break.

When he was asked what he was doing in Massachusetts, he told them and was instantly rebuffed. The mere mention of the Army brought hard glares, and caused backs to be turned towards him. One lady stomped her foot, turned abruptly on her heels and marched away. They natively disregarded him as a visitor from the wrong planet.

After a while, he wandered into a large study, where he found a group discussing politics and foreign policy. Sitting quietly in a corner was a bearded professor from one of the colleges, who suddenly perked up when Richard entered the room. He said, "I've worked for the peace movement since 1970 and I believe the military should be abolished because it's impossible to change the military mind!"

A younger man attempted gently to counter this imbecility by saying, "It seems impractical and improbable that we could do altogether without a military." "There can be no peace as long as there's the military mind!" The old fellow bellowed at the top of his lungs. "No peace, whatsoever!"

His voice had become shrill and threatening. In Richard's words: "He's red in the face, jabbing his finger at his opponent's throat. The room becomes still. People begin studying their shoes. The younger man looks crushed and his eyes are glazed with humiliation. The 'peace advocate' calmly sits back and resumes his professorial airs."

Martin Reddy

When I think of the young people I knew who never lived to be 21, who gave all that they had and never came home from Vietnam and the incident cast a cloud over the entire Americal Division. The source of his hearsay was lying. And as for his pathology, I'm not even going to guess. Of course, bud, if you have evidence of a crime that has not been prosecuted, there is no statute of limitations on murder.

Killing and brutalizing civilians was our enemy's specialty.

I have my own problems with U.S. policy (or lack of it) with regard to the Republic of Vietnam during 1961–1975. I also have a problem with the reluctance of our "gallant allies" to fight their own war.

No, we do not train "death squads" or torturers. The Inquisition left a far greater legacy south of the border than we could ever approximate.

Conscientious objectors in this country have always been excused military service, and rightfully so. Especially admirable are those who have served voluntarily in noncombatant capacities. For every individual that beat the draft through chicanery, however, there was someone else who had to take his place. The Selective Service System always made its quota. "Draft resisters" were just afraid they were going to have to take showers with other guys.

Platoon was a crock. *M*A*S*H* is a TV show that bears no resemblance to the Army or to military medicine. The crackpot depictions that purport to satirize the "military mind" remind me more of personalities at this university than anything I ever saw in the Army.

The "military mind." Yeah, right. You really should cut down on your TV, bud. I would sooner trust the integrity of a West Pointer any day.

(Excerpt from In Search of the Warrior Spirit by Richard S. Heckler used with permission.)

Martin Reddy is a Collegian columnist.

Notes From CC Basement

The basement (i.e., the Collegian) is an interesting place to work. My first crazy but joyous experience of the semester occurred while being stuck in the basement without technology during the Super Bowl. Meanwhile, on–campus students no longer have to go to the Textbook Annex to get books, you can order them from the Annex online instead.

To illustrate how a normal non–technological day works here at the Collegian, let me describe to you Super Bowl Sunday.

It began as a normal day. I couldn't get motivated to go to work. But I knew that there was a Board of Editors meeting, which I was missing, and despite my efforts to inform my colleagues as to my whereabouts, the call wasn't allowed to go through. Apparently the walls are too thick in the basement.

When the day finally began, I started writing a story, editing other stories, and doing layout for Monday's paper. Let me say that we should all have laptops here in the basement for occassions like the Super Bowl, when every sports writer is looking to get out of here early.

Paul Teves

Needless to say, we don't have laptops, and all of the reporters had to wait in line for our slow–ass, broken down computers, which were probably being used by someone else at the time they needed them.

The news room consists of 10 1987 TTX dinosaur computers (American Computers Innovators); three of which don't work at all. There are also four stations where there are just miscellaneous computer parts where computers should be.

Then we move on to the reporter covering mens hoop that day, who is forced to watch the game on television, and obtain quotes in a car in the parking garage because WHMP doesn't come in clearly down in the basement. For all intents and purposes, the Collegian newsroom is a bomb shelter.

Meanwhile, all of these mishaps slowed the process down, not allowing me to make it to any Super Bowl party on time.

The most advanced tool used that day was the Internet. We received some high quality pictures from the Texas/UMass game at Texas, but as you might imagine, even this seemingly good thing turned out bad for me. Why? Because, of the remaining 10 people down in the basement at 6:20 p.m. on Sunday, two cared about the Super Bowl.

Later on in the evening, with a little more then four minutes remaining till halftime, I was finished with yet another layout, down in Backwards–ville. I asked the remaining people if they could do me a favor: when 10:30 p.m. rolls around, pull a Super Bowl story from the Associated Press computer. For those of you who might have read about the Australian Open on the back page of Monday's sports section, you already know that there was no Super Bowl story.

Yes, the antique computer that serves as our AP terminal froze at the worst possible time, and we never received a story about the Super Bowl or anything else for that matter.

Yeah, it's tough, but you know what? Every day we overcome these obstacles and technological limitations and put out a quality product. We have always done that and look forward to providing this snow–infested campus with productive information, "daily."

This being the first in the return of the "Notes from the Campus Center Basement" series, I thought that I would give you an idea of what actually goes on here on a day to day basis.

Now you know, so stop complaining. Hopefully you enjoy reading the Collegian as much I do. And to my shady friends and seniors at the Collegian, enjoy putting it together.

Paul Teves is a Collegian columnist.

WRITE FOR ED-OP! Like Bill? Then come and find him to WRITE for Ed-Op WRITE FOR ED-OP!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylarski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Flalkow Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Presten Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independents from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Strangefolk grooves in Noho

Pearl St. crowd enticed by band's sweet jams

COURTESY MAMMOTH RECORDS

Groove band Strangefolk entertained the Pearl St. crowd Wednesday night.

By Tom Sadlowski
Collegian Staff

STRANGEFOLK
Pearl Street Nightclub
Feb. 3

NORTHAMPTON — New England's rising groove band sensation, Strangefolk, performed this past Wednesday night in front of a sweet–smelling capacity crowd. The attentive audience danced to every beat and welcomed every jam.

The band quickly excited their listeners when they opened up with "Rather Go Fishin'," and converted the stage into a mystical place. Gordon Stone joined the show and enriched the guitar wizardry with the pedal steel.

As Stone switched to his banjo, lead singer Reid Genauer brought his amazing vocals into "Otis." "Otis," off of Strangefolk's Mammoth debut, Weightless In Waser, is a crafty cut, but even more splendid in concert.

The band's signature song, "Lines and Circles," kept the music flowing as the crowd joyfully joined in.

"Westerly" broke out the second set after a brief intermission only to arouse the crowd to bounce around.

"Furnace" was powered by Jon Trafton's guitar playing before closing the second set.

Strangefolk emerged again for a final encore and closed with a brilliant jam to end the festivities, fully satisfying their audience while at the same time leaving them wanting more.

Strangefolk, hailing from Burlington, VT and featuring University of Vermont graduates, has been gaining wide appeal throughout the country. Their first major label release, Weightless in Water, shines with poetic lyrics and catchy melodies. But the key to the band's success is their ability to captivate audiences on stage, aided by a devoted fan base that keeps growing and growing. Their latest performance at Pearl St. was no exception, filled with plenty of hardcore fans but also some who were just getting their first taste.

Stone will entertain Pearl Street Nightclub again this coming Saturday night when he opens for Max Creek, while Strangefolk heads west. The Virginia college marvel, the Pat McGee Band, is downstairs on Thursday.

Bowker to host annual jazz show

By Edgar A. Barros
Collegian Staff

The Magic Jazz Triangle Concert Series, in its 10th season, presents "Reggie Workman's African–American Legacy Project," in Bowker Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts Tomorrow, Feb. 5, 1999 at 8 p.m. Reggie Workman will present a 20–piece orchestra in new arrangements of John Coltrane's Africa/Brass Session, as well as original material written by Workman and other members of the orchestra. The Pamela Baskin–Watson Singers will perform with them.

Tomorrow's performers will include some of the most successful businessmen in mainstream music. The orchestra organizer is also accomplished musician such as bass player Vincent Chancey, Tom Varner, fitness Osseous Khaye Edwards, Pheeroan Hinginbe, Dean Bowman, Ronnie Burrage and the musical director, Charles Tolliver.

At the age of 62 Mr. Workman, a Philadelphia native, has been involved in the music industry for over 40 years. Between the years of 1959 and 1969, Workman recorded twenty–four albums with many jazz greats such as Art Blakey, Lee Morgan, Booker Little, Elvin Jones, Freddie Hubbard, Wayne Shorter, John Coltrane and many others.

Workman has not allowed "Grandfather Time" to halt his journey as a music activist. In the present past he has combined with saxophonists David Murray, Chico Freeman and Oliver Lake.

Workman also takes part in the field of education. He has taught at the Manhattan School of Music in New York as an Artist–in–Residence and Program Coordinator for over 10 years.

The 1999 Magic Jazz Triangle Series will kick off with one of the most accomplished in the business.

The Magic Jazz Triangle Series is a production of WMUA and Residential Arts.

Tickets are free for students and $8 for the general public. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Fine Arts Box Office and will also be available at the door. For more information call the Fine Arts Concert Box Office at 545–2511 or E–mail us at [illegible]

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0080

Reason №2 why you should take our GRE course.
You'll score more...
2 Our students improve an average of 212 points. And they significantly out-score students who took that other course.
800-2-REVIEW www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

DESIGN SUPPLY ART STUDIO SUPPLIES AT THE TOWN COMMON 65 SO. PLEASANT STREET AMHERST, MA 01002
FREE DISCOUNT CARD WITH THIS COUPON
413-253-5592

"Twenty years from now you will be more disappointed by the things that you didn't do than by the ones you did do." —Mark Twain
Consider the Peace Corps
Information Tables
2/8/99 - 2/10/99
Campus Center
10 am - 2 pm
Information Meeting
Wednesday, February 10
Campus Center, Room 905
7 pm
APPLY BY FEBRUARY 26 TO LEAVE AFTER GRADUATION
Peace Corps 800-424-8580, option 1
www.peace corps.gov

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
By Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Part Time Evening Classes start February 8, 1999
Call UMASS Continuing Education at: 545-0474

Now Open....The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
UltimateFitness THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Featuring the latest in Fitness Training & Equipment
"Everything You Need in a Gym and More!"
• Certified Personal Trainers
• Fitness Testing & Programming
• Nutritional Consultation
• Tanning
• Sauna
• Juice Bar & Supplements
•Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Step
-Boot Camp
-and many more
Located in the Campus Plaza next to Liquors 44.
For more information call 253-7571
Cardiovascular Equipment
• Stairmasters
• Precor Treadmills
• Lifecycle Recumbent Bikes
• Lifecycle Upright Bikes
• Precor Crosstrainers
State-of-the-Art Strength Training Equipment
• Bodymasters & Icarian Free Weights
• Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

What's Left SALE!
up to 75% off Winter
ZANA
Spring St Williamstown

Kickin' brass in recital hall

By Imogen Lillywhite
Collegian Correspondent

WHERE DOES MUSIC COME FROM?
Bezanson Recital Hall
Feb. 2

Anyone who has played in any orchestral section besides the brass might think that sitting in an audience largely consisting of brass players watching other brass players doing their thing sounds like their worst nightmare. Not so: if there's one thing I learned at Tuesday night's recital in Bezanson, it is that brass players are people too. Of course there aren't really such petty rivalries among different orchestral sections: musicians are dedicated and passionate people who care little for such stereotypes and foolishness.

Tuesday's concert featured faculty members Laura Klock, horn; David Sporny, trombone; and Nadine Shank on piano. Sporny opened with a Handel concerto in F minor transcribed for trombone and piano by Robert Marsteller. It was pleasant to hear such a mellow, rich sound coming from the trombone instead of the overbearing tone that often prevails in orchestras and bands.

The mood of the first half moved abruptly from the baroque era to the 20th century with Bernhard Heiden's Sonata for Horn and Piano. Each of the three movements of this piece was in a moderate tempo which I think was better- suited to the middle register brass instrument than the Allegri of the preceding concerto. The first half closed with T. J. Anderson, Jr.'s "Minstrel Man" for solo trombone, bass drum and cymbal, all played by one musician. This is a guaranteed crowd-pleaser if executed correctly — which it was — with all the lewd descending glissandos and rasping low notes firmly in place.

The second half began with British composer Peter Maxwell Davies' "Sea Eagle for Solo Horn." This was followed by the highlight of the concert for me, which was an exquisite, lilting Andante for Horn and Piano by Richard Strauss. The recital drew to a close with Five Short Duos for Horn and Trombone by Verne Reynolds.

Collegian Graphics is HIRING

UM swimmers hoping to break out of slump against Fordham

By Jimmy Chen
Collegian Staff

It was supposed to be a glorious afternoon for senior Brian Wisniewski. It was senior day, the occasion for he and his fellow seniors to be proud of their accomplishments. Instead, only one was able to swim and stand beside him as UMass fell to Rutgers, 121–114, in his last home meet of the season and his career. So, after grabbing the "meaningless" victory in the 400-yard free relay, he stayed in the pool and refused to leave like everyone else. He might have been staying for the purpose of warming down, but many thought otherwise.

What happened? What happened to the UMass swimming program? They forget the meaning of the word loss for almost a year and a half, but when they finally did remember, they didn't seem to be able to get out. Managing only one victory in the past two months, UMass has gone from the top to the bottom.

"It has been a tough year. I've never have a season like this," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said.

After three quick wins early in the season, the Minutemen have been struggling ever since the disastrous weekend in New York on Nov. 20. But UMass showed signs of improvement after beating UConn on Jan. 23. Yet it didn't take long before the Minutemen fell again, by losing to Rutgers.

"Using the expression from Bruiser after they [the men's hoop team] lost to UConn, we just don't have enough bullets in the gun," Yarworth said. "We got too many kids who either have dropped out or who have injuries. We gave it all we could."

The Minutemen will have their final meet of the season coming up as they head to Fordham for the 1 p.m. meet tomorrow. UMass holds a 53-0 all-time advantage over the Rams, and defeated them in Amherst last season by a score of 207–92.

Despite UMass's 4–3 dual season record, the Minutemen still have a chance. In fact, the Minutemen still have a lot of gas in the tank.

Wisniewski has been phenomenal in recent meets and will continue to dominate.

Junior Ed Hefferon, one of the best divers in UMass history, has already qualified for NCAAs and is looking to be the big factor in any of UMass' successes.

Sophomore standouts Billy Brown and Chris Arsenault have been there for UMass the whole season. They will bring experience and depth for the young UMass team.

Coming off of injury are seniors B.J. Brannan, last year's All–Atlantic 10 Conference selection, and Geoff Gear [Junior Stephen Pryor snagged the season high on the still rings with a score of 9.875. Pryor broke the school all-around record with an amazing 57.825, beating the record that he had set just a week before.

With all of this in mind, the team has nothing to fear. Roy Johnson, who has been head coach of the Minutemen since 1978, has more victories under his belt than any other coach in UMass gymnastics history. He hopes to add many more wins to his current 156, and with help from assistant coach Steve Clancy, Johnson is determined to take his boys to the top.

Disappointed with their abruptly-ended season last year, UMass is gung-ho about shining at NCAA Regionals and maybe even Nationals.

"I think that this weekend is a good chance for us to have a good meet and get some high scores," said sophomore Michael Alexander. "Our team is looking stronger and stronger everyday, and this weekend will hopefully prove it. Last year, the underdog Illinois performed well at Regionals and surprised everyone with an appearance at Nationals, and we have the potential to do the same."

This year, UMass has both experienced veterans and several rookies on its team, and it has the potential to take the University into uncharted waters. The team is learning more difficult skills, cleaner routines, and sophomore Bryan McNulty even performs a tumbling move that has never been done before in collegiate gymnastics — a three-and-one-half twisting somersault. Needless to say, the Minutemen have some surprises for their competitors this season, and on Sunday, Springfield will experience this firsthand.

If this meet is a repeat of last year's performance, the gym team will definitely be among the top three in the nation.

The Minutemen will be in action on Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Blake Arena in Springfield.

Lead us there...
Now.

First Deadline is
February 22, 1999.

Don't miss your chance to join the proud ranks of the national corps of units and inspire the next generation of recent college graduates of all academic majors who commit two years to rebuild America's most disadvantaged rural and urban public schools. Our first deadline is approaching fast. Learn more about the Corps and/or an application, call us at the number listed below, visit our website or stop by your nearest Peace Corps service office.

FOR
1-800-832-1230 www.peacecorps.gov

UM men to face Springfield College

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

After a week's worth of rest, the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team will head out to Springfield this Sunday for its sixth meet of the season. The Minutemen will face off with the Springfield Pride once again, but have little to fear. Last year, UMass easily crushed Springfield, with a score of 228.15–207.3.

The Springfield battle last year brought about some of the highest scores of the season for the Minutemen. With their all-time high score of 228.15, the squad just missed NCAA Regionals by a couple of points. The team earned its season bests on rings (38.8), vault (38.05), and parallel bars (37.85). In addition to the top team scores, some of the athletes took home the blue ribbon on individual events.

Recent graduate Michael Sangirardi took the top score on vault with a 9.650 and senior Stephen Pryor snagged the season high on the still rings with a score of 9.875. Pryor broke the school all-around record

LAUREN KOSEY / COLLEGIAN

The mens gymnastics team gets set to travel to Springfield College, where they will attempt to add a fourth win to their already impressive 3–1 mark.

Boston set to go

Pitino has C's ready to compete

Rarely does a rookie have the look that inspires immediate confidence. Tim Duncan had it, and Stephon Marbury before him. It is starting to look more and more like Paul Pierce may have the look. While most rookies have to go through a period of growing pains before being ready for the pro game, Pierce's performance against Toronto last Friday (24 points, 12 boards, five assists, five steals) demonstrated well-polished skills. He is confident and competent, and seems completely undaunted by the task of starting the abbreviated 1999 season as Rick Pitino's starting small forward.

Going into tomorrow night's regular season opener, against the Toronto Raptors, the Celtics looks like a team ready to win. Acquisition Antoine Walker is signed for the long term and is coming off an impressive all-star season. Ron Mercer, last year's impressive rookie, showed up at camp in "Coach P shape," which is no small task considering all the i.v. treatments players were receiving during last year's training camp. Kenny Anderson is healthy, and Tony Battie is in fold.

Then there's Pierce. After being projected as a top three pick by many analysts, the Celtics rookie plunged to number 10 as team after team filled their needs with "more athletic" players. Whether it was Vince Carter or Larry Hughes, teams went for high-flying players who they felt could play "above the rim."

Unfortunately for them, most of the game is played beneath the rim, and while Pierce may not be able to jump quite as high as his fellow draftees, he is quickly showing that his overall skills may be unmatched by any of last year's crop of collegiate players. Pierce gives the Celtics what Pitino calls "NBA talent" at four of their starting five positions.

With Anderson and Mercer, along with the ever-improving Dana Barros in the backcourt, the Celtics should upgrade their guard play from inconsistent to good, with Mercer offering an occasional taste of "amazing" or "unstoppable." Pair this with the strong forward presences of Pierce and Walker, and the C's ought to be able to score on just about anybody this year. Defense, on the other hand, might be another matter

Kenny Anderson, a phenomenal offensive player, seems to specialize in the ole' defense of the Spanish bullfighting, and Pierce and Walker are undersized at their respective positions. In the starting five, Mercer alone could be called a solid defender. Wait, we're forgetting something. Oh yes, that would be the center position.

The Celtics' five spot is a collection of over-achieving, unpolished athletes. Andrew DeClerq returns to the fold as the requisite footie-ball-chasing madman. Battie, last year's fifth pick in the draft, is too small for half court play, but a fantastic athlete well suited to Pitino's running game. Dwayne Schzinus is a seven-footer with some serious bulk and Eric Reilly is likewise a big body. If Pitino can keep this multi-headed center healthy, he should have himself a serviceable center-by-committee.

Pitino has shown us one thing; it's that he's capable of teaching old dogs new tricks. And the group of men occupying the Celtics five spot right now are by no means ancient. All are young and, with Pitino's tutelage, at least one can be expected to step up. After all, who thought DeClerq would even be half as solid as he was last year?

The last feature of this year's Celtics team is the press squad. Toss Bruce Bowen, Barros, Walter McCarty, and Greg Minor on the court, along with Battie or Declerq, and you've got a squad that's going to press, defend, dive, scrap and run. While most teams feature seven players, Pitino believes in playing 10. The result should be an exhausted fourth-quarter opponent along with a bench that is deep with genuine NBA game experience.

One of the keys for "Gang Green" this year is to get Walker off the press team. Walker is a smart ball player, and until Pitino gets an entire training camp to teach his new players his scheme, Walker is probably the best at understanding the dynamics of the Pitino press. Looking at last year's numbers, Walker's minutes would be high for any NBA team, but the forty-plus he put in for the running Celtics last year was simply insanity. They say Walker loafs it in half-court defense, but the guy is simply pacing himself. If he's fresh all game, he becomes an infinitely more dangerous weapon.

Opponents of the Celtics this year can expect to be hit with a one-two punch of scoring and pressing. Playing the C's leaves teams in a quandary; you have to leave your starters in if you want to break the press; but if you do, they will have nothing left in the forth quarter as Mercer, Walker and Pierce are scoring at will. The Celtics will have weaknesses. If opponents can get them in the half-court game, they'll score on them. They still lack veteran leadership outside of Anderson.

Despite these deficiencies, the one word opponents will use in describing what playing the Celtics this year will be like is "unpleasant." They will be fun to watch, and if they get a couple of breaks, they could make some trouble in the playoffs.

For fans who have witnessed the early retirement of Larry Bird, the deaths of Reggie Lewis and Len Bias, and the stunning ineptitude of M.L. Carr, this team will be pure gravy; no real expectations, but an optimism that hasn't been seen in New England sports since the Tuna. The Knicks and the Pacers may be the favorites in the East, but depend on the C's to make things interesting.

Jason Owens is a UMass student.

Dettloff and Co. look to dive in against Fordham

By Lawrence Redford
Collegian Correspondent

As the weekend approaches, the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team prepares for their last meet of the regular season. UMass (8–2) will take on the Fordham Lady Rams (6–5) this weekend in the Bronx, N.Y.

Coming off a lopsided victory over Rutgers (150–93) in which the Minutewomen took an astounding 10 of 13 events, they are looking forward to a similar win over Fordham.

UMass has held the upper hand in previous meetings with the Lady Rams, holding a perfect 3–0 advantage. Last year the Minutewomen blew Fordham out of the water, winning 193–106, in Amherst. This year will apparently follow suit, with solid performances from virtually everyone in last week's meet. The Minutewomen appear focused for the task at hand.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Anne Dettloff

The Lady Rams will be lead by head coach Steve Potskian who has compiled a 6–5 record with Fordham this season. Fordham most recently went head-to-head with an average LaSalle team whose record stands at 4–4. This was a meet in which LaSalle won by a landslide 145–90.

With Fordham losing to mediocre teams, they will probably need a record-setting performance this weekend. UMass will be 9–2 and poised for the Atlantic 10 Championships (Feb. 18–20 in Buffalo).

Bob Newcomb and the UMass team will be focused on Fordham this weekend. The coach will have his team positioned for a repeat of last year's lopsided victory over Fordham.

Duplicating last season's meet looks to be given. UMass returns virtually the same team as last year. The greatest difference between this and last year's team is the major contribution of the underclassmen, especially freshmen phenomenon Anne Dettloff who has been a key part in the 1998–1999 team's success. During last week's meet versus Rutgers, Dettloff broke the UMass freshman, varsity, and pool records in the 1,000 yard free (10:20.41). In addition, Dettloff holds this year's top times for the Minutewomen in every freestyle event with the exception of the 50; Julie Dragon currently holds that mark with a time of 24.85.

Anything less than a victory against Fordham would be a disappointment for the Minutewomen. As they prepare for the Atlantic 10 Championship, they look to improve upon last year's performance. At the A-10 Championship last season, the Minutewomen finished fourth; due to the improvements, the indications are that they will improve upon that.

Minutewomen Notes:

The UMass diving squad looks to carry over on an excellent performance from last weekend. Robin Velona and Kim Schadt won the one-meter dive (231.60) and the three- meter dives (237.30) respectively.

UM track looks to repeat at URI

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

Ladies and Gentlemen, start your engines.

A mere six days after battling with rival UNH for the top spot at a quad-meet in Durham, NH, the University of Massachusetts's men's indoor track team will face off with them once again, this time in Kingston, Rhode Island.

The quad meet, which also features the University of Rhode Island and Rider, has all the makings of a tight race. However, all the battling between the two rivals may be for the No. 2 spot, as host URI rides as the favorite. Head Coach Ken O'Brien realizes the circumstance at hand.

"Entering this meet, Rhode Island is the better team. Last year at this meet they won convincingly, and this year they bring a stronger team. We should fight with UNH for second or third place," O'Brien said.

Fight is an understatement. Although the Minutemen seemed to enjoy a comfortable lead when all was said and done last week, things get a lot closer when the stats are broken down. UMass out-paced UNH in first place points, but had only a 15–9 advantage in second place points. O'Brien recognizes what helped his team last week, and has addressed that issue.

"Last week we jumped out to an early lead, leading 15–4 after two events, thanks in great part to [Vic] Morency and [B.J.] Cardoza who performed well in the weight throws. But UNH nibbled away at that lead for the body of the meet. I expect the same thing to happen this week," O'Brien said.

Also of note is the fact that UMass put in 19 season-best performances last week.

"It will take an additional 18–20 this week to place well again," O'Brien said.

Look for those performances to come from all sides of the team, and not just an event or two. Senior Tom Toye will have to match or better his first place time from last week in the 200 meters, which he took in a time of 22.84. Sophomore Marc Sylvander won the 400 meters in a time of 51.22, while senior Dan LeBoeuf stole the 800 meters in a time of 1:57.48. Look for senior Andre Roach to again perform well in the triple jump, where he placed first last week with a mark of 45-feet-8-inches.

Despite all the "big names" the Minutemen will bring with them to Kingston, the key to the puzzle may be freshman Wes Shaw. Although his time at UMass has been short, his presence has been felt. At the UNH quad-meet he won the high jump (6-feet-4-inches) and placed second in the pole vault (14-feet). It will take more than just these individuals to succeed, however.

"We have to put in a maximum effort across the board" O'Brien said. "That's something you want to get into the habit of."

UM to take on URI

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

On Saturday, the Massachusetts women's track and field team will travel to Kingston, R.I. for a quad meet between the Rams of Rhode Island, the Crusaders of Holy Cross and Rider University. UMass looks to be hitting on all cylinders just at the opportune time with the New England Championships and the ECAC Championships on the horizon.

The final preparations are being put into effect with hopes of glory in the big meets. With this in mind, the Minutewomen would be ill-advised to overlook this week's field of more-than-worthy competitors.

UMass will be looking for another strong performance from post-grad Rose Bryan. Bryan has been the most consistent of the tracksters this season and will undoubtedly continue on her stellar campaign. She won the Atlantic 10 Performer of the Week for the week of Jan. 25, with her finishes at the New England Challenge Cup Finals. Bryan has been a model of consistency this season.

Nicole Way will also be looked upon to lead the team to victory. The efforts she has put forth in the last two meets (Terrier Classic and the New England Challenge Cup Finals) have been outstanding. Way holds UMass' top times in the 800-meter, the 1,000-meter and the mile.

Andrea Comeau, who has shown signs of greatness lately will have to continue her dominance. She brings to the table the best of both worlds, solid ability in both track and field events. She has qualified for the New Englands in the 55-meter-high hurdles and also holds the school record in the high jump (5'09.25") and the pentathlon (3658 points) which makes her eligible for the New Englands as well as the ECAC's.

Shelandra Irish, has also had a solid campaign thus far, collecting top times in both the 55-meter dash and the 200-meters both which qualified her for New England's). Her performances have gotten better as the season has progressed and she will have to stay in top form to contend in this meet.

The Minutewomen have qualified 25 competitors for the New England meet, which will be held the following week. This will be their final tune-up and last chance to accomplish the goal of 20 qualifiers set by coach Julie LaFreniere at the outset of the season.

Kristin Cisowski, Sally Hirsch, Melissa Henderson, Tracy Meager, Johanna Lelke Taneka Miller, Abby Ruhino Givelle Nicholas, Shannon Hamilton and Carole LaPlante will be using this as a warm-up for the New Englands, where they hope to improve on their season best efforts.

javaticker.com
with bankinvestor.com

Chat room, up-to-date financial news and information, customizable Java ticker and home page, searchable bank prospectus database.

Visit www.javaticker.com today!

summer session hawai'i
6 weeks, 6 credits, about $2,700 (in-state tuition); room & board, books and airfare
Term 1: May 24-July 2 • Term 2: July 7-August 13
www.outreach.hawaii.edu • toll-free 1 (800) 862-6628
University of Hawai'i at Mānoa, Summer Session

Queer Peer Education
Credit and volunteer oppotunities available
JOIN Queer Peer Education
HELP FIGHT: AIDS BREAST EATING CHEMICAL CANCER DISORDERS DEPENDANCY.
For more info call 577-5252 & ask for Lauri

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game& System Rentals
2 movies $2 w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent Video Games
Best Selection in Town
9 E.Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst • 549-4505

There's a whole world out there!
Explore it with Contiki-
The #1 tour for 18-35 year olds
Cheap tickets Great advice Nice people
Boston/Sydney $1407
Boston/Nairobi $955
Newark/Quito $290
New York/San Juan $255
Boston/Paris $344
Council Travel
Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone: 413-256-1261

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst • 256-0080

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.
25 n pleasant st amherst 256.0733
145 main st northampton 586.0155

FELD ENTERTAINMENT, INC. - the world leader in live family entertainment is looking for an entry-level Regional Marketing and Sales Manager in the New England Area.
This person would be responsible for the marketing, advertising and promotional responsibilities for two touring units of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey; 5 touring units of Disney On Ice; and 1 unit of Anastasia On Ice. Some responsibilities include:
Prospecting, pitching, and fulfillment of promotions; Market research; Planning/preparing and writing business/marketing plans; Event management.
Applicants must have: Willingness to travel frequently (60-70%); Strong verbal and written communications skills; Strong research and analytical skills; Ability to multi-task.
Marketing, Communications or Public Relations degree preferred, but not required.
If interested, please fax all resumes with a cover letter to 617.723.5366.

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Yes! 5th Week
Daily 7:00 & 9:20
Join The Fun

WINNER of 3 Golden Globes
BEST PICTURE
BEST ACTRESS
BEST SCREENPLAY
Shakespeare In Love
ACADEMY MUSIC Cinema Arts NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

PARAMOUNT PICTURES presents an ICON production MEL GIBSON "PAYBACK" GREGG HENRY MARIA BELLO DAVID PAYMER and CHRIS BOARDMAN
STARTS FRIDAY FEBRUARY 5TH
NO PASSES
SHOWCASE CINEMAS WEST SPRINGFIELD 1-10
733-5131
ALL DIGITAL

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Free Karate Instruction offered in Southwest. All welcome. Interested? Call Mike 546-2658

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Come see the Women's Ice Hockey team play St.Michael's this Saturday Feb 6 at 1pm. The game is being played at the Mullins Center practice rink and is sure to be action packed!

Fraternities/Sororities: Looking for a DJ for your next function? DJ Fooz is now booking, specializing in date parties and formals. Call Tim 549-9127

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Belchertown 1 bedroom. Three miles from Amherst Center 253-9081

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment Sunderland. Available now. Febuary Free. Call 577-0375

AUTO FOR SALE

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag, black $3500 584-6090

1986 Olds Cierra Well-maintained. Low miles $850 256-3004

'86 Camry 155,000 miles, New tires, Brakes, Timing belt excellent condition for age. Asking $1800. 586-1717

'88 Subaru 4x4 Wagon runs, drives, looks, decent $850. May Trade for motorcycle 773-8586

1986 Jaguar VDP Elegant 350 LTI conversion. Hella Lights. Nardi wheel All receipts $3500 Jim@413-256-0966

COMPUTERS

Computer Laptop 233,Modem,CD-ROM,32RAM 3.2HD,Active Matrix,3year Full Warranty Call Sergiy 413-529-0583 Evenings

EMPLOYMENT

$20-40/hr in spare time? $100 signing bonus! 800-600-0343 ext 1927

Last Chance To Apply Applications are due today for positions as Tour guides, Admissions Reps and summer counselors. Apps. available at the University Admissions Center!

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3 hrs/NYC)—Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video, Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or wayneboys@aol.com.

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

INERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd Trail's End Camp 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

Last Chance to apply Applications are due today for positions as Tour Guides, Admissions Reps and Summer counselors. Apps available at the University Admissions Center!

Personal Assistant for busy professional $7.00 an hour. Laundry, cat care, paperwork etc. 413-259-1227

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99?

College Pro, a $25 million non company, seeks hightly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goal-oriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

Undergraduate Business Consultant Gain Accounting Experience, Leadership Skills, and General Business Experience. 10-15 hrs. per week, flexible schedule. Must be self motivated; able to work as part of a team. Sophomores and Juniors are encouraged to apply. Pick up an application at the Center for Student Business, 406 Student Union. Questions, call 545-2166. Deadline for apps Monday Feb. 8

New Student Program Seeks extroverts from '99-'01 class with 2.5+ GPA:May 26 to July 17. Salary,room,meals,health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions CTR. Deadline FEB 5.

Mothers helper wanted 10-15 hrs/wk afternoons. Must have car and references. Call Jamie 549-7788

Put up Posters in Amherst, Northhampton + colleges $6.00 An hour. Need car Extremely responsible 413-259-1227

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted Earn extra cash!!! Make your own hours!!! Responsible students to market/manage Citibank promotions on campus. Free giveaways! Earn $400+/Week. Call Joann at 1-800-950-8472 Ext. 117

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

General Labor $7.50 Amherst location needs your help all winter shoveling snow & sanding walk ways. Only available for work one or two days a week? This is the perfect job for you. Call United Personnel Services today to learn more about how snow+work=$$. 800-363-8200

More Than Just SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. Camp counselors needed for a private, residential camp in the beautiful Pocono Mountains. We are looking for people with a dedication to children, enthusiasm for diversity, and a desire to share their passion and expertise in any one of the following areas: COMPUTERS, CIRCUS ARTS, BASKETBALL, MAGIC, VOLLEYBALL, TENNIS, DANCE, VIDEO, CREATIVE WRITING, ESL, SOCCER,COOKING, RADIO, ROCK MUSIC, GOLF, SKATEBOARDING, ROLLERBLADING, ROCKETRY, NEWSPAPER, FINE ARTS, CREATIVE CRAFTS, MOUNTAIN BIKING, CLIMBING WALL. Call 1-800-399-CAMP Ask for Dan or Nigel

Counter Help + Drivers Wanted Must be able to work 20 hrs a week. Apply at DP Dough

EMPLOYMENT

Fraternities-Sororities-Clubs-Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,00 this semester with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 922-5579.

On Campus Spokes Person Positions Available CIS is currently hiring motivated outgoing college students for spokes person positions $10.00-$15.00 an hour 10 hours a week on campus call Jodi Grant 800-567-6247

Whitewater guides and River Photographers wanted for part,full time summer jobs outdoor and athletic background a must will train for both positions. Photography position requires some experience. Call Crab Apple Whitewater for info 413-339-0188

Help Wanted Wait staff/Driver Part Time. Kai Chi Restaurant 586-2774 Mountain Farms Mall

Earn $7.30-$9 00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire Dj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester. Call Tim 549-9127

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Mountain Bike '98 Marin Muirwoods Exc. Conditions. $350 or B/O Call Ed 546-7055

FOR SALE

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

Giant Mountain Bike. Bar ends, lock. Like new. $120. Call 546-1773

FURNITURE

1 Desk And 1 Chair For Sale. $30 OBO Call 256-6351

GREEK AFFAIRS

Sigma Kappa Open Rush 2-7 Sunday 5to7pm. 2-8 Monday 4to6. 2-9 Tuesday 7to9. 2-10 Wednesday 8to8. All UMass women welcome. 19 Allen St (behind Hillel) Call 256-6887 for info and rides

AXΩ Informal Rush Come meet the sisters of Alpha Chi Omega 2/7 7-8:30, 2/8 7-9, 2/9 7-9, 2/10 7-9

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is limited

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST & FOUND

Tickets to Mullins Event. Found on Rte 9 by Big Y. Name it & Date of event and its yours. Call 549-6021 and leave message.

Found Keys In Marcus hall Call to Identify 6-6805

PERSONALS

Mary, Thanks for all you do for me!! You make me happy. Just thought you should know! James

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

Furnished room in house at north Amherst. $285.00 everything included. Call lines, 253-3670

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99! Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

TRAVEL

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED Blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 www.classtravel.com

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS 245 W Roosevelt Road Building 6 Suite 39 West Chicago IL 60185-4808 Tel: (630) 231-4323 Fax: (630) 231-4352 Toll Free: (800) 327-6013 Fax: (800) 724-4352

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

Place an Ad in The Collegian Classifieds SPECIAL Valentines Day Issue!!

Let your Sweetheart know exactly how you feel! Place an Ad by Febuary 9th to insure your space!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, FEB. 5

Auditions — Auditions for the Theater Guild's musical "Lil' Shop of Horrors" will be at 6 p.m. in room 162 of the Campus Center. Callbacks will be held Sunday at 11 a.m.

Comedy — Something Every Friday presents "America's Cutting Edge Escape Artist" Harley Newman at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Newman performs physical comedy and amazing stunts, and the show is open to everyone.

Community — There will be a weekend of works by Amherst College alumni artists, beginning from 1–2 p.m. with a panel discussion entitled "Walking the 'Career' Tightrope: Careers in the Performing Arts" in the Experimental Theater. A performance piece entitled "Six Shorts" will follow in Webster Studio One at 7 p.m., and "Double Thrill" will began at 8 p.m. in Webster Studio One.

Conference — Share your experiences and learn more about learning communities at a conference entitled "Making Connections: Learning Communities for a Student-Centered University" from 8:30 a.m.–3 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. To register for this free conference and lunch call Anne Malone at 545-0951.

Lecture — As part of the Geoscience Lecture Series, Jan Tullis of Brown University will give a lecture entitled "Ductile Strain Localization in the Crust: Insights from Experimental Deformation of Felspathic Rocks" in room 131 of Morrill II South at 3:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, FEB. 6

Auditions — Auditions for the Theater Guild's musical "Lil' Shop of Horrors" will be at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. in room 162 of the Campus Center. Call backs will be held Sunday at 11 a.m.

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable, the UMass comedy improvisational troupe, will perform at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Community — The weekend of works by Amherst College alumni artists will end today with a workshop conference and lunch call Anne Malone at 545-0951 from 11 a.m.–1 p.m. in Webster Studio One. A theatre performance will be at 2 p.m. in the Alumni Gym, and the performance pieces "Six Shorts" and "Double Thrill" will follow beginning at 7 p.m. in Webster Studio One.

Dance — Pride Alliance, the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender and straight ally undergraduate student organization, will be holding a free "back to school" dance from 8 p.m.–1 a.m. at the Top of the Campus (Campus Center room 1109). Anyone is welcome. Call 545-0154

MONDAY, FEB. 8

Meeting — UMC TV 19 will be holding a meeting for all new and returning members at 7 p.m. in the UMC studio, located behind the Hatch. Anyone is welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Outing Club will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in room 817 of the Campus Center. A slide show on Germany will be presented. All are welcome to attend.

Meeting — The Index Yearbook will hold a meeting in room 304 of the Student Union from 7–8:30 p.m.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 104 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 916 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — Last information sessions for this semester's Exchange program will be held Feb. 9, 16, 18, and 17 in room 804 of Goodell from 4:45–5:45 p.m. Deadline for applications is March 1. Call 545-1581 for more information.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UMS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 at UMS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.–5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student dealing with the death of a loved one. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6–7:30 p.m. for 6 weeks. Call 577-5218 if interested.

Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is Feb. 13. Also searching for the 1998–99 cover contest winner. Deadline is the end of December. Call 5-4220 for more information.

Volunteers — Volunteers are needed to train and facilitate workshops on contraception and sexually transmitted diseases prevention during Spring semester 1999. Men and women needed. Contact Karen or Dey at 577-5188 for more information.

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs — University Store "Not like a mall... Better."

Bookworks 50% OFF All 1999 Pictorial Calendars In Stock

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 5, 1999

C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
2	12	Wishbone (N)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N)	Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Antiques Roadshow (R)		Nova "Surviving AIDS" (N)
3	3	News (N)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	USA Pageant (In Stereo Live) (N)			News (N)	Late Show (N)
4	4	News (N)	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Miss USA Pageant (In Stereo Live) (N)			News (N)	Late Show (N)
5	5	News (N)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (N)	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kjr	20/20 (N)	News (N)	Nightline (N)
6	6	Sister, Sister	Nanny (N)	Friends (N)	★★★ "Batman"	(1966, Adventure) Michael Keaton, Jack Nicholson.			News (N)		Friends (N)	Nanny (N)
7	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N)	Providence "Runaway Sydney"		Dateline (In Stereo) (N)	Homicide: Life on the Street (N)		News	Tonight Show
8	8	Home Imp.	Judge Judy (N)	Jim Calhoun	Judge Lana	Legacy "Full House" (In Stereo)		Love Boat: The Next Wave (N)	News	Newsradio (N)	Newsradio (N)	Married...With
9	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy (N)	Providence "Runaway Sydney"		Dateline (In Stereo) (N)	Homicide: Life on the Street (N)		News	Tonight Show
10	10	Simpsons (N)	Friends (N)	Seinfeld (N)	Frasier (N)	Providence "Runaway Sydney"		Millennium "It's a Hellva Life"	News		Friends (N)	Friends (N)
11	11	Simpsons (N)	Friends (N)	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N)	Providence "Runaway Sydney"		Dateline (In Stereo) (N)	Homicide: Life on the Street (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show
12	12	News (N)	NBC News	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N)		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're in	Time Goes By	Monty Python	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (N)
13	13	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N)		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're in	Time Goes By	Monty Python	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (N)
14	14	News (N)	ABC News	Seinfeld (N)	Frasier (N)	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kjr	20/20 (N)	News (N)	Nightline (N)
15	15	Judge Judy (N)	Judge Judy (N)	Seinfeld (N)	Frasier (N)	Legacy "Full House" (In Stereo)		Love Boat: The Next Wave (N)	Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier (N)	Cheers (N)
16	16	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne (N)	Roseanne (N)	★★½ "The Cutting Edge" (1992, Comedy) D.B. Sweeney, Moira Kelly					★★★ "Only the Lonely" (1991) John Candy
17	17	Northern Exposure "Get Real"		Law & Order "Betar" (N)		Biography "Dr. Joyce Brothers"		L.A. Detectives		American Justice (R)	Law & Order "Misconception"
18	18	Wordvision (N)	Moneyline Newshour (N)		Crossfire (N)	World Today (N)		Larry King Live (N)		Cold War (R) (N)	Sports	Moneyline (N)
19	19	Saturday Night Live (N)		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Comedy Showcase		★★ "Dutch" (1991, Comedy) Ed O'Neill, Ethan Randall.			Upright	Kids in Hell
20	20	New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery	Black Bear	Lusitania (R)		News	Inferno	Storm Warning	"Storm Zones"	Lusitania (R)
21	21	Up Close	Sportscenter		NHL Hockey	Colorado Avalanche at Detroit Red Wings. (Live) (N)					Sportscentury	Sportscenter (N)
22	22	Ellen (N)	Ellen (N)	Oh Baby (R) (N)	Maggie (N)	Chicago Hope "Life Support" (N)		"At the End of the Day: The Sue Rodriguez Story" (1998, Drama)			New Attitudes	Golden Girls
23	23	Countdown	Cat (In Stereo)	Ultra Sound	News	Still & Ditty (R)	Video Cliches	Total Request Live (In Stereo)	Ultra Sound: Nine Days.		Lovelinx (In Stereo)
24	24	You Afraid?	You Afraid?	Doug (R)	Rugrats (N)	Kablam!	Oh-Cartoonal	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons (R)	Laverne	I Love Lucy (R)
25	25	Quantum Leap (In Stereo) (R)		Amaz. Stories	Star Trek	The City on the Edge of Forever" (R)		Highlander: The Series (R)		Friday the 13th: The Series (R)	Twilight Zone	Star Trek (R)
26	26	Roma Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Perimedics "We the People"		Lindbergh Kidnapping		Strange Science	Odd Sounds	Perimedics "We the People"
27	27	Due South "Some Like It Red"		NBA Tip-Off		NBA Basketball New York Knicks at Orlando Magic. (In Stereo Live)					NBA Basketball: Rockets at Lakers
28	28	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Welker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★★ "Back to the Future Part III" (1990, Adventure) Michael J. Fox. (In Stereo) (R)				"The Allnighter"
29	29	(4:45) "Close-3rd Kind"		Inside the NFL (In Stereo) (R)		★½ "Switchback" (1997, Suspense) Dennis Quaid. (R) (N)					"Blood Money" (1997) James Brolin. (R)	Dennis Miller
30	30	★½ "Excess Baggage" (1997)		Alicia Silverstone. "PG-13" (R)		"A Murder of Crows" (1998) Cuba Gooding Jr.. "R" (N)		★★ "Gattaca" (1997, Science Fiction) Ethan Hawke. "PG-13" (R)			Erotic
31	31	(4:30)		★★ "Repossessed" (1990) Linda Blair. "PG-13"		★★½ "The Distinguished Gentleman" (1992) Eddie Murphy. "R" (R)					Stargate SG-1	Dead Man's Gun "Sleepwalker"
32	32											Outer Limits

HSCN 4 — Hawaii Services Cable Network

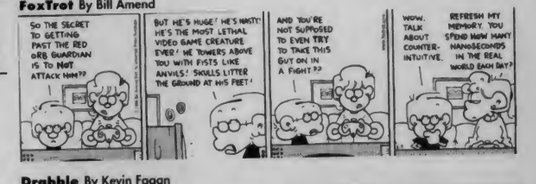
HSCN Bulletin Board / CBS/3 Hartford / CBS/4 Boston / ABC/5 Boston / PBS/57 Springfield / HSCN / Music Of Your Life / UPN/20 Hartford / Weather Channel / NBC/30 Hartford / Fox/61 Hartford / CBS/24 Springfield / WCVB 5 Boston / Intermission / UMass Academic TV / WB/New Haven / HSCN Programming

Channel Lineup: (1) UPN/20 (2) Weather Channel (3) NBC/30 (4) Fox/61 (5) CBS/24 (6) WCVB 5 (7) Intermission (8) UMass Academic TV (9) WB/New Haven (10) HSCN Programming (11) HSCN Bulletin Board (12) CBS/3 (13) CBS/4 (14) ABC/5 (15) PBS/57 (16) HSCN (17) Music Of Your Life

408Ville By Louis and Allan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



Dilbert By Scott Adams

For Those About To Rock By James Shaker

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You may feel as though you're not getting the respect you deserve at this time. Don't wait to talk about this. Get it out in the open now!

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You're going to have to take a few extra precautions today whenever you venture out of the home or any other comfortable, familiar surrounding.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — It's a good day to show your feelings for someone who already knows how you feel..."I love you" never gets old!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You'll find yourself in something of a "tizzy" today over a missing article that didn't mean much to you until it was lost.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Choices may be few and far between early in the day, but later you will feel as though you have more options available to you than ever before.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You may have a tough time convincing someone from your past that you no longer wish to be involved with him or her in any way. State a clear case!

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You'll be "feeling your oats" today, and will have to find a more productive outlet for your creative energy than those you've recently tried.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — There's no reason for you to think that you're an "expert" on any given subject today, but your instincts may allow you to perform well above par.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You and a friend or loved one may be at cross–purposes before the day is out. This is a case which may require you to "agree to disagree."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Now is no time to push an issue that others wish to overlook. Rocking the boat right now could prove more hazardous to you than you might wish to believe.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Take care that you don't become argumentative today, especially when hashing out an issue with family members. Try to be a calming influence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You'll find yourself in a position of authority today. How you react to a sudden increase in pressure can surely impress those "in charge."

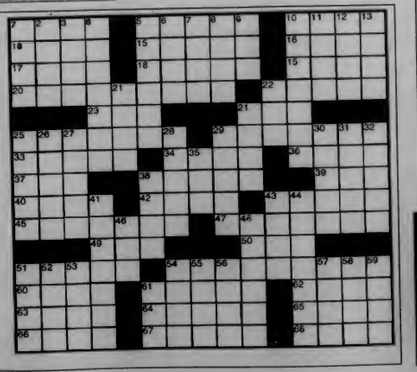
Quote of the Day

"It's these little things, they can pull you under/ Live your life filled with joy and thunder"

–REM

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Denise, could you please go over to the storage cabinet and get the large tub of vaseline?"



ACROSS
1 Prince of India
5 Inferior
10 Travel document
14 They're yoked
15 Swiftly
16 Lazily
17 Jai —
18 Of ships
19 Greenish blue
20 Cub Scouts leader
22 Italian food
23 "You — the Sunshine of My Life"
24 Aries, e.g.
25 Fountain treats
29 Pooches
33 Spirit in "The Tempest"
34 Complain
36 Alaskan port
37 Decent grade
38 Sea eagles
39 Line
40 Visitor to Siam
42 Ponder
43 Not glossy
45 Laundry item
47 More opulent
49 Dawn goddess
50 Emulate Al Pacino
51 "Bah!"
54 Tennis strokes
60 Cargo
61 Cranny
62 Matinee man
63 Norway's capital
64 Different
65 Wife of 1-Across
66 Remove one's hat
67 Swerves
68 — out: scraped by with

DOWN
1 Highway
2 Wheel part
3 Actress Harlow
4 Enliven
5 Help — employment ad
6 Bright fish
7 Scream and shout
8 Blemish
9 Slippery one
10 A, B, or C
11 March 15, in Rome
12 Lath
13 Auel heroine
21 Pitcher Hershiser
22 Cook's utensil
24 Light blows
25 Parrot
26 Stadium
27 Claims on property
28 Rub clean
29 Move like a baby
30 Direction
31 Overact
32 City conduit
35 Reply to a query
38 Ostrichlike birds
41 More advanced than
43 A lot
44 Dancer Fred
46 Pull
48 Los Angeles players
51 Trudge
52 Fair
53 50%
54 Act like a dog
55 Pang
56 "Moonstruck" actress
57 Sask. neighbor
58 Finished
59 Coasted
61 Fall mo.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

2-5-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Fish Munchies
Tofu Pot Pie

DINNER
Fried Scallops
Broccoli Stuffed Chicken
Tortellini Veg. Stir Fry

Worcester

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Fish Munchies
Tofu Pot Pie

DINNER
Fried Scallops
Broccoli Stuffed Chicken
Tortellini Veg. Stir Fry
Portabella Mushroom Caps

Hampshire

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Fish Munchies

DINNER
Fried Scallops
Broccoli Stuffed Chicken
Tortellini Veg. Stir Fry

Berkshire

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Fish Munchies
Bacon & Cheese Quesadillas
Tofu Pot Pie

DINNER
Fried Scallops
Broccoli Stuffed Chicken
Tortellini Veg. Stir Fry
PORtabella Mushroom Caps

Night Editor — Vanessa Walker
Photo Technition — Roberto Delgado
Copy Editor — Stacey Shackford
Production Supervisor — Teresa O. Rodrigues
Production Staff — Soldy Am, Joseph D. Savitch

SPORTS

Friday, February 5, 1999 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Minutemen can't keep up; Rhody takes one by 11

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

In the original version of the tale of the tortoise and the hare, the speedy rodent challenges the unassuming turtle to a race, and proceeds to lose that contest because of his arrogant detours and naps and such.

At the William D. Mullins Center last night, the Rhode Island men's basketball team played the role of the hare, but in this version, the physically superb "rabbit" never really took a break. In the end, the Rams left the hosting Minutemen panting and 11 points behind.

In the beginning, the challenge to UMass was obvious: stop the highly-touted tandem of Lamar Odom and Antonio Reynolds–Dean, and the race was theirs to be won.

Early on, Massachusetts came out of their proverbial shell to contain the fast–paced URI squad, double–teaming Odom in the paint and causing the young star to take questionable shots. The Minuteman defense came out confident and ready to play, forcing key turnovers en route to an 11–5 lead with 15:15 left in the first half.

Although playing a quicker game, the Rams were on the short end of a 32–27 score heading into the locker rooms for the break. The slow and steady UMass offense, directed by guards Monty Mack and Charlton Clarke, and powered by the surprising output of forward Chris Kirkland, who poured in 10 of his team–high 18 points in the opening frame, managed to keep Rhode Island in check.

When the buzzer sounded to signify the beginning of the second half, URI immediately started to outdistance the more lethargic Minutemen. UMass exhausted their adrenaline surge within the first two minutes of the second period.

After four unanswered Massachusetts points, the Rams picked up the pace and made up the deficit. When Rhode Island point guard Preston Murphy drilled a three–pointer for a second consecutive trip down the court at the 13:54 mark, the visiting team pulled ahead, 45–44. While controlling Reynolds–Dean, the Minutemen were burnt by freshman Tavorris Bell.

"I don't think they really expected me to shoot from the outside, so I just stepped up and hit the shots," Bell said.

Bell put 13 points on the scoreboard as an outlet for Odom, whose inside–outside game carried him to a 26–point evening.

"Usually when I have a smaller guard on me, I look to post up," Odom said of his versatility. "When I have a bigger guy, luckily I have enough foot speed to beat [him] to a spot. I try to take them off the dribble."

An energetic spurt by UMass at the 5:33 point included two quick Mack trifectas and a Kirkland jumper, and slowed the snowballing Ram lead. The score at that point was 64– 57. Aside from that outburst, however, Mack, Massachusetts' leading scorer, was quiet.

"I thought Tavorris Bell on Monty Mack was the difference in everything we did," URI Coach Jim Harrick said. "If it wasn't for his two threes against the press, he has nine points. If you hold that young man to nine, you've done a nice job."

A 15–2 fast break advantage for URI epitomized the contest. When all was said and done, the Minutemen simply ran out of gas trying to keep up with the energetic Rams. Sometimes slow and steady falls by the wayside.

Ajmal Basit and the Massachusetts Minutemen dropped another crucial A–10 meeting at home against URI, 73–62.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Kirkland's all-out effort

Chris Kirkland is the type of player who can do just about anything for his team. No one can really argue with that.

He has become the best UMass rebounder, the most patient offensive player, and a bona fide scorer. But there's a new problem stemming from his recent success, and it certainly showed last night when Rhode Island rammed the Minutemen, 73–62. Yes, Kirkland can do anything, but his teammates are now starting to expect him to do everything.

Much to his credit, he was the only UMass player who did not let up after the Rams stole the lead around the 15–minute mark in the second half. He fought gallantly with his meager 6–foot–6, 215–pound frame — much smaller than most any power forward in the Atlantic 10. He scored a career–high 18 points, grabbed 10 rebounds, and tried to carry the team on his back; but the other Minutemen weren't even willing to hold on to him.

Aaron Saykin

Rhode Island coach Jim Harrick never even saw him coming. He told his players to look out for Monty Mack, Lari Ketner, and Charlton Clarke, who almost beat the Rams by himself last year at the Mullins Center. All of a sudden, the slender, quick Kirkland scored his team's first four points, and had 10 by the midway mark in the opening frame.

"I thought he had a great, great game," Harrick said of Kirkland, whose 18 points were a career–high. "He's a quick jumper, he's athletic, he's [always] around the ball, and he was a force for them tonight. He was somebody that did things that I had never dreamed he could do. I knew he was good in the key, but he's a lot better than he was a year ago."

Where did Kirkland come from, Harrick wondered, as he scratched his head before commenting on the Pittsburgh native. He played maybe two minutes per game his freshman year, and then fought for floor time with Mike Babul last season. Kirkland began the 1998–99 campaign as the team's sixth man, still battling for minutes. But then something happened. Perhaps one could even say fate was in his corner when UMass coach Bruiser Flint removed Ajmal Basit (who also wanted out) from the starting lineup in early January.

In only a month's time since the move, Kirkland has looked like a four–year starter. And his effort has not gone unnoticed or unlauded by Flint, who could not compliment any Minuteman other than him after the latest setback.

"I thought he did a great job on [Antonio] Reynolds–Dean defensively," Flint said of Kirkland's defense, which certainly did not overshadow his offensive production. "He was the only one who got [loose] balls, and put them back in... He's been playing great. He has been. He's the most improved player in the Atlantic 10 by far. It's not even close. I hope [he can improve his game even more] because we need someone to step up to that high level."

So what lies next for Captain Kirkland? He's already the new leader of this team, if not by words than certainly by example. The word "captain" is no nickname. It's a distinction he has patiently earned.

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian columnist

Big pair for UMass
UM set for Merrimack & BC

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The UMass hockey team prepares to face off in the third of three consecutive meetings with Boston College to start off their weekend of crucial Hockey East games.

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

For whom the bell tolls. This week that phrase pertains specifically to the Massachusetts men's hockey team, with a record that stands at 6–16–2 overall, and more importantly at 3–11–2 in the Hockey East. The Minutemen will need to step up to the challenge before them this weekend in the form of conference foes, No. 7 Boston College and rival Merrimack.

The biggest challenge of the weekend for the Minutemen will be against Boston College tonight, when they play their third consecutive game against the Eagles. In the first two meetings BC has handed UMass a pair of losses including a 7–1 at Kelley Rink, where the two teams lock up again tonight, and a 3–1 win at the William D. Mullins Center.

"They [BC] have to play against BU [Boston University] Monday night and hopefully that will take a little more out of them and we'll get a chance to get a little more rest," coach Joe Mallen said after the loss at the Mullins Center last weekend. "It's a home game down there and it's a tough place to play, but we're looking forward to it."

There will be several keys for the Minutemen if they plan on upsetting the No. 7 team in the nation. They will need their defense to be strong. UMass will need players like Captain Dean Stork and freshman defenseman Toni Söderholm to produce on offense as well.

"We have to start off by trying to slow them down and frustrate their offense. We have the type of offense that doesn't score a lot of goals, so we just need to frustrate their forwards," Assistant Coach Dale Dunbar said.

The Minutemen will also have to find a way to solve BC's sophomore goaltender Scott Clemmenson, who has only allowed two goals against the Minutemen in over 110 minutes of play against them this season.

"We really had some good chances tonight, but you have to give Clemmenson credit. They say he's been up and down, but everytime I've seen him he's been really consistent," Mallen said after the 3–1 losses last Friday. "He's the guy we have to figure out if we are going to beat this team."

Other keys for the Minutemen include containing Brian Gionta and Jeff Farkas, among other Eagle forwards. They will need to contain them not only on five–on–five situations, but also on special teams.

"He [Gionta] is an illusive and very talented player and you can't lose him. Plus we need to stay out of the box, which takes the pressure off our defense and special teams. Five–on–five we can play with any team in the country, special teams are the key. You can't give BC's first and second line a lot of power–play time, because that's where they can really hurt you."

UMass will need to do all these things for 60 minutes to have a solid shot at winning the game. This game is also crucial not only because it's a Hockey East contest, but because it will serve as a momentum builder for the Merrimack game on Saturday at the Mullins Center.

BC is coming off a loss in the first round of the Beanpot Tournament to BU, 3–2. The Eagles will likely be looking for blood.

The game on Saturday is the first game of the stretch that has been talked about as the make–or–break stretch of the Minutemen's season. In their only other meeting of the season with Merrimack, the Minutemen came from behind to hand the Warriors a 3–2 loss at the Mullins Center.

Women's gym has dates in Philly
Team looking to reverse its fortune in Keystone State

By Matt Frascella
Collegian Staff

In the midst of its current road stretch the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team looks to reverse its recent fortunes with a meet against two key Atlantic 10 foes this Sunday in Philadelphia. Both Temple and George Washington are next on the schedule for the traveling Minutewomen.

After squeaking out a narrow victory over the University of Rhode Island, the Minutewomen have suffered back–to– back losses to nationally–ranked Michigan and rival New Hampshire.

Hoping that the road woes will be put to an end in Philadelphia, UMass places its unbeaten A–10 record on the line. The road has not been a friendly environment so far this season for Massachusetts, after dropping their only road meet to the Wildcats. Yet UMass head coach David Kuzara feels that his team is prepared for the physical demands of playing away from Amherst.

"Our training has been really good," Kuzara said. "We're the best conditioned UMass team that I've ever coached."

After a week of practice and fine tuning for this week-end's dual contest, Kuzara feels that his team should be ready for Temple and George Washington, and he hopes that those two schools will not have the same record–setting meet against the Minutewomen that UNH had last week.

"UNH broke all kinds of records against us," said Kuzara. "We are really close to reaching our potential. I feel like we are going to see continual improvements. Every weekend is a test for us."

Looking to continue their success and aid Massachusetts this weekend are Mary Moore and Michelle LoPresti. Competing in the all–around last weekend the two led the team in scoring. Former Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year Mandy Mosby will also need to play a key role in the all–around competition if UMass intends to score well and win the meet.

Despite the loss to New Hampshire last weekend that snapped a five–year win streak over the Wildcats, UMass' total score of 190.725 was high enough to be counted towards NCAA regional qualification. Selection is dependent on not just wins and losses, but also on the team scores from throughout the season. Both the highest and lowest scores are thrown out. Kuzara was pleased that the team broke 190 points and thus earned a usable score.

Minutewomen notes:

The team has been without expert tumbler and dancer Jill Fisher for the beginning of the season due to injury. Head coach David Kuzara is taking his time with the injury and not rushing her back into the lineup.

UMass women make trip to square off against A–10 foes

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

Having already faced their two opponents for the coming weekend once before, the Massachusetts women's basketball team has a solid notion of what they will be up against.

Traveling down to Philadelphia for two conference match– ups, the Minutewomen (12–11 overall, 7–3 Atlantic 10) will first face Temple tonight at 7 p.m. at the Apollo (WMUA 91.1 FM).

The Minutewomen rolled over the Owls (7–13 overall, 3–7 Atlantic 10), 71–43 on Jan. 16, led by Tez Kraft who poured in 21 points. Kathy Coyner added 14 points and four assists.

"Temple has struggled through this season," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "But we can't look past them, we must dominate the paint and play inside–out when do what we can to beat them."

One factor on Temple's side is their 5–3 home record, 3–1 in conference play. On the other hand, UMass has triumphed in their last 11 meetings with their Philly foes, dating back to a 46–40 loss on Jan. 18, 1993.

As for Sunday's contest, the Minutewomen are prepared for the biggest showdown of their season to this point, as they face St. Joseph's at noon (A–10 network–FSNE).

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Kathy Coyner

PREVIEW

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

FRIDAY - UM VS TEMPLE 7PM

SUNDAY - UM VS ST. JOES 12PM

WMUA 91.1 FM

PLAY BY PLAY: MATT PERRAULT

COLOR COMM.: MIKE COREY

UMass currently trails the Hawks (15–7 overall, 8–2 A–10) by one game in the A–10 East race, partially as a result of the Hawks 63–58 victory at the William D. Mullins Center on Jan. 14.

"The growing rivalry with St. Joe's is good for both schools," O'Brien said. "Our team will undoubtedly be ready emotionally, so that will limit my preparation purely to basketball."

When the Hawks prevailed over UMass last month, they were led by Susan Moran who netted 24 points. Moran is in the midst of a career–best season, as she averages 13.4 points and 6.5 rebounds per game. After Moran, only Melissa Coursey (12.5 ppg) and Angela Zampella (10.6 ppg) have averaged in double figures.

"Clearly Moran will be the first player we will be looking to stop," O'Brien said. "Last time, St. Joe's beat us on the outside, but later on Moran took care of us on the inside, and we need to prevent that from happening again."

While finishing second in the A–10 East would still earn UMass a first–round buy in the post–season tournament, they still have their eyes set on the regular season title.

Winning the division crown, and getting the number two overall seating would increase the likelihood of only having to face two of the three Western division powerhouses.

Virginia Tech (19–1), Xavier (17–3), and George Washington (13–6) all possess outstanding overall records, and it would be difficult to topple them consecutively.

"It is undeniable how important Sunday's game is for our team," O'Brien said. "We still have hopes of playing for the conference championship, so it is important we try to make things easier on ourselves down the stretch."

Minutewomen Notes: Point guard Kathy Coyner was named WHMP/UMass co–athlete of the week along with UMass swimmer Anne Dettloff; Coyner totaled 23 points and 16 assists for the week, during wins over St. Bonaventure and Fordham. St. Joseph's will play their "tune–up" for Sunday's game against Rhode Island (0–9 A– 10) on Saturday night at home.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 10 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Monday, February 8, 1999

Jackson delivers his message to Amherst College

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

At one moment he is a reserved and solemn politician for a small gathering of journalists in closed conference; at another, a charismatic reverend preaching his beliefs to a crowded chapel of diverse listeners.

All in all, the Rev. Jesse Jackson showed many faces to the Amherst College community yesterday afternoon.

At an interfaith service in honor of the late civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Jackson began his address asking the crowded Johnson Chapel audience to join him in chants of —

"I am somebody!"

"Everybody Is somebody!"

"Keep hope alive!"

In spurts of comedy and intense emotional appeals, Jackson recounted the works and dreams of King, pointing out the sort of "dreamer," King was.

Jackson explained King was not a dreamer in a "surreal" way, rather that he "projected a dream for change in public policy."

"The commitment is to go forward by dreams not backwards by memories," Jackson said.

Preaching the legacy of King to challenge the law, Jackson called out to "young Americans" to be transformed by renewal and avoid conforming to oppression.

Requesting an active audience, Jackson called all unregistered voters to stand and after pausing, asked those still lying to stand up as well. Chiding all those standing, Jackson's shouted for the youth of Amherst to become active through the power of the vote.

"When young America comes alive what an awesome effect you have!," he said.

Among paintings of primarily white leaders from Amherst college's history and speaking at the same lectern King stood at 38 years earlier, Jackson spoke on the importance of honoring King and continuing his work.

Jackson cited the reason for celebrating African American history as a vital part of American history.

"There can be no history of the slave master that does not include the slaves," Jackson said.

Building on this, Jackson shared this idea to "include all and leave none behind" under a "big tent" which he credited King with creating to protect all colors of people.

As a former college football recruit, Jackson used the Super Bowl as a symbol of racial equality and the racial integration of football teams as the reason for their success.

"We must make this a more perfect Union for a new South," Jackson said.

In a private setting, a more reserved and serious Jackson set his agenda with journalists stating his plans to "even the playing field" and register more voters.

In explaining the "playing field," Jackson shared his goal of breaching the "vertical gap" between wealthy and poor, as opposed to focusing on what he calls the "horizontal gap between black and whites."

As president of the Rainbow/Push Coalition, Jackson has already secured 2,000 new voters and plans an upcoming seven–day crusade to continue the effort.

The Rainbow/Push Coalition is an organization Jackson started designed to expand political empowerment and education opportunities and change public policy for the disadvantaged.

The service began with a moment of silence in honor of deceased Jordanian ruler King Hussein and Jackson also reflected on the leader's death as a good example of what should be "a new commitment to a comprehensive health plan to all Americans."

In his own role as a leader, Jackson does not know yet if he will run for the presidency in the year 2000 elections. Jackson answered in his characteristic lyrics — "I may not run the race but I'll set the pace!"

However Jackson did share his disdain for the Republican party's treatment of the impeachment trial, and criticized GOP leaders, including Trent Lott (R–Miss.) and former vice president Dan Quayle.

"We must build a midnight train to Georgia and give Newt Gingrich a ticket," he said.

Aside from his comical remarks, Jackson also light-

Turn to JACKSON, page 2

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Reverend Jesse Jackson was the guest speaker yesterday at Amherst College.

Rev. Jackson gives hope to audience

Student still missing; search efforts go on

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

It has been 10 days since University of Massachusetts senior Jose Figueroa left a party at a friend's house in Turners Falls; he has not been seen since.

Efforts to find Figueroa intensified this weekend. Police searched the wooded areas around Montague, utilizing helicopters, airplanes, and search dogs. Officers have also been walking along the banks of the Connecticut River, concerned that Figueroa may have fallen in.

According to a Feb. 7 article from the Associated Press, police believe Figueroa left the party in Turners Falls in the early morning hours of Jan. 29 after a disagreement with friends. He left his coat behind, despite the icy conditions and cold weather.

No credit card or phone transactions have been made in his name, leading police to believe that Figueroa did not leave the state and was not robbed. Nor do authorities suspect foul play, according to Channel 40 (WGGB) news reports.

Montague Detective Ray Zukowski told the Associated Press that in most cases of missing youths, the person either returns within a few days or contacts friends and family members.

"From my understanding, this is a very tight family," Zukowski said. "It would be very uncharacteristic of him not to contact his sisters or his family."

A third–floor resident of Brett Residence Hall, where Figueroa lived, agreed

"He doesn't seem like the kind of guy who would take off and not tell anyone," she said. "There's got to be something that happened to him.

"I hope they find out what happened, because not knowing... is really scary," she added. "I feel really bad for his family."

Figueroa was last seen wearing a black hooded sweatshirt with gold stitching, blue jeans, and brown Timberland work boots. He is 22 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 200 pounds, and has short black hair. Anyone with information should contact the UMass Police Department at 545–2121, the State Police Detective Bureau at 773–5361, or the Montague Police Department at 863–8911.

Information from the Associated Press was used in this article.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The search continues in Montague for UMass student Jose Figueroa.

Speaker warns about nukes

By George A. Chidi, Jr.
Collegian Correspondent

Fear may prove to be beneficial sometimes — at least that is the case according to Dr. Ira Helfand, an anti–nuclear activist from Physicians for Social Responsibility.

Not only nuclear arsenals, but the lack of public attention to them remain a global health threat, according to Helfand.

"Since the end of the cold war, we have come to act in large measure as though the danger has past," he said. "It has not."

Helfand, an emergency room physician at Northampton's Cooley Dickinson Hospital, will speak at Amherst College in the Campus Center's Front Room at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Helfand spoke recently to students at Deerfield Academy about the effects of nuclear war, the health care system's inability to effectively care for a nuclear war's victims and the Y2K computer bug.

His primarily teenage audience probably couldn't remember duck–and–cover drills and bomb shelters, or even seeing "The Day After" on TV in 1983.

He showed pictures of bomb victims from Nagasaki, Japan in 1945.

He described how nuclear weapons melt sheet metal at six miles, make third–degree burns on exposed skin at 18 miles, and blind onlookers at 40 miles.

He explained how a single rogue Russian missile submarine could instantly kill over six million people, with many more dying from firestorms, disease and the breakdown of infrastructure.

Anti–nuclear activism moved from campus radicalism to mainstream thinking in the Reagan–Bush years, "because once you have the former head of the Strategic Air Command on your side, you're not radicals any-

turn to SPEAKER, page 2

Jordanian people mourn the loss of King Hussein

By Jamal Halaby
Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan crowned an untested new monarch yesterday and plunged into mourning for its beloved King Hussein.

Distraught citizens sobbed in the streets and world leaders converged on the desert kingdom, united in grief for the statesman who brought bridges of peace to the turbulent Middle East. The deep political divides between those planning to attend Monday's elaborate state funeral served as a powerful reminder of Hussein's far–reaching abilities as a mediator and leader — skills that lifted Jordan into a place of international prominence. "Even the sky is crying," an announcer on Jordanian television declared as a rare, dripping fog shrouded the city after the king died at 11:43 a.m. (4:43 a.m. EST) from cancer in a hospital. Black flags fluttered from the few taxicabs plying the streets. The wail of Koranic verses of mourning filled the country's mosques and residents wept on the sidewalks of Amman, Jordan's hilly capital.

Hussein, who had fought a seven–month battle with lymphatic cancer, had lingered unconscious on a respirator for two days after returning home to Jordan last week to die.

KARA STORES / COLLEGIAN

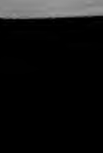
Local flavor

Students are reflected in the mirrors of Antonio's as they enjoy their lunch.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 36 LOW: 16	HIGH: 45 LOW: 32	HIGH: 49 LOW: 33

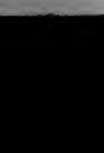
SOURCE: CNN.COM



Population overload

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton works on instilling hope to meeting of non–governmental groups discussing issues of over–population and lack of funding.

NEWS PAGE 3



Homeward bound

Fly Away Home is the first of a new series, Video Pick of the Week, which helps you select just the right movie. Check out our review inside.

ARTS PAGE 5

Randy on the spot

Randy Drohan tallied three assists over the weekend including one assist against Merrimack, which helped the Minutemen to a 3–1 victory in Hockey East action.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 8
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
FYI 8
News 3
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Gas prices decrease a penny; excess oil products the cause

CAMARILLO, Calif. (AP) — Gasoline prices plunged nearly a penny per gallon as retailers continued to scramble for customers in the glutted market, an industry analyst said yesterday.

"The average price, including all grades and taxes, was $1.0141 per gallon on Friday, down .94 cents from two weeks earlier, according to the Lundberg Survey of 10,000 stations nationwide." When adjusted for inflation, that is the lowest price in the history of the retail gas market and follows months of declines linked to an oversupply of crude and refined oil products, Trilby Lundberg said.

"The bigger picture does not suggest higher prices soon. In fact, the price crash may not be over," she said.

"The faltering world economy weakened demand, she said. "It had to do especially with the Asian economic crises, followed by those in Russia and parts of Latin America."

"The winter driving season in the U.S. also had lessened demand." Retailers have responded by cutting their profit margins "in order to chase sales," Lundberg said, adding that such reductions accounted for about half of the latest decline." Prices for self-serve regular gasoline in U.S. cities ranged in average from 81 cents per gallon in Cheyenne, Wyo. to $1.50 in Honolulu. In about a third of the cities surveyed, the price was less than 90 cents per gallon.

"Most of those are in the Midwest and southern regions where the taxes tend to be a lot lower," Lundberg said.

"Average prices at self-service stations were 95.26 cents per gallon for regular gasoline, $1.0634 for mid-grade and $1.1487 for premium.

"Full-service prices were $1.4155 for regular, $1.5075 for mid-grade and $1.5799 for premium."

KARA STOKES/ COLLEGIAN

The accordion guy

Ron Malinoski plays his "river of musical memories" for the pedestrians this weekend in Northampton center.

KARA STOKES/ COLLEGIAN

The bagel beast

An unknown animal serves as the mascot for Bruegger's Bagels at the grand re-opening yesterday.

■ speaker

continued from page 1

more," Helfand said.

The end of the Cold War, however, threatens to marginalize nuclear issues while other concerns like environmentalism or the global economy take center stage.

"I've been scared of war, but not nuclear war," said Jennifer Mossack, an 18-year-old sophomore English major at UMass. "I guess I'm not as afraid of nuclear war as population growth and deforestation."

Students like Ryan Doucette, a 23-year-old senior communications major at UMass, tend to think about nuclear weapons as an anti-terrorism issue.

"I'm fearful of the growing proliferation of weapons, because now you don't know where it may come from," he said.

Helfand said terrorism is only one of many problems with keeping nuclear weapons around.

"We had a spike of interest when India tested nuclear weapons, but it only lasted a couple of weeks," he said. "In a sick sort of way, policy makers have become fond of [nuclear weapons]... we've squandered eight years since the breakup of the Soviet Union."

Anti–nuclear activists are specifically concerned that those eight years have been a countdown to Jan. 1, 2000, the date of the Y2K computer problem.

"There's been a lack of attention to the problem," he said.

Helfand advocates taking all nuclear missiles off alert status before the end of the year to help prevent an accidental launch.

"The problem is we don't know what's going to happen. We're not going to know if we've solved the Y2K problem until Jan. 1, 2000," he said.

■ Jackson

continued from page 1

ened the mood with his sudden gestures such as a pat on the back for confidence to a nervous student speaker and rising to dance to a singing choir.

Jackson's fiery oration in the chapel came amidst a conglomeration of religion and culture, combining Taoism, Judaism, and Christianity.

Musical accompaniments to the service came from the soulful Amherst gospel choir, which Jackson got the crowd moving to. A solo by Amherst college junior Patrick Moulding from the College's Glee Club and a welcoming prelude from a Rastafarian band were also part of the service.

Jackson paid thanks particularly to Hermenia T. Gardner, a member of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Committee as well as friend, fellow committee member and University of Massachusetts Afro–American Studies professor, William Strickland, for bringing him to the service.

Amherst College Student Government Organization president Tom Gray, who went to high school with Jackson's daughter Jackie, presented Jackson with a present and thanked the reverend for his inspiration.

"Most political messages you hear ring of bullshit and his does not... it's [Jackson's message] defined with a strength lacking in every other minority leader."

Stay informed with Collegian News!!

WELCOMING BACK STUDENTS

UNIVERSITY STORE AT AMHERST

Textbook Annex

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

RETURN YOUR TEXTBOOKS WITH YOUR RECEIPT FOR A "NO QUESTIONS ASKED" REFUND THROUGH FRIDAY FEBRUARY 12TH, 1999.

Beginning Tuesday, February 16th, 1999 textbooks may be returned with a sales receipt and a valid student I.D. card.

The refund may be issued in the form of cash or credit to the student's account, depending on how the book was originally purchased.

New books must be in saleable condition (no writing, highlighting, water damage, etc.).

Any incorrect titles purchased during the Fall 1998 semester must be returned with the bookstore receipt for the purchase of the incorrect purchased title. The purchase of the correct title with sales receipt.

Remember the last day to return books with no questions asked is Friday, February 12th.

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

University Store • Textbook Annex

SAVE YOUR RECEIPT

Our Refund Policy

If you purchase an incorrect title you may return it for a refund within 2 calendar days of the first day of classes. Thereafter incorrect titles may be returned within 48 hours of purchase providing the book is new and unmarked.

1. Textbooks from dropped courses may be returned throughout the month of February. Present your sales receipt and a copy of your updated course schedule obtained from the Registrar. Only new books must be unmarked.

2. Keep your receipt(s). Refunds on textbooks cannot be processed unless the sales receipt is in your name. Title book.

3. Always have your current I.D. available. [illegible] any refund transaction.

The return of unsold books to the publisher begins approximately the beginning of the semester. After the seventh week you may continue to purchase the books you need.

textbook annex

Spring '99 Schedule

We accept cash, personal check, Ucard, Visa, MasterCard as forms of payment.

We begin to return unsold books to the publishers in the middle of the semester. Students are encouraged to get the books they need for the semester as soon as possible after official enrollment in a course.

buyback

Monday-Friday
9am-4pm at the Textbook Annex, beginning February 12, 1999

annex rush

Spring 1999 Book Rush Hours

Feb. 8- 12 Mon.- Frl. 9am- 5pm

Thereafter - Monday - Friday
9am - 4pm

News Briefs

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Volunteer agencies are "the vanguard" of U.N. efforts to slow the world's soaring population and must not lose heart in the face of dwindling financial support, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton said yesterday.

With the world's population expected to hit 6 billion later this year — an increase of 20 percent in just 12 years — 140 non-governmental organizations met in the Netherlands yesterday to assess progress toward slowing population growth since a landmark conference in 1994 in Cairo.

Despite a serious shortfall in funding, both from industrialized donor countries and developing nations, Clinton called for the groups to keep working.

"The challenge to all of us is to persevere. Don't ever think that the work you do day in and day out is not having an impact on people's lives," she told the meeting ahead of a U.N. forum opening Monday. "You are the vanguard of Cairo."

A global resolution adopted at the International Conference on Population and Development in Cairo calls for universal access to affordable reproductive health services by 2015, including family planning, sexual health services and programs for adolescents.

"We have come a long way in the last years. It may not seem fast enough for many of us who are impatient, and I'm sure it seems glacial to young people," she said. "[But] if we continue to make that progress, we will see Cairo's goals enacted."

Although volunteers reported progress in achieving some Cairo targets, they said momentum was being slowed by funding problems. Attiya Inayatullah, the president of International Planned Parenthood, called the forum "a wake-up call to ambivalent and disinterested donor countries."

The United States cut financial support to the U.N. Population Fund last year amid congressional concern that it was promoting abortion, but it will soon review a proposal by Rep. Carolyn Maloney of New York to reinstate funding.

"We as Americans are not living up to our goals," Maloney said in The Hague.

The first lady was scheduled to deliver the keynote address for the U.N. forum opening Monday, but will cut short her visit to fly to Jordan for King Hussein's funeral. Hussein died yesterday of cancer at the age of 63.

As they did in Cairo, abortion and birth control were expected to provoke heated controversy in The Hague, with delegates from the Vatican expected to lead the debate.

Clinton praised U.S. grassroots groups for playing a key role in family planning initiatives.

"They are the ones who have pushed successfully to increase our funding for family planning programs in the United States and to make abortion in America safe, legal and rare," she said.

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — President Robert Mugabe challenged four top judges to resign yesterday, imperiling the independence of Zimbabwe's judiciary and, indirectly, the country's free press.

Mugabe accused three Supreme Court judges and one High Court judge of "an outrageous and deliberate act of impudence" for speaking out against the illegal detention of two Zimbabwean journalists, who were also allegedly tortured.

"We, as a state, cannot trust (these judges) any longer," Mugabe said. "The one and only honorable course open to them is that of quitting the bench."

In a nationwide TV and radio broadcast in the southern African nation, Mugabe also angrily denounced The Standard newspaper's publisher, Clive Wilson, and its owner, Clive Murphy, as well as two outspoken human rights activists.

Mugabe charged that Michael Auret of the Roman Catholic Justice and Peace Commission, lawyer David Coltart and the journalists were "bent on ruining our national unity and the loyalty of our people."

He threatened "very stern measures" against what he described as acts of sabotage "by white persons of British extraction... and those who have elected to be their puppets."

Last week, Supreme Court judges Nicholas McNally, Simbarashe Muchechetere and Wilson Sandura warned in a letter to Mugabe that the government was inviting anarchy by ignoring two High Court orders to release editor Mark Chavunduka, editor of The Standard. Chavunduka was illegally detained by military police and a week later Ray Choto, a Standard reporter, was also arrested. After their release, both journalists produced a medical report that said they suffered electric shock torture, severe beatings and near-drowning suffocation torture while in detention.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The diplomats were flying over the Balkans when their small jet suddenly encountered a rat-a-tat-tat that sounded like gunfire.

They dropped precipitously from 8,000 feet to 5,000, hastily donning oxygen masks.

The fusillade turned out to be a hailstorm, but the Taiwanese on board the late January flight were understandably nervous. On a secret mission to cement diplomatic ties with the new government of Macedonia, they had taken painstaking efforts to avoid alerting rival China.

If the Chinese had learned what was up, they would have tried to derail the deal as part of their nonstop battle over diplomatic recognition.

Furtive diplomacy is almost routine for Taiwanese officials seeking to sneak around China's diplomatic blockade and establish relations with any foreign government that can be wooed.

Taiwan has diplomatic ties with 28 countries, most of them small, poor nations in Africa and Latin America that are rewarded with investments, low-interest loans and other aid.

China accuses Taiwan of pursuing "dollar diplomacy," but Beijing also uses trade and aid to lure nations to its diplomatic fold.

China claims Taiwan as a breakaway province and pressures the United Nations and most countries to shun the island. China refuses diplomatic recognition to any nation that recognizes Taiwan, which was separated politically from the mainland in 1949 at the end of the Chinese Civil War.

The Beijing government had hoped to push Taiwan's pool of diplomatic allies to zero by the end of the decade, but that seems unlikely less than 11 months from the deadline.

■ Amherst

continued from page 1

focus on in trying to level out the playing field. First, change the laws. As Jackson said, "First you have to make it illegal for them to deny me my seat [on a bus]."

Second, change the behaviors. "If the law changes, then the behavior of the bus driver changes," Jackson said.

Third, change the attitudes. "If the law changes, and the behaviors changes, then in time, the attitude will change," Jackson said.

The question arises, how do "I" contribute?

"Young America must come alive!" Jackson said.

Young America has to become true followers of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

According to Jackson, following King is not simply looking back at what he did; to follow King is to become a transformer.

Jackson shed light on how all people, young and old, can become transformers. It does not require completion of an astronomical feat. Simply allowing your character to lead you is enough.

"Character goes beyond culture, race, and language," Jackson said.

He illustrated his point by giving examples of how people have helped each other despite differences in race, religion, and nationality.

"Character requires effort and decision," Jackson said.

Jesse Jackson's sermon at Amherst College possessed a sense of hope for African Americans and America. Jackson discussed where America is now and also provided a map Americans can follow to create a truly equal playing field.

KARA STOKES/ COLLEGIAN

A creative parking job

A jeep in a parking lot by Whitmore is intricately parked in the last remaining spot possible.

Collegian News

Indonesia guarantees East Timor's freedom

NEW YORK (AP) — Indonesia's foreign minister said yesterday that if the people of East Timor want independence, his country would make a sharp break with the annexed territory with almost no transition period.

Foreign Minister Ali Alatas made the comments after a day of U.N.–sponsored talks in New York between Indonesia, which invaded the half-island territory in 1975, and Portugal, East Timor's former colonial ruler.

"We don't insist on having them with us if they don't want to be with us," Alatas said. "Why insist? We are realistic." Last week, Indonesia offered to consider independence for East Timor if a majority of its people rejected autonomy. However, it has ruled out a referendum, saying it could lead to civil war. The Portuguese and U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan say any agreement must be approved by the East Timorese people.

Indonesia favors autonomy rather than independence, and Alatas said yesterday that his government would present an autonomy plan by April. He said that if the East Timorese don't want wide-ranging autonomy, Indonesia would "part ways" with the territory, and return it to its 1976 status as a non-governing territory of Portugal.

He again rejected the idea of a referendum, and did not make clear how Indonesia would assess the East Timorese people's views of a plan.

Annan said yesterday that talks between him, Alatas and Portuguese Foreign Minister Jaime Gama, held at Annan's New York residence, had been constructive. He stressed that any solution would have to involve representatives of the East Timorese.

"That has always been part of the plans," Annan said. "Whatever we do, the East Timorese will be very much part of it and nothing will be done without their full participation." He also said the United Nations would help enforce any peace agreement, but insisted it was too early to say whether that would include U.N. troops.

During the talks, Annan said Indonesian representatives had given assurances they were not arming factions in East Timor. However, in Indonesia on Sunday, the state-run Antara news agency reported that the armed forces had begun handing out weapons to some civilian recruits in East Timor.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

America Reads

Sharon Edwards teaches six–year–olds Quitze Valenzuela– Stookey, Julio Neyens, and Paula Salamone as part of the five college America Reads tutoring program this Saturday.

$1 SUSHI ROCK & ROLL

ICHIBAN いちばん

RESERVE FOR KARAOKI

Authentic Japanese Restaurant

NORTHAMPTON
413-585-1185

Valentines Day

TATAMI ROOM
JAPANESE STYLE PARTY ROOMS
FREE!!

PIZZA RAMA

356 College Street
253-3808

"25th Anniversary"

(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077

BYOB

WMUA FM 91

The voice of UMass is looking for dependable & enthusiastic people to help in the following depts.

News
Publicity
Sports
Visual Media
Underwriting
Fund Drive

If this strikes your interest come by and check us out! All are welcome to visit us at 105 campus center (next to the collegian) or call 545-2876

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-4110

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO of Amherst 30 Boltwood

#1 Delivery in Town

COLLEGE BASKETBALL SPECIALS!!!

(Monday-Thursday Special)

Get 10 Free Wings With The Purchase Of A Large Cheese Pizza

ONLY $8.00/Tax Included

Any 2 Calzones $8.00/Plus Tax

Monday - Thursday 11:00am - 2:00 am
Friday + Saturday 11:00 am - 3:00
Sunday am11:00 am - 1:00 am

Also Available:
Diet Veryfine Juices
Apple-Cran
Pink Lemonade
Kiwi Strawberry

Delivery Only
Not Valid in Restaurant

Must Mention Ad When Ordering
Offer Expires 3/31/99

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Stop the press!

Throughout our lifetimes we witness images and events which remain emblazoned in our minds forever. For some, these images include the deaths of men like Martin Luther King Jr. and Bobby Kennedy. For others, these images will center on famous judicial cases like that of former football great O.J Simpson or the trial of Rodney King's malicious assailants. Who could forget the white Bronco racing down that California highway? These cases shocked us, moved us, and will stay with us forever.

What is not shocking however, is the news media and their coverage of such events. There, at every juncture in a case, newspapers and television crews inform us of the gritty details in a fashion we have become accustomed to. A local news cameraman practically tackles an EMT to get the perfect shot of the wounded victim. It is the reality of today's media and unfortunately we love it. The Monica Lewinsky circus is certainly no exception to this rule. While watching ABC's "20/20" one cold fall evening, I was amazed that my disdain for television and its quest for ratings has grown.

> What kind of democracy allows the majority to drag on a case like this for twelve months at an expense of over $40 million?
>
> Margot A. Susca

Two of the three segments scheduled to air on the Wednesday, Sept. 23, 1998 "20/20" were in some way related to Monica Lewinsky or the current scandal destroying the White House. No shock, it was hot news right?

But, I found myself even more amused to learn the content of these segments: Monica Lewinsky's former married lover — next! The interview, which proves everyone really does get his or her 15 minutes of fame, painted a truly negative image of Monica. It seemed to portray her as some kind of stalker because she had sexual relations with a married man.

What?! A married man having an affair in America?! I will have to be sure to call Sam Donaldson to let him know that I was on the edge of my seat. So this man being interviewed — how quickly his name escapes me! — was a drama teacher at Monica's Beverly Hills High School. Thank goodness he was able to provide teenaged photographs of Monica, or viewers so bored with this guy's babble may have surfed on to the next overpaid talking head.

Another segment showed two of Clinton's religious confidantes. (Everyone knows Clinton is a devout Christian but, hey, actions speak louder than words, Bill). The men discussed Clinton's marital infidelity — one having been unfaithful himself — as a dark time for Clinton's soul. Are these guys for real? Both of the men of the cloth also stood firmly behind the President in his search to regain his soul from the firm clenches of the devil. Or was it the Republicans? Beautiful story. Thanks ABC. There goes 35 minutes of my life that I'll never get back.

Always there, lingering in the corridors of power in our nation's capitol, is the news media. Of course I understand the importance of the press in our democratic society. However, the press in this case acts as a predictor of the fate of President Clinton. Rather than simply reporting the facts we hear journalists allowing their personal opinions to cloud their judgement. Instead of giving the American people the ability to judge the facts for themselves current media trends seem to make that decision for us.

I would like to believe that we still live in a society where individuals can make decisions for themselves. What kind of democracy allows a case like this to drag on for 12 months at an expense of over $40 million? To truly end this case we must do one thing: stop buying it. Send a message to the already overflowing pockets of America's media moguls. The brilliance of a true democracy lies in just the fundamentals of such rights as freedom of the press since we have the freedom to reject the garbage they always hand to us.

Reaching its dirty hand into the 13th month, this case against Clinton inches along with no real end in sight. The media is happily divulging every crumb and morsel to an American public already obese from eating this trash for the past 12 months. When they call Ms. Lewinsky to testify I have an idea: shut the cameras off. Prove to the American people that the reason the Republicans are calling these witnesses is truly to gain insight into the case of the president and not to add another ring to this media circus. If the goal of the Republican majority is truly justice and not partisan tyranny then continue the trial without the constant flash of the camera. The powerful men of the television industry need not profit any longer from this case. Convince me that the aim is not the sensationalism of this tawdry affair. The American press has been playing puppeteer for too long. It is time we cut the strings.

I'm not playing their game anymore. From now on I am going to shut off my television and instead write letters to Ted Turner and Rupert Murdoch. I am going to ask them to use their political clout, fame, and influence to help Bosnian refugees find safe shelter from the winter storms or end inequality in America's inner city schools instead of adding flames to the partisan fire. For those will be the images that I hope we, as a generation, seek to confront and conquer: those of poverty, famine, and war.

Margot A. Susca is a UMass student.

A guy's life

Brian Lohnes

I am pretty close to being legally considered 19-years-old. In a maturity sense I am close to 12 or 13, but legally I am going to be 19. Even after almost two decades of living, there are a great many things that I either cannot do or cannot understand. Many of these things are brutally simple; so simple in fact, I have trained chimps to perform many of the tasks.

One of the most basic things I cannot complete is the resealing of a deli bag up to the standards of my mom. I take the bag and do the whole origami-folds thing. I force all the air out and stick the tag on to hold it shut. Usually my mom can hear the russelling of a deli bag from hundreds of yards away so I can never get away with it. I do it as fast as I can, but when I finish she is always right there with that look on her face. That look is usually followed by me getting slapped in the face with some sort of thinly sliced sandwich meat.

I will come right out and say it, I have no idea how to fold clothes the "socially accepted" way. I have my own method that I developed after literally seconds of deep thought. I would classify it as "freestyle" officially. It ain't pretty folks, but it works. I can fold a whole bag of laundry in about four minutes flat.

My main problem is that I am a guy. I am not a man and there is a huge difference. Men like cigars and wine, guys like beer and pretzels. Also, guys release more bodily gasses and at a higher rate than the entire population of Brazil does in a year.

Following the lead of most guys out there, I can't dance. My dancing best resembles some kind of Pygmy fertility celebration than an actual dance. It starts off fine, but sooner or later my arms and legs are flailing around and innocent people are being hurt. I don't know why most guys lost the "dancing gene," but it is important for the health and well being of others that we refrain from dancing.

To further prove my lack of domestic prowess, I will tell you that I cannot pour a drink without spilling it all over myself or on the counter. This pouring of liquids has puzzled me from very early childhood. I really don't know what prevents me from being a normal pouring member of society but I can't seem to do it. It must be some kind of mental blockage or maybe some traumatic incident in the womb has led me to a life of spillage and dribbling.

Since I am at "that age," according to my parents, when I am home I can't leave the house without hearing, "Be careful Brian!"

It's really great that my parents care about me but I don't leave the house with the intention of going out and hurting myself. I could see if there really was some imminent danger that was going to strike me down like, "Brian be careful of the huge asteroid hurtling towards Earth!" or maybe," Brian be careful of the escaped murderer!" After I hear the, "Be careful!" I immediately, without thinking, respond with, "Yes mom" and go on my merry way. I have never been arrested (Lord knows I've been close), and I have never done anyone intentional harm, so my parents need to cool it.

Finally, I can't understand how my lazy behind has been sucked into the mind–numbing vortex of soap operas. I hate every minute more than the last but I just can't change the channel. I have no idea how this happened, I am probably losing my mind because over this break I have done less work than a lab rat with narcolepsy. The problem is the names of these people and the crazy plots they get involved in are interesting to me. People have names like Jax and Stephano and Roman! Those are the crappiest names ever, yet these are the guys who get all the action. The women are all clinically insane, and they get into crazy love polygons, which after weeks and weeks end up with some huge power struggle that has the potential to last for years. I guess it's just another day in TV land.

This is but a brief summary of my shortcomings as a guy, and if I feel like peeling back some more of my painful personal memories anytime soon, you can read more. I think I have too much time on my hands and I need to do some work. Nah... who needs work anyway? I'm a journalism major!

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

On the road again

Something hit me as a friend, Torrey, and I were driving from his house to mine along the winding backroads of Durham, Maine.

The snowbank.

It was quite profound, actually. First we were going straight ahead, and then we were going sideways, and then backwards on the other side of the road, and then it just kind of came to me — or my back bumper.

No great trouble ever became of that situation. A guy named Randy whom I hadn't seen since the eighth grade stopped by with three or four drunk friends and, being drunk and not realizing that they weren't strong enough to lift a car, they went and lifted my car out of the snowbank.

Seth Koenig

It's amazing what a person can do when he and his friends are hammered beyond belief.

They ridiculed my situation for a moment in reflection before they left, helpfully offering a thoughtful piece of advice: "If you're going to drive drunk, at least do it safely."

Thanks, guys.

The fact is, winter roads in New England are just no fun. Trying to keep your vehicles on the often snow and ice covered asphalt is a headache in the making.

Adding on to the fun are New England drivers, who have about the driving skill of roast beef (myself included).

A perfect example: A couple of Fridays ago, when we were having one of our regular wintersession Nor'easters — of which we had about 30 — I wanted to drive home from Amherst. I was here covering men's basketball, and I was finished for the time being, so I decided to do what any perfectly normal human being with the IQ of cardboard would do: make the 400–some–odd mile ride home.

On Route 495, cruising blindly at around 30 mph, it seemed that the popular thing for northbound people to do was arbitrarily slam on the brakes. "Quick," they all exclaimed in unison, "Let's all stop for absolutely no reason other than to get the guy with the Maine license plates to slide into something potentially deadly!"

Quick.

Dr. Smarty–Pants physics law of the day: When driving on frictionless surfaces, kids, don't lock your brakes up or the guy with the Maine license plates that's travelling a zip code or two behind you will have a good chance of helping your vehicle become the accordion it has always wanted to be because he can't stop. Got it? Good.

Now that we have that out of the way, let's move on to the subject of huge 16–wheelers in crappy weather.

Problem number one: No matter how god–awful the conditions are, tractor–trailer trucks will continue in their never–ending quest to break the sound barrier.

Problem number two: Other people are around them when they try.

Whenever you are within a two–to–three–mile radius of one of these highway behemoths, you are assured that your windshield will be covered with an assortment of mud, slush, ice, and whatever other completely unrelated substances the truck can generate to create a zero–foot visibility for you.

Sometimes stuff comes off of those things that never seemed to be on the road to begin with; crumpled up papers, slivers of wood, two–ton steel dumpsters, and so on. In fact, I've become convinced that the truckers' cargo is in all actuality a load of random garbage that is systematically leaked out in order to blind or kill all surrounding commuters.

The sound barrier is much easier to achieve on an open road.

The solution to all of these problems? It's quite simple, actually. First, consult a copy of the Farmer's Almanac to find out when the first snow storm of the year is going to hit the region and then go to Australia.

My parents went from Down East to Down Under a winter ago, and they came home unscathed and relaxed. I, on the other hand, stayed in the North Woods to work and dig my irresponsible derriere out of debt and joined Torrey and my Toyota Corolla in an abruptly scheduled lunch date with a roadside tree and boulder. (Different occurrence than in the opening paragraph, but containing the similar, "Oh @#$%, we're going to die now" sentiment as the fun was ensuing.)

Australia: where the roads are always thawed out and nobody really drinks Foster's (Dad told me so).

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

In quest of peace

Terry Franklin

Living in Amherst, I often feel the way a tolerant white man must have felt in the segregated South. Though not a student myself, I hate the injustice and hostile attitudes students must face everyday. Just as Selma thought it had a "negro problem," Amherst thinks it has a "student problem." There was and is no sensible reason for these beliefs, yet such is the reality of the day. Students form a lower class that must be kept in its place. They are seen as a problem of management and control, most notably by such Town Officials as Town Manager Barry Del Castillo, and Hill Boss, his bulldog on the Select Board.

The most direct way this hostility is felt is in the ongoing crackdown on student social life and the constant arrests, and jailings of students. Someone made the comment in these pages last spring that Amherst helps to launch thousands of criminal records.

My phone never seemed to stop ringing this past fall. "The police broke up my birthday party."

"They roughed up my friends."

"They took away my roommate."

"We were sitting on the couch talking. Suddenly police were in the living room, shining flashlights in our eyes, shouting, 'Get moving. Right now.' One pulled out his club and said 'Come on, make my day.'"

Sometimes the voices are filled with tears and despair, but more often with fury and outrage. The tension on the street was palpable last fall. The town officials seem intent on turning up the heat under the pressure cooker, after breaking off all of the safety valves.

It is possible to complain, of course, but you'll only be invited to an endless series of meetings — which have been universally characterized as "a waste of time." They will never do anything to improve the situation, but they will sure talk to you about it all day long — in the most patronizing manner.

I attended a rather surreal Select Board meeting just before the holidays. The confrontational attitudes and hostile policies were hidden behind politeness and pleasantries. But only briefly. The next day, the real world of cuffs and cages resumed. You might want to ask Ed, Terrence, Matthew, Joel, Kaitlyn, Matthew, Bill, Ryan, Adrian, Mike, Damon, Gavin, Mike, Dan, George, Ed, James, and Ben about politeness and pleasantries. They are a few of the folks arrested since that meeting for beer or pot. Not a very big haul, but then again, most students were on holiday vacations out of town. No doubt they expect better hunting when spring rolls around.

Now it has to be said that most of these people aren't going to end up on Devil's Island. But they are going to end up in court in Northampton, sit through offensive proceedings, get hit with huge lawyer bills and court costs, and then be forced to attend demeaning "counselling programs," in order to be re–educated. They will be made to think they "have a problem," or "have done something wrong," using the same psychological techniques that, when used on enemy captives in wartime, is referred to as "brainwashing."

The town's main cudgels for use against students are the laws against marijuana and beer (and for the average college student, beer is no less illegal than marijuana).

Noise in the neighborhoods is a stated reason for going after students, but it is a false rationale. Everyone in local government remembers when the Blue Wall was a bar, and the residential areas were quiet. If quiet really mattered, they'd work to reduce the ridiculously high drinking age. They want the laws as they are — they even add to them with numerous local ordinances. Just as they used to do things in the Old South, they want to be able to criminalize a whole class of people, rather than just a small group of real troublemakers. Hill Boss comment in these pages last spring that Amherst helps to launch thousands of criminal records.

Hopefully, someone will take on the drinking age problem soon, but this spring, marijuana reform has moved to the top of the agenda.

After laying the groundwork for the past six months, the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition, in conjunction with other area groups, is currently working to place a legalization question on the ballot for the March 30, 1999 town election. (Volunteers are always welcome at the CRC office.)

I have worked with CRC members for a number of years. They are a dedicated, hardworking group of civil rights activists who are pushing for positive change. This electoral campaign is an attempt to channel anger into peaceful action. I am sure they will do everything they can to get their supporters to follow in the non–violent tradition of Gandhi.

Whatever you may think of pot or beer, the choice of intoxicant is hardly the issue. This is a matter of the rights of people to be treated decently. Respect — that is something even a teetotaler can get behind.

I can imagine what Hill and Barry must be saying to themselves with a grin. "We'll never have to change our ways."

"People are so easily cowed. Look at how fast the bar owners caved in."

"Student solidarity, what a joke. Those animals are always breaking up into factions and calling each other names. They will certainly never come out and vote."

Yet many similar leaders have changed their ways when the populace started to stand up to them. Blacks and whites marching together changed the South. We end a century in which humanity marching together has made great inroads against fascism, Communism, and racism. Perhaps prohibitionism can be added to the list. Let's begin the new century with tolerance, community, respect — and maybe even a little town/gown peace in Amherst, Massachusetts.

Terry Franklin is a UMass student.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobyjanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Flatkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Peppas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signet in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Waking Ned is Devine

Ensemble cast shines in light–hearted family

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

WAKING NED DEVINE
Directed by Kirk Jones
with Ian Bannen, David Kelly, Fionnula Flanagan
Playing at Pleasant St. Theatre

Waking Ned Devine avoids its obvious moral overtones thereby letting its exotic charm and subtle wit shine through a brilliant Irish setting. The movie is light and alluring, seldom pausing, even briefly, before moving on to the next moment of hilarity. Of course, this semi–campy style blends quite well with the enchantment of the small Irish village and its respective citizens. Their personalities, and more importantly their spirit, punctuate the humor and sentiment of the movie. Ultimately, they and the inner working of their small town make Waking Ned Devine extremely funny and constantly intriguing.

Someone in the small town of Tulaigh Mohr has won the lottery, but nobody knows who. Jackie O'Shea, wife Annie, and best friend Michael O'Sullivan are determined to change that and find out which of the 52 town residents is the lucky ticket holder. When a series of local inquiries prove to be unsuccessful, one unclaimed chicken dinner leads their search to Ned Devine.

Unfortunately, Ned is the only villager who is not overly eager to claim the prize. The trio must battle personal greed, small town politics, and a snooping lottery investigator to put the money in the right hands, whichever hands are right. An elaborate scheme develops which could end in triumph or disaster for the small town.

Writer/director Kirk Jones provides wonderfully bizarre characters that allow for rich insight into this busied Irish village. If the "Seinfeld" ensemble seemed overly neurotic, then Waking Ned Devine's characters are endearingly so and just as humorous. Subtle touches, like the woman who denies her lover because of his foul stench and the town witch who stubbornly rides around in her electric transport make the town funny, definitely, but also somehow genuine.

The movie revolves around this town, its spirit, and the Irish spirit in general. We come to know not only its innate weirdness, but also the closeness, which binds it together. Through its characters, Waking Ned Devine celebrates all of this, the humor and the affection alike. Even in the "waking", of which the title speaks, a general sense of somberness and loss pervades the communities different, but ultimately, like a traditional Irish wake, there is celebration and hope. The movie brings forth this magnanimous human spirit and feeling of inspiration.

A marvelous ensemble cast, particularly the two leads, helps to bring the characters and the village to life. Ian Bannen, the lead sleuth, tempers his grief, excitement, despair and joy brilliantly. He's as suave and dashing as any James Bond figure and just as on–edge as a child playing hide–and–go–seek. Bannen gives an understated performance that lights up the screen.

Michael O'Sullivan, who plays Jackie's faithful assistant, is equally delightful. O'Sullivan's scrawny appearance only adds to his reluctant, timid nature. At times, he looks so fright–filled that you just want to reach out and give him a hug.

My only problem with Waking Ned Devine is that Kirk Jones appears somewhat reluctant to make the picture an all–out comedy. Too often, he lapses from his appropriate silliness into the easy safe haven of sentimentality. Communal spirit is vital to the movie, but some scenes are just overly dramatic to be genuine. It's hard, if not implausible, to make jumps from outrageous to heartfelt and back again.

Also, one unnecessary subplot, used feebly at the end, serves only to reinforce the already stated underlying message, which would have remained intact without repetition. Jones should have shown more confidence in his movie and let the witty comedy stand on its own.

Still, the charisma and passion behind Waking Ned Devine cannot be denied. Whereas most movies about money and the lottery are greed–driven, this one thrives on generosity. It celebrates the little quirks of life, the twists of fate, and the ties of friendship that make life in this small Irish village grand. B

Goldberg squares off; Trump travels

NEW YORK (AP) — Whoop! Goldberg doesn't want to hear trash talk from people who think her doing "Hollywood Squares" is a major comedown for the Academy Award-winning actress.

"I don't need to have three films coming out and watch my hair fall out worrying about the opening weekend gross," Goldberg said in the Feb. 13-19 TV Guide. "I like this schedule and the money is good."

Through her clout, the "Hollywood Squares" center square and executive producer has been able to get such guests as Robin Williams, Billy Crystal, Danny Glover, Melanie Griffith, Rosie O'Donnell, Trisha Yearwood and Garth Brooks.

"Some of them are doing this as a favor to me. Some figure it can't hurt their careers," Goldberg said. "I cherish all the people who have said yes because they don't care what the perception is."

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Sirico's training for a career playing mobsters was so real it landed him in prison.

The 56-year-old character actor, currently co-starring in HBO's "The Sopranos," grew up in Brooklyn and gravitated to a life of crime.

"I stuck up nightclubs back in the late '60s and early '70s," Sirico said in Sunday's Daily News. "I never hurt nobody, just took the receipts and left. Then they put me behind walls for five years in two separate bits to places like Sing Sing."

Watching shows by an acting troupe that visited prisons gave him the idea that he could be an actor. He pursued the dream with acting lessons from teacher Michael Gazzo.

"I was this 30-year-old ex-con villain sitting in a class filled with fresh-faced, serious drama students," Sirico said "Gazzo leaned over to me after I did a scene and whispered, 'Tony, leave the gun home.' After so many years packing a gun, I didn't even realize I had it with me in acting class. But when he told me to leave the gun home, he meant for me to also leave my former life behind, to be an actor."

Sirico's many credits include Godfather II, Goodfellas, Bufferts Over Broadway, Mighty Aphrodite, Cop Land and Celebrity.

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — Promoting his Miss USA Pageant, Donald Trump enjoyed being a big fish in a small pond, dazzling the Ozarks locals with the same kind of banter that draws yawns in his hometown of New York.

"I was a great genius in the '80s. Then I was a great moron in the early '90s," Trump said. "That's probably why I bought this pageant — so I could get a date. Now they call me a genius again. It's great."

The pageant Friday crowned Miss New York Kimberly Ann Pressler, 21.

Video Pick of the Week

Emotion soars in Fly Away Home

By Rob Roensch
Collegian Staff

FLY AWAY HOME
Directed by Carol Ballard with Anna Paquin and Jeff Daniels

Most people take it for granted that some movies are made for children and some for adults, probably because of the strict G to NC-17 ratings system. The system was meant to keep children away from mature subject matter, but it has also had the reverse effect of keeping adults away from children's movies. The only way adults are even "allowed" into the theater for a children's movie is if they have children in tow. If an adult goes alone, they're weird. It's assumed that adults will naturally be bored by kid's movies, or that they will only enjoy the sophisticated, pop–culture references that pop–up in otherwise kid–centered movies like the recent Disney epics and Antz. What is it about children's movies that makes them somehow inferior in adult minds?

In fact, nothing. What children's movies lack these days isn't quality, complexity or deep meaning. Mostly what they lack is detachment and cynicism. They look at the world in a very different way. The protagonists in children's movies don't care to set themselves at a distance from the physical world, and they never pretend to know everything about it or what the right way to act is. Instead, like Harriet the Spy, they would rather get into it, touch it, see what makes it work. It's a shame that this interest in the physical world is seen as something adults would be bored by.

This direct relationship with the physical world and accompanying straightforward presentation of imagination, is alien to the adult movie world. Whenever the adult mainstream and art house systems deal with the imagination, they inevitably warp it into obsessive coils of sex, memory and psychology, which is fine, except it ignores the positive side of imagination, the freedom and wonder it offers.

Children's movies provide an alternative to the twisted, partially caged mind of adult cinema. Furthermore, the genre of children's movies has been arguably the most dependably creative and artistically successful genre in the 90's, with such rich, unpretentious entries as Harriet the Spy, the two Babe movies, The Borrowers, James and the Giant Peach, the good parts of the Disneyesque animation epics, A Secret Garden and A Bug's Life. One of the best is Fly Away Home, a girl–and–her–geese movie from a few years back.

The story is simple enough. A young mother is killed in a car accident and her daughter (Anna Paquin) is sent to Canada to live with her long lost father (Jeff Daniels), an eccentric metal sculptor and amateur airplane–maker. The daughter is overwhelmed with grief, and only begins to show signs of recovery when she befriends a flock of motherless geese. Of course fall comes, and the clueless geese need to either fly to warmer grounds or have their flight wings clipped by a local wildlife officer. The problem is that the geese think the daughter is their mother and won't leave her side. So what do the father and daughter do? They build a plane so she can lead them south.

It sounds a little fantastic, and it is, but it never gets sugary or silly, thanks mainly to director Carol Ballard's (The Black Stallion) refusal to go for the cheap emotional heartstrings. Instead, he emphasizes the physical motion and landscape, letting the geese and the sensations of flight tell their own story. In a similar vein, the opening car crash scene, in its directness, is more terrifying than a thousand movie asteroids headed for earth. The insistence on the physical world to bear the weight of the story dovetails beautifully with Paquin's central performance, singularly fierce and unsentimental. Fly Away Home doesn't try to be merely inspirational or lead us along. Instead, it confronts us with naked loss, struggle and ultimately, flight.

Fly Away Home is not just about a girl and her cute geese, it's about the way we can transcend loss and even our earthbound selves through work and faith. If children are the only ones who are supposed to get anything out of it, then too bad for the rest of us.

Geese learn to fly with the help of Jeff Daniels, in Fly Away Home.

Arts Loves You

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game & System Rentals
2 movies $2
w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent
Video Games
Best Selection in Town
9 E.Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst • 549-4505

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
• DISCOUNT OIL •
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

GET IN SHAPE
IN SHAPE NUTRITION
• Fat Burners
• Creatine
• Protein Powders
20%–50% Off Retail Prices Everyday
• Andro
• Vitamins/Herbs
• Food Bars and more...
65 University Dr. Amherst 549-7434

5 Barbers
Proprietors Jim Reed and Terri Lamerdin
Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
Hours: Mon–Fri. 8:45–18 Sat 8:3–ed.
9 $ and up

The Graduate Student Senate
Welcomes all new and returning students.
Make your voice heard in your student government and attend the upcoming senate meetings!
Meeting Schedule:
Tuesday, Feb. 9: Campus Center 168C
2/23/99: CC 168C
3/16/99: CC 904- 908
4/6/99: CC 168C
4/27/99: CC 168C
5/11/99: CC 168C
All meetings begin at 7:15pm.

Queer Peer Education
Credit and volunteer oppotunities available
JOIN Queer Peer Education
HELP FIGHT: AIDS BREAST EATING CHEMICAL CANCER DISORDERS DEPENDANCY.
For more info call 577-5252 & ask for Lauri

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting:
Wed. Feb. 10 at 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Kim at the Health Education Office 577-5181

COURTESY ANDREW COOPER

Lethal Weapon

It's time for another Mel Gibson movie, as Payback opened this weekend and took over the box office.

Minutemen come close but not enough with BC

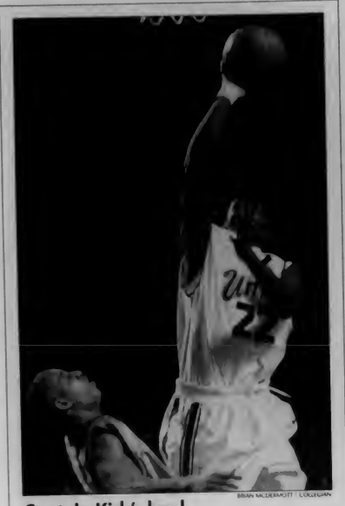
By James Murphy

CHESTNUT HILL — From the press box at Kelley Rink Friday night, one could not help but notice the silence of Boston College fans. The scoreboard read UMass 4, BC 2. There was five minutes remaining in the third period. The tension built and UMass hoped not to give the 5,889 hostile fans something to cheer about. With a win, UMass could leave Chestnut Hill with a sense of redemption for two recent losses to the Eagles.

UMass had done everything they set out to do. They had used the infamous "trap" to perfection and attacked the net, taking every possible shot they could. Unlike most games this season though, these shots were going in as UMass caught BC goalie Scott Clemmensen on an off-night.

The Eagles were coming off a tough overtime loss to Boston University in the first round and for UMass this was a perfect opportunity to capitalize on the slump.

With 3:56 left in regulation, the Eagles and their fans awoke from their slumber as Mike Mottau ripped a blazing wrist shot past UMass goalie Mike Johnson, who in a rare start, played incredible between the pipes for UMass. The crowd taunted Johnson and the rest of the Minutemen and cheered on their beloved Eagles.



As the press box began to shake from the screaming Eagle fans below, any UMass fan could tell that the next four minutes were not going to be fun. UMass coach Joe Mallen had called a timeout immediately following the Mottau goal but there was nothing he or his team could do. Kelley Rink had gone into a state of chaos and UMass was about to go into their third period abyss.

The Minutemen fell even deeper 1:55 later, when Blake Bellefeuille scored a spectacular goal, knotting the game at four and continuing the downward spiral for UMass. When BC defenseman Brooks Orpik scored the game winner with 2:20 left in overtime, the trip into the abyss was complete as Kelley Rink exploded into a frenzy. The referee was definitely a factor but all things considered, UMass had fallen apart. This wasn't the first time this happened this season.

On Oct. 22, in the Minutemen's Hockey East opener against UMass-Lowell, the Minutemen had a 3–2 lead with two minutes left in the game. They lost in overtime, 4–3. Two weeks ago, the Minutemen held a 3–1 lead on Boston University with four minutes left in regulation. They escaped with a 5–4 win. Many times this season, UMass has come out in attack mode, while playing a tight defensive game.

The problem is that they seem to lose steam towards the end of the second period and go into prevent defense mode. BC forward Chris Masters pointed out after the heartbreaker at Chesnut Hill, "UMass went into prevent and prevented themselves from winning."

The Minutemen have the talent and determination to compete with anyone in the Hockey East and make the playoffs. Again the problem is that playing desperate hockey in the third period will not win the Minutemen many games. If UMass can veer away from these late game lapses and out of the abyss, there is no reason they shouldn't be playing on March 11–13, in the Hockey East playoffs and with the hopes of pulling a win out of the abyss in a return date with the Eagles.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Captain Kirk's land

Chris Kirkland scored eight points to go along with three blocks, including the most important block on the last shot of the game to secure the 59–58 win over St. Joe's

Playing with fire in Massachusetts

By Paula Herd
The Herald News

HERALD, Mass. — "Yo, mom! I'm heading out to play with fire."

"OK, son! Be with you in a second."

It's an exchange that could only occur — without apprehension or argument — in the Passmore household where Chris, 13, routinely juggles flaming torches. And his mother, Erin, watches.

But what kind of parent would allow, never mind assist, an eighth-grader to pursue such a seemingly dangerous hobby?

The answer is: one who knows the teen has received the best training available from some of the world's finest fire jugglers.

So where does one sign up to learn how to gauge the amount of white gas needed for a nice flame; transfer fire barehanded from one torch to another; juggle them high in the dark to dazzle neighbors and finally extinguish those tongs of fire?

Circus Smirkus summer camp in Bethlehem, N.H., is the place, and Chris has been there twice to learn just what it takes to dazzle an audience.

Certainly clowning around is part of the curriculum, but as it turns out, circus camp is not for those who want to spend a leisurely couple of weeks in the White Mountains.

"You have to have endurance," sighs Chris, rattling off a day's worth of activities that run from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. and sound more suitable to a triathlete than a kid on a summer sojourn.

Workouts that increase flexibility, boost stamina and build strength are necessary because each camper is expected to, hand over hand, climb "the web" - a 70-foot-long rope suspended from the rafters of the barn where classes are held.

"And then you come halfway down and do tricks," he said. One of the more impressive tricks involves a person on the ground twirling the rope while the one above, hanging on for dear life, flies through the air spread-eagle.

"Your arms and legs are really tired from squeezing the rope," Chris said. "But it's a really neat feeling to be up there."

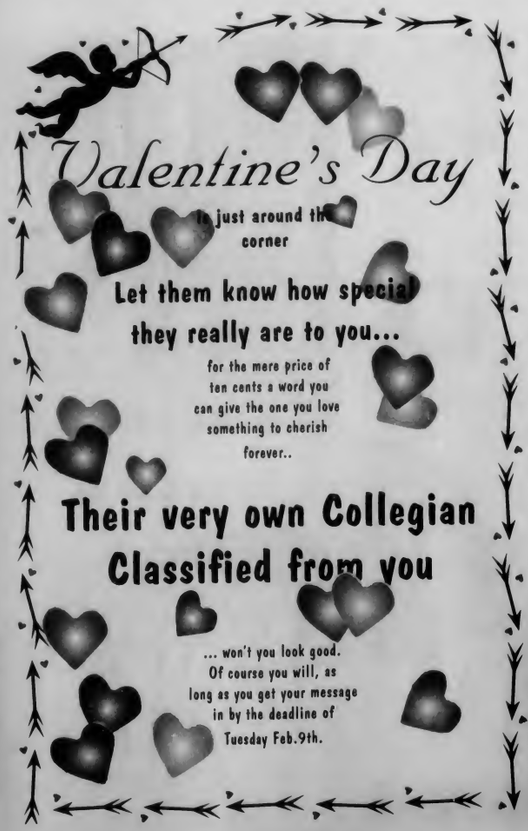
While all this is fun, Chris points out proof that real work is involved, showing the size of his arms, which have increased measurably.

His mom listens with aplomb to these tales of scaling ropes, bungee jumping and juggling fire. After all, it is she who got him interested in the camp, which features instructors from world-renowned circuses.

But when the talk turns to the mechanics of ingesting flames, she speaks up.

"I won't let him do the fire eating," she said.

"Not yet," he counters.



Erin, studying to be a respiratory therapist, argues it's simply too dangerous.

"I don't want him to be my first patient," she said.

For the record, there is a method to the madness that is fire eating, one that has to be learned in order to prevent problems.

"If you inhale the fumes you scorch your lungs and you're either dead right there or you're on a ventilator the rest of your life," Chris said.

The trick apparently is to catch the fire on the roof of the mouth and tilt the head in such a way that the flames are really moving way from the face.

STUDENT AFFAIRS SPECIAL SERVICES
STUDENT SPEAKER
UNDERGRADUATE COMMENCEMENT

Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Who is Eligible: Graduating Amherst campus senior (Class of 1999).

Subject Matter: Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests, and address your impressions and experience(s) both academic and extracurricular.

Format: Submit approximately three word-processed/typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered.

Selection Process: Author's names will be deleted (by a non-voting staff person) after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. 3-5 individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.

Deadline: Wednesday, February 10, 1999, 4:30 p.m.

Submit Proposals To: Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

■ basketball

continued from page 10

then called for a foul on Minuteman Chris Kirkland, for which the UMass player was given two shots to retake the lead, 57–56.

Overall, foul shots accounted for 20 points for the Hawks and 14 for Massachusetts. Offensively, neither team could find a significant rhythm with the game being stopped nearly every set–up. SIU shot an abysmal .353 from the field, with UMass firing only a slightly more accurately .362.

Players and coaches from both teams were not only incensed by the number of calls, but also for the number of non–calls, as many participants believed that obvious fouls were missed in the wake of very "touchy" ones.

Even the final defensive stand for UMass, which saw Howard taking the ball to the hoop down 59–58 with time expiring, was debated fiercely when nothing was called as Kirkland made a block on the would–be game–winning shot.

"He got fouled," SIU Coach Phil Martelli said of Howard's effort. "There was a foul and no call."

"Clean block," Kirkland, Basit, and guard Charlton Clarke argued in unison in regards to the debated play.

"People say [the referees] missed some calls in our favor, but I think it was pretty fair," Basit added. "They missed some calls for us and they missed some calls for them. I think they officiated the game pretty well."

Flint believed that although the final few seconds were questionable, the referees did nothing to help the Minuteman cause.

"It might have been [a foul]," Flint said. "Don't you think it's about time I got a call in my own house? I felt bad for [Martelli], but hey, there were some calls out there today in the game that were just like... you know, I am at home. If I breathe on the guy and I'm at St. Joe's I expect them to call that, but not when I'm in the Mullins."

Concluded Martelli: "A game that ugly will send people to watching the impeachment trial again."

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

■ hoop

continued from page 10

and also committed 13 turnovers, two major factors in the 18–point deficit.

Additionally, Coursey was able to shoot at will from "downtown", as UMass defenders consistently failed to get a hand in her face.

With so much at stake, a determined Minutewomen team did finally settle down, and they were sparked by two late Tonia Thomas three–pointers on the way to trimming the lead to single digits.

The Minutewomen continued their fierce attempt at a second comeback of the weekend, as Kraft drilled a three– pointer to cut the Hawks' advantage to 57–50.

After stopping St. Joe's the next time down the court, Coyner missed a runner in the lane, allowing the Hawks to go up 59–50.

Coyner turned in another effort as she penetrated in the lane, and then was fouled while hitting a lay–up, before she completed a three–point play to make the score 59–53.

St. Joe's would not allow their lead to slip any further, as Angela Zampella led her team down the stretch with four of her team–high 18 points.

"They took it to us, and we fell into the trap of trying to fight instead of just playing basketball," O'Brien said.

O'Brien was referring to the physical play of her team.

The weekend split still leaves UMass in excellent position to finish second in the A–10 East, which would assure the team of a first round bye in the Atlantic 10 tournament at the end of the month.

Excerpts of this article were taken from WMUA–FM.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Nekole Smith

■ Minutemen

continued from page 10

goal (Culgin also had a goal and an assist), when Turner slid a pass across right onto Culgin's stick and Culgin faked Clemmenson and went to his backhand to tuck the puck past the BC netminder. The goal gave UMass a 4–1 lead with 11:04 remaining in the second.

UMass defenseman Randy Drohan also had a career night. The freshman tallied two assists, the first two points of his career, by assisting on UMass' first two goals.

The Minutemen also received a stellar performance from from freshman netminder Mike Johnson, who was starting in only his third game of his collegiate career. He made 36 saves, most of which were of the spectacular variety, on 41 shots. He tallied a .878 save percentage on the night to go along with the high number of saves, but none–the–less fell to 1–2.

"It's exciting to get the start against a good team like Boston College. It's good to get a game like that under my belt. I just wish we could have won, because we were so close to winning it," Johnson said of his performance. "I was seeing the puck pretty well tonight. We played the defensive zone pretty well for pretty much the entire game. I felt as strong at the end of the game as I did in the beginning, they just got some pretty good plays on the net and it resulted in some goals."

In the end, the combination of Gionta (one goal and two assists) and Bellefeuille (one goal and an assist) killed the Minutemen again. The Eagles also received solid performances from their defensemen Orpik and Mottau, who each tallied a goal and an assist.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Ray Geever

■ hockey

continued from page 10

comes out and we still have the advantage," Mallen said.

UMass tallied again only 10 seconds after the first goal when Dean Stork dumped the puck in and Kris Wallis fed the puck out in front, Welby misplayed the puck and fell which left Nathan Sell with a wide open net to make it 2–0.

"We just tried to put a unit together, and Nathan Sell has a really good shot, and we put him in and timing is everything," Mallen said. "That was huge to be able to do that like that on the second power play, and to finish off like that."

The Minutemen continued the offensive onslaught when Turner fired a shot that was stopped by Welby, but Martin Miljko was their to put in the rebound. As he was scoring the apparent goal the net came dislodged, and official Jeff Bunyon waived off the goal, much to the chagrin of the UMass faithful.

The no–goal call didn't stop the UMass attack, as they scored their third goal less then a minute and a half after the call with 3:57 left in the second period. It started with a clean face win by Wallis, and Randy Drohan fired a shot from the point which Welby made the save on but Jay Shaw was their to collect the rebound and fire it short side to tally his third goal of the season and UMass' third goal of the game.

The Minutemen would score no more, but the defense came to play allowing nine shots in each period except the third, when they allowed 10. Merrimack was able to pull within two goals with 11:56 remaining in the third, when Chris Halecki found himself on the door step to bury one of the few rebounds UMass goaltender Markus Helanen gave up. The goal served to ruin Helanen's shutout bid but nothing else as the Minutemen hung on for the 3–1 win.

Helanen was impressive in the earning his sixth win of the season. He stopped 27 of the 28 shots he faced. The rest that he received the night before proved to be a big factor for the Finnish sensation.

"We gained a huge advantage by playing Mike (Johnson) last night and holding Markus for tonight. Last night [Friday at BC] we took a gamble and played Mike and it paid off. I kept telling our guys that the biggest advantage we had was that we had a fresh goalie," Mallen said. "Mike's play helps to solidify our goaltending. This is like the rebuilding of a rebuilding and in the goal we are solid. Both those guys can play. If we feel that Markus needs a rest, we can come in with Mike. It forces Markus to work harder and Mike to work harder. We are really happy with both those guys."

The win is more than just a confidence booster for the Minutemen it also has serious playoff implications.

The Minutemen entered the night with eight points in Hockey East, and needed to begin the stretch run in style, and they did just that. The win pulls them to a tie for all important eight place in the conference with Northeastern, and also pulls them to within just one point of Merrimack and within four points of both UMass–Lowell and Boston University.

"In the public every game is a must game, we have 30 must–win games a year, but from a lot of standpoints, for us to stay in the playoff hunt we needed to win this game," Mallen said.

The other huge implication associated with the win is that the Minutemen have officially won the season series with Merrimack, winning the first two against them, which means if they tie for eighth, the Minutemen have the tie–breaker.

"For us to win the series against Merrimack is very important. They were projected as the No. 7 team in Hockey East, for us to beat them twice is really good," Mallen said. "This game was extra special for us, after last nights loss. We could have folded the tents and come out flat, be instead we really went after them, and hopefully it will give us some momentum for the next time we play them."

UMass next returns to action against UMass–Lowell on Friday night, and then returns home on Saturday for a date with Northeastern.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Dean Stork assists on a goal in the 3–1 win against Merrimack at the William D. Mullins Center on Saturday night.

O'Neal, Lakers lose to Jazz

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — For now, supremacy in the West still belongs to the Utah Jazz.

Karl Malone and John Stockton combined for 27 of Utah's 30 points in the fourth quarter when the Jazz rallied to beat the Los Angeles Lakers 100-91 yesterday in a rematch of last season's Western Conference finals.

"If we want to ever beat that team, we have to be smarter and take care of the ball," said Lakers center Shaquille O'Neal, who had 37 points and 14 rebounds.

Last season, the Jazz swept the Lakers in four games, denying Los Angeles its first trip to the NBA finals since 1991. Utah went on to lose to Chicago in the finals.

"It was just like last year in the playoffs. Utah plays us differently than other teams do," Lakers forward Kobe Bryant said. "They're not going to come down and double right away. They're going to dig in with Stockton, so we're just going to have to get some ball movement."

Utah has beaten Los Angeles five straight games, although the Lakers won three of four during the regular season last year.

"I don't feel like we have a psychological advantage or anything," said Malone, the target of loud booing and shouted insults from the sellout Forum crowd of 17,505. "If we execute and do what we need to do as a team, we feel we can play in anybody's building."

Malone, limited to 10 minutes in the first half because of three fouls, and Stockton, who struggled on four-of-nine shooting in that half, were unsolvable in the final 12 minutes.

"They have a great one-two punch," O'Neal said.

Malone finished with 28 points, and Stockton added 26 points and 11 assists. Bryon Russell had 15 points for the Jazz, who trailed by 13 in the first half.

"The game could have gotten away from us early and we had guys just hang in there," Stockton said. "Bryon Russell made a series of great plays to kind of keep us in the hunt there for awhile." O'Neal and Bryant recorded their second straight double-doubles. Bryant added 16 points and a career-high 12 rebounds.

Utah got back into the game on a basket by Stockton that tied it at 75 moments after Malone picked up his fourth foul with 8:39 remaining.

Stockton and Malone combined to outscore Los Angeles 12-2 over the next three minutes as Utah led 87-77 with 4:15 to play. O'Neal made just two of six free throws in that span while the rest of the Lakers missed shots.

"It kind of reminded us how important execution is, not only on the offensive end, but the defensive end," Bryant said. "If we want to get the championship, we've got to execute."

Los Angeles never made a run in the final 3:57 as Malone and Stockton traded trips to the free-throw line. Stockton had Utah's only field goal in that stretch when Utah's largest lead was 11.

"Down the stretch, we blocked out, we helped each other, we got rebounds, we did all the little things, we stayed mentally tough," Malone said.

The Jazz tied the game four times and trailed by one five times in the third quarter, but didn't take the lead until Russell hit a 3-pointer with three seconds left. That capped eight straight points by Russell and sent Utah into the fourth ahead 70-69.

PREREQUISITE: ADRENALINE

Drive. Intensity. Those aren't words you're likely to see in many course requirements. Then again Army ROTC is unlike any other elective. It's hands-on excitement. ROTC will challenge you mentally and physically through intense leadership training. Training that builds your character, confidence and decision-making skills. Again, words other courses seldom use. But they're the credits you need to succeed in life. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about five hours per week. Register this term for Army ROTC.

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

MS113 – Introduction to Military Science, 1 credit per semester
Contact Captain Patrick Maloney
545-2321

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities/Sororities: Looking for a DJ for your next function? DJ Fooz is now booking, specializing in date parties and formals. Call Tim 549-9127

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Pufton Village partially furnished availible immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment Sunderland. Available now, February Free Call 577-0375

AUTO FOR SALE

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag. black $3500 584-6090

1986 Jaguar VOP Elegant 350 LTI conversion. Hella Lights. Nardi wheel All recipts $9500 Jim @ 413-256-0966

'95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer. 546-5366

1986 Olds Cierra Well-maintained. Low miles $850 256-3004

COMPUTERS

Packard Bell 8kspeedCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/D Call Kondi 413-546-7069

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

$20-40/hr in spare time? $100 signing bonus! 800-600-0343 ext 1927

HELP WANTED EARN EXTRA CASH!!! MAKE YOU OWN HOURS!! RESPONSIBLE STUDENTS TO MARKET/MANAGE CITIBANK PROMOTIONS ON CAMPUS. FREE GIVEAWAYS! EARN $400+/WEEK. CALL JOANN AT 1-800-950-8472 EXT.117

PRESTIGIOUS NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, Nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool, Musical Director and General Counselors. INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd TRAIL'S END CAMP 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

CAMP CANADENSIS. Pocono Mountains, PA. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach gymnastics, athletics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, riflery, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, newspaper, yearbook, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/20/99-8/17/99. Call (800) 832-8228 or E-mail: camp4you@aol.com for an application. Visit us: WWW.CANADENSIS.CDM.

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Dur CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99? College Pro, a $25 million non company, seeks highly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goal-oriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

Undergraduate Business Consultant Gain Accounting Experience, Leadership Skills, and General Business Experience. 10-15 hrs. per week, flexible schedule. Must be self motivated; able to work as part of a team. Sophomores and Juniors are encouraged to apply. Pick up an application at the Center for Student Business, 406 Student Union. Questions, call 545-2166. Deadline for apps Monday Feb. 8

New Student Program Seeks extroverts from '99-'01 class with 2.5+ GPA: May 26 to July 17. Salary,room,meals,healt h coverage. Apply 307 Admissions CTR. Deadline FEB 5.

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

Counter Help + Drivers Wanted Must be able to work 20 hrs a week. Apply at DP Dough

General Labor $7.50 Amherst location needs your help all winter shoveling snow & sanding walk ways. Only available for work one or two days a week? This is the perfect job for you. Call United Personnel Services today to learn more about how snow+work=$$. 800-363-8200

More Than Just SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. Camp counselors needed for a private, residential camp in the beautiful Pocono Mountains. We are looking for people with a dedication to children, enthusiasm for diversity, and a desire to share their passion and expertise in any one of the following areas: COMPUTERS, CIRCUS ARTS, BASKETBALL, MAGIC, VOLLEYBALL, TENNIS, DANCE, VIDEO, CREATIVE WRITING, ESL, SOCCER,COOKING, RADIO, ROCK MUSIC, GOLF, SKATEBOARDING, ROLLERBLADING, ROCKETRY, NEWSPAPER, FINE ARTS, CREATIVE CRAFTS, MOUNTAIN BIKING, CLIMBING WALL. Call 1-800-399-CAMP Ask for Dan or Nigel

Fraternities-Sororities-Clubs-Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,00 this semester with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 922-5579

Whitewater guides and River Photographers wanted for part,full time summer jobs outdoor and athletic background a must will train for both positions. Photography position requires some experience. Call Crab Apple Whitewater for info 413-339-0188

Help Wanted Wait staff/Driver Part Time. Kai Chi Restaurant 586-2774 Mountain Farms Mall

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire Dj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester. Call Tim 549-9127

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Mountain Bike 98 Marin Muirwoods Exc. Conditions. $350 or B/O Call Ed 546-7055

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

GREEK AFFAIRS

AXΩ Informal Rush Come meet the sisters of Alpha Chi Dmega 2/8 7-9, 2/9 7-9, 2/10 7-9

Attention All UMass Women! Open rush at Iota Gamma Upsilon. All are welcome Monday 2/8/99 5-7pm. For more info call Stacey 549-7280

Sigma Delta Tau Open Rush All university women invited Mon 7-9 Tue 7-9 Wed 7-9 409 N Pleasant St. For info or a ride call 549-8896

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

LOST & FOUND

FOUND KEYS in Marcus Hall Call to identify 6-6805

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

Furnished room in house at north Amherst. $265.00 everything included. Call Ines, 253-3670

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding you rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

TRAVEL

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $835. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

SPRING BREAK '99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplashtours.com

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED Blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 www.classtravel.com

BOSTON SPRING BREAK '99 To Mazatlan from $599 To Cancun from $369 7 nights, 5 to 14 FREE meals 10 to 32 hours of FREE drinks CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463 Visit our web site www.collegetours.com

#1 Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Panama City Vacations! Free Parties - No Cover. Best beachfront hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter- Campus 800-327-6013

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Panama City Vacations! Free Parties - No Cover. Best beachfront hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter- Campus 800-327-6013

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

What are you doing for your sweetheart this Valentines Day?

Place an Ad in The Collegian Classifieds and let them know how you really feel

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, FEB. 8

Meeting — UVC TV 19 will be holding a meeting for all new and returning members at 7 p.m. in the UVC studio, located behind the Hatch. Anyone is welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Outing Club will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in room 917 of the Campus Center. A slide show on Germany will be presented. All are welcome to attend.

Meeting — The Index Yearbook will hold a meeting in room 304 of the Student Union from 7-8:30 p.m.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

TUESDAY, FEB. 9

Lecture — The UMass Black Student Union presents "PMS: A lecture and discussion series on power, money, and sex" in room 1009 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m. There will be free food.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on writing abstracts from 5:15-6:30 p.m. in room 504 Goodell. This is recommended for any undergraduate applying to present at the Fifth Annual Conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — Last information sessions for the Domestic Exchange program will be held Feb. 9, 10, 16, and 17 in room 604 of Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Deadline for applications is March 1. Call 545- 2483 to register.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1. Call 545-5351 for more information.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at University Health Services offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. Also searching for the 1998-99 cover contest winner. Deadline is the end of December. Call 5-4220 for more information.

Volunteers — Volunteers are needed to train and facilitate workshops on contraception and sexually transmitted disease prevention during Spring semester 1999. Men and women needed. Contact Karen or Day at 577-5188 for more information.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

CIBAVISION AOSEPT OPTICAL DISINFECTANT SOLUTION 12oz. Size.
ALL MONTH LONG!
Misenhemer.
$6.99
University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs
University Store Not like a mall. Better.

HSCN Bulletin Board
CBS/3 Hartford
CBS/4 Boston
ABC/5 Boston
PBS/57 Springfield
HSCN Movie Ch.
UPN/20 Hartford
Weather Channel
NBC/30 New Britain
Fox/61 Hartford
PBS/24 Hartford
WOCH & HSCN
Univision
Comedy Central
Cartoon
Much Music
The Learning Channel
UVC-TV19
ABC/40 Springfield
Gavel to Gavel
NBC/22 Springfield
Sundance
Bloomberg Financial
CTN
TBS
BET
TV Land
WGBY/New Haven
HSCN Programming

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 8, 1999

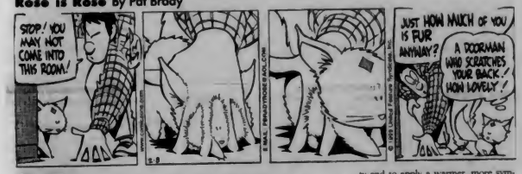
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow		American Experience		Black Press: Soldiers Without Swords		News	Flip Schulke
WFXB	13	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Cosby	King	Raymond	Becker	L.A. Doctors (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	King	Raymond	Becker	L.A. Doctors (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		Hyperion Bay "Strange Days"		News		Friends	Nanny
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	7th Heaven (In Stereo)		"The '80s" (1996, Drama) Charles S. Dutton, Bill Smitrovich		News		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden Susan	Med Abt. You	"The '80s" (1996, Drama) Charles S. Dutton, Bill Smitrovich		News		Newsradio	Married...With
WTXX	4	Judge Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lane	Dilbert	Dilberts	Sentinel "Murder 101"		News		Newsradio	Tonight Show
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Sudden Susan	Med Abt. You	"The '80s" (1996, Drama) Charles S. Dutton, Bill Smitrovich		News		Friends	Mad Abt. You
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	Melrose Place (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden Susan	Med Abt. You	"The '80s" (1996, Drama) Charles S. Dutton, Bill Smitrovich		News		News	Charlie Rose
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow		American Experience		Black Press: Soldiers Without Swords		News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	20/20		s s s "Courage Under Fire" (1996, Drama) Denzel Washington,		News		Frasier	Cheers
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dilbert	Dilberts	Sentinel "Murder 101"		Med Abt. You		Med Abt. You	s s s "The Exorcist III" (1990)
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at San Antonio Spurs. (Live)				Ineda NBA
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Act of God"		Biography: Regis Philbin		Investigative Reports (R)		Poirot		Law & Order "Blood Is Thicker"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand: Time (R)		Sports	Moneyline
COM	35	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	s s "The Faculty" (1998, Comedy) Harley Jane Kozak,				Katz-Therapist / Bob-Margaret		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	49	New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery: Family		Are You Being Watched?		Shoot Not to Kill		Escapes From Alcatraz		Are You Being Watched? (R)
ESPN	67	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Miami at Syracuse. (Live)				College Basketball: Missouri at Iowa State. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	71	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five	The Wedding	Chicago Hope	Fraiser Odds	"Love Is Strange" (1999, Drama) Kate Nelligan, Rosemary H.				New Attitudes Makeover
MTV	70	Countdown	Out (In Stereo)	Beavis-Butt.	Daria	Silk & Silly	Video Clichés	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Tom Green	Blame Game	Lovelins
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Allen Strenge	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Lavern	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	69	Quantum Leap		Arliss Stories	Star Trek "Operation – Annihilate!"			Sliders (R) (In Stereo)		Welcome to Paradox (R)		Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC	72	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Super Fire (R)		Blind (R)		It Came From Outer Space		Super Fire (R)
TNT	45	Dua South (In Stereo)		ER "Sleepless in Chicago"		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)						World Football: Conquest
USA	59	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show. "Opening Night" (Live)						New York Undercover
HBO	46	(5:15) "Out Of Time" (R)		Universoul Circus (In Stereo)		s s s½ "The Ice Storm" (1997, Drama) Kevin Kline, R				s s½ "In & Out" (1997) Kevin Kline, PG-13		"Sphere" (1998)
MAX	43	(5:00)		s s "Overnight Delivery" (1998) Paul Rodd,		s s½ "Phantasm" (1979) Michael Baldwin, R		s s "Kiss the Girls" (1997, Suspense) Morgan Freeman, R				"Spiderman" (2000)
SHOW	44	"The Last Home Run" (1996, Fantasy) Thomas Gibson, NA				s s s "Tomorrow Never Dies" (1997) Pierce Brosnan, PG-13				s s s "The World Is Not Enough" (1999) Pierce Brosnan,

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Davey K... hits the Bluewall circuit By Darling



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — A budget is more than a way to save and spend money. You'll find that the benefits far exceed your expectations if you'll only give it a try!

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Today there are bargains galore to be enjoyed, but you won't be free to enjoy them unless you are willing to make a few careful changes.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Someone may be trying to talk you into making a decision that goes against much of what you truly believe in, so it's time to employ willpower!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may be able to "get away from it all" without leaving the comfort of your own home or office. Indeed, it's all in your state of mind today.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You need a lift, and someone you hardly know may be more than eager to provide it. Take care you are not being "swept off your feet" today.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — This is a good day for you to take an adventurous risk, but you mustn't take anyone else along unless he or she asks to accompany you.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — A question of taste or interpretation may result in something of an unexpected conflict that only you can resolve today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — What others have come to know as the "real you" may actually sneak up behind you and bring about a big surprise today. A lesson is learned in time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — This is a good day to develop your sensitivity and to apply a warmer, more sympathetic understanding to all your endeavors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — What you do today may only be made possible by the generous contributions of others. The same ones you've been taking for granted in recent days. Make amends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — If you must play the host today, do so with style. Try to surprise others with anecdotes and expertise that sheds light on the unexplained.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may experience a hunger within that is difficult to satisfy by conventional means. It's time once again to explore, but always remember to use your head!

Quote of the Day

"You're not drunk if you can lie on the floor without holding on."

–Dean Martin

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

408Ville By Louis & Allan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Close to Home By John McPherson

Life with an "eBay" addict.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Italian Sausage Grinder
Inson Stir Fry Pasta

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Chinese Beef &Peppers
Stir Fry Tofu and Vegetables

Worcester

LUNCH
Italian Sausage Grinder
Inson Stir Fry Pasta

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Chinese Beef & peppers
Stir Fry Tofu Vegetables

Hampshire

LUNCH
Italian Sausage Grinder
Inson Stir Fry Pasta

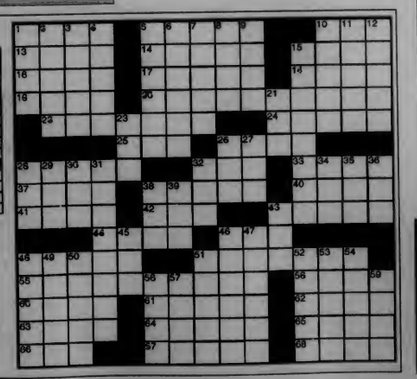
DINNER
Roast Turkey
Chinese Beef & peppers

Berkshire

LUNCH
Italian Sausage Grinder
Inson Stir Fry Pasta
Julia Child's Grilled Cheese Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Chinese Beef & peppers
Stir Fry Tofu Vegetables

Night Editor — Mike Messaros
Photo Technician — Kara Stokes
Copy Editor — Jill Carroll
Production Supervisor — Lisa Metcalf
Production Staff — Stephen Mackey, Allen Mackey



ACROSS
1 Moms' partners
5 Gin's companion
10 Drain
13 Run — go wild
14 Florida city
15 Robin Cook bestseller
16 Prong
17 Safety devices
18 Legal claim
19 "Green Gables" heroine
20 Photographers' needs
22 Hot cereal
24 Writing assignment
25 For each
26 Dryer-trap stuff
28 Actor Bellamy
32 Writer Rand
33 Oklahoma town
37 Actor Sharif
38 Fox's mate
40 Gather leaves
41 Tortilla treat
42 Building shout
43 Colorado ski area
44 Monk's hood
46 Cut (off)
48 Light beam
51 Refreshing drink
55 Type of lotion
58 Viewed
60 State of mind
61 Malicious writings
62 Cat's need
63 Sweet rolls
64 Solo
65 Singer Redding
66 Stallone nickname
67 Most inferior
68 Dell breads

DOWN
1 Statistics
2 — acid
3 Tom's role on "90210"
4 Type of trapshooting
5 Brown-sugar candy
6 Pertaining to vision
7 Twangy
8 Islands, to Pierre
9 Money
10 Gets dirty
11 Microscopic animal
12 Bright flower
15 Bunches
21 Lorna's role on "Bonanza"
23 Trooper's concern: abbr.
26 Soap-making ingredient
27 Lodge
28 Spoil
29 Doctors' grp.
30 Varnish ingredient
31 Carries on 32 Tomahawk
34 Doze
35 Pres. nickname
36 Cozy room
38 Promise
39 Sick
43 Mimic
45 Hockey great
46 Peps up
47 Egg dish
48 Young animals
49 Run — of: get in trouble with
50 Unemotional
51 Work
52 Actress Mary
53 God, e.g.
54 Spooky
56 Cabbage salad
57 Hawaii port
59 Loch — monster

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

M	A	D	S	M	A	M	B	A	K	A	T	E
A	B	E	T	A	V	E	R	T	E	M	I	L
L	I	Q	U	A	S	O	L	A	R	F	I	L	L
H	O	T	T	E	N	T	O	T	D	I	E	N	D	L	S
			U	R	N			U	T	E
L	I	T	T	E	R	S		O	M	P	L	E	T	S
I	O	R	E		Y	U	R	I	S		S	A	U	L
A	M	I	A		R	U	M		G	N	U
M	A	G	E		O	G	E	E	S		O	L	E	G
A	S	K	A	N	C	E		R	U	B	B	E	R	S
		S	H	E			T	O	E
V	A	N	I	L	L	A		B	U	O	Y	A	N	T
I	C	E		O	C	C	U	R		I	G	O	R
O	O	P	S		T	R	U	C	E		N	A	P	E
L	E	S	T		S	E	E	K	S		G	R	E	Y

© 1999, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS weekend
Monday, February 8, 1999
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

UMass edges St. Joe's
Mack's 18 the story

By Aaron Soykin
Collegian Staff

The first 38 minutes may have been boring, but the final two were unforgettable.

For the second straight year, the Massachusetts men's basketball team dodged defeat at the William D. Mullins Center against a pesky St. Joseph's squad yesterday. And thanks to the late-game heroics of UMass (10–12, 6–4 A–10) forward Chris Kirkland, who blocked a potential game- winning lay-up for the Hawks (9–13, 3–7 A–10) with three seconds left, the Minutemen escaped with a 59–58 victory and a tie for second place in the East division of the Atlantic 10 Conference.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Monty Mack

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Ajmal Basit

In a battle which produced five lead changes in the final two minutes, it seemed as though UMass was on the brink of defeat in the waning moments. With 31 seconds remaining in the contest, St. Joe's grabbed a one-point lead, 58–57, after Hawk forward Andre Howard (nine points) put back an offensive rebound.

After a time-out, Minuteman guard Monty Mack fumbled the ball at the top of the key, recovered, and slashed to the hoop. While drawing an array of defenders, Mack pulled up for a 12-foot jumper, and somehow managed to bank in a line-drive, 45-degree angle, game-winning shot with 13 ticks left... but the dramatics did not end there.

St. Joseph's, trailing by one point, elected not to call time- out, and quickly moved the ball down the floor. With time running down, the Hawks looked to Howard again. The junior forward sliced through a confused UMass defense and was alone under the basket, poised to sink a buzzer-beating shot. But suddenly Kirkland came from nowhere and tipped the Howard try away from the hoop and into the hands of Ajmal Basit, who held onto the ball for dear life as time expired.

"Chris came up with a big block at the end of the game because the kid was wide open going into the lane," Minuteman team captain Charlton Clarke said of Kirkland's game-saving effort. "There were two big plays. Monty shouldn't get all of the credit."

After watching a number of contests slip away in the final moments this season, UMass coach Bruiser Flint couldn't help but breathe a sigh of relief at game's end.

"I'm going to be old and gray before my time," Flint said. "I'm just glad that one went my way this time. We pulled it out, we gutted it out. We did the things we wanted to do at the end of the game."

Despite a low-scoring opening half (six points), Mack finished with a game-high 18 points. As the offensive crutch for the Minutemen, Mack was the one player Flint would even consider choosing to take the final shot.

"I said to him, get open, you better get open and get the ball. I told him that we didn't need a three [pointer], just take it to the basket and get fouled," Flint said of Mack.

In a game where the officials never seemed to stop blowing their whistles, UMass was confronted by constant foul trouble in their front court. Kirkland and senior center Lari Ketner were both charged with early fouls, opening the door for Basit, who thrived from the extra minutes. The junior forward/center scored nine points and grabbed seven rebounds — easily his best performance since Kirkland replaced him in the starting line-up well over a month ago.

"I'm just happy to be playing," Basit said. "I haven't had a chance to get a lot of minutes consecutively in games. Some games I play a lot. Some, I don't. I'm just happy that we won and I contributed something."

After two sub-par outings against Texas and Rhode Island, Clarke regained a bit of his old form yesterday, netting seven points despite the pain of an ailing foot — an injury that the doctors believed would keep him out of the line-up. Instead of watching, Clarke played through the pain with the hope that he could light a fire under his team, which needs its captain during the final stretch of the season.

"I just told him that the decision was his," Flint said of Clarke's playing status. "The doctors here told him what they thought would be best for him. And i told him that I was in total agreement with them, but he wanted to play."

UMass next plays Wednesday night at the Mullins Center, where it hopes to avenge an earlier loss to St. Bonaventure.

Officiating plays too big a role in UM win

Punishing the William D. Mullins Center crowd for something they collectively did a long time ago, the referees officiating the Massachusetts men's basketball team's afternoon contest with St. Joseph's decided to subject the onlookers to the ancient Chinese "foul torture."

This brutally effective technique involves the referees blowing the whistles each and every time a team makes its way down the court, so that the fans being disciplined are forced to sit motionless in the arena for as many as six completely uneventful hours.

Seth Koenig

At least, that's how National Geographic might have described the matchup.

In a game decided by foul shots, the Minutemen managed to win the game while shooting only 538 from the free- throw line. With nine shots from the charity stripe in the first half, the Hawks could connect only four times, but the real test would come in the second period.

With important players such as UMass frontcourt members Lari Ketner and Ajmal Basit, and SIU hoopsters Robert Haskins and Damian Reid in foul trouble for the final portion of the game, both teams were playing tentatively nearly the entire second half. The Hawks matched the Minuteman statistic of having five players recording three or more fouls. Ketner seemed the most affected by the officials' eagerness.

"With Lari, that freaks him out," UMass Coach Bruiser Flint said. "From that point on, he's like pretty much done. He's like, 'I can't touch anybody,' and then he gets frustrated."

With 6:32 remaining in the game, both squads were in the double bonus. 22 whistles were blown against Massachusetts in the contest, while 20 went against the Hawks.

As time began to run out in the second half, free throws regularly determined the lead. When Ketner fouled out with 1:04 to go, two shots from the line by Reid put SJU up, 56– 55. St. Joe's forward Andre Howard was

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 7

UM keeps playoff hopes alive with W

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The question for the Massachusetts men's hockey team was whether or not the Minutemen could bounce back from the heartbreaking loss in overtime against No. 7 Boston College on Friday night.

The Minutemen responded in style by scoring three goals in an explosive second period against Merrimack to notch a crucial 3–1 win in Hockey East action on Saturday night at the William D. Mullins Center.

The Minutemen capitalized on their power play opportunities in the second period, as they went two-for- three on the power play to upend the Warriors.

The first period served as a period when both clubs were feel each other out, both teams coming off of disappointing losses. The first frame ended with the score deadlocked at zero.

"It was a slow game in the first period. Both teams were coming off losses to BC and BU, and we were just feel each other out again," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "There was a critical lull for them in the second period where they slowed down just a little and we took advanage of that, and were able to build a lead."

The explosive second period proved to be the factor in this game. With 8:49 remaining in the second period, Merrimack was called for their first costly penalty when defenseman Andrew Fox was called for hooking down Turner.

The Minutemen capitalized less then a minute later when defenseman Toni Soderholm looked to wind up for a shot but instead fed the pass down low to Jeff Turner who roofed the puck over Merrimack goalie Tom Welby to give the Minutemen a 1-0 lead.

"Were talking about not having many naturai goal scorers, for Jeff to take the puck and just snap it over Welby's shoulder was just a really nice finish. It was a big boost coming off of that goal to go on the very next power play," Mallen said.

While UMass was setting up the first goal, Merrimack's leading scorer Rejean Stringer was called for high sticking. The result was that the penalty would stand because only the first player that was in the box was allowed to come out.

"The important thing was scoring that goal with time remaining on that first penalty, that way only the first guy

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

UMass women's hoop splits pair of Atlantic 10 tilts in Philadelphia

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — The Massachusetts women's basketball team may have seen its hopes of repeating as Atlantic 10 East champions fall by the wayside, as they split a pair of conference games this weekend.

The Minutewomen (13–12 overall, 8–4 A–10) struggled to knock off a game Temple squad (7–15, 3–9 A–10) 64–60 on Friday night, before failing to first–place St. Joseph's (10–2 A–10) 64–55 yesterday.

The win over the Owls was expected, as UMass has now won 12 straight contests over their rivals from the City of Brotherly Love.

Most recently, UMass thumped the Owls 71–45 last month at the William D. Mullins Center.

It was the level of difficulty involved in getting the victory that came as a surprise for Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien and her team.

"For whatever reason, everybody struggled tonight," O'Brien said of the Tempie performance. "The bottom line is when push came to shove, we made the plays allowing us to get out of here with a win."

UMass took a 32–28 lead into the half, but failed to pour it on in the second frame, as evidenced when Tempie reeled off nine straight points for a 57–51 advantage with under four minutes to play.

The Minutewomen, who have not previously shown a penchant to win in come–from–behind fashion this season, were now in need of a steady rally to get the win.

Led by NeKole Smith (team–high 15 points) down the stretch, UMass was able to escape triumphantly as they scored 13 of the game's final 16 points.

The freshman center from Ann Arbor, Mich. nailed a turnaround jumper in the lane to push UMass ahead 62–60 with 1:33 remaining.

Kathy Coyner then iced the game as she sank a pair of free throws to close out the scoring after rebounding on a key defensive stop.

Tez Kraft contributed with 12 points, eight rebounds and three assists toward the win.

The Minutewomen were stifled in their efforts to shut down Natalia Isaac who poured in 22 points for Tempie, including five–of–seven from three–point range.

The combination of the Minutewomen's win over the Owls and St. Joe's Saturday night victory over Rhode Island set the stage for a showdown for supremacy in the A–10 East.

With a regional audience viewing the game on A–10 television, UMass turned in their worst half of the season, as the team was trounced 31–13 by the Hawks heading into the break.

St. Joe's opened up a 25–9 bulge as Melissa Coursey connected on her fourth three–pointer of the day, on a wide open look from the right side.

The Minutewomen shot an abysmal 6 for 24 in the first half from the floor,

Turn to HOOP, page 7

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
Monty Mack scored 18 points while pulling down seven rebounds to help UMass defeat St. Joe's 59–58, and helping them pull back into a tie for second in A–10 East.

UMass loses heartbreaker in OT to BC, 5–4

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

CHESTNUT HILL — Heading into their final meeting of the season with No. 7 Boston College (17–8–2, 12–5 in Hockey East), the Massachusetts men's hockey team carried a record of 5–1–1, when it led a game after two periods. But on Friday night the Minutemen added another loss in that category, when they blew a 4–2 lead with under four minutes remaining in regulation, and eventually losing 5–4 in overtime at Kelley Rink.

"First of all, it was a gutsy effort on our part. We are the youngest team in the country battling the defending league champions to 5–4," said UMass coach Joe Mallen of his team's performance. "I think we're a good team right now that's going to learn from this and move forward. They're a little more skilled then we are, but you got to give them credit they came back and got the job done."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Mike Johnson

The Minutemen (6–17–2, 3–12–2 in Hockey East) found themselves up 4–2 with just under four minutes, when BC defenseman Mike Mottau received an incredible pass from winger Blake Bellefeuille, and then beat UMass goalkeeper Mike Johnson glove side to bring the game within one. But more importantly for the Eagles the goal brought the crowd of 5,889 to its feet, and they would remain that way until Brooks Orpik eventually scored the game winner in OT.

The goal, which tied the game for the Eagles with 2:01 remaining, to UMass' credit, was well–defended. It was an incredible play by two talented players. Ali–American Brian Gionta received a pass from behind the net and set up in the corner. He then slid a perfect pass out in front of the net to Bellefeuille, who with his back turned to the goal, one–timed the puck between his legs, through the legs of Dean Stork and the five hole of Johnson.

With the score now tied at four, things seemingly couldn't get any worse for the Minutemen, but they did. Besides being in a hostile territory, they received a penalty 29 seconds into the overtime period, luckily for the Minutemen they were able to kill off the penalty. But only 11 seconds after killing off the powerplay, Orpik collected a pass from Nick Pierandri and just unloaded from the blueline. The puck made its way through a screen and several skates and found its way behind Johnson, to give the Eagles the OT win.

"We are the ninth place team in the league facing a team with a pretty good record and 99 years of hockey tradition, we have six. We played a courageous game, and we are going to keep these guys focused and our desire is to make the playoffs," Mallen said.

Despite losing the heartbreaker and a game the Minutemen almost needed to have in terms of the Hockey East Conference, they had something positive to look at.

"It's a far cry from 7–1 [the score of the first meeting between BC and UMass this season]. We went from 7–1 to 3–1 to 5–4 in overtime, and I think that's a good job by our guys and our program. We just need to find a way to finish it off," Mallen said.

The UMass offense which has been dormant pretty much all season against the good clubs, came through with four goals in the first two periods. The early onslaught caught the BC crowd off guard.

Four different players scored two points or more for UMass. The combination of Jeff Turner and Ray Geever almost proved to be fatal for the Eagles. Geever provided the Minutemen with a career high of three points with a goal and two assists on the night. Besides assisting on the first and third goals, Geever scored the second UMass goal, when Martin Miljko took a shot on BC goalie Scott Clemmenson. But unlike the first two meetings with the Eagles, the Minutemen followed their shots and Geever was the beneficiary of this rebound as he lifted the lose puck over Clemmenson.

Turner continued his streak of eight straight games with at least one point, when he collected a goal and an assist. The Saginaw, Mich. native buried his ninth goal of the season with 26 ticks left in the first period, when he walked in and beat Clemmenson glove side. Turner's assist came on Joey Culgin's

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page7

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
Jeff Turner scored two goals and assisted on another, helping lead the Minutemen to a split in a pair of crucial Hockey East matches this weekend.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 11 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, February 9, 1999

UMass' learning communities boost academic success

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

A conference on the importance of learning communities in higher education was held Friday in the Campus Center.

Making Connections: Learning Communities for a Student–Centered University was sponsored by the University Task Force on General Education, the Office of Student Affairs and the Office of the Chancellor.

According to the Office of Human Relations, a learning community is "a group with an intentional and articulated commitment to learning, and to collaboration and exchange in the learning process."

"We're looking at a whole range of communities," said John Jenkins, the Chair of the General Education Task Force. "Not just Residential Academic Programs (RAPs) and Talent Advancements Programs (TAPs), but also learning communities within student activities, and learning communities within a single classroom."

Christopher Dennis, the conference's keynote speaker, is a UMass graduate and a former Director of Residence Life at the University of Pennsylvania. Dennis pointed to the nationwide popularity of Freshman Interest Group Seminars (FIGS), in which students "move through two or more classes together as a group," as a sign that learning communities are becoming more common at American universities.

He also spoke of the importance of "interdisciplinary learning."

"My daughter, who is in eighth–grade, is taking a class where students study a stream," he said. "They took an ecological survey of the stream, studied its history, took water samples and examined the plant and animal life. With that one project, her class covered biology, history, geology and ecology. If that kind of education becomes common in lower grades, then institutions of higher education will have to modify their own curriculum."

He recommended that colleges focus more closely on the individual needs of students. "When I was at Penn, we discovered that students did most of their studying between 8 p.m. and 2 a.m., yet the college held all of their tuiorials and study sessions during the day," he said. "We made sure that there was always someone available to give students academic assistance."

John Jenkins was also a speaker, describing the Task Force on General Education's attempts to redesign the University's general education requirements, and their desire to incorporate learning communities into undergraduate education.

"What has been determined by the more than 50 members of our group is that they want students to be better prepared for a lifetime of learning, and not just for us to determine a catechism of informa-

Turn to RAP, page 3

Progress cited in civil rights talks

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Meetings to resolve a dispute over allowing Human Rights Director Shenandoah Titus to speak to Amherst police officers about the October confrontation of an Amherst College student, are going well according to Town Manager Barry Del Castilho.

Del Castilho submitted a summary report to the Select Board last night of two meetings that have taken place, and more that are planned, to resolve the dispute and prevent it from happening again.

"[They discussed] differences of opinion frankly but sensitively," Del Castilho said.

The first meeting included Select Board member Hill Boss, Titus and Civil Rights Review Commission (CRRC) co–chairs George Levenger and Raul Torres. The second included Amherst Police Chief Donald Maia, Deputy Chief Charles Scherpa and Captain David Jankowski.

"It is my clear impression there is common ground," Boss said.

Castilho is mediating the meetings, which are also addressing a comment made by Maia in the Daily Hampshire Gazette on Jan. 25, calling the CRRC a "kangaroo court."

A complaint sent to Titus from the Amherst College student and two Amherst College counselors, outlined the October incident.

The contents of that letter was reported Feb. 3 in the Daily Hampshire Gazette saying a black female Amherst College student was questioned by two white Amherst police officers about a CVS prescription that was believed to be fake. The two officers questioned the student in a confrontational tone with the implication of wrongdoing, the letter said, according to the article.

The pharmacist who had been suspicious of the prescription found It was valid and apologized, but the officers did not.

According to Del Castiiho's report, Titus went to Lt. Jeff Roy and requested to speak to the officers involved. Roy told Titus the officers had acted appropriately. Maia also denied Titus access to the officers.

"I had been assessing for many months his [Titus] professed need to speak directly with police officers against whom he had received complaints, versus the Chief's and my longstanding policy that the department gets the first shot at investigation and a response to the complainteni," Del Castiiho wrote in the report.

Titus wrote a stern letter Jan. 29, according to the Gazette, requesting Maia explain the policy that disallowed him access to the officers and an apology for Maia's comment which he called racist. The letter was sent to the Gazette, Del Castiiho, Roy, members of the Human Rights Commission and Rev. Kenneth Lewis of Goodwin Memorial AME Zion Church.

The letter, along with media attention and a public discussion of

Turn to BOARD, page 3

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
Amherst town manager Barry Del Castiiho gave a report about meetings between the chief of police, the human rights director and the civil rights review commission last evening.

UM student seriously hurt in chemical explosion

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

An explosion at the Conte Polymer Science Research Center Friday afternoon sent graduate student Tao Xie to the hospital.

The accident occurred at approximately 2 p.m. According to University of Massachusetts Spokeswoman Barbara Pitoniak, Xie, 27, was in a sixth–floor laboratory working with an organic peroxide when the container holding the chemical exploded.

Glass from the explosion caused injuries to Xie's hands and lacerations to his face, Pitoniak said. He also incurred serious damage to his left eye.

Environmental Health and Safety, the Amherst Fire Department and the UMass Police Department responded to the accident, and Xie was taken immediately to the Bay State Medical Center by ambulance. He was then taken by helicopter to the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary in Boston.

It was originally thought Xie might lose some vision in his left eye. But reports from University officiais indicate he will probably regain depth perception and three–dimensional vision. He is currently at Massachusetts General Hospital, where he will be undergoing surgery on his arm today.

Pitoniak said Xie was not wearing safety goggles at the time of the accident; he had them in his pocket. He was also not working under a hood.

However, he had taken the lab safety course last fall, and was "quite familiar with the chemical," according to Dr. Jacques Penelle, director of the Polymer Synthesis Laboratory.

Originally from Ningbu Jiangxi, China, Xie had studied with Penelle at the University of Louvain in Belgium. He came to UMass as a foreign exchange student in 1997, and officially transferred as a graduate student this September. Xie was working with the organic peroxide as part of a research project headed by Penelle.

"It is known that this is a potentially dangerous chemical... [But] he has been working with it for several months," Penelle said. "That's part of the reason why we don't really understand what happened."

According to Dr. Donald Robinson, the director of Environmental Health and Safety, the University is waiting to interview Xie when he recovers to determine exactly what happened.

"Right now we are primarily concerned with the condition of the student," Robinson said. "We will have time to [investigate what happened later] and to see what preventative measures can be taken in the future... It's a sobering situation."

Deliberations get underway in trial; vote could be Fri.

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House prosecutors argued their last stand against President Clinton yesterday, challenging skeptical senators to "cleanse the office" by convicting him on impeachment counts of perjury and obstruction of justice. Clinton's lawyer dismissed the case as a dark vision of Republican retribution.

"A failure to convict will make the statement that lying under oath, while unpleasant and to be avoided, is not all that serious," said chief prosecutor Henry Hyde.

The Illinois Republican was scathing in rebutting defense claims that the House prosecutors had wanted "too badly to win." None of them, he said, "has committed perjury nor obstructed justice nor claimed false privileges. None of us has hidden evidence under anyone's bed nor encouraged false testimony before the grand jury."

"That's what you want to do if you want to win too badly." Earlier, in a final summation for the defense, White House Counsel Charles F.C. Ruff launched a sharp attack on the Republican prosecutors. They are, he said, "more focused on retribution, more designed to achieve partisan ends, more uncaring about the future we face together."

Referring to the prosecutors' claims of "seven pillars of obstruction," he ridiculed them for building their case on "shifting sand castles of speculation."

A two-thirds majority is required to find Clinton guilty and automatically remove him from office. Even Republicans concede that won't happen, and some GOP senators have suggested that — particularly on the perjury charge — it is possibe a majority of the Senate might vote to acquit. The charges stem from Clinton's sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky and his efforts to conceal it.

The final presentations — three hours for each side in the historic trial — marked the end of the argument phase in the four-week trial. Beginning today, senators will deliberate on Clinton's fate, with final votes on the articles of impeachment expected on Thursday or Friday.

Prospects for opening final deliberations to the public faded during the day, when Majority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.) announced his opposition.

"It's going to be hard to meet the two-thirds hurdle" needed to open the doors, conceded Texas Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, a supporter of open debate.

While the outcome of the trial seemed sure, House prosecutors showed they intend to fight to the end.

Hyde asked Senate leaders to approve three subpoenas for people who have cast doubt on sworn testimony that White House aide Sidney Blumenthal gave in the trial last week. Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, (D-S.D.) said Democrats were prepared to object if any GOP senator sought approval for the request. "We don't need additional witnesses," he said at the end of the day.

Air Force to utilize ad campaign

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Worried about failing short of its recruiting goal for the first time in 20 years, the Air Force said yesterday it will spend $54 million on television ads to try to boost enlistment.

The campaign pushes the Air Force's overall advertising budget to $76 million and marks the first time it will use paid ads in recruiting efforts.

"We need the awareness that television can generate right now, so it can begin to have an impact this year," said Brig. Gen. Peter U. Sutton, commander of the Air Force Recruiting Service, headquartered at Randolph Air Force Base.

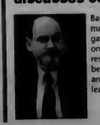
The TV spots will begin airing in March, during the NCAA basketball tournament, and will consist of public service announcements.

The Air Force also plans to launch a national ad blitz in October to coincide with the new fall programming schedule. Those ads will feature commercials developed by a private ad agency. The Air Force has previously relied on print ads and public service

Turn to CAMPAIGN, page 2

GEORGE A. LYNCH JR. / COLLEGIAN

Scientific discovery...



Senior microbiology major Alexandria Lipka works in an independent study in Dr. Susan Leschine's lab at the Morrill science building.

EXTENDED FORECAST

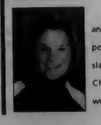
Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 32	HIGH: 49 LOW: 33	HIGH: 50 LOW: 33

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Select Board discusses complaint

Barry Del Castilho, town manager for Amherst, gave a report last night on meetings held to resolve a dispute between the police and an area human rights leader. See story, above.

NEWS PAGE 1



A Love Supreme

The sweet sounds of Coltranie's "Africa" filled Bowker auditorium last Friday night, thanks to jazz great Reggie Workman. Check out our review inside.

ARTS PAGE 5

I'm King of the hill

Freshman Tina King and the UMass ski team performed well in the slalom this weekend. Check out our wrap-up.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 8
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
FYI 8
News 3
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Hollywood investigated by feds

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A Justice Department inquiry into the way movies are distributed to theaters caught Hollywood off guard, as executives and analysts wondered yesterday what suddenly triggered the most aggressive government review in 50 years.

The government's wide-ranging request for materials dating back to January 1996 was spelled out in a 10-page document distributed Thursday and Friday to the major studios and two large theater chains. The document focuses on the issue of whether all theaters get a fair chance to show the films they want.

It appears to be the Justice Department's closest inspection of movie distribution practices since a crackdown in the late 1940s, when studios — accused of monopolistic practices — were forced to sell their theater chains.

But no one in Hollywood knows what prompted this request. Indeed, since the Reagan administration, there has been a relaxing of the rules, leading to the return of studio-owned theaters.

"It's not as if there's recently been a dramatic change in the nature of power in Hollywood to suggest that this is caused by circumstances that are new and different," industry analyst Stewart Halpern said. "But apparently the government sees something."

Justice spokeswoman Jennifer Rose said only: "We are looking into certain possibly anti-competitive practices in the distribution of motion pictures."

Among those receiving investigative demands, civil equivalents of criminal subpoenas, were: Walt Disney Co.; Viacom Inc.'s Paramount Pictures; Sony Corp.; News Corp.'s 20th Century Fox; Seagram Co.'s Universal Studios Inc.; Time Warner Inc.'s Warner Bros.; and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc.

GEORGE A. CHEN JR. / COLLEGIAN

Why do you need calcium

Kimberly Kenneson, a junior nursing major, and Michael Cabot, an undecided junior, examine a skeleton in their anatomy and physiology class.

■ campaign

continued from page 1

announcements.

The Air Force is having trouble with recruitment despite the introduction last fall of new enlistment bonuses of up to $9,000 for 115 qualifying career specialties. The armed service is 6 percent short of its recruitment goal of 33,800 this fiscal year, officials said.

Thanks for reading the Daily Collegian; New England's largest college daily!

Police Log

Animal Complaint
Feb. 3
A jogger reported being bothered by a dog on Stadium Drive. The owner was located to retrieve the animal.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 7
An individual reported a confrontation with two individuals near Prince Residence Hall. The matter was resolved.
An individual was reported disrupting quiet hours in Cance Residence Hall.
Derogatory notes were left on a resident's door in Melville Residence Hall.
Feb. 4
Police were called to assist Parking Services with a dispute in Lot 46, near Gorman Residence Hall, over a tow fee.

B&E/Burglary
Feb. 7
A vehicle was broken into in Lot 32, south of Massachusetts Avenue.

Disturbance
Feb. 7
A disturbance was reported at Washington Residence Hall. Individuals fled prior to police arrival.
A large crowd was dispersed from the Malcolm X Center at the Berkshire Dining Commons.

Drug Law Offenses
Feb. 5
Drugs were confiscated from Washington Residence Hall. Charges are pending.

Fraud
Feb. 6
Rui B. Pacheco, 18, of 273 Dover St., Fall River, was arrested in Kennedy Residence Hall and charged with improper use of a credit card under $250.
Feb. 4
An individual from Thatcher Residence Hall reported illegal charges on a credit card that was never applied for.

Larceny
Feb. 5
An individual reported food stolen from a room in Dwight Residence Hall.
Illegal charges were made on a credit card which was never received by the victim.
A TV/VCR unit, valued at $400, was reported stolen from John Adams Residence Hall.
An individual reported illegal charges were made on a lost credit card at the University Mini-Store.
Feb. 4
An individual reported a grill and light housing was stolen from a vehicle parked in Lot 44, north of Sylvan.
A fire axe, valued at $125, was stolen from a fire truck on Infirmary Way.
Two individuals reported their credit cards stolen from Leach Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations
Feb. 5
Alcohol was seized from Lot 32, south of Massachusetts Avenue, and from Lot 22, west of University Drive.

Noise Complaint
Feb. 7
A large noisy group was reported outside of Patterson Residence Hall.
Loud noise was reported on the second floor of Pierpont Residence Hall.
A large noisy group was reported at Lot 50 on John Adams Road.
Feb. 5
An individual was reported yelling on the mall, disrupting residents of John Adams Residence Hall.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 6
Daniel Francis Geddes, 19, of 151 Salem St., Lawrence, was arrested on North Pleasant Street and charged with operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, marked lanes violation, and miscellaneous motor vehicle equipment violation.
Julius R. Williams, 42, of 32 Hutchinson St., Springfield, was arrested in Lot 66, north of Furcolo, and charged with unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, learners permit violation, unregistered motor vehicle, number plate violation to conceal ID, motor vehicle lights violation, and failure to wear a seat belt.

Vandalism
Feb. 7
Four vehicles were damaged in Lot 32, south of Massachusetts Avenue.
Minor damage was reported to a parked vehicle in the Campus Center garage.
Feb. 6
An individual reportedly kicked out the plexi-glass from the Hasbrouck bus shelter.
A window was smashed on the fifth floor of Grayson Residence Hall. An individual will be given a summons.
A vehicle was damaged in Lot 32, south of Massachusetts Avenue.

Anyone interested in photographing news, features, sports or concerts for the Collegian should come to a general photography meeting today at 6 p.m. in the newsroom of the Collegian, located in the Campus Center Basement.

See you there!

Campus Career Network
University of Massachusetts Amherst
We're Here for You!

WELCOME BACK!

Have you visited your network office? Find out what's there for YOU!

FEBRUARY Correction

Engineering Offices
Career Library & Career Information Center
37 Mather Drive
545-2224

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY
1 Ruth Carey, Asst. Director Career Planning Public Health/Education/Nursing Totman 150 545-6252	2	3	4	New England Board of Higher Education presentation for internships in environmental program in New England for the summer $3000
8 Ginger Goldsbury, Asst. Director Career Planning Food and Natural Resources Stockbridge 111A 545-6011	9	10	11 Career Fair CC Auditorium ALANA Fair CC Auditorium	Co-op Fair
15	16	17	18 Health and Wellness Fair	19
22 Dianna Dunn, Field Experience Arts and Humanities 264 Bartlett 545-6266	23	24	25	26

David Carroll, Asst. Director Career Planning Natural Sci. & Math Mather 208 545-6264

Tommie Joyner, Asst. Director Career Planning Social & Behavioral Sci. South College 105 577-0417

Clark Edwards, Associate Director Career Planning Engineering Marston 119 545-6251

Cori Ashworth, Asst. Director Field Experience Management School of Management 208C 577-0418

Jeff Silver, Field Experience Social & Behavioral Sci. South College 102A 545-6251

Susan Hammond, Asst. Director Career Planning Humanities and Fine Arts Bartlett 266 545-6255

Gloria DiFulvio, Field Experience PublicHealth/Education/Nursing Arnold 416 577-0427

Check the bulletin boards in your academic deparment for more events.

VISIT OUR WEB PAGE @ http://www-ccn.acad.umass.edu

■ rap

continued from page 1

tion that they should be given," said Jenkins. "We're exploring numerous ways in which a learning community can be provided for every first-year student."

The Task Force also recommends that general education courses "achieve a balance between acquisition of subject matter and engagement in students in inquiry, investigation and creative solution seeking."

"We're recognizing that UMass is a Research I University, and one of our greatest strengths is a faculty skilled in research, inquiry and investigation," Jenkins said. "We'll be proposing that faculty be encouraged to teach our undergraduate students in general education the excitement of inquiry in each of their disciplines."

According to Office of Institutional Research, students involved in RAP/TAP programs have a much higher retention rate than other students. In 1997, the one-year retention rate for all first-time first-year students was 79 percent, while the rate for first-time first-year students involved in a Residential Academic Program or a Talent Advancement Program was 87.6 percent.

GEORGE A. CHEN JR. / COLLEGIAN

Getting your hands dirty...

Martha Montes, a senior fine arts major specializing in works on paper, spreads ink into the template for a print in the Fine Arts Centeros.

■ board

continued from page 1

the October incident in a Jan. 26 CRRC meeting, prompted Del Castilho to hold the meetings, he said.

Maia's comment concerning the CRRC, Del Castilho said on the report, was not intended to be racist.

"Unfortunately he [Maia] used the term 'kangaroo court,'" Del Castilho wrote. "However he emphatically denied that the term had any racist connotation in mind... the use of this term was inappropriate, but because it was name-calling, not because it was racism."

Del Castilho said the issue of the compliant was made known to the CRRC but should not have been publicly discussed in its Jan. 26 meeting.

"That complaint should not have been discussed in public," Del Castilho said. "Out of concern for privacy of the complaintent and respondent."

He ended the report stating his confidence in the police department.

"I firmly believe that the Amherst Police Department is about professional, sensitive and non-discriminatory as a police department can be at this point in human history," Del Castilho wrote. "He [Titus] is acutely and personally aware of the very real history of police departments... he also sees the professionalism of the Amherst Police Department and the fact that complaints (at least formal complaints) are relatively few and usually involve insensitivity rather than such hardcore racism as brutality, false arrests or racial epithets."

Work for the Collegian. We're hiring.

GEORGE A. CHEN JR. / COLLEGIAN

Not too short!

Bernie Celinas gives a haircut to senior communications major Jonah Pollard in the Campus Center Barber Shop.

New government regulations geared toward making loan process simpler

WASHINGTON (AP) — New federal regulations will make it easier and faster for farmers to get guaranteed loans, Vice President Al Gore said yesterday.

The changes to be published in the Federal Register later this week are designed to reduce the time and paperwork required to approve applications as well as make the loan approval process more consistent.

The Farm Service Agency (FSA) guarantees loans with agricultural lenders for thousands of American farmers and ranchers each year.

"Changing our procedures recognizes that lenders with sufficient agricultural lending experience are qualified to use some of their own loan-approval procedures," Gore said. "This new policy will help expand the number of lenders participating in the program by making it easier to use."

For example, for loans under $50,000, the application form will be cut from six pages to one.

The new policy will also feature a Preferred Lender Program. Under that feature, lenders who have their credit management systems approved by the FSA can go through a streamlined process that includes automatic application approval if the agency does not respond within 14 days of submission.

USDA officials said the new guidelines are part of a push to decrease the FSA's authority over individual guaranteed loans to more of an oversight and advice role.

Paid advertisement

THE JOB INTERVIEW: 5 shocking truths that can help you nail your dream job

Let's face it. Nobody looks forward to job interviews. A total stranger stares you down for an hour while you sit there uncomfortably in your pantyhose, trying to sound super-intelligent while also remembering to keep your legs crossed correctly. While you'd prefer to avoid thinking about the whole thing, and just get through it when the time comes - Don't! Here are a few "insider" insights about the whole process that may shock you, but can help you better connect with your interviewer and distinguish yourself from the competition.

1. RESUMES ARE OBSOLETE

Well, they're not really obsolete, but they are only one piece of the job puzzle. "Most people spend much more time on their resume than they do preparing for each interview. That's a huge mistake," says Bruce Tulgan, the author of Work this Way, a book about how to thrive in your first few jobs. "People can easily lie on resumes. The interview is much more important, which is why recruiters spend so much time doing them - and why you should spend time getting ready."

What to do:

- Think about all the time you will spend on your job search; then, carve out a chunk of those hours to prep for your interviews.

2. WORK EXPERIENCE NOT REQUIRED

Okay, so you may not have a ton of real work experience. But that's not what recruiters are really looking for when they are hiring new college grads. Believe it or not, the very fact that you are young can be worth a lot to many companies. They're in search of a 22-year-old's energy and fresh perspective. You may have a whole new way of looking at things, and that's invaluable to most companies. "Frankly, experience is not very important to us," says Tom Scott, co-founder of Nantucket Nectars, a booming small beverage company with current annual sales over $50 million. "We can teach you to do the things you need to do here. What we're looking for is hunger." As Scott suggests, entry-level job interviews are not designed to weigh your experience, they're supposed to measure your smarts, enthusiasm, personality and passion.

What to do:

- Instead of just describing your past summer jobs, focus on stories that showcase your energy and passion for the activities you really care about. Or, talk about how your leadership has made a difference. While your examples may be summer jobs, they may also be a concert you organized, a paper or project for a favorite class, or a team sport that you play. Make it clear that you will be just as hungry and passionate about the job for which you are interviewing.

3. GOOD QUESTIONS, NOT GOOD ANSWERS CAN CLOSE THE DEAL

Most people spend time preparing answers that will showcase their intelligence, savvy and interest in a company. This is important. But preparing some thoughtful, well-researched questions can accomplish the same thing - and often with greater impact! When the interviewer gets around to "Any questions?" (and he or she will), that's your chance to strut any stuff that you haven't been asked about during the course of the interview. What you reveal in a well-thought-out question might even nail you the job. Jodi Kantor, a New York City college grad, used this strategy to beat out heavy competition for a job as political aide to the Mayor. When she interviewed for the position she wanted to highlight her passion for and understanding of the job. She called on her own experience with New York's parking ticket and birth certificate bureaucracy to make her point. "I made sure to ask specific questions about whether I could work on customer service projects that would fix problems similar to the ones I had faced as a city resident," she says. Turns out that the Mayor was launching some big service initiatives in that area. Kantor's interviewer was so impressed with her genuine interest in the city's problems that he hired her and put her on the team to help solve them.

What to Do:

- Stay away from obvious questions (i.e.; the ones answered in the company literature). Instead, find out what your interviewer thinks about a relevant company or industry issue. Or, ask about a specific part of the job that is of particular interest to you.

4. YOU CAN KNOW EVERYTHING ABOUT A COMPANY

Many people look at prepping for an interview like studying for an exam. They read all the obvious material to make sure they know "who, what and where". This is a great start, but it's just the tip of the iceberg. Reading a company's recruiting brochure and spitting it back in the interview won't impress anyone. To really stand out you need to arm yourself with current and substantive information about the company and industry. Thanks to today's technology, this does not have to be a daunting or time consuming proposition. You can learn a lot with minimal effort and make a great impact because most other undergrad candidates won't take the extra step.

What to Do:

- Read the newspaper! See what's happening in the world that might be relevant to the respective company or industry.
- Call and ask for a company's sales materials to see how they talk to their customers.
- Use on-line info like company or news web sites. Sites like www.wetfeetpress.com and www.vaultreports.com carry great company and industry profiles for sale.
- Utilize free news information resources at your school library like Lexis/Nexis or the Bloomberg News Service.

5. FUN, NOT FACTS MAY MAKE THE DIFFERENCE

Probably the most important piece of information a recruiter will want to know but will never ask directly is "What is this person like to be around?" A good recruiter knows you will be working some long hours in a closed room with other people. You better believe that a key question on his or her checklist is "Do I want to work with this person? Would my colleagues want to work with this person". Let's face it, many people will have the same skills as you, but not everyone can package those skills with your personality. You want the recruiter to walk away wanting to work with you!

What to Do:

- Make sure pieces of YOU come out in the interview! Be confident about yourself, and communicate with energy and enthusiasm. Don't be afraid to laugh when appropriate or talk about a personal issue to make a relevant point.

The Secret Success Series
brings you information designed to help you achieve your personal and career goals. Watch for the rest of this series in future issues of your school newspaper.

Secret
"Strong Enough for a Man, But Made for a Woman"

... The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ...

Candy hearts of darkness

'Here, take some candy. Mike."

And invariably the season begins once again, with someone offering me some of those candy hearts with come- ons and put-downs.

"Oh, look, mine says 'Loverboy.'"

"Mine says 'Sexy.' Hee hee. It's like they know me!"

"What does yours say, Mike?"

"Uh... 'You Smell Like Dog Poo.'"

Mike Messaros

Now, granted, there are other ones I get. Like 'E-mail Me.'" Or, 'No.'" When a piece of pre-processed sugar turns you down, it hurts. And you can't hide the hurt.

Being that my valentine for 22 years has been Mom ("Well, if you're not going to get something for anyone else..." — yeah, that's the definition of rubbing salt in a wound), I don't exactly look forward to the day.

You'd think that karma would be on my side, too. When I was in grade school and we had those little cardboard boxes on the front of our desks and we had to give everyone a valentine, I used to draw stuff on the cards of all the girls. I used to draw Transformers on their envelopes. Transformers. You know how hard it is to draw Optimus Prime with felt markers? The colors are bleeding, it's hard to draw his gun...

And yet I never got one of those secret admirer cards that I always yearned for. Not one. Sure, Jeff Stefano always got one. Every year. I don't know why, either. Maybe it's because he wore cologne at such an early age or because he was so good at dodgeball (and he was good at dodgeball. I give him that). All the girls would swoon from outside the dodgeball circle: "Look at those muscles."

And I'd be all ready for it, too. It's not like I'd be searching for that "special something." I'd know exactly what to get that special someone: a check for $20.

Because I can think of nothing more romantic than a check for $20 inside of a card. "Here you go, honey. Buy something as sweet as you are. Like SpiceWorld."

But the realization sets in that life keeps moving, even on Feb. 14. Hidden behind the rose-tinted dates, presents and boot-knockin' are people bending over in the shower to pick up soap, bitter-tasting peanuts and wedgies.

So many things are inescapably unromantic.

Like buying toilet paper. There is nothing like walking through Stop and Shop with an oversized package of padded double-ply (I like to treat myself right...) value-brand (...but I do like to pinch pennies, too) toilet paper. There is no way to hide the toilet paper behind milk and Honey-Frosted Wheaties in your basket, and there's no casual way to hold it under one arm, to not look like you're announcing to the world, "I am going home and I'm going to use this."

Or talking to a member of MassMAIL ("Did you know the government is funding a secret war against Canada?" "We're at war with Canada?" "Dude, when are you gonna open your eyes?"). Unromantic.

Or listening to one of Chancellor Scott's pre-presentation comedy bits ("I just flew in from UMass-Dartmouth and boy are my arms tired." Ba-dum-dum. "I'm almost too tired to cut faculty. Almost..."). Nothing says unromantic like a ruddy-cheeked Scott trying to warm up an audience before he begins to trip over himself verbally.

And of course, there's always Rollerderby on TNN.

So take refuge, lonely-hearts. The day after Valentine's Day this year is President's Day, and nothing says unromantic like a goony guy from Illinois in a top hat and some dork with wooden teeth.

Which is why I'm a President's Day kind of guy. I say, honor the memory of Warren G. Harding and James Garfield. Dress up like your favorite president: "I'm William H. Taft and I died in a bathtub!"

Now that looks good on a candy heart.

Mike Messaros is a Collegian columnist.

Generation "E"

X, the undefined, used in algebra to represent an unknown. The Roman numeral 10, and the letter given to a certain type of "file" that's opened every Sunday night at 9 pm (check your local listings).

A letter that has seemingly few friends in the alphabet world. Much like my generation, X is an aimless drifter, wandering like a Bedouin from party to mall to school where it does nothing academically fruitful and causes all authority figures stress and strife.

I have never really considered myself an "X-er." An "X-er" is one of those annoying 20-somethings who constantly complains and moans about some social "problem" that's usually not a "problem" at all, while sipping his/her five- dollar mocha grande latte double de-caf and holding an Oprah "book of the month" in the other hand.

Melody Zagami

X-ers drink coffee, quote crappy, obscure authors and practice random acts of snobbery, which is funny because they usually work at Starbucks and don't understand half of what they read. They are, and this is a generalization I've gathered from watching Friends, Party of Five, and my friends' older brothers and sisters, a bunch of, inefficient humans who really don't serve any purpose except to keep Colombians in business (coffee, not weed, get your head out of the bong for once, honestly!) and fill up over chat rooms with faux philosophy.

My generation, let me tell you, is nothing like this, not in the least bit.

I don't want to look like a jerk here (too late, huh?) If you see me at Starbucks, don't go off on a "Zagami's a hypocrite rant" because I like to pay ridiculous amounts of money for coffee handed to me by a green-aproned attitude with legs, and I like capitalism — step on the little man and his coffee beans. But I'd pick Dunkies over Starbucks anyday, and that's where the difference begins: with coffee. (And you thought it was something worthwhile.)

My generation starts with those in my grade right now mostly 18- and 19-year-olds, just to clear up why we aren't X-ers. We pick Dunkin' Donuts because we know that it's cheaper and it's good old American Joe. We have too many other things to do with our time than sit in a coffee shop and ponder exactly what Kerouac meant by On the Road.

Instead, knowing that a Dunkie's is unappealing to sit in anyways with the sticky floor and those annoying seats that never fully rotate, we go out on that Kerouac road that people talk about and find experiences for ourselves.

There are many who simply sit and play video games, watch TV, and listen to rock and roll or that "grunge rock" I hear the kids talk about.

But the beauty of our generation is that you can do that, it's okay, and eventually, one day you'll get off your asses, get moving and learn about responsibility. Right now you're just doing what kids do best. When we do get up and move, we move at a fast pace. This leads me me to call our generation Generation "E." The E is for energy.

Every academic institution I've ever attended has uttered a large sigh of relief when my class left the building, as if to say, "They're gone, we can all get back to work." It isn't that we misbehaved or were delinquint. The classification I give us is "E" because I say we emit a raw energy — a kind of loose wire in the circuit of society. A society that shows us we can be anything we want to be — we just have to want it bad enough.

And if there's anything we want, it's to have fun. You see, E-ers as I call us — and that looks and sounds awkward, but work with me, work with me — have stripped away all the unimportant, trivial barnacles of life and gotten right down to what most people spend their whole lives trying to do: having fun and being happy. We know how to have a good time.

So what if you don't get straight A's or join the Peace Corps in Rwanda? We know that you can't be afraid to do what makes you happy, and if one of the aforementioned is a choice of yours, by all means, go to town. A lot of who we are as individuals and who we are as a social unit of "E's" stems from our parents.

Our parents were the baby boomers, the largest generation to ever pass through the birth canal of a nation. That's pretty impressive and time makes things better, usually, so the chances that a generation of cool people would have even better kids are pretty high. Our parents, no matter what occupation they hold now are all from one American mold.

They're dreamers and doers; they went against the grain when no one else would. They saw a country lose its identity in Vietnam and lose its confidence with Watergate. They experienced the repercussions of the depression their parents lived through. And they were teenagers during a renaissance of expression through literature, art and rock and roll.

They've taught us what we can achieve and how to keep our heads above the roar of negativity that so often plagues children. In my own household the word "can't" is far worse than any other four-letter word — it is simply not allowed.

I have a lot of different friends. Hippies, rappers, smart kids, dumb kids, smart kids who act dumb; you name any different type of group and a representative is on my speed dial. They all have dreams, aspirations, and the will to live them someday.

Many say that we've been desensitized and perhaps we have. We know the cruelties of society and how man sometimes has potential for evil. We've seen a lot in 17 or 18 short years and have dealt with problems never before faced by a generation.

For us, the future is uncertain. There's the Y2K thing: just as we get into the real world all the computers shut down — super, terrific. Then, there's the problem of AIDS, that flesh-eating bacteria thing, over population and, according to all those prophecy shows on Fox and every summer blockbuster, the end of the world. But we are never discouraged. We are rarely swayed. The "E" isn't just about energy, it's about spirit too.

Melody Zagami is a UMass student.

Share your voice.

Write for Ed/Op.

Letters to the Editor

Outdated photos were misused

To the editor:

I am writing in response to the swimming photos used in the Collegian on Monday, February 1, 1999. Two photos each featured a swimmer doing the butterfly — a male in one and a female in the other. It was very clear that no one cared when the pictures were taken or who the people in the photos were, which shows a lack of respect for the swimmers and the sport. I don't even have any idea what year you took the woman's photograph, and you pictured ex-swimmer and water polo player Greg Menton in the other picture.

Greg Menton died at a Dartmouth swim meet on January 10, 1996, my freshman year. He was by far one of the best athletes this University has ever seen. He was also my friend. Many people, including the athletes and coaches who are a part of the aquatics programs here were hurt by seeing Greg pictured on Monday. His sudden death was a shock and still has an effect on some people.

You need to check out who is pictured and the year the photo was taken before you print the paper. It does matter who is pictured, and I know that photographers have been at our meets this year.

Here at UMass the aquatics program considers itself a large family. Even though Greg is gone and his water polo number is retired, he is still part of our family. Please show some respect for him and the aquatics program. Do some research before you attempt to make deadlines.

Julie Alexander
Amherst

Love without a face

Love someone that I meet on the Internet? How can I bond with someone without talking to them in person? No one meets real people there anyway. These are the three thoughts I always had about the Internet, until last November. In a sense, then, I will have a very unique Valentine's Day this Sunday.

I had just become familiar with how chat rooms work, so meeting someone was not even a thought as I sat down that day. After a few minutes of only remotely interesting conversation, though, someone intrigued me. I noticed she was typing in lyrics to songs I like very much. Therefore, as an attempt to make conversation, I typed in lyrics from similar bands or other lines from the same songs.

After we realized we had the same taste in music, we began talking with private messages, trying to find out more about each other. I discovered she is a few years younger than I, from the Chicago area, and enjoys similar social activities. This may seem simple enough, but the surprising smoothness of our words gave me a feeling about her.

We continued talking privately more and more, upwards of two hours at a time. But then came the time for each of us to decide how far we wanted to pursue possible contact outside of the chat room, as she needed to leave.

E-mail was not an option, since she did not have regular access to a computer, so I had to ask myself how willing I was to give out personal information to her, a person I barely knew at the time.

We both expressed the same hesitancy toward giving this information out, but we decided that we would both give our home address.

Now, many may say that this can be very unsafe, for it is easy to lie and the address may not even be real. But, this is the decision we both had to make, for it may have been our only chance to speak. Based on her conversation style, and the lack of inconsistencies in her words and answers to my questions, I did not sense this was a mistake. Instead, ideas such as John Donne's came to mind: "Twice or thrice had I loved thee, / Before I knew thy face or name."

Cindy and I each sent out letters before the other received them, likely due to the interest we had in continuing contact. We included pictures, and in the appearance and look of her eyes, I saw the same rebellion and attitude towards life that I have.

Even with her understaudable vagueness about herself in her letter, I loved her style and realized we thought alike more than I had believed. In each of our letters, we included our phone number so that we could hear each others' voices.

I waited a few days with fear and happiness filtering through my head and then called her. Even with the spirited conversation we had and my instant love of her voice, it still felt odd. Meeting someone and then talking to them in this way was so foreign to any way I had met people before.

"Meeting someone and then talking to them in this way was so foreign to any way I had met people before."

Jason Weisenbach

Our conversations have continued, with each letter and phone call becoming more personal yet almost always done smoothly. A few weeks ago, I realized that I had become comfortable enough and talking to her was like talking to a good friend. However, I realized that it was something more than a friendship, for I had begun to miss her when we did not speak for a few days.

Last week, we finally opened up our romantic feelings for each other; she expressed them in a letter. My feelings being equal, in a sense we call each other distant boyfriend and girlfriends, as we still have not met. It never stops to amaze me how smoothly we converse and how close we have become.

Therefore, within three months, a random meeting in a chat room has matured into three-hour phone conversations (with an enormous phone bill!) and a longing to meet her. Finally, though, we have made plans for me to drive there this spring break to spend time together. The fear and happiness of before will return as I drive there.

When I write about my visit later this semester, we can then see how much potential there truly is in meeting someone this way.

Yes, there are drawbacks to developing a relationship that begins on the Internet with someone who lives far away. Never looking into her eyes or seeing how she acts around me is something that I miss very much. It is as though I know her mind without knowing her body.

However, this in itself has an opposite side that I feel far outweighs these negative voids. Even though I do know what she looks like, exclusively using letters and the phone has allowed me to bond quickly with her mentally. The little problems that I have experienced in meeting people in the traditional way, such as feeling insecure about our daily appearances or meeting each other at the right time, are forgotten as well.

Though one can never replace the physical contact that an in-person meeting brings, the Internet allows for a different form of bonding. Our eyes are not immediately seduced or repelled by someone's looks, and we can focus on what I feel is most important, the mind.

Even with the fears that people may have with using such a medium, I do not feel it is any more unsafe than giving out your phone number or address to a stranger you meet in person. Moreover, in a culture that is more accepting of impersonal relationships, perhaps because of the Internet and other electronic media, the Internet may prove an essential place to discover people of the same interests as you.

Jason Wiesenbach is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylarnski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Flatkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Workman's art enchants Bowker

By Charlie Apicella
Collegian Correspondent

MAGIC TRIANGLE JAZZ SERIES/ REGGIE WORKMAN
Bowker Auditorium
Feb. 5

The night of Feb. 5 saw a truly historic event here in Western Massachusetts, as the spirit and artistic vision of John Coltrane overtook Bowker Auditorium. The music of Coltrane's 1961 "Africa/Brass" was newly arranged and augmented by other compositions and was performed by the Reggie Workman orchestra, with the Pamela Baskin-Watson Singers, as part of Workman's African-American legacy project.

Workman, who was a key player in many of Coltrane's late-era works, began the night by speaking about the profound influences — both artistically and spiritually — that the music of Coltrane has given to the history of music and of African-American people. At one point, Workman gained applause by stating that the music of Coltrane is in many ways just as important spiritually as Sunday morning church hymns.

The music began with a small ensemble featuring saxophonist Marcus Strickland, and the atmosphere of the entire presentation was set in the very first chord struck by the band. Strickland was the premiere soloist throughout the night, and his style on soprano and tenor show a direct line from Coltrane's.

The second tune, "Blues for Y2K," featured two French horns as solo instruments. Both soloists, Tom Varner and Marshall Sealy, showed a deep understanding of the agility and range limitations of the French horn, and compensated for those shortcomings with great melodic ideas.

However, the true magic began when the orchestra and vocalists joined each other on stage. The first piece to use the entire ensemble was titled "Martyrs' Hymn" and it featured a masterfully written part for the vocal section which gave the feeling of deep delta blues and plantation field-hollers.

Such an authentic sound is difficult to create with a large group of musicians, because the cries reflect a very personal situation. This loose arrangement conveyed the feeling very well.

The next high point was a tune called "Shell Summit," which was a duet played on conch shells. This piece was a real jaw-dropper as Aaron Johnson and Stafford Hunter played the shells in a way that most people could hardly imagine.

Finally, the goal of the music, as well as the artistic mission of the African-American Legacy Project was realized in Coltrane's "Africa." A serious and determined air fell over the ensemble as the composition came thundering to life. This was without a doubt the focus of the night, and Coltrane's spirit was reflected in the arrangement as well as in Marcus Strickland's soprano saxophone. It was a very powerful rendition of such an important piece.

As a whole, the entire concert was engaging and very entertaining. The people of the Magic Triangle Series deserves a hand for bringing Reggie Workman and the music of Coltrane to our campus — it will be a long time before the depth of this performance can be matched by any ensemble.

COURTESY JOANNE DOLAN

Jazz great Reggie Workman brought the music of John Coltrane to Bowker Auditorium on Feb. 5.

Paxton & Thornton make eerie Plan work

By Laurence Lavallee
Collegian Correspondent

A SIMPLE PLAN
Directed by Sam Raimi with Bill Paxton, Billy Bob Thornton, Bridget Fonda
Playing at Amherst Cinema

A Simple Plan can't help but ask the proverbial question, "What would you do if you found a bag of money?" What unfolds as an answer to this question is a tense, intriguing thriller, directed with taut control by Sam Raimi (Army of Darkness, The Quick and the Dead). Plan spins a homegrown yarn of surprise fortune, murder and the cover- ups that ensue when things go horribly wrong.

The story begins rather like that age-old question. Two brothers, Hank and Jacob Mitchell, and a beer guzzling friend come upon a small plane crash in the woods. Overhead, crows keep an eerie vigilance on the crash site, and when Hank creeps inside to investigate, he discovers the dead pilot and over $4 million in cash.

Outside, the three begin scheming. Hank wants to keep it quiet. Jacob — a total half-wit, played by the wonderful Billy Bob Thornton — wants to divide it up right there, and so agrees friend, Lou. But it's eventually decided by the only sensible one, Hank, played by Bill Paxton, that they'll keep the loot hidden for a year, divide it up and then move away.

Easy enough, right? Suddenly,

Turn to PLAN, page 6

Rakim is the best ever; top 10 emcees unveiled

Continuing the critical analysis of Blaze magazine's all- time hip-hop, I'd like to begin by acknowledging those who responded to my last column. The feedback was helpful and informative.

In debunking my Top 10 MC's, you must take into consideration that my selections are individual and reflect both my tastes and opinions on rap music. In addition, since I am somewhat of ripe college age, I missed several years of influential listening in my hip-hop upbringing. So naturally, I have a bias towards '90's emcees from the east.

David Katzoff

Also, please note my disapproval of recognizing artists from specific groups or duos such as. Tip from Phife, Puba from Sadat, Run from DMC, Prodigy from Havoc, Dre from Big Boi... you get the point. With that said, my four basic criteria for selection are thus:

I.) writing ability — the art of crafting an eloquent image with rhyming words.

II.) reciting ability — the art of broadcasting a well- crafted rhyme with cadence, confidence, intonation, emotion and rhythmic precision; whether on stage, in the studio or in a small cipher.

III.) longevity — can your abilities stand the test of time (in other words, it's not only what you have done for hip- hop, but what you are doing right now).

IV.) the three I's — impact, innovation, influence (fairly self explanatory).

Drum roll...

1.) Rakim — he's simply the greatest. He is a revolutionary in every facet of emceeing and he exemplifies lyricism, the voice of the four elements.

2.) KRS-One — "the teacher." Edutainer of our time and venomous verbal philosliphizer. Knowledge Reigns Supreme!!

3.) Nas — writer/reciter of Illmatic, one of the most masterful works in the history of recorded sound and written rhyme. Perhaps the most prolific poet of modern times. (Further questions can be directed towards "Nas is Like" off his upcoming album I Am.)

4.) Biggie Smalls — he dominated soundwaves with his reverent presence and decadent voice. One of the few to appeal to a broad audience and still attract the hard-core heads. His legacy was just beginning...

5.) Kool G Rap — pioneered an entire genre of lyricism. The Kool Genius' widely influential, pulse-pounding cinematic-street stories innovated countless emcees and kept suckers "on the run."

6.) Slick Rick — storyteller extraordinaire. The Ruler is truly rap royalty. His laid-back aura, cunning wit and humorous charm set standards in lyrical prowess. Hopefully his latest will measure up.

7.) LL Cool J — For over a decade he was the fiercest man to hold an amplifying apparatus, devastating challengers with in-your-face vocals

Turn to HIP, page 6

GET IN SHAPE IN SHAPE NUTRITION

•Fat Burners •Creatine •Protein Powders

20%-50% Off Retail Prices Everyday

•Andro •Vitamins/Herbs •Food Bars and more...

65 University Dr. Amherst 549-7434

Thanks for reading the Daily Collegian, New England's largest college daily!

Valentine's Day

is just around the corner

Let them know how special they really are to you...

for the mere price of ten cents a word you can give the one you love something to cherish forever..

Their very own Collegian Classified from you

... won't you look good. Of course you will, as long as you get your message in by the deadline of Tuesday Feb.9th.

Campus Career Network

University of Massachusetts Amherst

SENIORS!

What are YOU doing after graduation?

Explore your options now!
Log on to the Campus Career Network website and gain access to hundreds of job opportunities by registering online at:
www-cnn.acad.umass.edu and
Come to the Campus Wide Career Fair
Wednesday, February 17, 1999
10am - 3pm
Campus Center Auditorium

Over 100 employers here to see you!

You can bring your resume

The Campus Wide Career Fair is a Campus Career Network event. For more information please call 545-2224.

Stupid film effort Puddlecruiser is an unforgivable mess

COURTESY PUDDLECRUISER

Young actors Jay Chandrasekhar and Steve Lemme look lost and confused in this scene from the equally lost and confused college-indie film Puddlecruiser.

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

PUDDLECRUISER
Directed by Jay Chondrosekhor with Steve Lemme, Kevin Heffernon, Joy Chonrosekhor
Amherst Cinema, Feb. 4

How the comedy group Broken Lizard got the money to make this film is a mystery to me. While walking out of this massive stink bomb, a friend of mine was asked to sum up the film in one word. His word reflected my sentiment exactly: "dumb."

Desperately trying to be a comedy in the tradition of Animal House and Caddyshack, Puddlecruiser (don't ask how the film got its title, because it was never explained), drowns in a tide of lame jokes, sloppy editing, unimaginative dialogue, uninspired cinematography and every stereotype attached to college students, with only a few exceptions.

The plot (if you can find one in this mess) revolves around an uninteresting character, named Felix. Felix likes a girl who has a boyfriend. You can tell where it's going from here, save for a few sitcom-like subplots that prove more interesting than the main story.

Knowing that this film made it to Sundance should bring hope for every film student across the country. David Zucker signing his name onto it may have helped it get seen by a few more people, but did not make it any funnier. The amusing moments are few and far in between, and are not worth sitting through the entire movie.

It is very painful to sit through a film filled with characters you don't like, and would not want to be around in real life. The intense publicity surrounding the "College Rodeo Tour's" visit to our campus, seems like a desperate attempt to find a core audience. Visiting 20 colleges in the Northeast may be an alternative to distributing it. But hopefully, it won't find a distributor. I'd like to think that audiences are a bit more intelligent.

COURTESY ANDREW SCHLESS

Billy Bob Thorton, Bridget Fonda and Bill Paxton star in the smart, chilling thriller A Simple Plan.

■ hip

continued from page 5

and battle-minded lyrics. Although he has sold his authenticity to a commercial market, he can still hold his own, just ask Canibus.

8.) Jay Z — as much as I have criticized him, I cannot front. His haughty rhymes and charismatic honesty on the mic leaves him in elite company. (If only his albums fully reflected his abilities.)

9.) Common — deeply intellectual, comedic and profound. He consistently represents the realness in hip-hop with his catchy verbals, pointy metaphors and smooth deliveries. He has poured his "soul" into three albums and has earned respect "by the pound."

10.) Guru — it's a difficult choice but I'm stickin' to it. Gurizzy has withstood the test of time and kept improving his skill. Lyrically he may be vulnerable to many, but he is the Reverend of hip-hop gospel and formidable simplicity.

Well, that's a rap. On tap for next week... producers, groups and DJ's. Any questions or comments can be fired at dynamic_uno@yahoo.com. Stay tuned...

David Katzoff is a Collegian columnist.

■ plan

continued from page 5

we're reminded of another, older proverb and one told by a wiser fellow — Ben Franklin (who makes an occasional appearance in the movie on several $100 dollar bills): "Three may keep a secret as long as two are dead."

Within days of the discovery, crude decisions are made to keep the money under wraps. Sarah (Bridget Fonda), Hank's expectant wife, nurses the planning along. She convinces Hank to "put some of it back. If they find the plane crash with some of the money they'll never suspect anything."

Hank agrees, but in an instant plans turn for the worst. Much of the "snowballing" taken off at this point in the film, as within a short, ridiculous amount of time, more cruel decisions are made between Sarah and Hank to desperately protect the money. "For the rest of our lives we'll have to be watching our backs. Always," Sarah whispers to Hank in bed.

This story shockingly depicts just how much a person can get away with if they cover their tracks, and how that same person is compelled to go forward. In the end, Hank and Sarah have no other choice.

One surreal moment during the film depicts this quite well. Sarah and Hank are doting their love onto their newborn in the hospital. Briefly, it's a Norman Rockwell moment. But then Sarah looks up, and as the baby nurses on her breast, we see it in her eyes. Quite suddenly, Sarah begins another scheme with Hank. Actions turn into cover- ups; plans go array and snowball into larger, more complex problems. More lives are destroyed, and yet more plans are made.

Raimi — the full throttle horror king (Evil Dead 2 and others) — has slowed down for this pastoral tale of true horror. His landscape is so real and his characters' behavior so brutally honest; they seem to act just like you and I would if faced with such decisions.

The movie is filled with extraordinary plans, and the actions made to keep the payoff real. Suddenly, it's not about "how do we keep quiet about four million dollars?" Now it's about "how do we live with the decisions we've made?"

More than anything, Plan reveals what people do in desperation to get at it: Husbands, wives and brothers turn on each other, and suddenly the quiet life from yesterday doesn't seem all that bad.

"I wish someone else found that money," a shaken Jacob cries out, amidst two more bodies. And he's right. It would all be different if they just were content with their lives. "Hank, do you ever feel evil?" a sullen Jacob asks. The answer comes painfully. A

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
THE Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9.
2 miles East of Town Center
256-6446
Hurry, Our 15 Week Special Ends Sunday
($169)
AND GET A FREE HFC T-SHIRT

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.
25 n pleasant st amherst 256-0733
145 main st northampton 586-0155

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 A great place to get contacts lenses.
2 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions
3 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
4 Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases.
5 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
Frederick H Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

1/2 PRICE Appetizers
• Buffalo Chicken Wings
• Mozzarella Sticks
• Chicken or Beef Nachos
Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar

spend more time online than
in class?
Come put your web knowledge to good use. Stop by the Collegian Graphics Department in the Campus Center Basement and fill out an application to work on our Web Team. Knowledge of the Internet and web design (obviously) a plus. Put completed applications in David Voldan's mailbox.

What's Left
SALE! up to 75% off Winter
ZANNA
Spring St Williamstown

Women's hockey moves up to 9–3

The Massachusetts women's ice hockey team attained another victory this past Saturday in a home game against St. Michael's College, winning 11–0.

Erin Murphy, tending goal for UMass, had a strong game in net, keeping the women of St. Mike's off the scoreboard. Jenna Nolan set the pace on the ice once again for the team scoring the first two goals of the day in the first period. The Minutewoman added two more tallies in the first period and brought the score up to 11 by game's end.

"Our ability was much better across the board, which is why we scored so high, we took advantage of the other teams weaknesses and the women played a smart game," said assistant coach Justin Kemp.

"Our team is of a higher caliber compared to a lot of the other women's ice hockey teams that we play at the club level. The UMass women are of a higher skill, which shows in our 9–3 record. Which is why many people would like to see the women [move] to the varsity level," added Kemp.

— Melissa Sherman

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Don't fall off!
Brad LeClair of the UMass men's gymnastics team performs on the pommel horse.

Falcon receiver Tony Martin charged with money laundering, conspiracy

MIAMI (AP) — Eight days after playing in the Super Bowl, Atlanta Falcons receiver Tony Martin was charged in federal court yesterday with money laundering and conspiracy stemming from his longtime friendship with a drug dealer.

Martin, the Falcons' leading receiver, was brought to court in manacles and released on $250,000 bond. He will be arraigned Feb. 16.

The charges stem from his relationship with Rickey Brownlee, a convicted drug dealer known as "the mayor of Opa-locka." The two met some 15 years ago while Martin, now 33, was a student at Miami Northwestern High School.

Martin's lead attorney, Roy Black, released a statement saying the receiver "vigorously denies the allegation. Tony never intended to commit any crime. He will aggressively litigate this case in federal court."

Johnnie Cochran, who represented O.J. Simpson at his murder trial, will serve on Martin's defense team.

Martin had been under investigation for months. But his name just appeared yesterday on the third superseding indictment in the case, which also involves cocaine and heroin trafficking.

Martin is not accused of involvement in Brownlee's drug business. Prosecutors said he wrote checks to lease luxury cars and pay legal fees for his friend because Brownlee's lawyers wouldn't take cash.

Falcons coach Dan Reeves had no comment on the case, according to team spokesman Charlie Taylor. Martin caught five passes in the Falcons' 34-19 loss to Denver in the NFL title game on Jan. 31.

"We're working with the NFL and the Martins to see what's going to come of it," Taylor said.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league was aware of the case but had no further comment.

Brownlee, who spent seven years in prison for 1980s drug convictions, was charged a year ago with seven counts of heroin and cocaine trafficking. He allegedly gave cash to Martin for deposits on the cars and the attorneys' fees.

At the time of his arrest, Brownlee was driving a Mercedes that was leased in Martin's name, the U.S. attorney's office has said.

After his financial records were subpoenaed, Martin stopped payment on a $175,000 check to Brownlee's attorneys and showed a copy of the subpoena to Brownlee's associates, according to the indictment.

Black said Martin was being punished for maintaining ties to the people he grew up with in Liberty City, an inner-city neighborhood in Miami.

"Despite attaining financial success, Tony has never forgotten his roots," Black said in his statement. "He has remained loyal and loving to his family and friends, who provided emotional support and encouragement as he confronted many obstacles.

"When neighborhood friend Rickey Brownlee was arrested last year on federal charges, Tony Martin did not turn a blind eye to him. Rather, Tony agreed to help pay attorney's fees for Brownlee's defense. That financial transaction is the mainstay of the government's money laundering allegation."

Black said his client "never imagined that the providing financial assistance to a neighborhood friend could be construed as a crime."

In a Jan. 6 interview, Martin insisted he was no longer a target of the investigation.

"It was just speculation," he said at the time. "It wasn't even true. Really, it was just garbage. I knew in my mind that I didn't have anything to worry about."

Martin also returned thousands in cash in an effort to conceal the scheme, prosecutors allege.

"This is a serious charge," Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron DeWaard said in asking for a $1 million bond. "Given Mr. Martin makes almost $2 million a year, there needs to be a bond with some bite in it."

Black argued against the high bond by pointing out the receiver is a public figure.

sports are good

Daily Collegian

■ swimming

continued from page 10

Junior Andrea Spencer won the 50-yard free with a time of 25.42 seconds while fellow junior Marci Hupp took the blue-ribbon in the 200-yard butterfly (2:11.13).

The Minutewomen's 9-2 dual meet record is one victory shy of tying the school record. This is only the second time this decade that UMass has achieved nine wins in one season.

The A-10 championship meet will be held at Buffalo's Flickinger Aquatic Center. Last year, Massachusetts finished in fourth place with 268 points. St. Bonaventure took first, followed by Virginia Tech and then George Washington. The highest the Minutewomen have ever finished was third place in 1996.

The UMass men were not to be shown up by their counterparts as five different performers recorded first-place finishes.

Leading off was senior Brian Wisniewski, who swam a 1:56.13 in the 200-yard back for first place. Junior Bryan Grimes won the 1000-yard free (9:57.17), as sophomore Chris Arsenault was first in the 200-yard free. Freshman Carlos Ramos impressed his competition in the 50-yard free with a time of 21.74 seconds.

The UMass relays were equally impressive as Arsenault, Ramos, sophomore Joe Martin and Henry Turner topped their season's best time in the 200-yard free in a time of 1:26.27.

Minutemen diver Ed Hefferon swept the men's diving competition in both the 1m and 3m events.

The men's team will join the women in Buffalo as they try to become the first team in conference history to be victorious in four consecutive A-10 championship meets. The only team to have completed the feat is Penn State, which did so over a decade ago from 1984-1987.

Under the helm of coach Russ Yarworth the Minutemen have won eight New England titles. Yarworth, in his 20th year at UMass, ranks first in career wins and winning percentage with a dual-meet record of 176-47 (.789).

The ECAC Championships in Gloucester, N.J. will be held from Feb. 25-27. The 1999 NCAA Championships will be held in Indianapolis a full month later, from March 25-27.

■ gym

continued from page 10

scored in the mid-nines."

This competition marks the start of a two-week lag period until the Minutemen's next meet where they will face off with the Michigan Wolverines. This meet is crucial for the Minutemen, as Michigan is a sure threat to UMass' advance to NCAA Regionals.

"If we hit over 90 percent of our routines, we could definitely beat Michigan and even Penn State," Johnson said. "We'll just have to clean up our sets and increase some of the difficulty within the routines."

To show which of his athletes prove to have the most determination and consistency, Johnson is having an intrasquad meet this Saturday at 2 p.m. in Boyden Gymnasium. Here, the team will divide into two squads and go head-to-head. This competition will give Johnson a better idea as to what the 12-man line-up is going to be like, and will show the team's strengths and weaknesses on each of the events.

And although the team has no real competition to worry about this weekend, LaVallee can do anything but lay back and relax. The Connecticut native will travel to Las Vegas, Nev. on Saturday to compete at Winter Nationals. If he places among the top 10, LaVallee will become part of the U.S. National team once again. The top members of this elite unit compete in international competitions, including the Olympics.

LaVallee and the rest of the Minutemen will be back in action on Feb. 20, when they face off with their rival, Michigan.

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game& System Rentals
2 movies $2
w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent
Video Games
Best Selection in Town
9 E.Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst • 549-4505

SEX
Get it at
"Adult's Only"
Videos & Magazines
8 Russell Rd.
Hadley
585-0416

DESIGN SUPPLY
ART STUDIO
SUPPLIES
AT THE TOWN COMMON
65 SO PLEASANT STREET
AMHERST, MA 01002
FREE
DISCOUNT CARD
WITH THIS COUPON
413-253-5592

SPRINGBREAK
SKI AND SNOWBOARD
CANADA
MOLSON
PARTY SNOW
SUN SNOW
5 NIGHTS/6 DAYS LIFT/LODGING PARTIES/LIVE BANDS
STS TRAVEL
$369
1-800-999-SKI-9
www.skitravel.com

Contests, Coupons, & Giveaways
AmherstOnline.com
Bookmark It!

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting:
Wed. Feb. 10 at 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Kim at the Health Education Office 577-5181

University Health Services
Mental Health Groups Spring '99

MONDAY

Coed Self Exploration Group
(for Undergraduate Students)
In this group members will be able to address their relationships such as: friendship; intimacy; family issues; work and school, etc. MEMBERS MAY JOIN THIS GROUP AT ANY POINT IN THE SCHOOL YEAR (as space permits).
Monday, 1:00 - 2:30 p.m.

Supporting Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Identities
Exploring such issues as coming out, building community, dating relationships, family of origin and stress management.
Monday, 3:45 - 5:00 p.m.

MORE GROUPS BEGINNING IN THE FALL

TUESDAY

Time Limited Therapy Group
(for Undergraduate Students)
This semester-long group will provide a safe environment for looking at relationships. There will be opportunities to learn ways to make changes in interpersonal patterns.
Tuesday, 3:30 - 4:50 p.m.

Groups are conducted by Mental Health Division staff. Group sessions are covered under UHS Basic Health Plan and Kaiser pre-paid plan. Groups require an initial screening which can be arranged by calling 545-2337 or by stopping by at 127 Hills North Mon. - Fri. 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
For further information refer to the Mental Health web site at www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth

THURSDAY

Women's Self-Exploration Group
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members.)
This group provides an opportunity for women to explore personal relationships, work, studies, family of origin, health, acculturation and other relevant concerns. THIS GROUP IS ONGOING WITH MEMBERS ADDED AS SPACE PERMITS.
Thursday, 9:00 - 10:30 a.m.

Coed Self-Exploration Groups
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members.)
This group provides an opportunity for men and women to explore their interpersonal relationships. THIS GROUP IS ONGOING WITH MEMBERS ADDED AS SPACE PERMITS.
Thursday, 3:30 - 5:00 p.m.

Food Matters
This group will provide a safe and confidential environment for women who want to work towards changing unhealthy eating and exercise habits, and creating a positive self concept. Self-esteem enhancement and alternatives to emotional eating will also be addressed.
Thursday, 3:30 - 4:50 p.m.

CALL 545-2337

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities/Sororities: Looking for a DJ for your next function? DJ Fooz is now booking, specializing in date parties and formals. Call Tim 549-9127

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Pufton Village partially furnished availible immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment Sunderland. Available now, February Free Call 577-0375

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know you legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag, black $3500 584-6090

1986 Jaguar VDP Elegant 350 LTI conversion. Hella Lights. Nardi wheel All recipets $9500 Jim @ 413-256-0966

'95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag $5200/best offer. 546-5366

1986 Olds Cierra Well-maintained. Low miles $850 256-3004

COMPUTERS

Packard Bell 8kspeecdCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

FREE RADIO + $1250! Fundraiser open to student groups & organizations. Earn $3-$5 per Visa/MC app. We supply all materials at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box. 1-800-932-0528 x 65. www.ocmconcepts.com

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3 hrs/NYC)— Sports oriented, Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or wayneboys@aol.com.

HELP WANTED EARN EXTRA CASH!!! MAKE YOU OWN HOURS!! RESPONSIBLE STUDENTS TO MARKET/MANAGE CITIBANK PROMOTIONS ON CAMPUS. FREE GIVEAWAYS! EARN $400+/WEEK. CALL JOANN AT 1-800-950-8472 EXT.117

PRESTIGIOUS NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, Nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool, Musical Director and General Counselors. INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd TRAIL'S END CAMP 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

$20-40/hr in spare time? $100 signing bonus! 800-600-0343 ext 1927

EMPLOYMENT

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99? College Pro, a $25 million company, seeks highly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goaloriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

Earn $530 weekly distributing phone cards. NO experience necessary. FT/PT. Call 1-800-211-2067

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

General Labor $7.50 Amherst location needs your help all winter shoveling snow & sanding walk ways. Only available for work one or two days a week? This is the perfect job for you. Call United Personnel Services today to learn more about how snow+work=$$. 800-363-8200

Counter Help + Drivers Wanted. Must be able to work 20 hrs a week. Apply at DP Dough

EMPLOYMENT

More Than Just SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. Camp counselors needed for a private, residential camp in the beautiful Pocono Mountains. We are looking for people with a dedication to children, enthusiasm for diversity, and a desire to share their passion and expertise in any one of the following areas: COMPUTERS, CIRCUS ARTS, BASKETBALL, MAGIC, VOLLEYBALL, TENNIS, DANCE, VIDEO, CREATIVE WRITING, ESL, SOCCER,COOKING, RADIO, ROCK MUSIC, GOLF, SKATEBOARDING, ROLLERBLADING, ROCKETRY, NEWSPAPER, FINE ARTS, CREATIVE CRAFTS, MOUNTAIN BIKING, CLIMBING WALL. Call 1-800-399-CAMP Ask for Dan or Nigel

Fraternities-Sororities-Clubs-Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,00 this semester with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 922-5579

Whitewater guides and River Photographers wanted for part,full time summer jobs outdoor and athletic background a must will train for both positions. Photography position requires some experience. Call Crab Apple Whitewater for info 413-339-0188

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire Dj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester. Call Tim 549-9127

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Mountain Bike 98 Marin Muirwoods Exc. Conditions. $350 or B/O Call Ed 546-7055

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

GREEK AFFAIRS

AXΩ Informal Rush Come meet the sisters of Alpha Chi Omega 2/8 7-9, 2/9 7-9, 2/10 7-9

Sigma Delta Tau Open Rush All university women invited Mon 7-9 Tue 7-9 Wed 7-9 409 N Pleasant St. For info or a ride call 549-8896

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday Ashley Hope all your wishes come true Love Kat, Kara, Kristen, and Kerry

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Lessons with Retired Pro Djata Bumpus in Springfield. $160 for 8 private sessions Call 413-732-8817 for Apt.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late Decembar. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

Furnished room in house at north Amherst. $285.00 everything included. Call Ines, 253-3670

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

TRAVEL

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $835. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included! Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplashtours.com

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED Blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 www.classtravel.com

BOSTON SPRING BREAK '99 To Mazatlan from $599 To Cancun from $369 7 nights, 5 to 14 FREE meals 10 to 32 hours of FREE drinks CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463 Visit our web site www.collegetours.com

#1 Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Panama City Vacations! Free Parties - No Cover. Best beachfront hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

TRAVEL

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

Time is running out..

Do you have someone special in mind this Valentines Day?

Let them know how you feel and show them through The Collegian Classifieds! Tomorrow is the LAST Day!!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, FEB. 9

Lecture — The UMass Black Student Union presents "PMS: A lecture and discussion series on power, money and sex" in room 1009 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m. There will be free food.

Meeting — There will be a meeting to formulate plans regarding a Queer Studies Program at UMass at 7:30 p.m. in rooms 174–176 of the Campus Center.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on writing abstracts from 5:15–6:30 p.m. in room 504 Goodell. This is recommended for any undergraduate applying to present at the Fifth Annual Conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative and Public Service Activities. Call 545–2483 to register.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 10

Meeting — There will be a meeting for anyone interested in discussing the diversity pages of the Collegian at 6:30 p.m. in Farthfoods. Items to be discussed include improving relations between the Collegian and outside communities and the effectiveness of the diversity pages.

Community — There will be a blood drive in the Campus Center basement from 10:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m. Coupons for a free frozen yogurt will be given to donors.

Lecture — The UMass Black Student Union presents "PMS: A lecture & discussion series on power, money and sex" at 7 p.m. in room 1009 of the Campus Center.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting about how to become a Peace Corps volunteer from 7–8 p.m. in room 168C of the Campus Center. Call 545–2105 for more information.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex in room 302 of University Health Services at 7 p.m.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — Last information sessions for the Domestic Exchange program will be held Feb. 9, 10, 16 and 17 in room 604 of Goodell from 4:45–5:45 p.m. Deadline for applications is March 1. Call 545–5351 for more information.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.–5 p.m. Call 577–5181 for more details.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6–7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577–5316 if interested.

Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. Also searching for the 1998–99 cover contest winner. Deadline is the end of December. Call 5–4220 for more information.

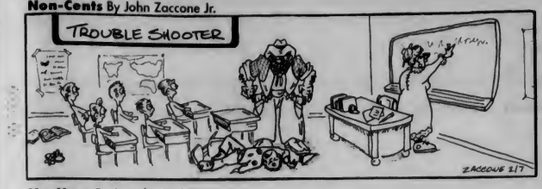
Volunteers — Volunteers are needed to train and facilitate workshops on contraception and sexually transmitted disease prevention during Spring semester 1999. Men and women needed. Contact Karen or Day at 577–5188 for more information.

PVs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PVI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% University Store Not like a mall... Better

We give all of our profits to support University Programs



HSCN Hosting Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Portland
13	WOOH & HSCN
14	International
15	UMass Academic TV
16	WB/Fox Affiliate
17	HSCN Programming
18	The Learning Channel
19	UPN/ME	Springfield
20	Cinemax	Springfield
21	Showtime	Springfield
22	Disney Channel
23	Cinemax	Hartford
24	Showtime	Hartford
25	HBO	Hartford
26	HBO	Springfield

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 9, 1999

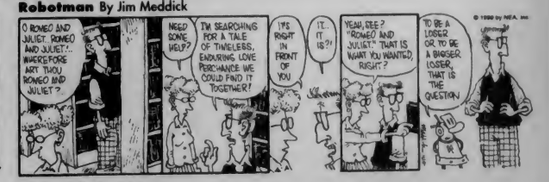
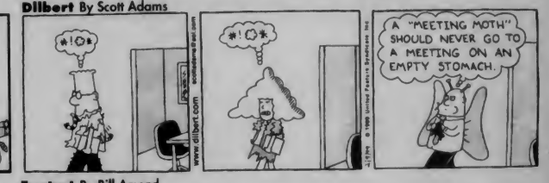
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ	G. Auriemma	Women's College Basketball: Boston College vs. Connecticut.			Frontline "Russian Roulette" (In Stereo) ⓒ				Sports Heroes	Religion
WFSB	3	3	News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Web of Lies" (In Stereo)		"Murder at 75 Birch" (1999, Mystery) Melissa Gilbert. ⓒ			News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WB	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Web of Lies" (In Stereo)		"Murder at 75 Birch" (1999, Mystery) Melissa Gilbert. ⓒ			News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WCVB	5	5	News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⓒ	Home Imp.	Hughleys ⓒ	Spin City ⓒ	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "Big Bang Theory"	News ⓒ	Nanny ⓒ
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny ⓒ	Friends ⓒ	Buffy the Vampire Slayer ⓒ		Felicity "Todd Mulcahy" ⓒ	News ⓒ		Friends ⓒ	Nanny ⓒ
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio ⓒ	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		6	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Judge Lana	Moesha ⓒ	Clueless ⓒ	Malcolm-Edda	Between Bros.	News	Newsradio ⓒ	Married...With
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ⓒ	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio ⓒ	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	61	Simpsons ⓒ	Friends ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	King of the Hill PJs (In Stereo)		Guinness World Records		News	Friends ⓒ	Mad.Abt.You
WWLP	9	22	News ⓒ	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio ⓒ	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Nova (R) (In Stereo) ⓒ		Frontline "The Execution" (In Stereo) ⓒ			Boston Arts	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ⓒ
WGBY	11	57	Creatures	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Home Imp.	Hughleys ⓒ	Spin City ⓒ	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "Big Bang Theory"	News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WGGB	12	40	News ⓒ		Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Moesha ⓒ	Clueless ⓒ	NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Edmonton Oilers. (Live)
WSBK	13		Judge Judy ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Ink'd "Quigley Down Under" (1990, Western) Tom Selleck.				Ink'd "Cahill: United States Marshal" (1973) John Wayne.
WTBS	14		Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne ⓒ	Roseanne ⓒ	Biography: Liberace		Inside Story		"Inspector Morse: Infernal"		Law & Order "Rage" ⓒ
AAE	15		Northern Exposure	"Our Tribe"	Law & Order "White Rabbit" ⓒ		Biography: Liberace		Inside Story		"Inspector Morse: Infernal"		Law & Order "Rage" ⓒ
CNN	16	23	Worldview ⓒ	Moneyline Newshour ⓒ		Crossfire ⓒ	World Today ⓒ		Larry King Live ⓒ		Late Edition Primetime ⓒ	Sports	Moneyline ⓒ
COM	17	20	Saturday Night Live ⓒ		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Al "Memorized It..On the Move" (1991, Fantasy) William Pargellis.				Saturday Night Live ⓒ	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	18		New Houses	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery: Life		Spytek: "Spy vs. Spy" (R)		New Detectives		FBI Files	Spytek: "Spy vs. Spy" (R)
ESPN	19		Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Purdue at Indiana. (Live)				College Basketball: Mississippi at Auburn. (Live)		Sportscenter
LIFE	20		Ellen ⓒ	Ellen ⓒ	Party of Five "Sandra's Day"		Chicago Hope "Growing Pains"		Any Day Now (In Stereo) ⓒ		Intimate Portrait "Pam" ⓒ	New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	21		Countdown	Cut (In Stereo)	Beavis-Butt.	Daria	Sift & Dilly	Video Clichés	Real World ⓒ	Real World ⓒ	Real World ⓒ	Blairbythm	Blaine Game
NICK	22		Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug ⓒ	Rugrats ⓒ	Thornberrys	Slimeiter	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons ⓒ	Laverne ⓒ	I Love Lucy ⓒ
SCIFI	23		Quantum Leap ⓒ		Amat. Stories	Star Trek "Amok Time" ⓒ			Highlander: The Series ⓒ			Friday the 13th: The Series ⓒ	Twilight Zone
TLC	24	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Perfect Specimen"		Trauma: Life in the ER (R)		Raging Rivers (R)		Space Trek (R)		Trauma: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	25		Dos South (In Stereo) ⓒ		ER "Love's Labor Lost" ⓒ		NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics at Miami Heat. (In Stereo Live)					Invalid NBA	Kung Fu: Legend
USA	26		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R) ⓒ		Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show "Closing Night" (Live) ⓒ						New York Undercover ⓒ
HBO	27		★★★ "Star Trek: First Contact" (1996) Patrick Stewart. PG-13 ⓒ				★★★ "The Rainmaker" (1997, Drama) Matt Damon. PG-13 ⓒ				★★★ "Shadow of Doubt" (1998, Suspense) Melanie Griffith. R ⓒ
MAX	28		(5:45) ★★★ "The Apostle" (1998, Drama) Robert Duvall. PG-13 ⓒ		★★ "Cops and Robbersons" (1994, Comedy) Chevy Chase. PG ⓒ				★★½ "Absolute Power" (1997) Sculpted. CPG Eastwood. R ⓒ			★★★ "A Brother's Kiss" (1997)
SHOW	29		(5:00) "A League of Their Own"

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.



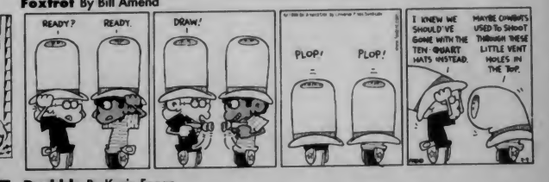
For Those About to Rock By James Shaker

VonHess By Joseph Hession



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non-Sequitur By Wiley

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan.12–Feb. 18) — One minute you may feel you have everything going for you, and the next all seems lost. Don't be so dramatic! Today is a routine day.

PISCES (Feb. 19– March 20) — Keep your judgements to yourself today, lest you risk being judged prematurely yourself. Try not to rub a friend the wrong way.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Everything can change in a blink of an eye today. However, If you cling to the few things that really mean the most to you, all will be well. Avoid overreaction.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Don't let environmental influences affect your mood in a negative fashion today. If it's sunny, you'll be sunny. If it's cloudy, you'll still be sunny.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — That "fraud" complex may creep up behind you today, making you doubt your own veracity. Take comfort. you really do know what you're doing.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You may have trouble locating something that you've been searching for for some time. You're very close today, but you must keep looking.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Your belief structure may be challenged today by a chain of events which has you acknowledging a truth that seemed impossible only yesterday.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Take care that you only repeat yourself when absolutely necessery today. Otherwise, you'll want to be original in thought and deed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct 22) — News you receive today is likely to affect you in ways that you don't entirely understand. You'll receive an important message during the evening hours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — A smile is worth more today than usual. It may actually pave your way as you try to navigate some difficult new territory. Stay positive!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You needn't be as sober and serious today as you have been in recent days or weeks. Lighten up, and let someone "in" before nightfall.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — The going may get tough today. You must strive to avoid any outbursts. Cross any lines and you risk losing it all.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"And here all the time I thought we had a lousy sketch artist."

Quote of the Day

"Hey, this beer tastes like fish."

– Overheard

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri-Bean Casserole

DINNER
Baked Ziti
Southern Fried Steak
Seven Vegetable Stew

Worcester

LUNCH
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri-Bean Casserole

DINNER
Baked Ziti
Southern Fried Steak
Seven Vegetable Stew

Hampshire

LUNCH
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake

DINNER
Baked Ziti
Southern Fried Steak
Seven Vegetable Stew

Berkshire

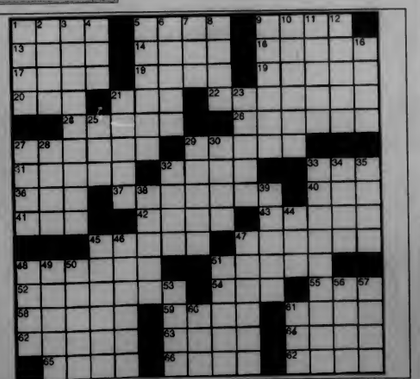
LUNCH
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri-Bean Casserole

DINNER
Ellen's Tortilla Casserole
Southern Fried Steak
Seven Vegetable Stew

Night Editor	Casey Kane
Photo Technician	Brian McDermott
Copy Editor	Ken Mc Donald
Production Supervisor	Rob Snow
Production Staff	D.J. Carey, Dave Parmenter

ACROSS

1 Remove (a hat)
5 Writer Ambler
9 Low-lying area
13 Jai —
14 Imported car
15 Cherish
17 Chief source
18 Locate
19 Mouselike insectivore
20 Cook's need
21 Watch
22 Perfume
24 Mac maker
26 Printer's inserts
27 Head honchos
29 Grin
31 With 53-Down, big-band name
32 Norwegian monarch
33 — Paulo, Brazil
36 — chi: self-defense art
37 Misconduct mem.
40 Kipling novel
41 RN's specialty
42 Baby goats
43 Put —; save up
45 Colliery entrances
47 Hector, for one
48 Advertiser's lure
51 Indian native
52 Parts of raincoats
54 FedEx rival
55 Extinct bird
58 Bygone
59 Sentry's command
61 Musical composition
62 Playing card
63 Singer Guthrie
64 Shriveled from heat
65 Cattail, e.g.
66 Sagacious
67 Bear: Lat.



DOWN

1 Soggy
2 Medley
3 Superb
4 "For shame!"
5 Artists' stands
6 Coin of India
7 Wedding words
8 Quote
9 Medieval worker
10 Stick
11 Actor Greene
12 Build
16 Flock members
21 Go 90
23 Literary genre
25 Greek letter
27 Piece of insulation
28 Spoken
29 Yukon vehicles
30 Damages
32 Leave out
33 Winter Olympics contender
34 Verdi opera
35 Sign
38 — out: barely getting by 39 Mountain lakes
44 Turf
45 — of the action: share
46 Put on
47 Walk softly
48 Dolt
49 Edmonton hockey player
50 Excessive
51 Ships' bodies
53 See 31-Across
56 Not theirs
57 On the briny
60 Onassis' nickname
61 Midwestern sch.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

D	A	D	S		T	O	N	I	C		S	A	P
A	M	O	K		O	D	A	L	A		P	O	M	A
T	I	N	E		F	U	S	E	S		E	T	E	N
A	N	N	E		F	L	A	S	H	B	U	L	B	S
O	A	T		M	E	A	L		E	B	A	Y
			P	E	R	I		L	I	N	T
R	A	L	P	H		F	A	Y	N		E	R	I	O
O	M	A	R		W	I	Z	E	N		H	A	K	E
T	A	C	O		C	E		A	S	P	E	N
			C	O	M	E		T	O	O
L	A	S	E	R		T	I	T	A	D	E
A	F	T	E	R	S	H	A	V	E		S	E	E	N
M	O	O	D		L	I	B	E	L		T	I	E
B	U	N	S		A	L	O	N	E		O	T	I	S
S	I	L	Y		W	O	R	S	T		R	Y	E	S

2-9-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Women's gym perfect in A–10

By Matt Frascella
Collegian Staff

Coming into this weekend's two matchups with Atlantic 10 foes George Washington and Temple, the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team was ailing, looking for a formula to put it back on a winning pace.

UMass found the cure and remained perfect in the A-10, knocking off host George Washington on Saturday then following that performance on Sunday by upending the Owls in Philadelphia.

Posting a total team score of 191 points to GW's 190.425, the Minutewomen showed their ability to capture the close meet for their second narrow win of the season.

Leading the Massachusetts team was senior Michelle LoPresti. The New York native scored a personal best of 38.025 in Washington D.C. on Saturday, leading both GW and UMass in points, capturing the all-around title, and tying for first place on the balance beam in the process. Her previous high score in the all-around was 37.450, gicing her over a point improvement.

Shining on the balance beam for the Minutewomen squad, LoPresti was best on the Massachusetts team with a 9.850. Junior Mandy Mosby ranked next for the Minutewomen in the all-around competition with a score of 38.075. Mosby scored a 9.700 on the uneven bars to take third place in that event for the Maroon and White and help the Minutewomen's cause.

The sophomore contingent of the UMass team proved to be the difference in the meet. The Colonials showed the strength that the upper part of the lineup brings by winning the vault, floor and uneven bars events. Kyla Palombini anchored a strong Minutewomen showing on the balance beam apparatus by scoring a 9.650 and solidifying third place.

Sophomores Mary Moore and Iobi Goldberg also made key contributions to the Massachusetts team. Moore's score of a 9.625 on the vault was good enough to lock up fourth place, while Goldberg displayed UMass' best performance on the floor exercise with a score of 9.850.

The Minutewomen continued their weekend's success by ousting Temple in Philadelphia on Sunday. The win over the Owls raised UMass to 3–2 on the year and improved its perfect mark in the A-10 to 3–0. Individual results were not available at press time.

Hoping to gain momentum as the road stretch continues, the Massachusetts team next travels to New Haven, Conn. on Sunday to face Yale before returning home for a meet against Alabama, which is currently nationally ranked in the top five among women's gymnastics programs.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Michelle LoPresti and the rest of the Minutewomen performed well this weekend in a win over George Washington.

UM men's track takes second

Tom Toye wins two events to lead the way

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

This past weekend, the Massachusetts men's indoor track team traveled to Kingston, R.I. to take part in a quad-meet with Rhode Island, the University of New Hampshire and Rider. While URI rode in as the favorite, nobody could have predicted the way the rest of the field would look when all was said and done.

The Minutemen finished the day with 56.5 points, good enough to place ahead of Rider (37.5) and New Hampshire (23), but not enough to take first place, which URI secured with 68 points. The surprise of the meet was the 23 points put up by UNH, which was "upset" by Rider.

UNH was expected to battle fiercely with UMass for second and third, as they have in the past, but fell short in a day owned by UMass and URI. The Minutemen now stand with an impressive record of 11–1.

The Minutemen once again looked to strong performances from their big guns for points, and in most cases got them. Senior Tom Toye led UMass with two top two finishes. His solid time of 6.54 seconds in the 55m dash was good enough for first place, and was also the best time on the team this season. For an encore, he placed second in the 200m with a time of 22.14 seconds.

Freshman Wes Shaw continued to impress in the pole vault, winning the event with a leap of 14-feet-6-inches. Senior Andre Roach put in yet another solid effort, finishing second in the triple jump with a mark of 45-feet-4 1/2-inches.

The distance events were also handled well by the Minutemen. Senior Neil Concepcion won the 500m with a time of 1:04.54. Sophomore Marc Sylvander finished second in the 400m, crossing the line at 49.74 seconds, while senior Matt Ely took home second in the 1,000m with a time of 2:31.14.

The UNH finish may have been a surprise, but the strong performance in the throwing events by the Minutemen were anything but. Senior B.J. Cardoza won the weight throw with a team and season best toss of 56-feet-1 5/4-inches. Junior Vic Morency scored a mark of 47-feet-3 1/2-inches in the shot put, good enough for second place.

UMass coach Ken O'Brien had predicted a second-place finish for his team before the meet, and then watched as they went out and got the job done. The next hurdle for the team will be Feb. 13, when it travels to Boston to compete in the Valentine Classic.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Tom Toye was the front runner this weekend for the UMass men's indoor track team.

Men's gym scores big with 2 wins

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

This past Sunday marked wins Nos. 5 and 6 for the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team, as it once again leveled the Vermont Catamounts and Springfield Pride. UMass took control of the meet with an overall score of 220.9 points to Springfield's 199.0 and Vermont's 183.45.

Graduate captain Stephen Pryor was the star of the meet, taking the all-around title with a score of 56.3. Pryor has consistently been the backbone of the team and put on great performances on virtually every event. He earned a 9.45 on pommel horse, floor exercise and vault, and made a lasting impression on the still rings with a 9.6.

"Steve Pryor performed well," said coach Roy Johnson. "Even with room for improvement on high bar (9.25) and bars (9.1), he still got a great all-around score."

Claiming the second place spot in the all-around competition was junior Jeff LaVallee with a disappointing score of 53.65.

"Jeff just had a few problems throughout the meet," said Johnson. "He slipped on rings and had a problem in the middle of his p-bar routine. He can get a 53.65 in his sleep. It just wasn't a good day for him."

Taking the top spots on floor were senior Dan Young (9.25) and sophomore Bryan McNulty (9.4). LaVallee took the top score on high bar (9.7) and freshman Matt Plumser made his mark with a 9.35 on the pommel horse, a 9.0 on high bar, and a 9.4 on the parallel bars. Senior Phil Lieberman, who normally shines on floor, walked away with a low score of 8.95.

"Phil was terribly underscored," explained Johnson. "I think the judges were a little rusty and gave him the wrong start value. He had a great set, though. He has a new [tumbling] pass, and he stuck it perfectly. He could have easily

Turn to GYM, page 7

Swim teams earn final wins

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

It was the last meet to get the kinks out before the real season begins. Last time to show the coaches what you are made of.

For some sports the regular season determines whether a team will even get into postseason tournaments, but not for the Massachusetts women's and men's swimming teams.

Both squads headed down to Fordham and banged out two wins against the Rams. The women's squad won by a score of 131–97 to improve to 10–3 on the year, while the men finished off at 7–4 with a score of 134–107 in the dual meet.

In the women's diving competition, the Minutewomen were not challenged by the non-existent Fordham diving team as it equated to more of a practice on the road.

In any case, senior Kim Schadt took first place in both the 1m and 3m diving events. Freshman Signe Delquist was the most consistent diver though her scores were not personal bests.

"She is starting to dive with a lot of confidence," said Guy Pollino, who is coach of both the men's and women's diving teams.

Another freshman, Kristin Foss, displayed poise on the board as well. Foss is a former gymnast trying to make the transition into diving after suffering shoulder injuries.

"We're starting to call her a diver," Pollino said. "She has a bright future as a diver."

Sophomore Robin Velona could not make the meet but will join Schadt and Dahlquist at the Atlantic 10 competition slated for Feb. 18–20.

Pollino noted that often times it is not who makes the best dive, rather who doesn't dive the worst. It is a small margin between the top 10–12 divers in the conference. The bottom line for all divers is consistency.

UMass' Anne Dentloff capsured both the 200-yard freestyle (1:57.44) as well as the 200-yard backstroke in a time of (2:13.59). Rounding the freshman frenzy was Becky Hunnewell who won the 200-yard individual medley (2:15.21).

Turn to SWIMMING, page 7

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior tri-captain Shana Strothers and the women's swimming and diving team finished out a strong regular season this weekend at Fordham.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The UMass men's swimming and diving team beat Fordham 134–107 to finish the regular season 7–4.

UM men's and women's skiers fair well in Vt.

By Jason Owens
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's and women's ski teams each made strong showings this weekend in Vermont, competing at the Boston College Ski Tournament. The men's team, racing against nine other teams, finished third in the giant slalom and fourth in the slalom. The women's team, finished third in the slalom and fourth in the giant slalom out of a field of 11.

Freshman Tina King, a product of Easthampton, completed her best meet yet at a Minutewoman, as she we won the woman's giant slalom (1:29.37) and finished third in the slalom (1:33.60). King, a heralded newcomer on this year's team, is poised to crack the top 50 for national rankings in the giant slalom, and is quickly staking her claim as the best skier UMass has seen in some time.

Another freshman, New York native Lauren Brody, had a strong showing, as she finished 12th in the slalom (1:28.31). Senior captain Katie Kenne, fully recovered from an injury that sidelined her for all of last season, also faired well, finishing 16th in the slalom (1:39.53). The women's slalom featured 57 racers from 11 schools.

The slalom was won by Amanda Daller of Boston College, who defeated King by just over one second. The giant slalom was another story. King, in just her third competition as a Minutewoman, posted the fastest times for both her first and second runs while defeating Anda Curuta of Plymouth State College. The freshman's victory came at the expense of 63 other competitors.

On the men's side, senior captain Tom Holden performed well, finishing sixth in the slalom (125.84). Freshman Ken Theman, one of seven of freshman on the men's team, finished 10th in the slalom (129.58). Fellow freshman Rich Granger, a nationally sought-after high school recruit from Lebanon, Ohio, finished 14th (131.13). They competed against a field of 54.

Thoman, the star of the tournament for the men's team, also took sixth in the giant slalom (1:27.71), followed by Granger, who finished 15th (130.10), and sophomore Mike Hadden, who finished 18th (130.64).

Other notable racers for the women's team were Kristy Centrelli, who finished 26th in the slalom (1:49.44), and freshman Ericka Olson, who finished 27th (1:49.58). In the giant slalom, Blodey finished 15th (1:54.85), followed by Keane at 21st (1:36.00) and Olsen at 22nd (1:36.53).

UM men make a racket at Cornell

By James Piehl
Collegian Correspondent

Over the weekend, the massachusetts men's tennis team had a strong showing in the Cornell Invitational with seven Minutemen advancing to third-round singles action, and two of four teams advancing in doubles to the finals.

"Clearly this the best men's tennis team we've had since I've been coach," UMass coach Judy Dixon said.

Freshman transfer Steve Prisco lead the way for UMass, advancing to semifinal action of the Flight A singles bracket before falling to the top seed, Greg Artzi of Cornell, 6–1, 6– 2. Prisco then teamed with junior Rob Manchester to win the Flight A doubles title, 8–6, over Tyler Hunsberger and Andrew Naylor of Bloomsburg.

This is a feat that the UMass men's doubles team has never accomplished in it's history.

Also putting in strong performances for the Minutemen were senior Todd Cheney, junior Parsa Samii and sophomore Febian Rabanal. Cheney advanced to the semifinals of the Flight B singles bracket falling, 6–4, 3–6, 7–5, while Samii and Rabanal teamed to advance to the finals of the Flight B doubles before going down to the third-seeded team of Josh Benjamin and Peter Stahl of Cornell, 8–3.

"For Samii and Rabanal to reach the finals this early in the season shows that we have a strong doubles B team also," said assistant coach Justin Lynch.

Dixon was very pleased with the results of the tournament. "This definitely bodes well for the program this year. We performed well in all of the divisions," Dixon said.

According to Dixon, the duo of Prisco and Manchester is "the best doubles team." Although a freshman transfer, Prisco is already an integral part of the UMass men's tennis program. He has taken over the No. 1 position on the singles team, moving junior Rob Manchester to the No. 2 spot. This relieves some pressure from Manchester, who shouldered the load last semester.

"Steve Prisco will prove to be an invaluable enforcer. He will certainly make things easier, especially for Robby," Dixon said.

"Prisco proved to be an amazing competitor for a freshman. He has a real ability to feed off the pressure in big point situations," Lynn said.

The team now awaits the Brown matchup this Friday. The Ivy League has a tradition of being extremely competitive in men's tennis. This will be a big step for UMass, which has never faced Brown.

According to Dixon, "This [match] will be a indicative test of our abilities."

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 12 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, February 10, 1999

The Collegian looks to improve diversity pages

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

A forum to discuss the Massachusetts Daily Collegian's diversity pages will be held tonight at 6:30 p.m. in Fartfhoods.

The forum is designed to give the community a chance to discuss with the Collegian staff the effectiveness of diversity pages, as well as issues like writer recruitment, diversity page stories and ways to increase the readership of the diversity pages.

"It's my concern that there's been tension between the Collegian and some diversity communities in the past," said Casey Kane, the Collegian's editor-in-chief.

"In order to prevent the perpetuation of those problems, we need to hear our readers' opinions. That's why we're having this forum."

She went on to say that while the issues being discussed were sensitive, she hopes that the attendees will be able to work together to make changes for the future.

Collegian Senior Diversity Editor Edgar Barros, the editor of Black Affairs, agrees.

"Hopefully we'll talk about the importance of keeping the diversity pages, and how to keep them more efficient," he said. "If we keep the pages, I'd like to see more writers and more student involvement."

Mike Messaros, the Collegian's managing editor, insists that the Collegian never officially approved a plan to abolish the diversity pages.

"The fact that the impression has been created that all along our intent was to eliminate the pages goes against the very idea of the forum," he said.

"On the contrary, there are many different voices that need to be heard before we can even consider a decision like that."

He stressed that the Collegian's primary goal is improvement.

"We're down here God-knows-how-many hours and to involve the community in this process is something we felt to be a priority," he said.

In the past, the diversity pages have suffered due to lack of editors and writers. Throughout the fall 1999 semester, the Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual/Transgender Issues and the Multicultural Affairs pages had no editors, and thus never ran. Likewise, the Women's Issues page stopped running in the middle of the semester when its editor resigned.

"One of the biggest problems with the diversity desks is the shortage of writers," Kane said. "It's a basic fact that without diversity writers and editors we would have no diversity pages, just as we'd have no sports pages without sports writers and editors."

Both Kane and Messaros hope that the conference will not only draw attention to the importance of the diversity pages, but also give the Collegian staff a chance to receive input from its readers.

"This forum was created to bring in the community to answer some questions that we felt we alone could not answer," Messaros said. "It's important to create a dialogue."

"It's also important to understand that several suggestions have been put before us," said Kane. "We want to hear everyone's ideas."

MassPirg asks for feedback on projects

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Student concerns and voices were addressed in the Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) kick-off campaign meeting last night in the Campus Center.

The goals projected included working on four different projects this semester and the reaffirmation of public support.

The issues MassPIRG hopes to tackle in the upcoming semester include oil drilling in the Arctic, the improvement of air quality, the prevention of homelessness and hunger, and the banning of surcharges on ATM's.

UMass junior B.J. Cortis, MassPIRG's clean air campaign coordinator, feels the outcome of working on these projects is impacting.

"MassPIRG is a vehicle of social change," Cortis said. "We want people to enjoy clean water and air and realize that hunger is something they can cure."

Every other year MassPIRG reaffirms the public's support by petitioning to appear on the Student Government Association (SGA) election ballots.

MassPIRG is the only Registered Student Organization (RSO) which is funded entirely by public support, Cortis said. He feels this distinguishes them from other campus organizations which are funded with help from the SGA. MassPIRG receives all their funds from a waivable fee appearing on tuition bills in the beginning of each semester.

Last night they went door to dorm across campus raising signatures from individuals in raising support to have the waivable fee issue appear on the SGA ballots this spring.

The purpose of last nights meeting was also to receive feedback on the issues more pertinent to student's interests. Cortis feels energy and the idealization to do work has always been the message of MassPIRG.

"We're taking these issues to the local community, but they have a statewide impact," Cortis said. "We're going to have to carry this energy and momentum and address these issues."

According to MassPIRG, with more than 15,000 caribous dying from companies drilling oil in the Arctic, the focus of the arctic campaign is to preserve the living grounds of animals and humans.

The clean air campaign has progressed in getting Governor Celluci to sign a pledge guaranteeing plants would have to meet the Clean Air Standard. According to MassPIRG, there over thirty power plants in Massachusetts and five of these plants contribute to more than 90% of the total pollution in the state.

In the drive to stop hunger and homelessness, a campaign has been set up to create ways students can help. Every semester, MassPIRG encourages students to donate a meal to the feed the hungry.

Lastly, the ATM campaign is focused on raising awareness on the hidden effects of surcharges and the drive to ban them.

MassPIRG hopes that by reaffirming the community support, they can bring about concern and awareness on issues important to both the surrounding area and nationwide.

BETH KRIKORIAN / COLLEGIAN

As part of the Masspirg meeting last night, students performed skits to illustrate the need for their organization.

Suspects confession may incriminate

By Jean McNair
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that despite the Supreme Court's landmark 1966 Miranda decision, prosecutors can use a confession from a suspect who opens his mouth before he has been read his rights.

In a 2-1 ruling Monday, a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said a 1968 federal law on voluntary confessions takes precedence over the Miranda ruling in federal cases.

The decision could touch off a new Supreme Court battle over the rights of criminal suspects.

In the meantime, the appeals court ruling is binding in five states - Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and West Virginia.

The 1966 Miranda vs. Arizona decision, handed down by a Supreme Court far more liberal than it is today, is known to generations of Americans from TV cop shows.

The high court said police who question suspects must first tell them of their right to remain silent and warn them that anything they say can be used against them. They must be told of their right to a lawyer, and informed that one will be appointed for them if they cannot afford one.

In federal and state prosecutions ever since, failure to recite such warnings most often resulted in a valuable piece of evidence - a confession or some incriminating statement - being lost to prosecutors.

In 1968, Congress passed a law that said such confessions can be used as long as federal judges are sure the suspects' statements were voluntary.

For years, however, the U.S. Justice Department has declined to rely on the 1968 law during appeals. In a letter to Congress two years ago, Attorney General Janet Reno called it unconstitutional. On Monday, the 4th Circuit ruled that Charles Thomas Dickerson's confession to FBI agents that he had robbed a bank in Alexandria was admissible.

Dickerson said his 1997 statement was given before he was told of his right to remain silent and see an attorney. A lower-court judge had thrown out the confession.

Court debates open up over shooting of UMass student

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Although a date has yet to be determined for the trial of Sokha Chhim, the 17-year-old Amherst resident charged with shooting University of Massachusetts student Russell Bishop last semester, arguments between the defense and prosecution have already begun.

Assistant District Attorney David S. Ross and Timothy Watkins, counsel for the defendant, met yesterday at Hampshire Superior Court in Northampton for a hearing on the status of the Chhim case.

Ross expressed concern that the case would not make it to trial before March 16. After that date, Chhim could be released on bail, due to his Constitutional right to a trial within 90 days of his pre-trial hearing, which was held Dec. 17.

Watkins cited time conflicts and a heavy caseload as explanation for the probable delay. "It is not possible to prepare a case for the Superior Court within 90 days," he said.

A March trial date was never set. Instead, conflicts about witness identification surfaced.

Watkins complained that Ross has failed to provide him with color copies of the photographs given to witnesses to identify the suspect. Ross refuted by saying he has made the original photographs available in his office.

"Counsel has seen the photos," Ross said. "There is no need [for him] to hold color copies in his hands to draft his motion."

In addition, he said, the color copies are not valid substitutes for the original photographs. In a case that will depend heavily on identification, he said, distinguishing between different shades of complexion will be very important.

In an interview after the hearing, Watkins also commented briefly on the importance of identification in the case. He suspects that the District Attorney will call witnesses to identify Chhim as the shooter, and to testify that they identified him in the past.

But Watkins claims that witnesses were shown several photo arrays; some had identified other people as the shooter, and others had given conflicting descriptions.

Watkins feels these identification testimonies are not reliable, and is filing a motion of suppression to prevent them from being introduced in court.

"I think there is evidence that they identified the wrong person," he said.

Chhim was arrested in Springfield on the morning of Nov. 18, and charged with assault with intent to murder, assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, armed robbery, assault by means of a dangerous weapon, and unlawfully carrying firearms.

A Jan. 8 grand jury trial found that "there is probable cause, based upon the identification of the defendant by three witnesses viewing photographic arrays," to believe that Chhim shot Bishop.

According to court documents, Chhim arrived at Bishop's sixth floor room in Cashin Residence Hall on Oct. 30, at around 9 p.m., to buy marijuana. Chhim "pulled a .380 caliber handgun from his clothing and aimed it at point blank range at Bishop's neck." Bishop pushed the gun aside, but Chhim moved it back into range and fired the gun, "wounding Bishop and causing him serious injury."

Chhim then aimed the gun at another student in the room, Josh Massin, before taking the marijuana and fleeing. Massin called 911, and Detective Brian Narkewicz of the UMass Police Department responded to the call.

At a dangerousness hearing last November, Narkewicz testified that he observed Bishop "lying in a pool of blood...with his head next to the bed." The bullet that injured Bishop had entered his neck, shattered a vertebrae and exited above his left shoulder. He suffered from some paralysis in his right arm.

According to UMass spokeswoman Barabara Pitoniak, Bishop has withdrawn from the University and his present condition is unknown.

Watkins and Ross will meet with Judge Jed Carhart for another status hearing this month, and Chhim will most likely face a week-long trial in March.

BETH KRIKORIAN / COLLEGIAN

Creating jewelry
Freshman School of Management student, Mark Mcinnis, makes a ring yesterday in the Craft Center.

Holbrooke new nominee for UN

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton moved ahead with plans to nominate Richard Holbrooke to be ambassador to the United Nations after Holbrooke agreed yesterday to pay $5,000 to settle civil charges that he violated federal ethics laws.

"I will soon send to the Senate my nomination of Richard C. Holbrooke," Clinton said in a statement issued from the White House shortly after the federal lawsuit and settlement were filed simultaneously in U.S. District Court here.

The veteran 57-year-old diplomat denied in the settlement the Justice Department's allegations that he improperly contacted a U.S. diplomat on behalf of his employer. Instead, Holbrooke said he was acting as a special government employee asked to explain U.S. policy to Asian officials.

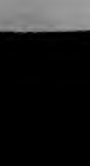
The Justice Department said Holbrooke did not willfully violate

Turn to NOMINATION, page 3

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 32	HIGH: 49 LOW: 33	HIGH: 50 LOW: 33

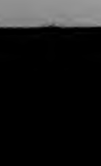
SOURCE: CNN.COM



Diamond in the Rough

Check out what the outstanding student of the week, Rana Al-Jamal, is all about in our new Campus Profile.

NEWS PAGE 2



And the nomination goes to...

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences has announced the nominees for the 1998 Academy Awards, check out our synopsis as well as Trax on Trax off. Take a peek inside.

ARTS PAGE 6

The luck of the Irish

Shelandra Irish led the UMass women's indoor track and field team in their strong second place finish at Rhode Island this past weekend.

SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Classifieds 10
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
FYI 10
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

U.S. finds progess in peace talks

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

RAMBOUILLET, France — The American mediator at the Kosovo peace talks pointed to progress yesterday despite a deadlock over distracting demands from rival Serbs and ethnic Albanian.

Each side, fearing that it will come up a loser, is trying to jump ahead to more difficult issues before some of the basics are settled.

"This is not easy, and frankly it's not a lot of fun... but we are making progress," said Christopher Hill, who heads the team of three mediators shuttling between Serb and ethnic Albanian delegations.

The talks aim to reach a three-year interim settlement for Serbia's southern province of Kosovo, where more than 2,000 people have died and about 300,000 have been driven from their homes in a year of fighting between Yugoslav forces and ethnic Albanians who want independence.

The warring parties were pushed to the table by the threat of NATO attacks on Serbia, which makes up Yugoslavia along with the smaller Montenegro.

Foreign ministers Hubert Vedrine of France and Robin Cook of Britain, co-hosts of the conference at the magnificent 14th century Chateau de Rambouillet, returned here yesterday just three days after the opening of the talks, in an apparent effort to move them along. They met with mediators Hill, Wolfgang Petritsch of Austria and Boris Mayorsky of Russia.

"You should not think it is always a crisis when we come here," Cook told reporters. "Sometimes we are here to make sure there is progress."

But the Albanians and Serb delegations remained deadlocked on the third full day of talks over a Serb demand to keep Yugoslavia's borders intact and Albanian demands for a referendum on independence, a formal cease-fire and NATO guarantees for the eventual interim settlement.

Representatives of the Kosovo Liberation Army, the rebel group battling for independence, have said they would accept only independence.

Serbia has rejected freedom for Kosovo, where 90 percent of its 2 million people are ethnic Albanian.

Mediators want the Albanians to give up their demand for independence — at least during a three-year interim period. Hill said keeping the delegations on track was difficult. "They come forward with a lot of extra ideas," he said. "It's always good to encourage ideas, but sometimes the supply of them exceeds the demand. There are times people want to jump ahead... but what we want to do is work on the political settlement." The six-nation Contact Group — the United States, Russia, France, Britain, Germany and Italy — drafted the interim settlement. Topics that have not been broached here yet include how such a settlement will be implemented or the eventual deployment of NATO troops into Kosovo.

BETH KIRKORIAN / COLLEGIAN

A moment alone...

Arij Bilgrami, first-year theater student sits outside the coffee shop yesterday for a breath of fresh air.

CAMPUS PROFILE

WEEKLY COLUMN
BY DANIELLE FUGAZI

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Staff

A leader for a number of organizations and a GPA of 3.8 to match, Rana Al-Jamal could be described as a hidden jewel on the University of Massachusetts campus.

Other then being the president of the Muslim Student Association (MSA) and a full time graduate student, Al-Jamal keeps herself busy as an Assistant Residence Director, a member of the Arab Student Club, the Muslim representative for the Religious Affairs Committee on campus, and a member of the Insistute for Transportation.

Al-Jamal starts her busy days at 6:00 a.m. with a prayer and ends at 11:00 p.m. with another prayer, but what she does in between hardly seems as relaxing as her prayer times.

As her grades may indicate, Al-Jamal is dedicated to all her work at this school, as well as her religious beliefs. After her jammed-packed days wind down she still manages to cook herself a traditional Muslim dinner, that does not contain any type of pork or alcohol.

"I cook all my own food, it is very hard for Muslims to eat at the dining halls here on campus, and any meat must be prepared halal, which is the specific way the animal is slaughtered," says Al-Jamal.

"When I first came to the U.S. it was important for me to see how the Muslim community members respect each other and there is a genuine interest in the different cultures, now I get a very special feeling from the brotherhood and sisterhood the Muslim Student Association has provided me with," said Al-Jamal.

As a Muslim my duties are to worship God and follow gods guidelines, we believe as Muslims our duty is to help make the world a better place."

Besides weekly meetings the members meet sporadically during the week to discuss the differences of their diverse backgrounds and the way the Muslim religion changes from country to country.

"It's a great opportunity for students to learn about Muslims in different countries, even though the basics are the same like the prayers, and the declaration of faith," says Al-Jamal.

The MSA holds a reception at the beginning of the year to "help people adjust to a new environment, and to answer questions. Our focus is to provide a strong Muslim Community that provides a support system for Muslim students. We are here to help students make the best out of their experience at UMass," says Al-Jamal.

On a budget of roughly $900 a month the MSA provides a lot of services to its members.

During Ramadan the Muslim community gets together and breaks the fast weekly at sundown, and during the two Muslim holidays Eid al-Fitr, and Eid al-Adha the MSA organizes transportation to the nearest Mosque, which is in Springfield, for prayers.

The MSA also offers their office for members to perform the five daily prayers.

"A lot of students at UMass have to choose between performing their prayers or going to class. They shouldn't be put in that position to choose. I think there is room to consider the needs of the students on this campus," Al-Jamal said.

With the office open, students can come in a pray throughout the day without having to go back to their dorm area. Al-Jamal also sets up times weekly so she can teach Muslims students how to read in her native tongue of Arabic, which then makes it possible for them to read the holy Qur'an.

The native Jordanian moved to the United States five years ago to advance her education. She had received her undergraduate degree in architecture from the University of Jordan, then she made her big move to UMass.

Here at UMass, Al-Jamal received her masters and she is currently studying for her doctorate in transportation planning.

"Five years ago when I came to school here I began working, going to social events and helping out when I could," said Al-Jamal. "Last year I was a board member [of the MSA] and this year I am president."

The MSA serves approximately three hundred members and meets every Friday in the Campus Center for a short sermon followed by prayers — which Al-Jamal takes part in organizing.

As an Assistant Residence Director (ARD) Al-Jamal generally spends her mornings meeting with students or faculty members. As part of her job as an ARD she is also a member of the Religious Liaison project for Southwest north. "In each residential area there is a contact person that can work as a mediator," says Al-Jamal.

Al-Jamal was president of the Institute of Transportation last semester. This semester she now works with the new people who have joined, the guest lecturers and for a newsletter that goes out to all of the members of the organization.

Although a minority on the UMass campus, Al-Jamal definitely makes her mark on the student body in a truely distinctive way.

President of the Muslim Student Association, Rana Aljamal is one of just a few Muslim students on campus.

WELCOMING BACK STUDENTS

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

UNIVERSITY ST

Textbook Annex

AMHERST

University Store • Textbook Annex

SAVE YOUR RECEIPT

Our Refund Policy

If you purchase an incorrect title you may return it for a refund within 7 calendar days of the first day of classes. Thereafter, incorrect titles may be returned within 48 hours of purchase providing the book is new and unmarked.

1. Textbooks from dropped courses may be returned throughout the month of February. Present your sales receipt and a copy of your updated course schedule obtained from the Registrar. Any new books must be unmarked.

2. Keep your receipt(s). Refunds on textbooks cannot be made unless the sales receipt(s) accompanies the book.

3. Always have your current I.D. available. This is required for any refund transactions.

The return of unsold books to the publisher begins seven weeks after the beginning of the semester. After the seventh week you might not be able to purchase the books you need.

RETURN YOUR TEXTBOOKS WITH YOUR RECEIPT FOR A "NO QUESTIONS ASKED" REFUND THROUGH FRIDAY FEBRUARY 12TH, 1999.

Beginning TUESDAY FEBRUARY 16, 1999 textbooks from dropped courses may be returned with a sales receipt and an updated course schedule.

The schedule may be obtained from the registrar's office in Whitmore do not wait for them to mail.

New books must be in new condition. No marks, writing, water damage etc.

Any incorrect titles purchased after TUESDAY FEBRUARY 9TH must be returned within 48 hours of purchase. Schedule, syllabus or other proof of incorrect purchases must be presented, along with sales receipt.

Remember the last day to return textbooks with no questions asked is FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12TH.

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

textbook annex

Spring '99 Schedule

We accept cash, personal check, Ucard, Visa, MasterCard as forms of payment.

We begin to return unsold books to the publishers in the middle of the semester. Students are encouraged to get the books they need for the semester as soon as possible after official enrollment in a course.

buyback

Monday-Friday
9am-4pm at the Textbook Annex, beginning February 12, 1999

annex rush

Spring 1999 Book Rush Hours

Feb. 8- 12 Mon.- Fri. 9am- 5pm

Thereafter - Monday - Friday 9am - 4pm

Senators indicate acquittal may stand

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Several Republicans expressed a willingness yesterday to let President Clinton walk away from his impeachment ordeal with an acquittal, leaving judgment of his conduct to history rather than any Senate-approved rebuke.

The censure idea is "a rose that is beginning to wilt," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, a member of the Senate Republican leadership.

The notion of censuring Clinton — either immediately following his trial or later — has strong Republican opposition but remains on life support with backing of most Democrats and a handful of GOP senators.

But to have a such a measure considered in the 100-member Senate, supporters would need 60 votes to hurdle an expected stalling action by Republican Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, the leading opponent of a censure resolution.

Meetings on a censure are expected to become intense immediately after the Senate renders a verdict on the impeachment charges of perjury and obstruction of justice. With 67 votes needed for conviction and removal of the president, both parties agree that acquittal is virtually certain.

Democratic Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California, has been drafting and redrafting censure language with the help of Republican Sen. Robert Bennett of Utah. They would not release their latest language, which likely would change again anyway. Gramm has threatened to offer innumerable amendments to any such resolution, an approach that could amount to a filibuster, requiring 60 votes to overcome.

Censure to Gramm is a "covering your fanny approach" — letting those who want to acquit Clinton on impeachment still express disapproval of his behavior. Gramm has said it's not allowed by the Constitution and would set a dangerous precedent for the future concerning the separation of powers.

Absent a hard nose-count, Republicans disagreed on the prospects for censure. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, said the proposal "is waning as an option — alive but on life support." But Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., cautioned that "No one should be compiling a dirge over censure; if anything, I believe we are picking up support on the both sides of the aisle..."

At a meeting of GOP senators yesterday morning, worries that Democrats would use censure as political cover after acquittal was "raised by some of the Republicans," said Sen. Spencer Abraham, R-Mich.

Democrats are aware of that thinking. Sen. John Breaux, D-La., said he needs no political cover: "I just had my election." Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., said he could support a censure resolution only "if the language would refer" to the perjury and obstruction language in the articles of impeachment.

That's not likely, since Democrats have expressed strong opposition to a declaration that Clinton committed impeachable offenses — especially after the Senate fails to reach the two-thirds majority to convict the president and remove him from office. A censure resolution would only need a simple majority. Although the large procedural hurdles facing a censure resolution dim prospects for consideration immediately after the impeachment verdict, Democratic leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota has set in motion a possible procedural vote that could allow Democrats to express themselves. He also has talked of trying to attach censure language to legislation after senators return from next week's week-long recess.

Some senators said it would be extremely difficult to return to such an unpleasant subject as Clinton's conduct once the lawmakers are concentrating on legislation.

"It gets more difficult to pass" after the recess, said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. "It becomes an exercise in futility." But a member of the Democratic leadership, Sen. Robert

Torricelli of New Jersey, said the censure issue is "not time sensitive. I don't even think we should try (this week). We should do it when we return."

Sen. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, signed on to censure after winning support for language that would declare Clinton could not be treated differently than any other citizen after he leaves office and that no future Congress could override the censure. A censure of President Andrew Jackson in the 1860s was overturned by a subsequent Congress.

BETH KIRKORIAN / COLLEGIAN

For sale?

Senior communication major, Ray Scott looks over a For Sale sign in the Campus Center yesterday.

■ nomination

continued from page 1

the law barring former government officials from contacting ex-colleagues about business for one year after leaving government. The department also said the contact produced no direct financial gain for Holbrooke or his employer, the investment banking firm of Credit Suisse First Boston.

Torricelli of New Jersey, said the censure issue is "not time sensitive. I don't even think we should try (this week). We should do it when we return."

"From building lasting peace in Bosnia to searching for a political settlement in Kosovo, to finding a workable solution in Cyprus, Richard C. Holbrooke's intellect, vigor and diplomatic skills have significantly advanced the values and the interests of the American people," Clinton said.

It has been eight months since Clinton first picked Holbrooke, the chief architect of the 1995 Bosnia peace accord and last fall's cease-fire in Kosovo, for the U.N. post formerly held by Energy Secretary Bill Richardson.

Holbrooke said in a statement yesterday that he settled the ethics suit "in order to allow my nomination to proceed."

"I now look forward to appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for the confirmation hearings," he said. But Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who has taken no position on the nomination, appeared in no hurry to schedule hearings. Before hearings, "we're going to very closely examine the Justice Department report,... to walk through their investigation step by step," said Helms spokesman Marc Thiessen.

BURTON SESSIONS AIRWALK LAMAR ARNETTE OAKLEY K2

Chijay Snow / Skate

Up to 50% off Burton and Sessions Jackets and Sweaters

20% TO 50% off ALL SNOWBOARD EQUIPMENT

CHILLS at 32 Main Street • Northampton MA • 584-3620
M-W 9:30-5:30, Thurs. & Fri. 9:30-8:30, Sat. 10-6

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game & System Rentals
2 movies $2 w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent Video Games
Best Selection in Town
9 E.Pleasant St. (near the Pub) Amherst • 549-4505

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

There's a whole world out there!
Explore it with Contiki-
The #1 tour for 18-35 year olds
Cheap tickets Great advice Nice people

Boston/Sydney	$1407
Boston/Nairobi	$955
Newark/Quito	$290
New York/San Juan	$255
Boston/Paris	$344

Contiki Travel
Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone: 413-256-1261

Campus Career Network
University of Massachusetts Amherst
We're Here for You!

The Annual Campus-Wide Career Fair

Wednesday, February 17, 1999
10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium

Full-Time Opportunities for Undergraduate and Graduate Students
All Majors
For more information call 545-2224

Find out who is coming by checking out our website:
www-ccn.acad.umass.edu • Click on News And Events

EDITORIAL / OPINION

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Gotta have faith

Julie Fialkow

In Sedona, Arizona, someone will read your spirit for $1.25 an hour. Well, I think my spirit is worth at least $2.50 a minute and a few drinks from the bar.

Sunday's Boston Globe had an article about the new mecca of spirituality, Sedona, Arizona. People worldwide are flocking to Sedona (4 million a year) seeking out a vortex, a place in the Earth I said to emit "healing energy." Four of these vortexes supposedly exist in the area, and believers claim they make it easier for humans to communicate with spirits, contact dead relatives, or even to discover past lives.

Maybe auntie will tell you why all she's got was a linty tube of Blistex in her will. It's possible that you were really a dragon–slayer in a past life. Who wouldn't travel across the world to seek these insights?

Crystals, auras, and vortexes aren't really my cup of healing green tea. I don't think spirituality needs accessories or catalogs. If you put stones in a circle and call it a "medicine wheel," you still just have a bunch of rocks.

The meaning you give any object or idea is the loose definition of spirituality. Be that as it may, the people flocking to Sedona are cool by me.

Their deities, objects, and um... crap are giving meaning to their lives. They are creating a strong faith to distract them from broken stoplights, pants that are too short, and half–frozen Hungry Man dinners — all the anomalies of everyday life.

And isn't that what faith is really all about? Isn't it about distraction from the ordinary, a way to unify ourselves, and a concept that George Michael "had to have," along with his ripped–butt jeans?

The things that I have faith in aren't the same as the people in Sedona or George Michael. I don't need a vortex or an aura cleaning to feel connected and whole. I can be enlightened even while doing something as unenlightening as enjoying soup.

When I see somebody getting helped up from falling on the ice I feel all tingly.

Those Bob's Discount Furniture commercials make me simply holler "Hallelujah for three–piece deluxe sofa sets!"

Whenever I see an elderly couple kiss in the street, I get a free trial size box of cereal in the mail, or it rains on a sunny day, I feel an ethereal sense of satisfaction, of holy divinity.

It would be very easy for me to call those Sedona people crazy kooks. They're crazy kooks (gee, it was easy.) But that would make me a hypocrite, 'cause look at all the silly things I get hopped up about. What we time and the crystal wearers hold dear may not be traditional or sage, but it keeps us from listening to records backwards or cheating at Monopoly.

Faith kept me from being too sad when my dog Snoopy got run over by a car. "He's in heaven with Ernie the hermit crab," my mom told me. They both liked it when their bellies were scratched, and it made me feel better knowing that they'd be together again. My belief kept me going, no matter what the belief pertained to.

Who are we to brand religion? Even if the good folks of Sedona are capitalizing on faith and naivety, commercialism is probably the most popular form of religion out there. The symbol of the dollar bill is probably more universally recognizable than the image of Christ.

"The only vortex I ever felt was all the money being sucked out of my wallet," said Rand Carlson in the Globe article. Carlson, a painter, lived in Sedona for two years before moving back to Tucson.

Rand Carlson didn't appreciate the true essence of Sedona. The humor of having somebody offer to read your spirit or show you their vertex (!) is spiritually uplifting in it's own right. Just learn to find the power of all the little things. You'll be sacred and righteous, and it won't cost you a cent.

Julie Fialkow is a Collegian columnist

Shape up, kids

Bryan McAllister

I read a lot. I'm also a compulsive liar. But finding myself with a bazillion hours of free time over the holidays, and taking a break from my usual "do a little dance, make a little love, get down tonight" regimen (lying again), I actually picked up a Sunday morning paper and didn't use it as a napkin, or to make a cute boat hat (lying).

With mild interest, I read it, even perusing the articles about foreign policy and something about an impeachment. I even read those stupid editorials that cover up a lack of argument with shameful attempts at humor.

Spiritual enlightenment ensued upon opening the USA Today magazine insert — you know, the one with headlines like "Meg Ryan's Love Secrets!" or "Meg Ryan's Beauty Secrets!", or generally anything involving Meg Ryan and some secrets.

This issue, however, devoted itself to a heated examination of the state of our high schools and secondary education in general and other educational concerns like the worth of SAT's and other timed tests, including the value of physical education. It invoked the controversial nature vs. nurture debate, and group selection or individual selection, as well as annoying long sentences.

Please note the use of the words high school. That term usually implies some sort of maturity or growth, as opposed to elementary school, which implies declarations like "I'm not trading my bologna for your crappy liverwurst, penis breath!"

The magazine interviewed a bunch of high school kids, and asked them how they would improve their schools. Where do you start? Teachers, technology, administration? Granted, I wasn't expecting any John Deweyesque answers here, but the possibilities are endless and serious.

"Get rid of soupy ice cream," one kid said.

"Fire mean lunch ladies," offered another.

Responses of staggering perception, indeed. That's it! The key to our education system! Good ice cream! If we gave them fresh Twinkies and unstale Doritos, would that seal the deal? Would they stay after school in the library, reading Dostoevsky and devouring Chewy Runts?

And this whole mean lunch lady thing. Honestly, if you're 40 years old, unsightly, living with your parents and have to clean up after a bunch of barbarians, are you ever going to be happy? Forget "mean," these kids are damn lucky the lunch people aren't "clinically insane" or worse, "Ken Starr." There's been a recent surge in the examining of a teacher's qualifications; if memory serves correctly, there was some fuss last year over teachers who hadn't passed a spelling test in third grade...or thought Nancy Drew was "metaphorical," or something like that. Certainly, the argument can be made that we should improve the quality of teaching.

But what about the quality of the students? I think there should be a test for them too. Test questions should include: "Do you have dreams at night of flipping cheap burgers?", or "When you pay the drive–thru lady, do you say 'man, that's a cool job'?" or "Have you ever considered applying to New England Tractor Trailer School?"

All of this is in my new book, Have You Ever Considered Applying to New England Tractor Trailer School?.

Although yet unpublished and universally rejected from all publishing companies, who offered such constructive criticism as — "You're dumb," "Security, get this loser out of my office now," and "Dude, that's a water gun" — Have You Ever Considered Applying to New England Tractor Trailer School details what is wrong with today's high schools. Not the teachers, not the administration, but the students.

After all, the real rebels in America today are the kids who actually do the work; everyone else is too busy being a screw–up, which is fine until you have too many screw–ups. (i.e. If everyone is a screw–up, who will the screw–ups make fun of?)

Granted, I wasn't exactly a Doogie Howser. My friends and I would skip classes to play Mario Kart, that's how cool we were. But Tractor Trailer School (as it's called in underground literary circles; this ain't no Oprah book club crap) ignores such personal hypocrisy and argues this main idea: that we should get back to hard discipline and conservative ideals.

Yup, that means dress codes, more time in class, snooty teachers, fascist principals and waffle irons. And all the soupy ice cream served by mean lunch ladies you can think of. High school kids should be prepared for UMass, where we don't even get soupy ice cream — just leftover strawberry cool whip and "special green cake."

At 7 a.m. any day, every kid should be in the library, reading Dostoevsky and the newspaper. And if they even think about making cute little boat hats out of the newspaper, they're sent to the crocodiles. You don't get Cute Boat Hat Privilege until you're in college; then at least you can waste your parents' money instead of ours.

Bryan McAllister is a Collegian staff member.

You're back!

Mark Griffin

I was afraid that picking up the proverbial pen and actually forming coherent sentences for the first time in almost five weeks would prove to be at least a little tricky. And granted, after only a paltry sentence, I find that I cannot quite find the keys as fast as I could before and the words just aren't coming out as fast as they should be. But I've been home for so long that maybe I'm just out of practice.

But when you go home things change. You don't spend so much time waiting until the last minute to study for your finals. And you notice the small things, like the smell of your front hallway as you walk through the door, and the fact that your parents have kept the place a little cleaner since you went away.

Where did that new lamp in the living room come from? Why does it seem as though your room has been transformed from your own private and cozy get–away to a storage room; a clustered potpourri of old notebooks, broken audiocassettes and that English Beat LP that you left behind — simply because there are no record players at school on which to play it. That old building has been torn down. Did you notice that a homeless person now wanders through your neighborhood, scouring the streets on trash day for parts of old appliances and pieces of decaying furniture left behind for the garbage man on Thursday morning?

Perhaps you learned how to make a highball over winter break. Or maybe you figured out how to make a screaming five–year–old come to his senses. Perhaps you got paid to do it. For sure, you spent a lot of money this semester on some useless fun like CDs, Phishfood ice cream, or going to dinner with your friends. Did you learn how to drive a stick shift because you know it will come in handy some late night? Or maybe you even participated in the seasonal gesture of exchanging gifts with a loved one. Or perhaps you did something for someone you barely knew, knowing that it would make you feel good.

Perhaps you reminisced about the old days. Did you ever stop to think that the custodian was the nicest guy at your elementary school (albeit not the most sober)? Some of you may have even set foot into your grade school again, for one reason or another, and noticed how small it looks compared to how you remember it. Did you laugh out loud remembering how you used to call the bathroom there the "basement", even when you were old enough to use the one that wasn't in the cellar of the building? Did you visit your sixth grade teacher and thank him for teaching you more than anyone else has since then?

Surely you got together with some of your high school buddies, went to a hockey game at your alma mater's home arena, and remembered the old days, when all of your friends were already back at school. You found yourself going to bed at 4:00 in the morning, not for any particular reason, but just because you could. Maybe you watched the Psychic Friends Network commercial so much that you know it by heart.

Sorry, no Celtics during this break... maybe next year. Did you look forward to watching Simpson reruns every night? Or maybe it was wondering whether Sam would finally make the leap home on Quantum Leap every night on the Sci–Fi Channel. Did you read the newspaper while you were home ("Ask Beth" and box scores don't count!)

You actually begin to look forward to supper again. Then you realize that you are pretty damned lucky to have someone who spoils you when you come home — someone who will make supper for you every night. It's good to have something to fall back on, something to call home. There are some days when you only have a moment to come home before you have to leave again. But that moment seems to be relaxing enough for you to make it through the rest of the day. So whether you built a shed in your backyard, or sat on your rear end and watched the neighbors use their new George Foreman Grille in the middle of January from your living room sofa, it was relaxing.

I'm sure some people worked a 9–5 job every day of their vacation, then took night classes in Boston. And I'm sure by the time their vacation ended, they were well rested. And some people had to take care of their little brothers or their little sisters so their parents could save on child care for a month. And perhaps they were a little more excited to come back to good 'ol UMass than others due to their extreme boredom, but their vacation still served its purpose.

And now you've been back for a while. Did you get those classes you wanted? Are you even going to class? Did you get that job you were hoping for? All of a sudden, the present has caught up to you. For a month, you evaluated your past and contemplated your future. You fixed your mistakes and planned out new ones. But those things are irrelevant now. You're back. There's no excuse. It's go time.

Mark Griffin is a UMass student.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

All Ed/Op columnists who missed the first photo session must attend the second one tomorrow, February 11th, between 12:15 and 12:45 on the Student Union steps.
See you there!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Fialkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacobi Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The vultures in the media

Chris Bradshaw

Pick up a copy of The New York Times or The Boston Globe and unless you read your newspapers from the bottom up or the inside out, you will immediately be slapped upside the head with a headline and a reasonably lengthy story on the latest developments in the saga that has proven once and for all that everyone, even the President of the United States, is preoccupied with sex.

Read the entire news section and you may come across a story on the effects of economic sanctions on the Iraqi people and their nation's economy, though you probably shouldn't hold your breath. But don't worry, our ever so hard–hitting papers might give you an update on operation "Desert Fox." All you pro–military forceps will get your blow–for–blow account of British and American fighter planes attempting to take out an Iraqi radar or Saddam Hussein continuing to defy "no–fly zones" over the northern and southern segments of his own country, while putting his people in danger of being caught in the crossfire. Hey, chin up, fight fans. The civilian casualties are minimal at the worst. It's the bad guys we're getting, right?

Is it not the duty of the press to give voice to the issues that concern or ought to concern the American public? I use the word "ought" here because it is clear that the impeachment hearings and all involved seem to be of more interest to the majority of Americans than the sufferings of the Iraqi people. But shouldn't we take a look at the reasons behind that and the role the media has played in creating this very phenomenon?

Are all those critics of the modern media correct when they say that the newspaper business, even in its more respected corners, does nothing more than present the public with the juicy stuff disguised as "news" that we are more likely to want to read before beginning another stressful day? Is it really just dollars and cents? I would not go so far as to give an unequivocal "yes" to those last two, but I'm getting there.

Let's put aside the few arguments that seem to hold weight on the subject of just what ought to be done with our lusty leader because I know I am sick of hearing them and none of them produce anything more than indifference in many Americans. I would not like to argue that President Clinton should be censured, "slapped on the wrist," or even booted from office. Whether or not he lied as a citizen, misled as a lawyer, or had a little too much fun in the room next to the Oval Office with someone other that the First Lady is irrelevant. If you supported his policies before this whole mess hit the papers, then you probably support them now. In the same respect, if you didn't support them, you definitely still don't and you are either willing to wait two years for someone else to fill the slot or have jumped on the impeachment band wagon.

Most would agree that Clinton misled the American people and I would not attempt to argue that this is not significant, though I would say that presidents have been doing just that for quite some time and will no doubt carry on with the tradition. I would not argue that the impeachment hearings aren't necessary or are purely some form of partisan theatrical performance; nor that they shouldn't be covered by the media as being the historical proceedings that they are.

What I want to voice in this editorial is what activists against the ongoing economic sanctioning of Iraq have most likely been saying since the media made the names Linda Tripp, Kenneth Starr, and Monica S. Lewinsky as common in American households as Kleenex, Windex, and ESPN.

Aren't there more important issues confonting this nation besides Monica and all the beef, no matter how juicy it may be?

In the Feb. 3 issue of the Boston Globe, Ann Scales wrote a story on Clinton's trip to Boston the day before in an effort to promote his new "school plan." In the middle of the article, Scales wrote that "even the demonstrators" appeared to be on Clinton's side, although two men were at Logan Airport holding signs that said "Liar" and "Resign." Apparently Clinton and his entourage briefly came in indirect contact with a lone protester of the sanctions on Iraq, I mention this only because it presents a somewhat feeble but recognizable representation of media–shaped public opinion regarding the Lewinsky matter, the situation in Iraq, and the President's popularity.

Most are more or less on Clinton's side, less call for his resignation because of his affair with Lewinsky and his dishonesty surrounding it, and even less are miffed about sanctions on Iraq despite the fact that reports have surfaced which state that the total death toll as a result of these sanctions has risen to one million. According to UNICEF, 5,000 Iraqi children die every month from malnutrition and other problems that are direct results of sanctions.

As politically damaging reports by the few progressive publications — which attempt to describe the plight of the Iraqis — the President himself has probably managed to forget his former intern and his nemesis Kenny Starr and all the congressmen that gun for him for a day or so at a time. Why can't the commercial press? Is it the business of respected newspapers to begin with to spend so much time, money, and resources covering every angle of what is quickly becoming nothing more than the script to an unusually original and tantalizingly addicting soap opera?

My proposal: for all the newspapers in our sex and scandal crazed–nation to restrict their coverage of the Senate proceedings on the Lewinsky matter to news briefs that would rest somewhere other than on the front page for a while. A few paragraphs should do. I say a "while," because it would be cruel to deny all the Clinton/Lewinsky junkies their proper fix for too long after having caught them hook, line, and sinker. Also, what about the people of Iraq whose economy is becoming more and more crippled, and whose standard of living continues to drop? Maybe it's just not front page material.

Chris Bradshaw is a UMass student.

Old habits die hard

Dana Oppedisano

It's Valentine's Day. Yey.

Beneath the superficiality of the hugs, kisses, flowers, chocolates, and jewelry lies a deep dark secret about the holiday.

Now brace yourselves. This won't tickle you with love like Cupid's arrow often does. This is going to sting.

Well, OK. I'll just come out and say it. From my experience (and that doesn't necessarily mean from yours), I have found that at least two thirds of my male friends cheat on their girlfriends. Maybe not consistently, but nonetheless, they have cheated.

Now that I have set myself up as the grinch who ruined Valentine's Day, let me at least explain my theory. I know a large number of guys who have not been faithful. To put it mildly, they don't always listen to the big head. I, myself once cheated, so I must have some credibility in writing this (isn't that odd, I'm credible now that I've cheated??)

I propose that St. Valentine's Day was created by men and women, like myself, who may have felt a little guilty about their infidelity. We perfume our girlfriends with gifts and flowers to soothe our aching consciences.

I would never have even thought of this had I not just checked my e–mail. One of my buddies from St. Anselm's sent my a chauvinistic joke, It read: "How do you get your girlfriend to scream while you're having sex?" Answer: Call her and tell her."

Then it dawned on me just how bad my friends really are. Now I honestly hope that other college kids are not this bad, but in my case, I thought you'd get a kick out of some of these stories... and by the way, there is no way in hell that I would ever use their real names. They would kill me. Come to think of it, every guy on this campus who has cheated will probably send me a death threat. I've had them before from my sports columns...well, sorta.

Cape Cod Story: I have this buddy, whom we will call "the chef" in the interest of anonymity. He and I, and the rest of my senior class in high school spent the week after we graduated at the Cape. He had a younger girlfriend, whose last words to him we're "Don't make a fool of me" before he left. Anyhow, to put it mildly, he slept with one girl and fooled around with at least another four. These girls knew that he had a girlfriend, but his line to them was a clever, "Well, it's the Cape. It doesn't count." I guess it didn't. He dated his girlfriend for another three and a half months afterwards.

Aaron Saykin

Beer Goggles: I have this other buddy, whom we will call "Moe" in the interest of anonymity. Moe has a girlfriend but will never admit it. Moe got a little too drunk at the Alpine Commons and mistook another girl for his girlfriend... at least that was the way he'd tell it.

Liquid Muscles: I have even another buddy, whom we will call "Jeff George" in the interest of anonymity. Last year, while he had a girlfriend, Jeff waited until I wasn't looking and pushed me, from behind, out of his room and locked the door. In the room with him was a female dissimilar to his girlfriend... the noises from the room can tell the rest of the story.

"I propose that St. Valentine's Day was created by men and women, like myself, who may have felt a little guilty about their infidelity."

My Story: I've never actually told this to her, but I cheated on the girl I was seeing during the Fall semester of 1997. There was a modest party in my room, and as a proper host, I introduced (wink, wink) myself to one of the girls there. We hooked up, and I felt a bit guilty, but not too bad. Two weeks later, I got a call from the girlfriend. She told me she had slept with another guy. That was that. We were done.

This brief story leads me to my next point: I know plenty of girls who cheat on their boyfriends. Here's the background:

Weekend at Bernie's, Episode I: I don't need to disguise Bernie's name since he got caught by his parents for having the party... not to mention the fact that he would never cheat on his girlfriend. We like to call him the "champion of girlfriends' rights." Anyhow this female friend of mine, whom we will call "Roxy" in the interest of anonymity, had a boyfriend during Bernie's party (poor Bernie, we trashed his house.) Having been induced into a susceptible, intoxicated state, she hooked up with two guys after her boyfriend left. To top it all off, she was alone with "the chef" in Bernie's parents' bedroom. you do the math.

Weekend at Bernie's, Episode II: We caught Moe's girlfriend hooking up with someone whom we will call "L.B." in the interest of anonymity. Funny thing is, Moe was right there and didn't do a thing. serves him right, the coward.

Golden Gloves: Bernie thinks he's married to someone whom we will call "Sally." Sally hooks up with a frosh in high school. Bernie has too much to drink on St. Patty's Day. Bernie cold–cocks the poor kid. Bernie gets cold– cocked by the kid's older brother. Poor, poor, poor Bernie.

Oh, in case I forgot to tell you, Happy Valentine's Day!

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian staff member.

Add/Drop bliss

Dana Oppedisano

The university's Add/Drop period, the designated time when students can either add or remove classes from their spring semester schedule, is finally over and I for one could not be happier.

Now don't get me wrong, I appreciate an automated telephone scheduling service as much as the next guy. It's a hell of a lot easier than it was in high school when I had to bubble in those S.A.T.–like answer sheets with the numbers of the classes that I wanted to take. Besides, the phone system is quick, it's convenient, and it's easy enough for my grandmother to use (and she can't even figure out how to work a remote control.)

With the new automated system, a student can have his schedule for the entire semester rearranged, altered, and read back to him in the same amount of time that it takes to make a bag of popcorn. I couldn't begin to imagine how difficult it must be for students at schools still in the stone age about picking out their classes. So, I'm a big fan of our little add/drop telephone lady, right? Well, not exactly.

"The action that you requested could not be processed. The section that you are requesting is over–enrolled."

Just hearing those words drives me crazy. If you're anything like me, you've already heard the automated lady's voice tell you that wonderful phrase dozens of times this semester and it gets more and more aggravating on each occasion.

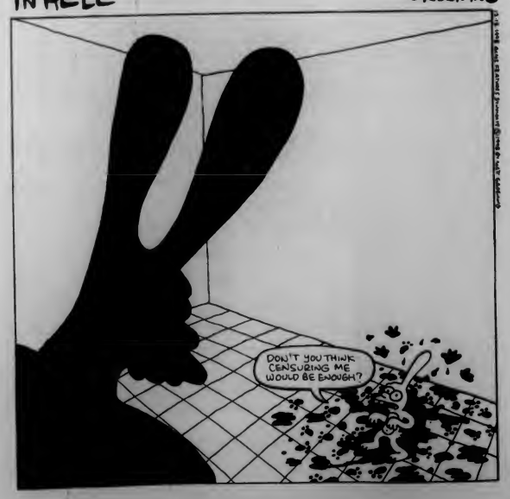
I can practically recite her entire opening from memory, and I can punch in my 9–digit student I.D., branch code, PIN, and the two–digit action code before she has a chance to finish saying "We are now conducting add/drop..." just a suggestion to the university's big shots: do something about that voice!

Perhaps if it was a little funnier or more compassionate while laughing at your request to get into that sociology class, it would make the bad news a little easier to accept. Maybe if next semester, Pamela Anderson came on and said, "Sorry, big boy, but you're not getting into that one," students wouldn't be so upset. I know some guys that would call just to hear the voice, and I would probably be writing another article next year on why the add/drop line is always busy.

It's not so much that the add/drop line never seems to get the job done, because it works out OK. The problem is that every professor stands by the system's verdict, and refuses to budge. They say things like "If you're not enrolled, just keep working on the phone lines — people are dropping the class all the time." (That's a number two on my list of most frequently heard lines so far the semester, by the way). Sure, professor, I believe you. But where the hell are these people? I know that thousands of students drop classes every day, but why can't any of them ever be in the class that I want to get into?!

I'm fairly positive that some people do in fact drop the class I need, but what are the odds of me being the first one to call in for it? I've never been a very lucky person and I think if you get into the class you need, you're damn lucky.

I hope you've got good luck because as every professor puts it, "it's out of my hands" or "I have no control over who gets into the class." (numbers three and four on my list) Oh, so I'll just skip that keg party this weekend because I have to be the first one to call in — if and when someone drops the class I have to get into. Well, I won't be partying, but at least I have a date with that add/drop lady; maybe she'll actually surprise me one of these days.



I'm sure that some of you who are reading this are going to say you're never had a problem with the university's telephone registration system. Well, if that's the case, either you're lying or you should play the next Powerball lottery, because you're a pretty lucky person. Maybe you just have more patience than I do, 'cause Lord knows that if I hear that "over–enrolled" line one more time, I'm making my roommate walk over to Whitmore to replace our surely to be smashed telephone.

So if you see me on campus, ask about my soap opera relationship with the add/drop lady. I'm still hoping that one of these years... she'll finally accept me.

Dana Oppedisano is a UMass Student.

Stop whining to your roommate about everything. Come down to the Collegian and write for Ed/Op!

LIFE IN HELL ©1998 BY MATT GROENING

Letters to the Editor

OIT and child pornography

To the Editor:

I would like to bring an important point to the attention of the student population regarding the Office of Information Technology's (OIT) policies. Many students living in dorms on the campus–wide network received a flier from OIT this year entitled "An Important Note from OIT," which was distributed with the standard telecommunications information that all students received. In this flier, OIT explicitly warns against "assorted illegal activities" which have been occurring on the campus–wide network. One of the activities listed as being of special concern is "possession or distribution of child pornography." While I agree that child pornography has absolutely no redeeming characteristics, I'm forced to ask why OIT's own Usernet news server subscribes to and regularly downloads, the contents of eight newsgroups that contain such material including: alt.pedophile, alt.pedophilia.pictures, and alt.sex.children.

Is OIT not violating its own policy, as well as the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, by downloading this stuff to university–owned computers? Someone more paranoid than me might begin to wonder if OIT was attempting to entrap users by providing such obviously illegal and despicable material for download via university computers.

Brian Fealy
Northeast

"Abusive" coaching has to go

To the Editor:

A situation within the university community merits attention from students, faculty, staff, and administrators. As a fan of the UMass Minutewomen's basketball team, I am concerned about the behavior of coach Joanie O'Brien toward her team members.

In my opinion, her constant direction of players during games is overly–controlling and distracts players from focusing on what is happening on the floor. Her public displays of anger and her verbally dressing down of players when they come off the floor indicate an abusive coach.

This situation was exposed in a long Boston Sunday Globe article on 12/13/98. The article detailed O'Brien's abusive behavior — both physical and verbal, in practice and at games — as the reasons for players leaving the program. Why has nothing been done? What kind of a message are we sending to the many youngsters that attend these games?

The solution is not Athletic Director Robert Marcum sitting courtside in a seat next to the UMass bench. Is he going to attend practice sessions and away games?

Abuse is cruel and can leave psychological scars, but when it goes unacknowledged by those close to the victim, it is doubly burdensome. I believe that the University community needs to apologize to past and present Minutewomen. Administrators need to get this cleaned up before there is a national scandal and UMass finds itself doing damage control once again.

The University of Rhode Island has taken appropriate steps to correct a similar situation with the coach of their women's team, and we should do the same. A good coach tries to bring out the best in every player through positive motivation and competent instruction — not abuse.

Mary L. Wentworth
Amherst

ARTS & LIVING

Cassius doesn't measure up

1999
Cassius
Astralwerks

French music means something to Americans again thanks to the techno adventures of Daft Punk in 1997 and Air in 1998. Cassius is the next big dance pop music thing from France. Consisting of two producers with much studio know-how, this new group tries to push the French dance music sound to the next level after the mega-success of the Stardust single. Stardust includes one member of Daft Punk and hit it big with their combination of heavy bass and beats and sample from an obscure disco tune.

1999 picks up from where the Stardust single faded out and fails at breaking any new ground. The duo presents some interesting beat patterns. "Supa Crush" has a structure that is exciting. It gets lost amongst many tracks that feature loops of beats and samples that drag on and on. "La Mouche," French for "the fly," features a buzzing sound and gets boring after five minutes. A majority of tracks feature snippets of vocals and instruments (funky guitar, flute and horns) from disco records before a synthetic beat track shoots the production into the nineties. "Hey Babe" is just that, lots of Barry White-sounding "hey baby"s one after another.

"Cassius 99" is the duo's so-called "breakthrough" single. The original and remix are included here. The original opens the album on an upbeat note. The remix comes as a relief after making it through the repetitive sounds that make up most of the album. The remix is transformed into a fun and extremely catchy tune due to a sample of Donna Summer's "Love is Just A Breath Away." Thanks to Miss Summer, this track has given this latest French duo a clubland hit.

Worth checking out is an out of place track that sounds more early eighties than disco-nineties. "Crazy Legs" seems condensed from hundreds of eighties pop tunes and is filled with tempo changes and all kinds of analog synth noises.

1999 is in its early stages. Cassius' debut is not in the same league as Daft Punk's Homework or Air's Moon Safari. Let's hope those hipsters in Paris come up with something else to keep French music alive here in the States. C+
(Matthew Nixon)

WITHOUT YOU I'M NOTHING
Placebo
Virgin

Trax On Trax Off

I've been sitting on this album for quite some time, thinking that it would never catch on. "Pure Morning" may have put a smile on the face of a few since the release of Without You I'm Nothing back in November, but has surely caught the attention of quite a few more since it has become a radio hit. (That's the "A friend in need's a friend indeed/a friend with weed is better" song.) But aside from "Pure Morning" the rest of the album is worth checking out. Easily reminiscent of Brit-pop bands like Suede and Pulp, but not really sounding like either of these bands. The androgynous image of frontman Brian Molko give the band a glam look that makes them an appropriate choice to be featured on the Velvet Goldmine soundtrack. Definitely a band to keep an eye on. B+ (Kevin Monahan)

STRETCH PRINCESS
Stretch Princess
Wind-Up

This imaginatively titled debut by ex-pat British threesome Stretch Princess is almost worth a few minutes of your time. Almost. While their heart may be in the right place, overall they suffer from a nasty case of the "withouts". As in Imperial Teen without the wry cynicism; Letters To Cleo

Turn to TRAX page 7

Shakespeare snatches 13
Truman Show snubbed by Oscars

Gwyneth Paltrow earns a best actress nominee for her performance in Shakespeare in Love

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

As they do every year, the Academy Awards committee chose their nominees yesterday for the top films of 1998. This year, there is actually a toss up as to who the big winner will be. An easy choice would be Steven Spielberg's epic drama Saving Private Ryan. The widely popular World War II story of a team of soldiers searching for a missing private earned 11 Oscar nominations. However, the 11 nominations were an inferior second to Shakespeare in Love, which earned 13.

Both films received a Golden Globe for best picture at January's Golden Globe Awards in their respective categories. However, before the nominees were announced it was the popular opinion of most critics that Saving Private Ryan would run away with the Academy Awards, and would be nominated in the most number of categories by far. It certainly comes as a surprise, then, that Shakespeare in Love was able to beat out Saving Private Ryan in the early Oscar hype.

Joining Saving Private Ryan and Shakespeare in Love in the category of best picture are: Elizabeth, The Thin Red Line, and Roberto Benigni's raved independent film, Life is Beautiful.

The big loser seems to be Golden Globe and fan favorite The Truman Show. Peter Weir's story of Truman Burbank, played by Jim Carrey, did not gain an expected best picture nomination, and Carrey himself was not nominated for best actor, an award he won at the Golden Globes.

In fact, neither winner of best actor in a drama or comedy series at the Golden Globes were nominated for best actor at the Oscars. Michael Caine, who won for his role in Little Voice, was shunned as well.

The actors who were acknowledged, however were: Roberto Benigni for Life is Beautiful, Tom Hanks for Saving Private Ryan, Ian McKellen for Gods and Monsters, Nick Nolte for Affliction, and a surprising nomination went to Edward Norton for American History X.

The actresses that were nominated for their lead roles were Fernanda Montenegro for Central Station, Meryl Streep for One True Thing, Emily Watson for Hilary and Jackie, Gwyneth Paltrow for Shakespeare in Love, and Cate Blanchett for Elizabeth.

Both Paltrow and Blanchett won these awards at the Golden Globes.

This year's Oscar nominations are just more proof that the Academy does not care who the critics and fans think should win awards, and you can't help but wonder what some of their reasoning is behind the picks.

In the past few years, there have been a lot of controversial issues brought up about the Academy being too personal when they choose who should win an Oscar. Two years ago, it seemed that no matter how good of a performance Madonna gave in Evita, there was no possible way for her to gain an Oscar nomination, and someone from the committee was quoted as saying that Madonna simply didn't deserve the award because of who she was.

The Academy has done the same this year to Jim Carrey. In my opinion, he gave by far the best performance of the year, in a film that will go down as one of my favorites of all time. However, if you sit back and think about it, it's clear that Jim Carrey will never win an Oscar. The Academy's

Turn to OSCAR page 7

Lambda Chi Alpha

ΛXA

Open Rush

Wednesday at 7:00 pm

Come meet the brothers and see the house while enjoying pool and wings
Stop by the house or call Jason for more information at 549-7759
ΛXA is located on the corner of N.Pleasant and Fearing St.

If You're Into Software We're Into You.

Junior Software Technicians Wanted!

If you want more than just a job, why not start your career with the world leader in mission-critical business software? Right now we're looking for new graduates with bachelor's or master's degrees in Computer Science or related fields for "Bootcamp." This outstanding ten week program starts every January and June, and includes full salary, free room and board, complete benefits package, full use of CA facilities, and transportation to and from work. At Bootcamp you will work to develop software in the hottest languages, investigate today's operating systems, and explore the newest technologies.

Why CA?

Just ask any of our over 13,000 employees in 160 offices in 43 countries, and they'll tell you why. CA is the world leader in mission-critical business software. We develop, license, and support more than 500 integrated products that include enterprise computing and information management, application development, manufacturing, and financial applications. In fact, CA makes more kinds of software for more kinds of computers than any other company.

We offer a generous compensation package with a long list of benefits that nobody else can match, including 401(k) and profit sharing plans, company paid medical and dental coverage, tuition reimbursement, and tremendous growth opportunity.

Call us today and find out why Computerworld ranked CA as one of the best places to work in the entire computer industry!

For more information visit our web site at www.cai.com or call us at 1-800-454-3788.

Computer Associates. Paradigm equal access to employment facilities and programs regardless of race, color, creed, religion, sex, sexual orientation, age, disability, national origin, veteran status, or marital status. © 1998 Computer Associates International, Inc. (Islandia, NY) 1-1788-7000. All product names referenced herein are trademarks of their respective companies.

COMPUTER ASSOCIATES
Software superior by design.

The Episcopal Chaplaincy
God and Science Project Presents

Wednesday, February 10
7:30 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium

EVOLUTION OR INTELLIGENT DESIGN?

ARE YOU PART OF A DIVINE PLAN, AN EVOLUTIONARY ACCIDENT ... OR BOTH?

MICHAEL BEHE
Lehigh University biochemist and author of Darwin's Black Box argues for an "intelligent design" in life.

LYNN MARGULIS
UMass Microbiologist and author of Five Kingdoms and What is Life? argues that evolution is at work.

Panel: Chancellor David K. Scott
Dorion Sagan, co-author of Into the Cool
& Dick Teresi, co-author of The God Particle

Moderator: Jerome Mileur

GROUP DISCUSSION TO FOLLOW

Cosponsors: The Dean of Students Office, Athletes in Action, Campus Crusade for Christ, First Baptist Church, The 4 C's, Hillel, Muslim Student Association, Newman Center, Novigators, The United Christian Foundation.

■ trax

continued from page 6

without the rampant and shameless cuteness. Transister without the electro-pretension. The Sundays without their understated yet ethereal beauty. The songs are all a bit neat and tidy, meaning the clarity of production will prove either a boon or a bain depending on your perspective. Interesting ideas threaten an appearance, but are shied away from in deference to the tried and true. Even when they dip their toe in the deep end of in Universe, their unexceptional safety-step does little to excite. At least it keeps their carefully styled hair intact. Structurally sound yet aesthetically tired, this debut is the musical equivalent of campus dining–centre food – people are welcome to make it but you're damned if you'll stick it in your ears. D+ (Ben Millar)

DUBD'SCO Volumes 1 & 2
Bunny Wailer
RAS

Dabbling expertly in the art of blunted tinkering that is dub, Bunny Wailer is a man who knows where the soul is at. This two volume disc by the criminally neglected quasi- brother of Bob Marley is a sweetly-scented blend of reworked material from his seminal solo debut Blackheart Man and the roots classic Bunny Wailer Sings the Wailers. The name of the dub game is deconstruction then circulation, done so perfectly here that your head will be ceaselessly swimming in a state of sonorous delight. Pared down to the barest melody, thought, theme or feel possible, these constituent elements are chosen for the way they have provided the essence and soul of each song. The tunes are then layered back up with a rhythmic vitality that would send any Jamaican dancehall Into a slow-motion stampede to the nearest munchy vending machine. The loping, looping beats are twisted and interlaced with effects which drop in and out at their whim, on the tide of studio tricks which proved well ahead of their time. The musicianship, however, is not to be overlooked. Dub The Proud Land and Rule This Dub saunter along on the fattest most vibelicious bass lines this side of a Juan Nelson solo; while the clever placement of vocals by Bunny is testament to the patience, thought and feeling that has infiltrated every facet of these recordings. A– (B.M.)

The nomination goes to

A partial list of the nominees for the Academy Awards has been released. The awards will be televised on March 21 on ABC. For a full list of nominees, check out the official Oscar web site at www.oscar.com.

BEST PICTURE: Saving Private Ryan, Elizabeth, The Thin Red Line, Shakespeare in Love, Life is Beautiful

BEST DIRECTOR: Steven Spielberg, Saving Private Ryan; Peter Weir, The Truman Show; Terrence Malick, The Thin Red Line; John Madden, Shakespeare in Love; Roberto Benigni, Life is Beautiful

BEST ACTOR: Nick Nolte, Affliction; Roberto Benigni, Life is Beautiful; Tom Hanks, Saving Private Ryan; Ian McKellen, Gods and Monsters; Edward Norton, American History X

BEST ACTRESS: Cate Blanchett, Elizabeth, Emily Watson, Hilary and Jackie; Gwyneth Paltrow, Shakespeare in Love; Meryl Streep, One True Thing; Fernanda Montenegro, Central Station

BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR: James Coburn, Affliction; Robert Duvall, A Civil Action; Ed Harris, The Truman Show; Geoffrey Rush, Shakespeare in Love; Billy Bob Thornton, A Simple Plan

BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS: Kathy Bates, Primary Colors; Brenda Blethyn, Little Voice; Judi Dench, Shakespeare in Love; Rachel Griffiths, Hilary and Jackie; Lynn Redgrave, Gods and Monsters

BEST FOREIGN LANGUAGE FILM: Central Station, Life is Beautiful, Children of Heaven, The Grandfather, Tango

■ Oscar

continued from page 6

doesn't like him because they think he's immature and stupid. It seems that The Truman Show has suffered simply because the lead actor is someone that cannot gain respect from the people that it means the most to.

By not nominating The Truman Show for best picture, the Academy was making a statement — "If you want to win an Oscar, go out and find someone like Tom Hanks, and then we'll give you one. If you cast a person like Jim Carrey, you won't even be considered."

The whole irony in a statement like this is that ten years ago if anyone said that Tom Hanks would win an Oscar, the response would be, "He's immature and stupid, he'll never win an Oscar." Hanks, who does an incredible job in almost any film he makes now, has sacrificed humor for greatness. Even in his earlier films such as The Money Pit, Big, and A League of Their Own, Hanks was marvelous. It wasn't until he gave up his sense of humor to become serious in Philadelphia, and Forrest Gump, that the Academy would acknowledge his talents.

Even though The Truman Show is a drama, Carrey's underlying smile is still there, and perhaps that is what the Academy didn't like about the film.

It seems that in most other aspects, the Academy was fair. There were few surprises in the most of the categories such as best supporting actor and actress, which included a nomination for Ed Harris for his role in The Truman Show.

The only other surprise almost as shocking as The Truman Show not being nominated for best picture was The Thin Red Line getting the nod instead. The mixed reviews for this film did not make it strong enough to deserve a nod for the industry's top award.

The Academy Awards winners will be announced on March 21, where Whoopi Goldberg will host the show.

■ lockout

continued from page12

him, hasn't changed all that much since the league's formation in 1946.

"I saw (Bob) Cousy and (Tommy) Heinsohn, and I thought I was going back to work," laughed Auerbach. "The name of the game is to win, and that's what this team is going to do."

The Celtics have apparently fallen asleep in church, as Toronto runs them off the court in a 103–92 shocker. The teams combined for 34 turnovers, causing Boston Coach Rick Pitino to readily display his disgust.

"I just think they physically beat the hell out of us," shrugged Pitino afterward.

Amidst the shower of bricks that comprised the Celtic offense, one young talent managed to put on quite a prophetic exhibition of hoop prowess: In a word, Paul Pierce was "dynamite".

The highly-touted rookie from Kansas put up stellar numbers in his pro debut; 19 points, nine boards, five assists, and four blocks. After spinning past veteran Charles Oakley for a graceful finger roll, Pierce garnered some courtside praise from "Spider" Hawkins, the long-time tender of the parquet floor at the beloved Garden.

"I've seen a lot of rookies, but that kid is gonna' be something," grinned Hawkins.

When asked if he can remember another Celtic rookie with such a polished offensive game, Spider looked toward the rafters and mentioned a certain forward from Indiana State. If the lockout has dampened this pursuit's spirit, he hides it well.

The view from balcony section 303 is like looking down from Heaven at the sacred parquet. For 15 years, Jeff Azer of Dorchester has kept vigil over his beloved team "from the nose-bleeds" without concerning himself with the business behind the sport.

"To me, the CBA was always just a league for guys like Alaa Abdelnaby," reflects Azer, "Now, we've got collective bargaining agreements, hard caps, exceptions. What about those of us who just love the damned game?

"If a player is going to base his career moves on the intangibles, because he's limited financially by the CBA, Boston should be able to attract key talent."

Turning his gaze back to the 10-man melee unfolding far below, this fan gives living testimony to the perseverance of pro hoops. After surviving a 100-day estrangement from his true passion, it has only taken an instant for the NBA purist to become locked back in.

Sweet Specials
For Your Valentine
Cash & Carry Specials

Special #1 — Long Red Rose Boxed Chocolate Bar $9.95
Special #2 — Long Red Rose Boxed Chocolate Bar Valentine Mylar Balloon $13.95
Special #3 — Long Red Rose Boxed Chocolate Bar Valentine Mylar Balloon Teddy Bear $19.95

plus memorable Valentine Arrangements & Cut Flowers Available
Open & Delivering Sat. Feb. 13th & Sunday, Feb. 14th 8:30 a.m. 5 p.m.
Knowles Flower Shop
253-3805

summer session hawai'i
www.outreach.hawaii.edu
University of Hawai'i at Manoa Summer Session

Wednesday Nite 2/10
10 to 12 pm
Bud SnowBoard Prmo
Enjoy the New
26% Bowtie $2.3
Hats & Tee Shirts
Grand Prize
Lift Tickets
& A Snow Board

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING
MATH • ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • BUSINESS ANALYSIS

TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.

When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.

Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower – Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircraft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.

At Raytheon, you'll take technology – and your career – to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth.

We have a lot to tell you about the new Raytheon Systems Company and the exciting opportunities we have available. Plan on visiting our booth at your college career fair. If you are unable to attend the fair than check out our website at www.rayjobs.com and please send your resume to: Raytheon Resume Processing Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266.

Internet www.rayjobs.com • E-mail resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Raytheon

Best Thai Food at Thai Corner
31 Boltwood Walk
Amherst, MA
Featuring
• appetizers • flavorful curries
• rice and noodles • real Thai food
• Best Pad Thai in town
for..
Dine in or Take-Out
call
Phone: 253-1639
Monday 11:30
Sunday
12:00pm - 9:00pm

SPRING BREAK
SKI AND SNOWBOARD
CANADA
MOLSON
PARTY SUN
SNOW SNOW
5 NIGHTS LIFT LODGING PARTIES/LIVE BANDS
$369
1-800-999-SKI-9
www.skitravel.com

(no more splitting headaches)

Free AT&T Call Organizer℠ Service.
Say good-bye to the hassle of splitting phone bills between roommates.* Plus, enjoy 10¢ a minute calls and get 100 FREE minutes.

Live off campus? Get FREE AT&T Call Organizer Service.
Who says breaking up is hard to do. With our free AT&T Call Organizer Service, we divide your monthly bill by roommate.* So you'll know who made what call when.

100 FREE minutes

AT&T One Rate® Off Peak*: Now you can stay in touch for the low price of 10¢ a minute, from 7pm–7am weekdays and all weekend long. 25¢ a minute all other times. And there's no monthly fee.* What a relief! You and your roommates will love how AT&T makes your life easier.

Sign up now and get 100 FREE minutes.*
Visit www.att.com/college
or call 1 800 654-0471 and mention offer code 66114.

It's all within your reach.® AT&T

Stuff our lawyers make us say: *Terms and conditions apply. A $3 monthly minimum usage charge will apply. Subject to billing availability. 100 free minute offer based on becoming a new AT&T Residential Long Distance customer and selecting the AT&T One Rate® Service or AT&T One Rate® Off Peak Plan. Offer expires 2/1/99. Call for details. ©1999 AT&T.

■ scoring

continued from page 12

me the puck. Basically we just know where we are at all times. It's just a chemistry thing and pucks are finally start going into the net," Geever said.

Geever's three goals and 10 assists gives him 13 points for the season is good enough for third on the team in scoring. The hustle is there and they have been able to get a few more hard work goals, and hustle goals.

"At the start of the year we didn't have guys going to the net. Basically we have taken it upon ourselves to get the loose pucks and put them in the net," Geever said. "It's not a pretty part of the game but it's part of the game."

Geever played in only seven games his first season scoring no points on five shots, which make his accomplishments far beyond what was expected of the sophomore. The Hanson native worked really hard in the off-season to build up his strength, which helped him become a complete college hockey player.

"The more you play in this league the more you learn. I've been helped by the support from the guys like Dean Sturk and Sellzy (Nathan Sell) tells us little things that help us out. No one has really gotten down on me and things are just coming together," Geever said.

"Ray has worked really hard. He really needed to work on his strength. It has come for him. He's moving his feet quickly and he's getting good results, and that's one of the keys to his success," Mallen said.

"Ray has made a lot of improvements, in the number of minutes and games he's played. We need that from everybody. We need guys to improve at that sort of rate. If our freshman can improve like Ray has over this summer then we are going to win more games."

The Minutemen hope the play of the all-sophomore line continues. They need consistent play from the Geever, Turner, Gates line as well as the other three lines in order to make the stretch run at the Hockey East playoffs as they stand tied for the final spot with Northeastern heading into this weekends action.

"I hope we can keep our trend going and continue putting pucks in the net, and make the playoffs. It was really tough last year not getting to play. I just want to make the playoffs and do what I can to help the team, whether it's blocking shots or getting loose pucks in the corner," Geever said.

"We just want to get the team into the playoffs. We would like to get all three lines going. If we can do that then we would be a deadly team to play against. Hopefully we can keep going and try to contribute," Turner said.

■ NBA

continued from page 12

Taking a chance on Chauncey Billups should pay huge dividends.

Wait till next year:

Sacramento Kings — Chris Webber will need to revert to his timeout-calling days often this season, on his way to becoming the most frustrated player in the league. Webber has a solid supporting cast in the frontcourt with Vlade Divac and Corliss Williamson, but the backcourt is inexperienced, and the overdue departure of Richmond will be devastating.

Golden State Warriors — The Warriors should avoid finishing last in the conference because, well... the Clippers and Grizzlies are still around. Donyell Marshall will continue to improve, and if John Starks still hungers to win, the Warriors may do so occasionally.

Los Angeles Clippers — The Clips suffer from "Kings syndrome"; decent post players, no backcourt. The result of that equation should add up to a 12-win season.

Vancouver Grizzlies — Unfortunately for the Grizz, they simply don't have enough NBA talent on the squad to be competitive yet. Mike Bibby and Shareef Abdur-Rahim are the exceptions, even Bryant Reeves if he gets in shape.

Playoffs — East 1st Round: Pacers over Celtics 3-1, Heat over Knicks 3-2, Hawks over Magic 3-2, Nets over Cavs 3- 2. East Semis: Pacers over Nets 4-2, Hawks over Heat 4-2.

East Finals: Pacers over Hawks 4-2.

West 1st Round: Lakers over Blazers in 3, Jazz over Wolves 3-1, Rockets over Sonics 3-1, Spurs over Suns in 4.

West Semis: Spurs over Lakers 4-3, Rockets over Jazz 4- 2. West Finals: Rockets over Spurs 4-2.

NBA Finals: Rockets over Pacers 4-2.

Sanford Appell is a Collegian columnist.

■ best

continued from page 12

Baltimore Player of the Year in high school, is leading the A-10 in scoring (21.5 ppg), assists (7.0 apg), free throw percentage (85%), and steals (3.75 spg) all the while playing 30 or more minutes per game.

In an era where the players are getting bigger and bigger, Shawnta Rogers has shown the ability to be a play-maker amongst the trees. He is the shortest player in the A-10, and this year, he is it's best.

Coach Tom Penders is very high on his senior. "He's (Rogers) the best basketball player in America. Without him, we're like 4-15".

Standing at only 5'4", Rogers has an unbelievable ability to find the open man on the court, even on the inside. The vast majority of the Colonials' offense runs through Rogers, yet teams can not stop the senior guard.

The A-10 has seen an explosion of stars at the guard spot this year, including Fordham's Bevon Robbins who is sixth in the conference in scoring (17.2 ppg) and tenth in assists (3.42 apg), or UMass' Monty Mack, who is third in scoring (17.6 ppg), or Pepe Sanchez of Temple, but none have had the impact upon their teams' total play than Shawnta Rogers of GW. Rogers should be a runaway for A-10 Player of the Year.

George Washington is tied with Xavier in the West for first place in the A-10 and the 1998-99 season ends with a showdown with the Musketeers in D.C. on February 27; right before the Atlantic 10 tournament in Philadelphia. Look for Rogers to be at his best that night.

The Collegian from Downtown...
Yes! The stories are GOOD!!

GET IN SHAPE
IN SHAPE NUTRITION
•Fat Burners •Creatine •Protein Powders
20%-50% Off Retail Prices Everyday
•Andro •Vitamins/Herbs •Food Bars and more...
65 University Dr. Amherst 549-7434

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

GRE your №2 days are numbered
Taking the GRE? You'd better start exercising your mouse finger. Because April 10th is the last time you can take the GRE on paper with a pencil. Get the point?
Both the computerized GRE and the Paper & Pencil format have advantages. We've got all the tools to help you decide which is right for you.
Call us at 800.2.REVIEW We'll help you sharpen up.
800.2.REVIEW www.review.com
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

WMUA FM 91
The voice of UMass is looking for dependable & enthusiastic people to help in the following depts.
News
Publicity
Sports
Visual Media
Underwriting
Fund Drive
If this strikes your interest come by and check us out! All are welcome to visit us at 105 campus center (next to the collegian) or call 545-2876

CHALLENGE
Support. Responsibility. Quality of Life. Filene's Basement offers you so much more than just an ordinary day in retail. Take the challenge and join our team!
VISIT US ON CAMPUS
Wednesday, February 17th
Stop by the career center to sign up for an interview.
Successful candidates will be considered for our GROUP MANAGER TRAINING PROGRAM
The purpose of this program is to train individuals with limited retail experience through a total immersion into a global retail environment. This program is supplemented with a ten-week seminar series that reinforces the operational, merchandising and management skills that are "learned on the job". Program length is 90 days.
There's always opportunity at Filene's Basement! Enjoy great benefits and a 25% employee discount, too. If unable to attend, please forward resume to: Bill O'Donnell, Filene's Basement, 40 Walnut St., Wellesley, MA 02181; FAX (617) 348-7159, e-mail: jobs@filenesbasement.com. Visit our website at www.filenesbasement.com.
NOT JUST ANOTHER DAY IN RETAIL
FILENE'S BASEMENT
An Equal Opportunity Employer. M/F/D/V

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3334 • M-Wed 10-6, Th-Sat 10-9, Sun 12-5
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3334 • M-Sat 10-6, Thurs'till 9, Sun 12-5

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Always in Bloom
Valentine's Day!
February 14th
Roses, Dutch & Exotic Bouquets
Local Special
Hugs & Kisses
Kisses: Cuddly Soft Bear, Red Rose & Balloon $25.00
Hugs: Bud Vase Bear with Red Rose $17.50
Uncompromising Quality, Selection, Presentation & Service
220 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
253-5545
We Deliver Anywhere!

Steve & Greg Asadoorian
"UMass' Greatest Acoustic Duo Playing your Favorite Tunes From the 60's & 70's today"
Weekly Drink Specials
Miller Lite Bottles $1.
16 oz. Miller Lite $2.
Bucket of Rocks (4 rocks and a T-Shirt) $6.
22 oz. Rolling Rock 2.99
THE PUB amherst
Over 40 Hand Crafted Beers
15 East Pleasant Street • Amherst

Hawaii Pacific University
Center for Graduate Studies
Where do you plan to be after graduation?
Consider attending graduate school at Hawaii Pacific University
Join students from all 50 states and 80 countries in the pursuit of a quality graduate education.
Our unrivaled location in the Pacific Rim and outstanding faculty make HPU's graduate program the ideal choice for motivated students.
We offer Graduate Programs in: Master of Arts in Diplomacy and Military Studies • Master of Arts in Human Resource Management • Master of Arts in Management Master of Arts in Organizational Change • Master of Business Administration • Master of Science in Information Systems • Master of Science in Nursing cut & mail
Yes, I would like more information about Hawaii Pacific University.
Name
Address
Phone
Send to: Graduate Service Center
1164 Bishop Street Suite 1510
Honolulu, Hawaii 96813
E-mail: gradservctr@hpu.edu
1-800-669-4724
www.hpu.edu
C110

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FUNK CLUB AUDITIONS! Hip hop dancers wanted. Sat Feb.20, 12 to 5 pm. Boyden 237. Callbacks, Sun Feb. 21 Questions? Call Charlene 6-5590 or Amelia 665-8649

Fraternities/Sororities: Looking for a DJ for your next function? DJ Fooz is now booking, specializing in date parties and formals. Call Tim 549-9127

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Putton Village partially furnished availible immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment Sunderland. Available now, February Free Call 577-0375

AUTO FOR SALE

85 Jeep CJ7, 4-cyl, 4-spd, 73k miles, Hunter Green, soft top, new Alpine stero, rims, 31" tires. Call Matt 253-9170

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag. black $3500 584-6090

1986 Jaguar VDP Elegant 350 LTI conversion. Hella Lights. Nardi wheel All reciepts $9500 Jim @ 413-256-0966

'95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer. 546-5366

1990 VW Jetta Silver Good Running/Condition 128,000 miles $160.00 Or call 256-8634 or 256-0222

COMPUTERS

Packard Bell 8kspeedCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

COMPUTERS

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With COROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3 hrs/NYC)— Sports oriented, Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or wayneboys@aol.com.

HELP WANTED
EARN EXTRA CASH!!! MAKE YOU OWN HOURS!! RESPONSIBLE STUDENTS TO MARKET/MANAGE CITIBANK PROMOTIONS ON CAMPUS. FREE GIVEAWAYS! EARN $400+/WEEK. CALL JOANN AT 1-800-950-8472 EXT.117

PRESTIGIOUS NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP
Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, Nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool, Musical Director and General Counselors.
INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd
TRAIL'S END CAMP
800-408-1404
www.trailsendcamp.com

$20/HR PT/FT!!!
Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details:
Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net
or 770-937-6764

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY
Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99?
College Pro, a $25 million company, seeks highly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goal-oriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

General Labor
$7.50 Amherst location needs your help all winter shoveling snow & sanding walk ways. Only available for work one or two days a week? This is the perfect job for you. Call United Personnel Services today to learn more about how snow+work=$$. 800-363-8200

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

Counter Help + Drivers Wanted Must be able to work 20 hrs a week. Apply at DP Dough

EMPLOYMENT

More Than Just SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. Camp counselors needed for a private, residential camp in the beautiful Pocono Mountains. We are looking for people with a dedication to children, enthusiasm for diversity, and a desire to share their passion and expertise in any one of the following areas: COMPUTERS, CIRCUS ARTS, BASKETBALL, MAGIC, VOLLEYBALL, TENNIS, DANCE, VIDEO, CREATIVE WRITING, ESL, SOCCER,COOKING, RAOIO, ROCK MUSIC, GOLF, SKATEBOARDING, ROLLERBLADING, ROCKETRY, NEWSPAPER, FINE ARTS, CREATIVE CRAFTS, MOUNTAIN BIKING, CLIMBING WALL. Call 1-800-399-CAMP Ask for Dan or Nige!

Fraternities-Sororities-Clubs-Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,00 this semester with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 922-5579

Whitewater guides and River Photographers wanted for part,full time summer jobs outdoor and athletic background a must will train for both positions. Photography position requires some experience. Call Crab Apple Whitewater for info 413-339-0188

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire Dj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester. Call Tim 549-9127

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Mountain Bike 98 Marin Muirwoods Exc. Conditions. $350 or B/O Call Ed 546-7055

FOR SALE

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

GREEK AFFAIRS

AXΩ Informal Rush Come meet the sisters of Alpha Chi Omega 2/8 7-9, 2/9 7-9, 2/10 7-9

Sigma Delta Tau Open Rush
All university women invited Mon 7-9 Tue 7-9 Wed 7-9 409 N.Pleasant St. For info or a ride call 549-8896

Chi Omega Invites all University women to our open rush parties. Wed 6-8 Located on campus shuttle line. For info or ride call Amy 549-1485

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday, Kristen!!! Roses are red, the stars are bright. I hope you're ready to throw-up all night!!! Have a great day-Love, Deb

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals
Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Lessons with Retired Pro Djata Bumpus in Springfield. $160 for 8 private sessions Call 413-732-8817 for Apt.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
In Amherst. Classes filling soon.
Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call...
1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING
Classes start soon
Student Discounts
Call for information
1-800-467-2028
SPACE IS LIMITED

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

Furnished room in house at north Amherst. $285.00 everything included. Call Ines, 253-3670

Share large house with grad students $320/mo. includes utilities. Greenfield 773-8586

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

TRAVEL

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $835. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437
It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

TRAVEL

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

SPRING BREAK'99
Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks!
Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan
1-800-426-7710/
www.sunsplashtours.com

BOSTON SPRING BREAK '99
To Mazatlan from $599
To Cancun from $369
7 nights, 5 to 14 FREE meals
10 to 32 hours of FREE drinks
CALL FREE
1-800-244-4463
Visit our web site
www.collegetours.com

#1 Spring Break Specials!
Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!!
1-800-234-7007
www.endlesssummer-tours.com

#1 Panama City Vacations!
Free Parties - No Cover. Best beachfront hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007
www.endlesssummer-tours.com

SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

TRAVEL

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

WANTED

Bereau For Apartment Call 253-4826 Willing to pay cash

"I LOVE YOU!!" Today is the last day for you to put a Valentine in The Classifieds for Your Sweetheart this Valentines Day!!

RIGHT NOW!!

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, FEB 10

Community — There will be a blood drive in the Campus Center basement from 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Coupons for a free frozen yogurt will be given to donors.

Lecture — The UMass Black Student Union presents "PMS: A lecture & discussion series on power, money, and sex" at 7 p.m. in room 1009 of the Campus Center.

Meeting — The Marketing Club will hold a meeting at 5 p.m. in room 109 of the School of Management.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting about how to become a Peace Corps volunteer from 7-8 p.m. in room 168C of the Campus Center. Call 545-2105 for more information.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex in room 302 of University Health Services at 7 p.m.

THURSDAY, FEB 11

Live in the Campus Center Basement from 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Coupons for a free frozen yogurt will be given to donors.

Film — The Black History Film series will show the film "Glory" in the Student Union Ballroom at 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Creating Communities Giving and Volunteering by GLBT People" will take place in room 803 of the Campus Center at 12:30 p.m.

Production — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of "My Sister in this House" will be held in Kirby Theater at Amherst College at 8 p.m. Reservations are suggested by calling 542-2277.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of Residence Hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — Last information sessions for the Domestic Exchange program will be held Feb. 9, 10, 16, and 17 in room 604 of Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Deadline for applications is March 1. Call 545-5351 for more information.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is February 12. Also searching for the 1998-99 cover contest winner. Deadline is the end of December. Call 5-4220 for more information.

Volunteers — Volunteers are needed to train and facilitate workshops on contraception and sexually transmitted disease prevention during spring semester 1999. Men and women needed. Contact Karen or Day at 577-5188 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs — University Store "not like a mall... Better."

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 10, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	13	Wheaties	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Mark Russell	Championship Ballroom Dancing (In Stereo)			Mr. Bogodity, Who Lives		In the Life (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Funny Picks & Screw-Ups	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)			Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Funny Picks & Screw-Ups	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)			Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Frasier	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Whose Line?	20/20	Friends	Nanny
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Dawson's Creek		Charmed (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Hunters"	News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline		Law & Order "Haven"		News	Judge Judy	Newsradio	Newsradio
WTXX	20	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Jim Rohoon	College Basketball	Boston College at Connecticut (Live)		Judge Lane		Law & Order "Haven"	News	Tonight Show
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Haven"		Law & Order "Hunters"	News	Mad Abt. You
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "Whatever Works"		News	Law & Order "Haven"	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Haven"		Law & Order "Hunters"	News	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Mark Russell	Championship Ballroom Dancing (In Stereo)			Cincinnati Pops Holiday	News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Whose Line?	20/20	News	Cheers
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days "Last Breath" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Bliss"		Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	National Geographic Explorer				Baseball: Atlanta Braves vs. Montreal Expos (Live)		Law & Order "Precious"
A&E	25	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Working Mom"		Biography: John McCain		American Justice "Eyewitness"		Sports		Moneyline
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour	Crossfire		World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand: Fortune		Daily Show	Stein's Money
COM	28	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Paula Poundstone		Rowan Atkinson: Face		South Park (R)	Upright Citizens Brigade (R)	Spyteik "The Rest 007" (R)
DISC	69	New Houses	Pick-Line (R)	Wild Discovery "Primates" (R)		Spyteik "The Rest 007" (R)		Discover Magazine (R)		Great Train Robberies (R)		Sportscenter
ESPN	59	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Maryland at North Carolina State (Live)				College Basketball: Georgetown at Notre Dame (Live)		Sportscenter		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
LIFE	67	New Attitudes	Makeover	Party of Five "Low" (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		Get "The People Next Door" (1996)		Behind Pen.		Blame Game	Loveline
MTV	70	Countdown	Out (In Stereo)	Beavis-Butt.	Daria	Sift & Oily	Video Clashes	Total Request Live (In Stereo)		Cheers (R)		I Love Lucy	Bewitched
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Allen Strange	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Laverne	Twilight Zone	Star Trek
SCIFI	60	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Amaz. Stories	Star Trek "Who Mourns for Adonais?"			Highlander: The Series		Friday the 13th: The Series		Extreme Machines "Car Crazy"
TLC	26	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Rocking the Boat"		Extreme Machines "Car Crazy"		Colliding Continents (R)		Star Port		Wedding Story: Diana, Princess of Wales (1996)
TNT	63	Due South "Body Language"		ER "Full Moon, Saturday Night"		Sports Illustrated Swimsuit '98		Sports Illustrated Swimsuit '98				"Hotel" (1983)
USA	62	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger		The Silence of Dolphins (R)		Tracey Takes		Silence of Dolphins (R)
HBO	29	PMRF First		★★½ "Wild Wild" (1997) Melanie Brown, PG-13		★★ "Mad City" (1997) Dustin John Travolta, PG-13		★★½ "Deep Impact" (1998) Tea Leoni, PG-13				Real Sex '99	Erotic
MAX	65	★★ "Volcano" (1997) Adventure		Tommy Lee Jones, PG-13		★★★½ "Eve's Bayou" (1997) Jurnee Smollett, R						★★½ "Cousins"
SHOW	30	★★½ "We're Talkin' Serious Money" (1992)		Dennis Farina, PG-13		★★ "Body Count" (1997) David Caruso, R

HSCN 4 Hearing Services Cable Network

1 HSCN Bulletin Board	10 The Learning Channel
2 CBS/3 Hartford	11 PBS/57 Springfield
3 CBS/4 Boston	12 Movie Ch. Springfield
4 ABC/5 Boston	13 Movie Ch.
5 PBS/57 Springfield	14 Movie Ch.
6 HSCN Movie Ch.	15 TV Land
7 UPN/20 Hartford	16 Univision
8 Weather Channel	17 Cinemax
9 NBC/30 New Britain	18 Movie Ch.
10 Fox/61 Hartford
11 PBS/24 Hartford
12 WGCH & HSCN
13 International
14 UMass Academic TV
15 WB/New Haven
16 HSCN Programming

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Davey K...in his office By Darling

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

408ville By Louis & Allan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — It's likely to be quite easy for you to be frustrated today. When you feel a darker mood coming on, take a step back and reassess your situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — A task that needs to be performed may not excite you or inspire you in any way, but regardless, you're going to have to get the job done.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You have little more time than expected today to get a certain task completed. Still, you don't want to wait until the very last moment, do you?

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — The gray and forbidding sky may loom ahead of you, but you can maintain a positive outlook by simply focusing on what is right beside you.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Travel is a good idea today, and the culmination of a secret project is at hand. Perhaps you can combine its completion with a satisfying rendezvous.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — While most of the people around you are trying to see things in a bright and positive fashion today, your darker mood is likely to prevail.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — See if you can't get out of someone else's way before he or she decides to run right over you in pursuit of an important personal goal today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Try not to be too hard on yourself today. Remember, it's not always best to be your worst critic. On the other hand, be realistic!

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Something that means very little to others is likely to get stuck in your mind, and cause you nothing but frustration. Ask a friend for help.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Discussion about routine affairs is sure to help you pass the time today, even though your mind might be dwelling on a primary endeavor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Don't be tempted to go faster in order to get there sooner. The truth is, your arrival depends on a balance between speed and caution.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Don't make the mistake of thinking you're finished with a major task before all the loose ends have been neatly tied up. Go the distance!

Quote of the Day

"The fox condems the trap, not himself."

–William Blake

Close to Home By John McPherson

$5.99
$5.99
$5.99

Rockets will soar; while Lakers wait

This season, the Western Conference is destined to be dominated by four teams; all of which will have a legitimate shot to bring home an NBA championship — if they can get through the Western Finals. After the "Big Four" there are several locks for the playoffs that will be competitive, but just don't have enough firepower to play with the big boys.

Sanford Appell on the NBA

Look for several perennial doormats in the "Wacky West" to move up the ranks this year, in hopes of formulating the right potion for future postseason success. Without further adieu, this year's Western Conference predictions:

Playoff bound:

1. Los Angeles Lakers — (37–13) Shaquille O'Neal will actually have to become the player he says he is for this generous assessment to become reality. The arrival of Derek Harper will assure that L.A. will have at least one positive influence in the locker room. After O'Neal, Kobe Bryant will be the second toughest player in the conference to contain.

2. Utah Jazz — (35–15) Regrettably, I admit the Jazz will make another run at the title, with all of their major players back in town, no offense to Chris Morris. The main concern for Jazz fans should be that their club did not upgrade. Almost every other team in the Midwest Division did.

3. Houston Rockets — (32–18) After the departure of Clyde Drexler, the Rockets added yet another All–Time Top 50 player in Scottie Pippen. The move is an improvement, as Drexler clearly was past his prime. This team will take time to gel, as Scottie must now face life after Michael. Look for Charles Barkley to have his ups and downs early, but to come alive to lead the Rockets to their third World Title of the decade.

4. San Antonio Spurs — (31–19) The Spurs would have finally claimed their first NBA title, if they had made two key moves. They needed to bring in a shooter with the playing caliber of either Mitch Richmond or even the deplorable Latrell Sprewell. Secondly, the Spurs needed to move coach Gregg Popovich back up to the front office and bring in a legitimate play caller such as Bill Fitch. Steve Kerr and Mario Elie will help, but they are simply not enough to push the Spurs over the top.

5. Phoenix Suns — (28–22) The loss of Antonio McDyess will hurt this team more than they would like to admit, but stealing Tom Gugliotta from Minnesota will help cushion the blow. Luc Longley will be a force in the middle an asset the Suns have not had in recent years. Jason Kidd will provide his stellar playmaking skills, but has he learned how to hit an open jump shot?

6. Seattle Supersonics — (27–23) The Sonics are going to see how the other half lives, or at least begin to. They will undoubtedly finish in the lower half of the playoff bracket, and they will have great difficulty knocking off any of the major powers in a short series. Cornerstones Gary Payton and Vin Baker are still a lethal combination, but the rest of the roster is thin.

7. Minnesota Timberwolves — (27–23) The Wolves will place below the Sonics by virtue of dropping the season series to them. Losing Gugliotta can only spell trouble in the North Star State, unless Joe Smith can finally reach his potential; a feat he is far from accomplishing. Like Seattle, the Wolves have a fine point guard/power forward combo in Stephon Marbury and Kevin Garnett, but even these talents won't get the Wolves out of the forest this season.

8. Portland Trailblazers — (25–25) Some self–proclaimed NBA experts have pronounced that the Blazers will actually win the west this season. More realistically, this talented but tormented team will struggle to keep the peace both on and off the court. Bringing in overrated Jim Jackson will only disturb J.R. Rider in his quest to get the bulk of the shots. Floor general Damon Stoudamire will need to be a calming influence throughout some trying times.

On the brink:

Dallas Mavericks — My gut tells me they will be the sleeper in the west, but my head tells me they are another year away. Many teams will underestimate the Mavs all season, which will only work in their favor. Their deep backcourt includes Michael Finley, Steve Nash, Robert Pack and Hubert Davis — look for them to make some noise.

Denver Nuggets — Another team that will raise from their collective coffins, but not quite make it out of the graveyard.

The return of McDyess will provide an immediate spark. Rookie Raef LaFrentz should add scoring punch, but will be a defensive liability early on.

Turn to NBA, page 9

UMass has gut–check in hoops

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

UMass forward Chris Kirkland has his eyes on St. Bonaventure. Kirkland has emerged as one of the team's most reliable players.

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

And now comes the million–dollar question concerning the Massachusetts men's basketball team: How will it react after an emotional win on Sunday?

The answer lies in the storied game to follow. After snatching victory from the jaws of defeat against St. Joseph's, UMass will use tonight's 7:30 p.m. contest at the Mullins Center with St. Bonaventure as a litmus test of sorts.

Emotion will certainly not be lacking from this meeting. To begin with, the Minutemen are looking to avenge their disappointing 53–50 loss to the Bonnies on Jan. 9. And after the late–game heroics of Monty Mack and Chris Kirkland pulled UMass into a tie for second place in the East Division of the Atlantic 10, a small fire has been ignited beneath the Maroon and White.

In addition, the Minuteman (10–12, 6–4 A–10) floor leader Charlton Clarke seems to have found his stroke again — something which had been absent during his team's two losses at the hands of Texas and Rhode Island. To his credit, he managed to scrap for seven points against the Hawks, playing on an injured foot which doctors recommended he ought not. As a senior and captain, Clarke decided to ignore the medical advice to try and help his team salvage the remainder of its season.

Kirkland and Mack have jumped into the spotlight and continue to carry the team on their shoulders. Sophomore guard Jonathan DePina seems to have cured his turnover syndrome and is beginning to improve. Even the ultimate question mark, Ajmal Basit, has somehow found a way to string together two solid performances.

Things may actually be looking up for the Minutemen. Their only worry stems from their next opponent, St. Bonaventure (11–11, 5–5 A–10), who is taking major strides in seriously improving its program; a process that UMass embarked on 10 years ago.

"You could ask me [how we'll play against the Bonnies] every night, and I'd give you the same answer. I don't know," Minuteman coach Bruiser Flint said. "St. Bonnie's beat us, and they're playing well. They just beat Temple. They're playing well with a lot of confidence."

UMass has reached a point in the season where, realistically, they will not receive an at–large bid to the NCAA Tournament... even if the team wins its final six games. What it can do, however, is gain momentum before the A–10 Tournament — momentum which could result in a higher tournament seed and an easier route to the title game, which they must win to qualify for the big dance.

"We have nothing to lose, and everything to gain from this point on. [I told the players] to go out and play that way," Flint said. "We're 10–12. We've got nothing to lose. [I told them] go and play like you've never played before in your life."

The Bonnies boast a lineup which features four starters who average over 10 points per game. 5–foot–10 junior guard Tim Winn leads the list of scorers with 14 points per content. Center Caswell Cyrus, who averages 6.5 rebounds, may also pose a problem for the UMass front court, which has been severely out–rebounded in many of its losses.

Minutemen Notes: Although he had considered returning for a fifth year, senior center Lari Ketner was denied in his appeal for a waiver to play the extra season.

The Philadelphia native sat out his freshmen year because he did not meet NCAA academic requirements. He had planned on entering the NBA draft at the conclusion of the 1998–99 campaign, but did not rule out the option of returning to college hoops as a fall–back plan.

Irish and Comeau spearhead UMass

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

On Saturday, the Massachusetts women's track and field team placed second in a five–team meet that was held in Kingston, RI, at the University of Rhode Island. This was the last meet before the "the big three": the New England Championships, the ECAC Championships, and the Atlantic 10 Championships.

The host Rams (96.5 points) barely edged out the Minutewomen (95 points). Holy Cross placed third (24.5 points), followed by Rider University (24 points), and Providence College (23 points). UMass now sports a 3–1 record on the season.

Several exceptional performances by UMass athletes led to their second place finish. With an overall strong showing, the Minutewomen will hope to be peaking at just the right time.

Shelandra Irish was the top scorer for the women by placing first in the long jump with a season–best leap of 19– feet–.75–inches. Irish also placed second in the 55m dash with a time of 7.34 seconds.

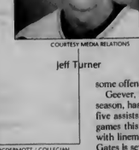
Andrea Comeau was not to be outdone, though. The UMass junior set a new school record in the high jump; 5– feet–10.5–inches she bettered the mark, which was previously hers as well, by 1.25 inches. Comeau also placed second in the 55m high hurdles with a time of 8.38 seconds.

Another school record was set on the day by freshman Johanna Lelke. Lelke broke the school pole vault record for the second consecutive week with a vault of 9–feet–6.5–inches. This vault was good enough to place her fourth overall in the meet. She bettered her old mark of 9–feet– 6.25–inches.

Carole LaPlante won the shot put with a throw of 42 feet. With a jump of 34–feet–10.25–inches, Erin Hankard placed first in the triple jump. The jump was the second best by a Minutewoman this season.

Senior Nicole Way continued her outstanding campaign by placing second in the 800m with a time of 2:17:74 minutes. Junior Monica Elmore placed second in the 1,000m with a time of 3:07:34 minutes.

Geever and Turner vital to Minutemen scoring



BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Ray Geever, along with standout teammate Jeff Turner, has played a crucial role in the UMass effort to make it into the Hockey East tournament.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Ray Geever

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jeff Turner

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The Massachusett's men's hockey team suffered through a tough stretch in the early part of January, when they<None> lost three games to No. 2 Maine, Providence and Northeastern by a combined score of 21–3. The Minutemen have begun recently to turn things around, going 2–3–1, defeating Merrimack, and Boston University, whom they hadn't beaten in 79 years, and tying Northeastern. And all three losses were to No. 7 Boston College.

One of the main reasons the Minutemen have been able to turn it around, has been the sophomore line, which includes Jeff Turner, Ray Geever and R.J. Gates. This line has been huge during this stretch. They will need to continue to be a scoring machine in order for the Minutemen to make a successful run at the Hockey East playoffs. The two mainstays on the line have been Turner and Geever.

"That line is a pretty good combination. Gatezy is a guy who can check and control the boards. Jeff can make plays and Ray shoots the puck really well. He's (Geever) quick onto the puck, they are all doing a good job positionally in our system. This is the time in the year when you start getting your timing down, and start making better plays," UMass coach Joe Mallen said.

Turner is currently second on the team in scoring behind only junior Jeff Blanchard. Turner has tallied 17 points thus far this season, while missing only one game. He has seven goals and 10 assists. Turner is hot as of late. He has scored 4 goals and six assists in the last 10 games. He also notched the game winning goal against the Terriers of BU.

Turner has scored in a team–high six straight games. This streak ties the team mark, which Turner set earlier this year.

"Our line is really coming together. We are reading well off each other. We are just doing some things we really weren't doing at the beginning of the year, and the scoring is coming a little easier in the last 10 games," Turner said.

In the 1997–98 season, Turner had four goals and four assists totalling eight points in only 17 games. The Saginaw, Mich. native has exceeded his freshman campaigns stats this season. Turner has been healthy with the exception of one game this season, which he missed with a injured shoulder.

Last season he missed 16 games with a fractured fibula.

"My expectations were set high, and early in the year it was not exactly going the way I wanted, points wise, scoring wise, but it's definitely starting to come together and we're starting to produce some offense," Turner said.

Geever, a walk–on for the Minutemen who only played in seven games last season, has picked up his offensive production. Geever has scored 1 goal and five assists in the last six games, while playing in all of the Minutemen's 26 games this season. He has been a mainstay for the Maroon and White along with linemate R.J. Gates who has also played in all of UMass' games as well. Gates is seventh on the team in scoring with two goals and 6 assists.

"I credit Turner for being a good scorer. The first part of the year he gave

Turn to SCORING, page 9

NBA lockout won't sway B-ball purists

By Adam White
Collegian Correspondent

BOSTON — These are trying times indeed for the basketball purist.

Already struggling against a tide of Iverson crossover-carries and Beanie B–Ball Baby giveaways, fans now face the smoldering aftermath of a season–threatening labor dispute. Of course, a legion of media doomsayers pointing to the retirement of a certain Windy City roundball demi–god as the first sign of the NBA's apocalypse cannot sway the purist's faith. Just look at the 300–odd fanatics crowding the gates of the FleetCenter a full two hours before Friday's season–opener against the Toronto Raptors.

Just how far does the organization go to welcome back its faithful? Free t–shirts, "I still love this game" interactive CD's, and mini–programs were offered. Inside the arena itself, there were but a handful of empty seats. So much for the "NBA–on–its–deathbed" theory. Even at $70 a chair, the kge is absolutely packed.

Anyone with a clue about hoops knows that Red Auerbach can only be accurately described in religious terms. On opening night, God was in the house.

The man with the .662 career winning percentage and nine championship rings has a way of cutting through the hype and finding fundamental truths in a game that, to him, hasn't changed all that much since the league's forma-

Turn to LOCKOUT, page 7

Colonials' little big–man shines

By Matthew J. Perrault
Collegian Staff

Does size really matter? Taking a look at the Atlantic 10 point guards lately, the answer is no. UMass has its own version of Mighty Mouse in 5–foot–9–inch sophomore Jonathan DePina, St. Bonaventure has 5–foot–10–inch junior Tim Winn, LaSalle's got 5–foot–8–inch freshman Deon Jones, but no one has the amount of fire–power condensed into a sub–six foot package that George Washington's own 5–foot–4–inch senior Shawnta Rogers has.

Rogers is again the floor general of the Colonials this season, who are looking to repeat as A–10 West Champs. Currently, they stand at 14–6, and 8–2 in Atlantic 10 play, tied for first place in the West. GW owes much of this year's success to the unbelievable play of their senior from Baltimore, MD.

The four–year starter and former

Turn to BEST, page 9

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 13 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Thursday, February 13, 1999

Students support diversity pages; talk about future at Collegian forum

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

A forum was held last night in the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union to discuss the future of the diversity pages in The Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

"The lack of diversity editors and writers has become a problem here at the Collegian," said Editor–in–Chief Casey Kane. "But we realize that the diversity desks provide strong voices for certain communities here on campus."

"We know that over the past 20 years there has been a lot of tension between the Collegian staff and the diversity communities, and we don't want to create any new problems," she added. "We want to make things better for the future."

At the forum, Kane announced that the Collegian staff has been considering ways to increase readership of diversity issues.

"We've been given four suggestions thus far," said Kane. "But we know that those aren't the only potential suggestions out there."

The suggestions include:

1.) Total integration of diversity issues into other sections of the newspaper, including news and editorial.

2.) Keeping the diversity pages as they are.

3.) Introducing a daily column into the news section, in a fixed location, representing a different voice from a different diversity desk each day.

4.) Twice weekly running an extra editorial/opinion page specifically for diversity–related editorials.

"It seems odd to me that the Collegian would print one diversity item a day, because that's really tokenizing," said Kate Geyer, a senior philosophy major. "There's not just one gay voice, and there's not just one black voice."

"I would like to keep the pages," said Humphrey Brown, a former Black Affairs page editor. "The Collegian has not always been the most inviting place for people of color to make their voices heard. If we keep the pages, incoming freshman can see that there is a place for black issues."

"As a primarily white newsroom, we can't provide the same perspectives that minority communities can," said Laura Forster, the Collegian news editor, and a former Developing Nations page editor. "The concern with keeping the pages the way they are is that people might not take over the pages when their editors leave, and thus certain pages will run unequally."

Many students suggested that the Collegian do more to focus on multicultural perspectives on all issues.

"Someone on the news said, 'Clinton is in trouble because he's a friend of the blacks, a friend of the Jews, and a friend of the gays,'" said Emie Michaud, a senior sociology major. "What I want to know is what does the black community think about this, what does the Jewish community think about this, and what does the gay community think about this? We already know what the mainstream thinks."

MELINDA NOBLES / COLLEGIAN

Collegian staff member George A. Chidi Jr. discusses the paper's diversity pages at last night's meeting.

Others questioned the validity of certain pages. "One of the things that has struck me in the four years that I've been here is that certain pages make sense to me," said Larry Goldbaum, the director of the Office of Jewish Affairs.

"The Black Affairs page is one of them. There are people who would really like to see it printed. It doesn't seem to me that the Developing Nations page and the Multicultural Affairs page speak to other communities with the same force that the Black Affairs page speaks to blacks."

The Collegian staff will be discussing and voting on the issue of diversity pages in the near future. They maintain that they will take all of the opinions voiced at the forum into account.

"I feel there were a lot of good comments and suggestions made this evening, which I think all of us will take into account when we make our decisions," Forster said. "This issue means a lot to me, and I hope whatever we decide on will have long–lasting, effective results."

SGA discusses methods to help student–parents

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) finally got underway last night after having to cancel the first meeting because it failed to make quorum.

Questions surrounding the credibility of the election which voted Salwa Shamapande into presidency were put to rest last night after the motion was passed to ratify the spring 1998 elections.

Senator Paul Ferro, who represents commuters, spoke about the inconsistencies of the election and the "low activity administration." Ferro suggested Speaker of the Senate Lisa Cook become the President for this last month until elections in March.

Senator Brandon Beane, who also represents commuters, successfully argued to keep the current administration in place, pointing out that if Cook becomes president all of her hard work on the Spring Concert will be fruitless, because "she wouldn't have the time to do that any longer."

After much debate and a close vote, a motion was passed for the SGA to join with the commuter area to strongly urge the Chancellor to immediately create an emergency fund of no less than $50,000 to aid affected undergraduate student– parents.

The motion is designed to give commuter students with children aid to continue their education after their government subsidies run out. A bill was passed by the United States Congress giving people who are dependent on the government for money two years to become self sufficient.

Shamapande spoke on behalf of passing the bill, saying that the government is now giving people two years to become self sufficient, which doesn't work for student– parents because college is a four–year program.

Senators opposing the bill had different arguments for their opposition.

Senator Aaron Saunder, who represents Sylvan at large, opposed the bill not because he is against helping student parents, but because by passing this motion SGA would be "superseding the state government."

UMass is a state institution, and according to Saunder these student–parents would be receiving state funds which would not be legal after the first two years. The debate got so heated senators started chanting. "Jerry, Jerry."

Another motion was passed that may affect where you park. Senator Jennifer Worcester, who represents Orchard Hill Area Government, and Chair Cindy Gargano brought a motion to pass on purple lot stickers. Due to overcrowding and, according to Ferro, Parking Services' practice of issuing more stickers than there are spots, a motion was passed that purple lot stickers be issued with regard to the specific lot corresponding to the owner's residential area.

Ferro fought against this saying that it will not allow student choice. During the hours of 7 a.m.–5 p.m. weekdays, purple lot sticker owners can only park where they live.

There was a unanimous vote that bus schedules be posted on all on–campus bus shelters, so that the schedules are always readily available to the students.

Off–Campus talk focus

Alcohol policy could be toughened

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The effects of a tougher alcohol policy and whether it should be applied off–campus were debated during yesterday's partnership meeting between the University of Massachusetts and the Town of Amherst.

"I don't want to read too much into it at this time... [but] we have seen a drop in physical assault. Students are making different decisions about how they're drinking," said Assistant Dean of Students Paul Vasconcellos.

The group, which included Amherst police officers, Select Board Members, representatives from the Dean of Students, and UMass resident assistants (RAs) discussed having an off–campus alcohol policy.

"The University is still looking into the possibility of possibly taking action for off–campus conduct," said Amherst Police Chief Donald Maia. "If we stay with the alcohol policy... as a pilot, we're ahead of the game. If we work [on broadening it] we'll be sitting here a year from now."

Maia said the town would have different considerations than the University when formulating an alcohol policy, such as false identification.

Vasconcellos said what has been looked into is "adding another part of the chart [of alcohol policy sanctions] for off–campus."

Boss is was in favor of an off–campus alcohol policy.

"There's not two categories of students, one on–campus, one off–campus. There is one category of students. They are UMass students whether they live on or off campus. So it seems to me the code of violation should apply equally," Boss said.

While statistics from the University show a decrease in the number of alcohol violations since the stricter policy was introduced last fall, numbers from the Amherst Police Department aren't showing a slowing in off–campus parties and noise.

"I agree with Paul [Vasconcellos], the statistics are impressive. I'm just wondering if some of those different decisions they're making is to drink off–campus rather than on–campus," said Hill Boss, a member of the Select Board.

Total alcohol violations at UMass dropped from 705 in fall 1997 to 334 in fall 1998.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Amherst selectman Hill Boss.

In Amherst from September through December 1997, there were 157 disturbance complaints made to police and 516 noise complaints. In 1998 there were 116 disturbance complaints and 545 noise complaints made to police.

UMass Police Chief John Luippold offered one reason there was not a drop in all the complaints in Amherst as there were at the University.

"He's [Vasconcellos] talking about Code of Conduct violations," Luippold said.

He said activities that are a violation of the Student Code of Conduct may not necessarily be criminal activities that police would respond to. So while numbers for Code of Conduct violations drop, numbers of criminal violations may not.

Luippold also said he wanted to watch the data over a "year or so before I draw any conclusions."

An RA at the meeting also said a reason off–campus trouble hasn't decreased is because the new alcohol policy and education on–campus occurred after those students had moved off–campus.

"The students living off–campus now did not receive the same education as on–campus students receive now," said Resident Assistant Jill Tirimacco.

As part of the survey committee, Boss presented the preliminary version of a survey that ask residents whether they had noticed a change in noise and disturbances in their area.

Ho Chi Minh potrait ruled okay to hang

By Cynthia L. Webb
Associated Press

WESTMINSTER, Calif. — A Vietnamese man who was attacked, picketed and given an eviction notice for displaying a Ho Chi Minh portrait in his video store in the city's Little Saigon section won the right to put the poster back up yesterday.

That decision immediately triggered new protests. The shopkeeper, Truong Van Tran, was met by a crowd of 150 people and hit in the face as he returned to put the poster back in the store window. Paramedics took him away in an ambulance, but he was not believed to be seriously injured.

Tran's wall–sized poster of the late communist leader was seen as especially offensive in Little Saigon, which is home to 200,000 Vietnamese–Americans. Many of them fled South Vietnam after communist North Vietnam invaded in 1975. Others left nearly a decade later when they were freed from prison camps.

Protesters compared Tran's act to posting a portrait of Adolf Hitler in a Jewish neighborhood.

About 700 demonstrators, many carrying yellow–and–red flags from what was once South Vietnam, crammed the hallway outside the courtroom in nearby Santa Ana where Tran's case was heard yesterday.

Judge Barbara Tam Nomoto Schumann, reversing an earlier decision, allowed Tran to display the poster and a Vietnamese flag in his video store, called Hi Tek.

"Mr. Tran's display is undisputedly offensive and engenders hatred," the judge said. "However, these symbols are part of political speech which Mr. Tran has a right to express even in the context of that expression is offensive."

Tran, 37, left court without comment.

Turn to PORTRAIT, page 2

MELINDA NOBLES / COLLEGIAN

Dreams of stardom

Freshman Annie Sicherman practices the guitar in Northampton yesterday.

Croatian women's leader gives speech

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Zeljka Jalavic, co–founder and coordinator of the Centre for Women's Studies, in Zagreb, Croatia, spoke yesterday in the Campus Center about gender politics, activism and academia in East–Central Europe.

During the lecture, sponsored by the Women's Studies Program and the Slavic and Eastern European Studies department, Jalavic discussed her role in furthering women's studies in Croatia.

"When the war started in Croatia friends asked us, 'Why do you want to create a new women's center now, when there is a war going on?" she said.

The Centre, created by 11 women in 1995, was established the midst of the country's civil war.

"The war of course changed our lives in many different ways," Jalavic said. "On the other hand, when will be a good time to raise awareness of gender indifferences in our society?"

The general political environment in Jalavic's home country, she said, is constantly evolving.

"What we had in the former Yugoslavia is self–managed socialism. A Russian colleague of mine perceived us as capitalists because we had open communication and people could easily travel abroad. Communism was not as strong as it was in the former Soviet Union," she said.

Jalavic also said her country is currently undergoing a strong surge of conservatism.

"It is pushing women back to so–called 'natural duties of womanhood.' Women are being pushed to have five kids," she said.

The Croatian government has criminalized abortion for women. Jalavic said only 5 percent of parliament seats are held by women there.

Jalavic helped put together the first women's issues magazine in Croatia called, "Treca," meaning third. She also was responsible for editing a book about a women's peace conference in Croatia.

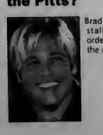
"Education should be considered a tool for political change. Our goal is to empower women and support them in society in general," she said.

In Croatia, no formal women's studies programs exist at the universities.

Discrimination based on gender, is something Jalavic has experienced first hand.

"When I got a degree from the university and was rejected [for a job] even though they said I was qualified. They told me they needed someone reliable. A woman would have to stay home and take care of her children when they get sick," she said.

"Women experience this kind of discrimination in many situations."



EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 32	HIGH: 55 LOW: 33	HIGH: 35 LOW: 14

SOURCE: CNN.COM

NEWS

Ain't life the Pitts?

Brad Pitt's 19–year–old stalker gets a court order to stay away from the actor.

PAGE 3

ARTS

Under Cupid's Care

Valentine's Day is upon us once again — do you have a date? gifts? Or do you just need tips on how to avoid it? Look inside for some expert advice.

PAGE 5

SPORTS

Getting the job done

Even with injuries and other off–the–court problems, Massachusetts women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien is making the most with what she has this season.

PAGE 16

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 14
Comics 15
Crossword 15
Editorial 4
FYI 14
News 3
Sports 16

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Smith arts benefit from gifts

By Rebecca Sablo
Collegian Staff

With two recent alumnae gifts totaling $28 million, Smith College will begin a two-year expansion and renovation project of their Fine Arts Center in 2000. The Museum of Art, the Smith Art Department, and the Hillyer Art Library, all part of the Fine Arts Center, will be included in the largest and most costly construction project the college has ever attempted.

The largest gift, amounting to $14 million, is not only the single largest gift to Smith, but it is also believed to be the largest gift to any of the "Seven Sibling" schools, which include Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar and Wellesley.

Smith President Ruth J. Simmons called the gifts "a dramatic and resounding statement of a new level of commitment to the best possible education for women."

Given by the Brown Foundation, Inc. of Houston, the $14 million derives from the generosity of three relatives: Smith Board of Trustees member Isabel Brown Wilson, a 1953 graduate; her sister, Maconda Brown O'Connor, who graduated from Smith in 1985 with a master's degree in social work and later with a Ph.D. in 1998; and their cousin, Louisa Stude Sarofim, a 1958 graduate, who together have made possible the largest gift in Smith College history.

Other than funding the Fine Arts Center alterations, $4 million of the gift will go towards internships for students in both the undergraduate college and Smith's School for Social Work.

The second gift of $10 million was donated by two anonymous New York alumnae and will also go towards Fine Arts Center renovations. Along with $10 million from the Brown Foundation, the gifts will defray the $31 million estimated bill for the Fine Arts Center renovations.

Currently, the Museum of Art has more than 24,000 pieces which include a large number of 19th and 20th century art. The Hillyer Art Library, which holds the largest collection in the Five-College community, contains 80,000 printed volumes, 35,000 microfilm units and 315 current periodicals in its collection.

With 52,000 square feet to be added to the buildings, more room will be available for displaying art pieces. In addition, the Art Department, already one of the most popular departments at Smith, will be able to expand teaching and studying into the new facilities.

According to the director of the museum, Suzannah Fabing, the museums are accessed by students and teachers from Smith College and local schools.

"The museum's collections are already widely used in teaching throughout the curriculum at Smith. The renovations and expansions will help us better serve both the campus and the community. With these two magnificent gifts, we are well on our way," she said.

Also, a computerized system, essential to any well- equipped art and art history program will be located in the new addition. Eventually, all of the current art slides and photographic collections will be available to all students through a computerized campus network.

Department of Art Chairperson and art historian professor Craig Felton praised the donations and said "with their help and our own professional commitment to an intellectually sound and creative program, we will assure that Smith students and faculty will be aided by the best instructional and technological advancements available."

Ann Shanahan, director of administration and special events, noted that the "Smith Museum is considered one of the top two or three in the country." The gift, she said, allows a significant increase in the number of facilities available for the study of art and art history.

Shanahan is looking upon the next two years as a busy time at Smith. "The addition and renovation at Smith is a major undertaking." Along with the construction of a new campus center, the Fine Arts Center adjustments "will make it an exciting time at Smith."

Police Log

Alarm — Fire
Feb. 9
Burnt food set off an alarm in Wheeler Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 9
An argument between two individuals was reported in Kennedy Residence Hall.
Feb. 8
An individual reported being struck by a bicyclist who left the scene. There were minor injuries.

Assist Citizen
Feb. 9
A technician was called to extricate an individual from an elevator in Conte Polymer Research Center.

B&E/Burglary
Feb. 8
A vehicle was broken into in Lot 25, on Commonwealth Ave. Nothing was stolen.

Domestic Disturbance
Feb. 9
An emergency restraining order was issued in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Fraud
Feb. 9
An individual in Johnson Residence Hall received a bill for a credit card that was never received from the company.

Health/Safety Hazard
Feb. 9
Environmental Health and Safety was notified about a hazardous material spill in Morrill Science Center IV-North.

Larceny
Feb. 8
An individual in Coolidge Residence Hall reported illegal purchases made on credit card.

Noise Complaint
Feb. 10
A loud party was reported in John Adams Residence Hall.
Feb. 8
An individual was reported yelling, disturbing residents of McNamara Residence Hall.

Sex Offenses
Feb. 10
Ansuman Mittra, 22, of 50 Maynard Rd., Sudbury, was arrested in an Orchard Hill Residence Hall and charged with indecent assault and battery on a person 14 or over.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 9
Peter J. Glawischnig, 20, of 98 Center Rd., Shelburne Falls, was arrested on Massachusetts Ave. and charged with operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, no inspection sticker, and failure to wear a seat belt.

Vandalism
Feb. 9
A poster was set on fire in Brett Residence Hall.
A vehicle was damaged in Lot 32, south of Massachusetts Avenue. Parts were stolen from the engine compartment.
Homophobic graffiti was written on posters in Cashin Residence Hall.
Feb. 8
A vending machine was tipped over in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall, causing extensive damage. The machine was removed by the vending company.

■ portrait

continued from page 1

ment.

After the ruling, hundreds of demonstrators circled the courthouse, chanted "Down with communists!" and hoisted signs with messages like: "Communists want blood not free speech." Several protesters then went to wait for Tran at his store.

"I am a Vietnamese refugee. I escaped from communism. I lost my country and I lost my family because of this regime.

I don't want any symbolism of communism in Little Saigon," said Bich Nguien, 40.

"He has a right to freedom of speech, but he can't take advantage of the refugee community."

At the store, Tran climbed from his blue Hyundai, leaving his wife and two children inside. He was hit and knocked to the ground, where he remained, with his eyes closed, for several minutes until police arrived.

Tran has never publicly explained why he set up the display. He told police he did it because he could and because he wanted to antagonize neighboring businesses he was unhappy with, Lt. Mike Schlisky said. It was not immediately known when Tran came to the United States.

Tran also was struck in the head during a protest on Jan. 18, when he first put the poster and flag on display. He was not injured and declined to file a complaint.

Terra-Buchard Ltd., the owner of the shopping strip that houses Hi Tek, gave Tran 30 days to get out, saying he violated his lease by interfering with other tenants' business.

The company also went to court against Tran, and on Jan. 21 Schumann ordered Tran to take down the display. But after a hearing yesterday, she refused to issue a preliminary injunction that would have extended the order.

"The fact that some people don't like speech has never been a basis in this country to stop it from being expressed," said Peter Eliasberg, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, which backed Tran.

Stuart Parker, an attorney for the Vietnam Communities of Southern California, said the judge was wrong.

"Here is a clear and present danger to the community," Parker said. "I see it as a victory for inflammatory speech."

~ News Briefs~

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who allegedly climbed through a window at Brad Pitt's home and stayed for 10 hours was barred from contacting the actor and must stay 100 yards away from him for the next three years.

A Superior Court commissioner told Athena Marie Rolando, 19, yesterday that Pitt "certainly has a right to be free from intruders."

Pitt had been granted a temporary restraining order to keep the woman away, but his attorneys wanted a three-year order.

"Everything is going to be fine," Rolando said outside court, adding, "I'd actually like to file a restraining order against Mr. Pitt himself to stay away from me."

In court documents, Pitt contends the woman left "many menacing and bizarre letters" at the front gate of his home beginning in September 1996.

Pitt, the star of "Meet Joe Black" and "Legends of the Fall," was not home at the time.

Choose A GREAT Future!!

300 Jobs

Business

Liberal Arts

Engineering

The Requirements:
- 3.45 GPA for non-engineers
- 2.95 GPA for engineers
- US Citizenship

The Program:
✓ 3-year management training program as a civilian with the US Navy in 6 career fields
- Engineering
- Logistics
- Contracting
- Computers/Communication
- Business/Cost Estimating
- Manufacturing/Quality Assurance

✓ Jobs are located throughout the US

The Benefits:
→ Full tuition for graduate degree
→ Fast-track career development program
- Low cost life insurance
- Retirement plan with employer matched funds and tax deferred savings
- 23-days vacation

To apply or for information call - Code UMA.0217: 717.605.3980
www.navyintern.cms.navy.mil
Email: navyintern@fmso.navy.mil

Visit Our Booth During The Job Fair

Dartmouth to put an end to Greek life on campus

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Dartmouth College, the school that inspired "Animal House," plans to put an end to single-sex fraternities and sororities to foster more "respectful relations" between the sexes.

Dartmouth students were in an uproar yesterday over the plan. "This was like a bomb," said Misha Rosoff, 23, rush chairman at Sigma Alpha Epsilon. "Everyone sort of assumed that the trustees would try to get rid of the Greek system, but this came with no warning."

Officials at the Ivy League school refused to say whether the plan means requiring fraternities and sororities to go coed or phasing them out altogether, but college President James Wright said it will be the biggest change in social life at Dartmouth since women were admitted in 1972.

The move, announced in a letter to students Tuesday, is aimed at encouraging "respectful relations between women and men." College administrators said they are concerned about problem drinking and the social fragmentation that sometimes accompanies the Greek system.

The college did not say specifically when the changes would be put into effect.

The details are to be worked out in consultation with students and backed with tens of millions of dollars for construction of new housing, dining and social areas to replace the Greek houses. In the end, the Greek system "as we know it today will not continue," Wright said in an interview yesterday.

Dartmouth, founded in 1769, has had fraternities for more than 158 years, and they are a major part of the school's image and the social life in Hanover, a snowy town of about 7,000 people 135 miles from Boston. According to the student paper, The Dartmouth, more than 35 percent of the 4,300 undergraduates are members of 25 single-sex fraternities and sororities.

"The Greek system is a very huge thing up here," said Brad Bingham, 22, a member of Alpha Delta. "If there was a city or a bigger town with more things to do, maybe it wouldn't be so important."

Greek officers met yesterday night and decided to cancel all 21 events and parties planned for the weekend. They want to show administrators that there's nothing to do at Dartmouth without Greek activities, said College Fraternity Sorority Council member Jamie Paul.

Chris Miller, a member of Alpha Delta when he was a Dartmouth student, co-wrote "Animal House," the 1978 comedy about frat-house debauchery.

"Every time they plant a tree or modify the curriculum they constantly have student meetings and discussions," complained Catherine Curran, 19, a sophomore and sorority member from Las Vegas. "For something this drastic, they should have gotten student input."

The national organizations of some fraternities and sororities do not permit coed membership, and that could prove a hurdle. The 120,000 living members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon would have to vote to change the fraternity's bylaws to admit women, and "the chances of that are slim to none," said Ben Lewis, a spokesman in Evanston, Ill.

"I know of no modern-day fraternity or sorority who has allowed anyone in of another gender," Lewis said.

Something that could become a model for Dartmouth occurred at Middlebury College in Vermont in 1991, Middlebury spokesman Phil Benoit said.

The trustees there "basically said to the Greek system houses, 'It's all right to remain here, but you must open membership to both genders,'" he said. He said nearly all complied, though they changed names and affiliations.

A room with a view...
7:23 am, Baker Resident Hall.

Experts: Amazon rainforest destruction on rise again

By Stan Lehman
Associated Press

SAO JOSE DOS CAMPOS, Brazil — The destruction of the Amazon rainforest is on the rise again after falling to a six-year low in 1997, Brazilian scientists said yesterday.

Preliminary figures from the National Space Research Institute showed that 6,500 square miles of forest — an area larger than Connecticut — were destroyed last year, up from 5,100 square miles in 1997.

But the total devastation is certainly higher. The institute didn't count areas destroyed by forest fires, including a massive prairie fire in the northern state of Roraima last year that ravaged more than 4,200 square miles.

Thelma Krug, who heads the institute's earth observation department, said the data measures only the actual clearing of land by loggers, farmers and cattle ranchers.

Since 1978, Brazil's Amazon has shrunk by 205,439 square miles — more than 10 percent of its original size. Some scientists believe the destruction of the world's largest wilderness could accelerate global warming.

The TM Landsat satellite images from 1997 showed that 45 percent of the destroyed area was primary forest, while the rest was mostly savanna or fringe area that already had been cleared, Krug said. The data from last year are still being analyzed, and no breakdown was available, she said.

The latest numbers are an improvement from 1995, when forest destruction hit a single-year record of 11,220 square miles. The low was 4,300 square miles in 1991, when a recession slowed the economy.

Still, environmentalists said the upswing last year indicates repression isn't working.

"This shows that the government has failed in combating deforestation," said Ulisses Lacava, spokesman for the World Wildlife Fund office in Brasilia, the capital. "What we need is a comprehensive plan for forest management."

The data on deforestation now goes to the government's environmental protection agency, known as Ibama, which is in charge of enforcing the law.

The new environment minister, Jose Sarney Filho, said his office was trying to discover the reason for last year's figures and implied that the numbers were misleading.

"I'm not questioning the data, but we don't know if deforestation actually rose or if our monitoring improved," Sarney Filho said in Brasilia.

American pilots ordered back to work

DALLAS -(AP) — Yesterday a federal judge ordered American Airlines pilots to end a sickout that grounded 2,500 flights, stranded 200,000 travelers and left businesses scrambling for cargo carriers.

U.S. District Judge Joe Kendall chided the pilots union and the airline in issuing a temporary restraining order, and told them to resume negotiating.

"It's silly for us to even be here," said Kendall, who ordered the pilots to return to work Thursday. "It's like killing a gnat with a sledgehammer."

Kendall warned pilots they could be held in contempt of court if they do not return to work. He also placed some blame for the dispute on the airline.

"If you would look up bad labor relations in the dictionary, you would have an American Airlines logo beside it," Kendall said. Allied Pilots Association president Rich LaVoy said after the hearing the union "will be encouraging our pilots to get back in the cockpits."

Whether that will happen remains to be seen. During a previous pilot sickout against American in 1990, many failed to return despite a court order.

AMR Corp., the airline's parent company, had asked the judge to order pilots to stop calling in sick amid a labor dispute about salaries paid to pilots of Reno Air, which it recently acquired. "They're threatening to bring the airline to a complete halt," AMR attorney Dee Kelly said.

The job action started Saturday after talks stalled over the issue of when pilots from Reno Air would be upgraded to the pay scale received by American's pilots.

American pilots are barred by federal law from striking over the issue, but are not obligated to accept overtime shifts, which are not uncommon in day-to-day airline operations.

Yesterday, when the airline said 2,077 pilots called in sick, passengers struggled through another day of delays as they stared at flashing "Canceled" signs at many major airports.

Nicole Travis, 15, of New York's Long Island found herself stuck in Chicago as she tried to get to her Florida vacation with relatives.

"It was supposed to be an eight-day vacation but now it's only seven days. This day was wasted," she said.

Jim Valentine and Kelly Young of Green Bay, Wis., found themselves stuck at Miami International Airport, worried they would miss their wedding in St. Lucia.

"There's a three-day residency requirement in St. Lucia to get married," said Valentine, 37. "If we don't get there today, our residency requirement won't be met."

Ms. Young, 33, added: "Oh my God, I have a very sick feeling in my stomach. I'm just shaking. It's not exactly what I imagined for my wedding week. I have my bridal gown in my wardrobe bag.. and it's probably all wrinkled."

The loss of American's cargo services caused trouble at Gladstone's 4 Fish restaurant in Malibu, Calif., where supplies of Alaskan dungeness crab were dwindling.

"All of our food is fresh," spokeswoman Christine Lloyd said. "We rely heavily on things coming in every day."

TWA, Delta and other airlines accepted American tickets in the same price class and waived the customary change-of-flight fee, as part of a pact between airlines.

Airline analyst Raymond Neidl of Furman Selz Inc. estimated American is losing about $19 million a day in revenue.

American's 9,400 pilots say AMR should add Reno Air pilots to its roster more quickly, thereby moving all employees up on its pay scale.

AMR said that it will take about 12 to 18 months to move pilots into their new positions and that the union's demand for pay raises would cost as much as $50 million this year.

Republican pair intends to vote on Clinton side this week

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republican support for convicting and removing President Clinton waned yesterday as senators debated impeachment for a second day behind closed doors. Two GOP senators announced they would reject both the perjury and obstruction of justice charges. Sens. James Jeffords of Vermont and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania said they would not support allegations of perjury and obstruction of justice.

Specter, citing the laws of Scotland, said there could be "three possible verdicts: guilty, not guilty, not proved."

"Given the option in this trial, I suspect many senators would choose 'not proved' instead of 'not guilty,'" the Pennsylvania Republican said in a statement that he planned to deliver on the Senate floor. Jeffords said Clinton had committed shameful acts but his offenses "do not reach the high standard of impeachment."

Other senators' decisions announced yesterday were not a surprise. Democrat Tom Harkin of Iowa left the chamber to read reporters his statement in favor of acquittal. Sen. Dick Lugar (R-Ind.) said he would vote to convict on both articles.

Harkin said the House had presented "a counterfeit case" based on the efforts of "an out-of-control independent counsel with a blank check." He predicted that only one-third of the Senate would vote for the perjury article.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott said that "if at all possible" he would like to set a vote for 5 p.m. today on whether to convict Clinton on the perjury and obstruction of justice charges — votes that by all signs will fall far short of the two-thirds majority needed to oust the nation's 42nd president.

"If we still have speeches and we can't do it then we will certainly go over to Friday but I think we need to begin to talk about that goal," Lott said at the opening of today's trial session. The Senate sergeant at arms then closed the doors so the debate could begin in private for a second day.

At the White House, spokesman Joe Lockhart said the president is "open to the idea of censure." But Lockhart added, "I don't think it's appropriate for us to indicate or try to prescribe" punishment.

Clinton will probably have something to say after the Senate votes, Lockhart said. The White House has been sensitive to possible criticism if Clinton appears to gloat over the likely acquittal.

Campus Career Network
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Campus Career Network Field Experience Office invies you to the 16th Annual Co-op Job Fair

Thursday, February 18, 1999
10-3pm
Campus Center Auditorium

Employers will attend from:
Boston Globe
Data General
Doubletree Islander Hotel
Filene's/May Company
IBM
Johnson & Johnson/Ortho-McNeil
Pepsi Cola
Reebok
Sikorski Aircraft
U.S. Food & Drug Administration
Walt Disney World
And many, many more!

Don't let this opportunity to get a summer or semester PAID position pass you by!
Call the Field Experience Office for more information at 545-6265.

EDITORIAL / OPINION

— The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian —

The heart of a hotel

The hotel where I worked had a tiny room in the sub- basement, below the front desk, below the room service kitchen. In the flourescent bulb-lit room sat the oldest woman I had ever seen in front of an archaic terminal with a third of the pixels burned out. This was PBX, otherwise known as the phone room.

Barbara was the phone operator for 40 hours a week in a hotel of over 400 rooms. She wore a size-4 uniform of wool like my own, with a white polyester blouse that had a ruffled collar — very New England conservative. Barbara was an old-school Bostonian who dropped her "r's" and believed fiercely in the people at the hotel.

Wrinkles etched time on her face, but her teeth were white in an indomitable smile. She smelled like powder. Barbara had a tendency to be long-winded with guests — not the best quality in PBX.

"Oh, your bathtub stopper doesn't work right? Isn't that a shame. Won't they ever get some that work right? I tell you... Hold on, dear."

She would call the engineer on the walkie-talkie. "Dominic, how are you dahlin'? I have some chips for you down in PBX. There's a lady in 356, says her..."

This would go on all night, the eight other phone lines ringing angrily. Barbara calling the ends of the earth to find, say, a guest's special bar of soap that the maid had thrown out.

Barbara had some inexplicable quirks, like abbreviating everything she wrote. For instance, she spent countless hours in the sub-basement alone. But one day she taped a sign on the door of it: Please shut the door when you leave. T.Y. Barbara. In all those hours, writing out the words "Thank you" would have taken her out of the "phone zone" or something. Or maybe she was too busy munching on cinnamon cookies. "Try some honey. They're so fresh," meant she had just opened the cellophane.

Another time I saw a thank you card that she had taped to the asbestos-lined wall for one of our co-workers at the front desk. Happy Birthday, Heather. Remember, age is just a no. Weirdly ironic to negate the power of aging, the march toward death, by abbreviating "number" to "no." Barbara was the chattiest woman in the hotel, but when it came to the written word, it was as though she had to make every moment count. Memento mori.

It is with thoughts of Barbara and people like her that I attend Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration classes here the University. The program ranks third or fourth in the country from year to year, deservedly so. The interdisciplinary nature of the industry requires top-notch faculty and well-designed classes.

Food Production Management is one of them. Around 11 students run a restaurant on campus each semester. Customers call weeks and months ahead to reserve seats at the fixed-menu, four-course dinners. When I took the class, I learned to schedule my classmates by task, and direct each of them in cooking a dish, such as Waldorf Salad or Lemon Meringue Pie. Part of the fun was in the details: music, napkin folding, table settings, garnishes.

Tanya Mannes

But the most memorable part of the class was the teamwork. Each student pulled his or her own weight or risked being ostracized by the rest. If someone skipped "class," he might get a cold shoulder walking across campus. On the other hand, the shared stress and thrill of hosting a weekly event brought us closer. At the end of the night we would be sweating in our chef's whites or suits, depending on the schedule that week, and grinning as we scrubbed pots and pans.

Other professors have emphasized teamwork as well, in such things as running a computer simulation of a hotel in a major city — Strategic Management. But at the same time, they have stressed competition. For instance, in that particular class part of my grade depends on which ranking my "management group" receives in comparison to the other groups, based on cold, hard numbers.

That is as it should be. Underneath the intriguing classes in French cookery, electrical engineering and plumbing, design, and service skills, HRTA is a business major — albeit a unique one. The roles people play in a hospitality organization determine its character, its soul.

Barbara still has an almost matriarchal position at the hotel. Guests and employees alike dote on her. But for how long? In a competitive business environment, when will she be replaced by a computerized phone system that does not keep people waiting? Computers don't call people "dear," either. That is the choice many of my peers will make as they join Marriott, OMNI or Wyndham. When a personality is replaced with a brand-new, unblinking monitor and an efficient electronic voice, little is left.

I hope that the team spirit we have learned in HRTA classes will balance our competitive natures with an appreciation for individuals. Faster and more efficient is not necessarily better. No computer simulation can translate "numbers" to "no."; but we can choose not to let technology replace the heart of an organization.

Tanya Mannes is a Collegian columnist.

Sunday, bloody Sunday

This Sunday is Valentine's Day. I guess the things that come to most people's minds right away are chocolate, lingerie and long-stemmed red roses. Customarily, people associate Valentine's Day with love and that cute little cherub in diapers named Cupid. V-Day is the day when everyone is supposed to show their love — or their like if they are in seventh grade — for their girlfriend, boyfriend, husband, or wife.

Well I'm sorry, but I am going to have to stop the love train right there. All that comes to my mind when I think of Valentine's Day is terror. Before you jump to conclusions and start thinking that I am a big loser who never had a Valentine's Day date just keep your mouth shut. My problems are not of the romantic kind. My fears of Valentine's Day are a result of the tragedies that I have seen occur on this oh-so-special day.

The first tragedy occurred on Saturday, Feb. 14, 1989 in my hometown of Watchully, R.I. My mother bundled me up in my bright red winter jacket. All morning I had been stuffing my face full of chocolates which my fifth grade sweetie had given me the day before in school. Once we were ready we jumped into my mom's new cherry-red Honda Civic and went to pick up my best little friend Fitzy. He had been waiting out on his steps, so his nose and cheeks were bright red. From Fitzy's house we headed towards Main Street for the annual Watchully Valentine's Day parade. The parade was always a favorite of mine and the rest of the townsfolk — until that very day.

Dan Viens

Once we got to Main Street, we set up and waited for all the floats, bands, and local politicians to come rolling by. The firemen came in their fire truck and threw Tootsie Rolls to all of us children. Soon the high school band came by and then a car with the school committee in it. The parade was nearly over when the mayor came through riding in a convertible Cadillac. Everyone hooted and hollered. There was only one float left to come around the corner and everyone knew what it was. The final float was the same every year. It was a huge heart shaped float with a young child dressed as Cupid on top. Only this year the person who was dressed as Cupid was not a young child. It was a grown man with a five o'clock shadow and a bald head. Instead of a bow and arrow he had a crossbow.

As soon as Cupid's float turned the corner he readied his crossbow. The entire parade was on a long straight-away so the mayor's car was directly in front of Cupid. Then right in front of mine, Fitzy's and the rest of the town's eyes Cupid put an arrow directly in the back of the mayor's head and killed him. It turned out that the man dressed as Cupid had planned a spectacular Valentine's Day weekend for himself and his wife. The night before they were to leave, his wife confessed that she had been having an affair with the mayor. The man went insane and ended up squishing his wife into the freezer and killing the mayor while dressed as Cupid. That was my first Valentine's Day tragedy.

The next horrific event occurred seven years later on Valentine's Day, 1996. Fitzy and I were just hanging out at my house. Normally we would have been at the parade, but there hadn't been one since the mayor's assassination. All of a sudden we got a phone call saying that two of our friends had died in some freak incident. We jumped into my seven-year-old candy-apple-red Honda Civic and drove to the hospital. When we arrived we were greeted with the description of a bizarre event.

Our friends who died were named Chino and Natalya. They were boyfriend and girlfriend, and had been named class couple. During the days leading up to Valentine's Day, Chino felt that he had come up with a way to show how much they loved each other. Natalya said that no matter what it was she would do it.

Here is what Chino's plan was. He decided that if they switched their hearts then they would always feel each other's love. Natalya thought that it was a great idea. They sterilized some butcher knives, went to the attic and set up a camera. Chino said that as long as they did the transplant really quickly they would be all right. So they did it. They cut out their own hearts with the intention of putting them in the other's chest. However, the pain was too much. They both collapsed and died holding each other's heart in their own hand. The camera caught it all. Yet another Valentine's Day tragedy for Watchully, R.I.

Love on Valentine's Day? Maybe in some places, but not in my town. My girlfriend is planning a nice romantic day for this Sunday and I am looking forward to it, but something just tells me that I might just want to sleep through it.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

What's new in Washington

As we near the end of the presidential impeachment trial, we see senators in the Congress becoming more and more bipartisan with their votes, for one simple reason. They know they are going down and they are going down hard. What the voters have been saying all along is true. Let's finish this thing — people are sick and tired of the trial.

The recently-found bipartisan movement of the Senate in votes to exclude Monica Lewinsky testifying live on the floor of the Senate (70-30, 25 Republicans voting with all 45 democarats), and a 62-38 bipartisan vote to hear the deposition tapes in the Senate, are all signs. They show that in the late stages of this trial politicians are jockeying for position. Even the Republicans didn't want to drag this out any longer then they have to.

But for all intents and purpose this is still a partisan affair. It's proved by several partisan votes in the last two to three weeks.

On Feb. 4, the Senate (I mean the Republicans) voted 54- 46 not to allow the defense, which in this case is the White House Counsel, an opportunity to know what clips of the depositions the House Managers would show, giving the managers an advantage that they again would not receive in a normal court of law.

Other partisan votes recently in the Senate include a vote last Saturday to depose three witnesses — Monica Lewinsky, Vernon Jordan and Sidney Blumenthol, when the Senate voted 56-44, with only Russ Feingold (Wis.-D) breaking rank with Democrats, but no Republicans deviating.

"I want to be clear that my vote doesn't mean that I'm leaning towards conviction of the President; I'm not," Feingold said.

Republican Susan Collins (Maine), one of the GOP's moderates, commented on the witness issue, "I need witnesses and further evidence to guide me to the right destination: to get the truth."

The partisan votes continued on the vote to dismiss, as it went right down party lines 56-44, again with only Feingold deviating. The GOP and the Democrats have clearly been partisan until just recently. But the GOP's tatics have been more of a delay strategy, hoping something would be uncovered. At least these have been the hopes of the House Managers.

Paul Teves

The Republican members of the Senate made another critical mistake, voting to hide themselves during final deliberations in the Senate on the matter of impeachment. Several Republicans made a motion to have final deliberations open, but the vote on Feb. 9 was voted down despite the Democrats voting 44-1 in favor, while Republicans voted 16-38 in against, because they needed two thirds of the Senate to change the rules.

Then the Majority Leader Trent Lott made a motion to begin closed deliberations and that barely passed, with a majority of 53-47, all 53 votes to hide the Senate from the public were made by Republicans.

Each Senator will now deliberate for 15 minutes in private, and then will make ridiculous comments as did the House Representatives, but they can not be held accountable for what they say because no one will know. I credit Republicans Collins, Kay Hutchinson (Texas), Olympia Snowe (Maine), Specter (Penn.) and Lugar (Indiana), with fighting with the Democrats to keep the event open to the public. So much for Trent Lott the majority leader. Wait till the public gets a hold of him.

With the likelihood of the articles failing today or tommorow, censure becomes more and more a possibility to be considered by the Senators on the Tuesday after the President's Day break. Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.) said that the motion for censure had to made while the Senate is in legislative session.

Surprisingly, Senator Phil Gramm (R-Texas) opposes a censure. He said that Impeachment is about the Constitution and that censure is about getting political cover.

Onto other matters. Kenneth Starr is in trouble in several respects. The GOP puppet is now being investigated by the House of Representatives. The House may hold the Office of the Independent Counsel (OIC) in contempt for violating Grand Jury secrecy rules, when they leaked the Grand Jury testimony — a blatant legal faux-pas. As a judge, he should have known better. If this occured in a regular court the case would have been tossed out of court a long time ago.

Starr and the OIC are also being investigated for their first interigation of Lewinsky. They didn't allow her to speak with her counsel or mother, and they are also alleged to have worked out an immunity agreement with Lewinsky's lawyer present.

While all this is going on he is hinting at indicting the President while he is still in office. Even the volitile Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) said that this would be a bad idea. But give Hatch a minute he'll change his mind.

The office of president, although it is apparently the hot seat, is being sought after by various candidates.

On the Democratic side, the news is that Al Gore has already begun campaigning in New Hampshire. But on Feb. 3, 1999, Dick Gephardt announced that he will not run for the Democratic nomination, but will instead come back to attempt to become Speaker of the House.

On the Republican side, there is just a huge group of candidates chasing George Bush Jr. Elizabeth Dole began speeches in New Hampshire this weekend. Meanwhile, former Vice President Dan Quayle announced that he was getting involved in the race. Also throwing their hat into the ring are former Senator Bill Bradley, Steve Forbes and Senator John Ashcroft (R-Mo.).

Paul Teves is a Collegian columnist.

All Ed/Op columnists who missed the first photo session must attend the second one today, Feb. 11, between 12:15 and 12:45 on the Student Union steps. See you there!

Letters to the Editor

Collegian reporting irresponsible

On Jan. 26, the Collegian printed a front-page article about the Student Parental Survival Campaign, a campaign sponsored by the Undergraduates United for Educational Opportunity (UUEO) and the Educational Access Committee (EAC). Next to this article, in the center of the front page, in a sidebar, and with a separate heading was an article dedicated to discussing the personal and financial details of a UUEO member's life. Yomara Velez ("Benefit cuts hurt many"). This article was received by shock and anger from Yomara, as well as the rest of the UUEO and the EAC.

Yomara had been interviewed as an active member of UUEO, a diverse group of undergrads trying to ease the financial burden of going to UMass for low-income student/parents. Yomara Velez has been a key member of the UUEO, working hard on every step toward achieving our goals. Reading the story of Yomara's activism with the UUEO would have been an inspiring tale. However, the article that featured Yomara did not even mention that she is a member of UUEO. Instead, it outlined in detail her financial history over the last few years, and much of that reporting was incorrect, as well.

Perhaps the most important aspect of this whole ordeal is that two of the other activists interviewed informed the journalist that Yomara Velez did not want her name to be published. During Yomara's interview, she also expressed that she was uncomfortable with publishing her personal story. Knowing all of this, the journalist covering the story was advised by her editors not to respond to these requests nor make any effort to clarify them. Instead, she was instructed to simply wait and see if Yomara called the Collegian journalist herself. However, no attempt was ever made to inform any member of the UUEO that it would be necessary for Yomara to speak to the journalist personally to have her name and story omitted from the paper.

We feel that what transpired around this article was clearly an act of irresponsible and insensitive journalism. The Collegian made a very significant and personal decision for Yomara without her consent and now she is left to deal with the misinformation and exposure of the article.

Still, after the Collegian was called on their mistake Tuesday night, they sent another article to press for Wednesday morning, Jan. 27, essentially committing the same act of irresponsibility and insensitivity. This time Amanda Genao, another UUEO member, was singled out in a larger article ("Welfare cuts elicit action from groups"). Wednesday's article named her after she specifically and personally requested not to have her name in the paper. This reporter also grossly misquoted her and falsely reported major parts of her life.

Amanda has also been an extremely important member of UUEO and yet she was not covered as such. Instead, she has also been forced to deal with the irreparable damage of the Collegian's blatant false reporting. The fact that the mistake was brought to the attention of the Collegian and was still repeated the very next day reveals a consistent lack of integrity concerning both respect for the subjects of their coverage as well as accuracy in their reporting.

Despite the obvious mistakes of the Collegian, and a claimed desire to support the actions of the UUEO, the editor-in-chief refused a request by UUEO and the EAC to publicly apologize for this ordeal. We hope to set the record straight and we hope that the Collegian is more responsible to the students whose voices it is meant to make heard.

Deborah Massachi
Undergraduates United for Educational Opportunity

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Falkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

ARTS & LIVING WEEKEND

Looking for love

A troll with a jewel in its belly, and a leather cord with a plastic crystal pendant from Spencer's Gifts. Brownish carnations distributed via the cafeteria, with notes like, "Friends 4-eva!" Generic chocolates offered by well- meaning, dried-up teachers. In high school, Valentine's Day tokens always left something to be desired, except the year someone gave me an old Beastie Boys album. I was his Cookypuss, I guess.

Then I came to college. Freshman year, I spent the day reading John Donne and feeling forlorn. But eventually, the holiday became more than an occasion to exchange ugly little gifts. One year it was dinner at Green Street Cafe, "the place with the hand-written menus." Another time it was dinner at a theme restaurant, which was swathed in satin and tissue paper to resemble a large, pink womb. Evidently, somewhere along the line I started having dates on

Turn to LOVE, page 9

Singled out

Valentine's Day is a day for the beloved. Nauseatingly attached sweethearts trade things like mushy cards, boxes of chocolates, stuffed animals and flowers in a celebration of love and relationships.

Many naive people still believe that this holiday is an indirect result of the kind actions of the historical figure, St. Valentine, who, if alive today, would undoubtably be infuriated by the amount of pink incorporated with his name come February. However, the truth of the matter is that someday long a g o Hershey's decided to create this holiday in the same fashion that Heineken created St. Patrick's Day.

Cash cow. That's the story, mourning glory.

Nonetheless, the day has become a stalwart in today's society, giving hundreds of thousands of couples a downright spiffy reason to spend money and hook-up, making Valentine's Day the exact campus equivalent to any weekend between September and May.

The problem that this overly loving holiday creates is for those

Turn to SINGLED, page 10

Valentines Day Guide

Easy listening

By Mike Messaros
Collegian Staff

Picking up your sweetheart, taking her to the drive-in, maybe making out at inspiration point.

Wake up, Cunningham. Valentine's Day, for the cynic, is a made-up holiday on par with Arbor Day or Secretary's Day. And there's nothing better than listening to artists pour out their hearts concerning the lack of l'amour in their lives. So here it goes, the best of the lonely-hearts:

Bruce Springsteen — "Brilliant Disguise." From Springsteen's devastating break-up album, Tunnel of Love, this one has the Boss doubting the truth of love in general: "I want to know if it's you I don't trust/ 'Cause I damn sure don't trust myself." Yes, dammit! Yes!

R.E.M. — "The One I Love." One of the most misunderstood hits of all time. Most people only hear the first few lines: "This one goes out to the one I love/ This one goes out to the one I left behind" and not the following lines: "A simple prop/ To occupy my time."

Superchunk (covering Sebadoh) — "It's So Hard To Fall in Love." Yeah, it's a bit whiny (but when is Lou Barlow not whiny?), but the lines "Maybe I should crawl away for a while/ Maybe I shouldn't smile so much/ Who's the one with a killing secret?/ Stupid little boy with a killing touch." Yeah, my brother. You got me.

Jawbreaker — "Sluttering (May 4th)." Call this the It's-Not-Like-I'm-Not-Over-the-Break-up song. "This will be the story you won't tell the kids we never had/ If you hear this song a hundred times it still won't be enough."

Prince — "When You Were Mine." You might know Cyndi Lauper's cover on She's So Unusual better than Prince's original version. Or maybe not. One of the best opening lines: "When you were mine/ I gave you all of my money."

Tori Amos — "Tear In Your Hand." For anyone who's ever been dumped under auspicious circumstances: "I don't believe you're leaving me/ Because me and Charles Manson like the same ice cream." For the record, Charles Manson now likes Chunky Monkey.

Jawbox (covering The Soft Boys) — "Sound on Sound." If only for the line "Love is just infatuation." Ouch.

Ani DiFranco — "Untouchable Face." If you know the chorus of this crowd favorite, you know it's necessary to this tape. "Fuck you," DiFranco sings wearily, "and your untouchable face."

The Rolling Stones — "Dead Flowers." This classic song from Sticky Fingers has Mick Jagger bitterly telling his lost love not to worry about him, because "I'll be in my room/ With a needle and a spoon." Nothing like riding the chocolate pony to make you forget about that certain someone.

Love is in the air

I've decided it's time once again to say my piece in honor of the best day of the year. The one day when I can be a complete fool. The one and only Valentine's Day.

It's this time of the year when I begin to feel like Linus trying to make everyone believe in the Great Pumpkin because when it comes to V-Day there's not a lot of faith going around.

There are those who get all pissy because they're not going to get any lovin' and there are those who complain that it's just another commercialized holiday. There are even those who can't get beyond the chocolate and the roses but really they all just don't get it.

It's the bigger picture many people who are alone or not tend to miss. It's not about whether you have someone special, or whether you have some cash to spend on a fancy dinner. It's about what you do and how you take the fever in. The Valentine's fever.

Now although I hear all kinds of nonsense about what is wrong with the day of looooove I have noticed the effects of my work to sway people. Every year I find someone who fights me on it, but in the end after a few suggestive candy hearts and acts of faith they come around. (Note: You should watch out for the hearts which say "You're easy to love"... sometimes the "to love" rubs off and things can get personal.)

I have always been one to love surprises (and I'm not talking about a cold toilet seat early in the morning.) So Valentine's Day is the one day of the year when I do it up and try to bring some kind of surprise to all the important people in my life. This may seem strange, but I guess that's just how I get my kicks.

My efforts always catch someone off guard and before they know it with a smile and a little giggle they're lost in the fever and the lovin' feeling taken over.

So I expect and accept this challenge every year. I look forward to it as well, I guess. It's like a calling

Turn to BEST, page 10

Happy V (or D) Day

I have recently come to the conclusion that Valentine's Day is not a real holiday. There probably was never a St. Valentine, and even if there was, most of the events that made him a Saint may have been made up. Not by the Church to set forth a "propaganda," or anything like that, but made up by Hallmark, Russell Stover, and a few other companies to sell love as a commodity.

Let's face it, the only way to tell that special someone how much you love him/her is to spend money. Lots of money. Wipe out your bank account, take out a few loans, you need to get as many chocolates as it takes to get him or her sick. You also need to get that big-ass card, because you're too unimaginative to say how deep your love runs. Let Hallmark say it for you. You need the candy. You need the toys. You need a electronic, dancing, pink bear that says "Be my Valentine," in an oh-so-cutesy voice.

You need a flower arrangement that would put your grandfather's funeral to shame. You need balloons. You need little chalky hearts that say, "Be Mine," "Fax Me," and "Web Site." (I'm serious, these really exist.) You need the sex toys. You need the vibrators and the edible underwear... Okay, I think you get the idea.

Why spend your time and your hard earned money looking for the perfect Valentine's Day gift, when you and I both know what the perfect gift is: Booze. Hard alcohol. I'm talking SoCo 100 proof. It provides immediate gratification: you can crack it open and start swiggin' as soon as you get it. What could be more romantic than spending Valentine's Day in a drunken stupor? Get really ripped, and you and the one you love can start tearing up the town together.

Destroy anything pink. Have fun with this. You know you had a good time when you can't remember what happened until you get the phone calls the next morning. ("Oh sorry, Chancellor Scott. I thought you would appreciate the singing Valentine's stripper outside your door. But she needed the work, since she was just cut from _____ the faculty.")

Turn to HAPPY, page 10

Morrisette, Phair, McGee visit the Valley tonight

Liz Phair opens for Alanis Morissette tonight at the Mullins Center.

Alanis first billing, but it's Liz's show

If you're planning on seeing Alanis Morrisette tonight at the Mullins Center, show up early to catch opening act Liz Phair. Phair, touring in support of her third LP, whitechocolatespaceegg, is probably the greater of the two talents appearing tonight.

Phair gained immense critical success with her first two albums, Exile In Guyville and Whip-Smart, which spawned the hit single "Supernova."

Morrisette, on her latest stop on the "Junkie tour" visits UMass for the second time. Her latest album, Supposed Former Infatuation Junkie, is riding high on the charts boosted by the single "Thank U." Her first album, Jagged Little Pill was one of the most popular albums of 1995.

The show starts at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $24.50 and are available at the Mullins Center Box Office or through Ticketmaster.

—Kevin Monahan

Pat McGee Band to groove at Pearl St.

They have sold out arenas equivalent to the size of the Mullins Center, and tonight the Pat McGee Band will showcase their highly praised talents at one of their final intimate appearances in the clubroom at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton. This band has emerged practically overnight from local heroes to one of the most popular acts in the college music scene. With support coming from many members of the music industry and receiving outstanding acclamation from both Billboard and MTV Online, the Pat McGee Band is set to transform the music world.

The band's songs have been featured on MTV's "Real World" and "Road Rules," and they have opened for such artists as Jimmy Buffett, Fleetwood Mac and the Counting Crows.

Fueled by a major record label contract that is only days away from being signed, the release of the band's second disc, General Admission, in January and the comfort of a tour bus that came in December, the Pat McGee Band is riding the product of hard work and extensive touring. The Pat McGee Band's current tour brings them back through New England and a return to the Paradise Rock Club in Boston, which they were privileged to sell out last fall.

The band's latest release, General Admission, captures the intensity that the Pat McGee Band has to offer in concert along with the rich harmonies that the Virginia sextet creates. It captures the crowd interaction on fan-favorite "Could Have Been a Song," to the band's famous jamming on the amazing "Rebecca" track.

Owsley, opening for the Pat McGee Band for the majority of their New England tour shows, is awaiting their Giant Record release later this spring. A marvelous band that is sure to top the charts with "Good Old Days" and is certainly not to be missed.

At press time tickets were still available for tonight's performance, but were going fast. Tickets may be purchased at Fur the Record in Amherst, the Northampton Box Office, or by calling 1-800-THE-TICK.

— Tom Sadlowski

Hey College People

Bored? Come down and talk about music, movies, theater, and more here at the Collegian. The Arts & Living desk is always looking for new writers. Just come down to our offices or call 545-1361 and ask for Bryan.

Hot off the release of her new album, Alanis Morissette invades the Mullins Center tonight.

BURTON
SESSIONS
AIRWALK
OLAER
THRILLS
OAKLEY
K2
Chills
Snow / Skate
Up to 50% off
Burton and Sessions Jackets and Sweaters
20% to 50% off
ALL SNOWBOARD EQUIPMENT
CHILLS at 32 Main Street • Northampton MA • 584-3620
M-W 9:30-5:30, Thurs. & Fri. 9:30-8:30, Sat. 10-6

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
For those in love & for those who love movies-
No two better films to celebrate Valentine's weekend
5th week! Daily 7 & 9:20
GOLDEN GLOBE WINNER BEST PICTURE
"THE RICHEST AND MOST SATISFYING ROMANTIC MOVIE OF THE YEAR!"
Shakespeare In Love
Valentine's Late Show Fri. & Sat. 11:45 p.m.
Ticks $5.00 on sale from 1 p.m. – avoid lines
"Here's Looking At You Kid" ON THE GIANT SCREEN
Casablanca
Humphrey BOGART
Ingrid BERGMAN
HENREID RAINS VEIDT GREENSTREET LORRE
http://www.angelfilmz.com/biz2/academyofmusic/
ACADEMY OF MUSIC Cinema Center NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

SEND A BOUQUET OF WORDS TO SOMEONE SPECIAL
Select Your Favorite Poem by Bruce B. Wilmer for Phone Delivery at a Specified Time
LOVE • FRIENDSHIP • INSPIRATION
FAMILY • COMMUNICATION
1-900-9-POETRY
(1-900-976-3879)
Poet on Call
www.poet-on-call.com

LUST
Get it at
"Adults Only"
Videos & Magazines
8 Russell Rd.
Hadley
585-0416

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING
MATH • ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • BUSINESS ANALYSIS
TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.
When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.
Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower – Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircraft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.
At Raytheon, you'll take technology – and your career – to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth.
We have a lot to tell you about the new Raytheon Systems Company and the exciting opportunities we have available. Plan on visiting our booth at your college career fair. If you are unable to attend the fair then check out our website at www.rayjobs.com and please send your resume to: Raytheon Resume Processing Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266.
Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer
Raytheon

SPRINGBREAK
SKI AND SNOWBOARD
CANADA
MOLSON
PARTY IN THE SNOW!
SUN SNOW
5 DAY/NIGHTS LIFT/LODGING PARTIES/LIVE BANDS
You must be 18 to consume alcohol in Canada.
$369 per PERSON
1-800-999-SKI-9
www.skitravel.com

Record companies resurrect jazz great

One of the most overlooked gems in all of music is Rahsaan Roland Kirk. In recent years, however, this problem has been addressed in a big way by Rhino Records and Atlantic Jazz, behind the efforts of producer Joel Dorn. The most recent re-releases in the Kirk catalog are nothing short of mind-blowing, and the quality and depth of the projects pay beautiful respect to this truly masterful artist.

Dog Years in the Fourth Ring is a three disc set which was released on Atlantic's 52 Jazz label. It contains two discs of live performances all of which were recorded by one fan at various Kirk dates throughout Europe and the United States during the 60's and 70's. The range of pieces heard on these first two discs perfectly illustrate Kirk's love and deep understanding of music in all of it's forms. And since these are live, everyday performances, the energy level and musicianship of each track show the work of a rare genius in top form.

Another stellar project is the four disc set Aces Back to Back which contains three complete studio albums from the early 1970's, as well as one live album recorded on Christmas of 1969. This reissue chronicles a portion of Kirk's large ensemble recording, a context which was being explored by him at that time, which is juxtaposed in this collection by the live album and a small-ensemble studio record.

The most monumental of any recent Roland Kirk project, though, is a video from the 1972 Montreux Jazz festival offered by Rhino Home Video entitled "The One Man Twins". This is a beautifully assembled video, and not only is this the only commercially available filmed performance of Kirk's, but the sound quality and image quality are of the highest degree.

Mere words can hardly scratch the surface of the music contained here. From straight-ahead standards like "Misty" (this happens to be the only tune in which Kirk plays only one saxophone throughout), to key Rahsaan pieces like "Seasons" and "Blue Rol Number 2," both of which are tunes that Rahsaan plays the main melodies on two flutes simultaneously. Also included is a solo rendition of Duke Ellington's "Satin Doll" in which Rahsaan uses two saxophones to create the independent counterpoint of the piece.

This video is an example of the typical Roland Kirk performance, and it is a mandatory part of one's understanding of this artist. It is a thrill to see and hear the transitions at various times throughout the concert where Kirk, from one note to the next, stuffs all three horns into his mouth and breaks into a tight section of independent counterpoint, all the while controlling the instruments and using fingerings which defy comprehension.

This footage is packed with so many super-human elements that it truly has to be seen to be believed. But no matter how virtuoso the techniquer he uses may be, the underlining element and musical statement is the main focus of the entire project. For more info on Rahsaan Roland Kirk: www-edlab.cs.umass.edu/~capicell

As jazz enthusiasts know, we live in a corner of the world were many great performances can be experienced. On Sunday, Feb. 14, at 2 p.m., vocalist Teri Thorton will grace the stage of the Academy of Music Theater in Northampton. The story of Thorton's life reads like a how-to manual on living the blues, and the power of those experiences are truly manifest in her singing, as last year the 64 year old won the Thelonious Monk Institute of Jazz vocal competition, only three months after undergoing surgery for a severe bladder cancer condition.

Throughout her life she has been a powerful performer, and was called "the greatest voice since Ella Fitzgerald" by the late saxophonist and Miles Davis sideman Cannonball Adderley. The day will also feature the dance troupe Silver Belles, and tap dancer Tina Pratt.

Charlie Apicella is a UMass student.

Strauss operetta strays too far from original

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

The London City Opera's production of Die Fledermaus fell short of expectations Tuesday night

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

DIE FLEDERMAUS
Fine Arts Center
Feb. 9

Although written in 1870, Johann Strauss's operetta Die Fledermaus bore an eerie resemblance to up-scale drunken frat party here at UMass. It was full of characters drinking way too much, deceptive identities, and people trying to pick up someone of the opposite sex for a one night stand.

Considered to be one of the best loved operettas ever written, Die Fledermaus ("The Bat"), performed by The London City Opera and the National Operetta Orchestra at the Fine Arts Center on Tuesday night, did not exactly live up to this illustrious reputation.

Die Fledermaus is a comic farce, in which an exclusive party thrown by Prince Orlofsky serves as the backdrop for infidelity between all of the characters and a quasi-vengeful practical joke.

For the party, Gabriel von Eisenstein, a man of leisure, becomes a French count — who doesn't speak a word of French. His wife, Rosalinda — who wasn't supposed so know that her husband was at the party — assumes the role of a mysterious Countess, who teases and entrances Eisenstein.

The Eisenstein's parlor maid, Adele, poses as a well- known actress, and Colonel Frank (the prison governor) also pretends to be a Frenchman, Chevalier Chagrin.

Orchestrated by Eisenstein's friend who seeks revenge, Dr. Falke, the tangled webs woven between the characters serves as a form of entertainment for the bored-with-life-20-year- old Prince Orlofsky. In the third and final act, everyone's true identities are uncovered, Falke has had his revenge, and they all have a good drunken laugh.

Despite its comedic potential, this performance of Die Fledermaus seemed more like an American musical than a German operetta. There was too much slapstick comedy included in this production, especially on the part of Colonel Frank. His movements and antics, at times, seemed more like Groucho Marx than a comedic character from the 1870's.

It was also very difficult to understand exactly what was being said and sung. This problem may have been due to the orchestra's close proximity to the performers and also to the lack of enunciation on the part of the performers.

The performers took a little bit too much liberty with the dialogue. While it was entertaining when Amherst, the Calvin Coolidge Bridge, and Disney World were mentioned, it also cheapened the performance, making it a little too silly.

While not perfect, this production of Die Fledermaus was beautifully staged. The costumes were elaborate and aptly fitting for the time period. The sets were also creatively done. In the second act, the scenery at the home of Prince Orlofsky was especially grand. The multi-colored fabric draped from the ceiling, glittering furniture, along with the dresses and champagne made this act stand out.

~Art Galleries~

AMHERST COLLEGE — The Mead Art Museum hosts a rare exhibition of Paul Cezanne prints entitled "The Hanged Man: Cezanne and the Art." Gallery hours are weekdays 10 a.m.–4:30 p.m. and weekends 1 p.m.–5 p.m.

BURNETT GALLERY — Located in Amherst, the Gallery is hosting a black and white photography exhibition called Underground, by Ilya Hoffman. Gallery hours are Monday–Saturday 9 a.m.–5:30 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, 9:30 p.m.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS — The Hampden Gallery presents The Black Mahakala Shrine Room as part of their Kathmandu Project. The exhibition, highlighting Tibetan culture, runs until Feb. 26.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS — Impermanence, drawings from California–based Leslie Kenneth Price, are being displayed in the Augusta Savage Gallery. Gallery hours are Monday and Tuesday, 1 p.m.–7 p.m.; Wednesday–Friday, 1 p.m.–5 p.m.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS — Remainders, papercuts by Stuart Copans, is on display at the Wheeler Gallery.

MT. HOLYOKE — The photography of Berenice Abbott is on display in the Rodney L. White Print Room of Mount Holyoke College's Art Museum. Abbott's photography is world renowned for its book at science. Museum hours are Tuesday–Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, 1 p.m.–5 p.m.; closed Monday.

MT. HOLYOKE — New work from members of the Mt. Holyoke art faculty is being exhibited at the Art Museum as well. Works are by Nancy Campbell, Alexis Kuhr, Marion Muller, Nathan Margalit, Joe Smith, and Carleen Sheehan.

SMITH COLLEGE — A Renaissance Treasury: The Flagg Collection of European Decorative Arts and Sculpture is being exhibited at the Main Gallery.

its here
DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
JIM SPINNATO
Hypnotist
Bluewall Cafe, 8 p.m.
February 12, 1999
FREE
The movie "ANTZ" will be shown following perfomance
For more info, please call 545-3600 or visit our website.
http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm

THE ALANA JOB FAIR
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
UMASS AMHERST
6:00PM–9:00PM
ALL STUDENTS ARE INVITED!
SPONSORED BY: Bilingual Collegiate Program (BCP), Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and other Minority Students (CCEBMS), Diversity in Management Education Services (DIMES), Minority Engineering Program (MEP), United Asia Learning Resource Center (UALRC) and The Campus Career Network (CCN).
For more information, please call Ruth Carey @ (413) 545-4252 • www-ccn.acad.umass.edu

CD Pick of the Week

Pixies' Doolittle did far from that

COURTESY JOHN MURPHY

The Pixies' Doolittle was one of the first and best of the alternative rock movement.

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

DOOLITTLE
Pixies
4AD/Elektra

Approaching the ten year anniversary of its release, the Pixies' Doolittle remains one of the most important and influential albums in contemporary music. This band changed the face of music as we know it today. The "alternative-rock" genre, now tired and dull, was once an exciting movement in new music propelled by acts like Nirvana, who simply would not exist if it weren't for the Pixies. Kurt Cobain himself admitted that with "Smells Like Teen Spirit," he was basically trying to rip-off the Pixies.

While Doolittle might not be the best work from the quartet (that title belongs to Surfer Rosa, hands down), it was with Doolittle that everyone sat up and took notice.

The quartet formed in Boston circa 1986, after meeting each other here at UMass. Doolittle, released in 1989, was the band's third and most accessible album after the grating rock of Come on Pilgrim and Surfer Rosa. As produced by Gil Norton, Doolittle is more polished than anything the Pixies have done before or will do in the future.

Opening up with "Debaser," a twisted tribute to Don Levine's Avant-Garde Film class (Com Ii 381 not 383), the album starts off with a taste of Joey Santiago's surf guitar and Kim Deal's bouncy bass. Black Francis' menacing vocals. "Got me a movie. I want you to know/slicing up eyeballs, I want you to know... Don't know about you, but I am un chien Andalusia," refer to Luis Bunuel's film Un Chien Andalou. "Tame," and "Wave of Mutilation," and "I Bleed" round out the next few songs of the album, complete with a taut rhythm section, loud guitars and funny and disturbing vocals.

"Here Comes Your Man" reaches new levels of pop brilliance, and the ecological fable "Monkey Gone to Heaven" was rated one of the top 100 singles of all time by Britain's Q magazine. "La La Love You" is an absurdly amusing tune which flows smoothly into the infectious "No. 13, Baby," Doolittle's last song. "Gouge Away" closes the album with erratic soft to loud tendencies. And if you program your CD player to play the songs in the order they are listed in the liner notes you have a cool little concept album going for you.

The Pixies were and still are a dominant force in rock music today. Everyone wants to sound like them, and Doolittle is proof of how influential they really were. Just a few more alumni that make one proud to be from UMass.

COURTESY ANDREA BURNS

Sister, sister
Marina Libel (left) and Jessica Greif (right) star in My Sister in this House at Amherst College tonight through Saturday.

"60's" was flawed but fun

Acting hurts NBC miniseries; sweeps begin

Last weekend, there was a blast from the past on television. The extremely hyped mini-series "The 60's" finally aired on NBC. After seeing commercial after commercial for the four hour drama series, the bad reviews started to come about, hurting its chances at getting high ratings. NBC was hoping that this would be their first big hit of the year, and be the driving force behind future NBC mini-series.

However, after newspapers nation-wide started revealing that "The 60's" was less than sub-par, and a report in Entertainment Weekly gave the movie a grade of D, viewers started to become less interested, which did indeed affect the ratings.

In my opinion, the ratings were a little unfair. It is clear that a lot of work and effort went into making this series, and that was not taken into consideration. The problem is that we have all been spoiled by a little film that came out a few years ago called Forrest Gump. The Oscar-winning film will forever be the standard by which all films of the type will be judged.

However, "The 60's" tried extremely hard to be a teacher and entertainer that could be seen by the whole family. From the surface, "The 60's" seemed like it would just be an account of things that happened during the decade, and nothing else. In fact it did not only look at the incidents of the decade, but it used two different families to portray how the happenings affected their lives. It was a very original idea, and had it not been overshadowed by Forrest Gump, it would probably have been considered much better than the critics made it seem.

Of course, the critics were not entirely out of line with their criticism. There was a lot wrong with "The 60's." For the most part, the actors were absolutely pitiful, and the few who were not (mainly Charles Dutton) dragged the film along with a really bad limp. The cast included some former Hollywood stars, who are so desperate for a job, they would resort to opening up a kissing booth at the local county fair. The bottom line is that Jerry O'Connell and Jeremy Sisto (Elton in Clueless) are just not good enough to make a strong made-for-TV movie.

Another major problem with the series was that it hardly showed any good events from the actual 60's. We never saw the election between Kennedy and Nixon, we only saw Kennedy's death. They never showed anyone who was in college and studying to make something worth while out of their life.

The only college students we saw were rebels that wanted to start violent riots to stop the war, which led to one of the lead characters looking like a hero by holding back the violent efforts of all of these people.

Worst of all, there was no portrayal of the positive experiences of African Americans. The only portrayals of the civil rights movement were the black leaders being killed. There were no accounts of any of their accomplishments.

The story portrayed in "The 60's" was amiable, however. Everything fit neatly into a nice little plot about love and freedom, and the climactic ending had almost all of the characters meet at the main family's home, and despite all of the problems, everything was nice and sweet again. The ending was so happy that I was just waiting for a shot of John and Robert Kennedy hugging up in heaven, while standing next to the alligator from Happy Gilmore.

Tube Notes
with
Ryan Benharris

"The 60's" wasn't exactly the auspicious event NBC had been hoping for, but it was entertaining and it had a great soundtrack. It certainly did not deserve a "D."

In other news, February sweeps are really heating up on network TV. Every major station is battling to gain viewers, and increase their profits. Last week's "X-Files" bragged that it was going to reveal all of the show's secrets through a series of shocking episodes.

A familiar friend showed up on "Fraiser" as well. Woody Harrelson guest starred on the show to revive his character, Woody, from the legendary "Cheers." When Woody arrived in Seattle to meet up with Fraiser, they spent all of their time together, and both realized they had nothing in common anymore. The episode was extremely hilarious, and just another memorable moment in a great show.

Tonight brings more excitement to the NBC Thursday line-up. "Friends" is supposed to be one of the best ever, and "Fraiser" has gotten excellent reviews. Both shows are planning to be so pivotal in their plots that they refuse to show any clips during the commercials.

As for TV's top rated drama, "ER," they are gearing up for the last two episodes with George Clooney that will probably involve his firing from the hospital. Clooney is not the only doctor to be leaving the ER. Last week, Julliana Margulies announced that she will finish up her contract, and her last episode will be sometime in May of 2000.

There is no indication as to why stars are starting to leave "ER". The show has only been on the air for four years, and the stars do not cite a desire to work in films as their reason for leaving. The only excuse that both Clooney and Margulies had is that work on the show is extremely difficult and takes a toll on actors, and after a while it really wears them down.

In order to try to keep the show as popular as it has been, it seems that the creators of "ER," which includes Michael Crichton, will use Noah Wyle's character, Dr. Carter, will become more and more the dominant force on the show. The second-to-last episode of "ER" with George Clooney airs tonight at 10 p.m.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

Arts its the perfect place for everything

Free Long Distance!

Chat live with all your family and friends at once.

CampusChat
The 24-hour, toll-free zone

mass LIVE
www.massive.com
Your place to talk on the Web!

■ love

continued from page 6

Valentine's Day. Valentine's Day was now about dinner.

This year I wanted something besides Hallmark cards, something besides... a meal. Was that too much to ask? Perhaps it was time to give myself a new perspective. I decided that I should do some research to better my chances for love and passion this Valentine's Day. Donne would approve of a literate search for love, I thought.

I began my quest for advice with Beauty Fades, Dumb is Forever (HarperCollins, 1999), packed with the latest nuggets of wisdom from Judge Judy Sheindlin. You know her as a family court judge from New York city who stars on a successful TV courtroom show. Her credentials also include the book Don't Pee on My Leg and Tell Me It's Raining.

If anyone would know a thing or two about love, it would be Judge Judy. Sure enough, "I learned at an early age that a physical flaw can stick in your craw," she advises would-be slobs in a section entitled, "Keep Your Teeth In." Obviously, Valentine's Day is a time to do just that (break out the Maybelline). At the same time, it's nice to reassure someone if he or she just doesn't measure up. "If I had a pimple in the middle of my forehead, [my father would] say, 'Oh, that's a beauty! Everyone should have one.'" Helpful, but not exactly what I had in mind.

My next thought: maybe I was sabotaging myself by reading John Donne. Maybe I should embrace some "contemporary" poetry, like pop star Jewel's book, a night without armor (HarperCollins, 1998), to get me in the mood for V-Day. I curled up on the couch and read the poem "Lovers for Lilly." "Lovers for Lilly/she eats them/like fruit cake/Lovers for Lilly/she collects them like flies/Lovers for Lilly (are always goodbyes)." Maybe not.

I moved on to a man who must know what he's talking about, a man who may in fact be God. Perhaps Bill Gates would know some Machiavellian tactics for tombers amoureux. Luckily, he has (another) book on the shelves, this time entitled Bill Gates Speaks. One poignant passage describes Gates' "virtual dating" experience. When he and his girlfriend were working hundreds of miles apart, they would set a "date" to see a movie. They would drive to similarly-timed shows in their respective cities, talking about the show on their car phones on the way. Gates and gal would attend the shows alone, then discuss the film on the way home. Interesting, but I'd just as soon have dinner.

It was time to explore other cultures. Liza Dalby, the only foreigner to have become an actual geisha, wrote an intriguing book entitled Geisha (University of California Press, 1998). This was just what I needed, a bit of the mystique behind the white face paint and silk kimonos of Japan's geishas. The table of contents alone was enough to stir my soul, with chapters like "The Beer Ceremony," "Cold Cash," and "The Pull of Three Strings." However, I skipped to "The Deflowering Arrangement." According to Dalby's research, mizu-age, a woman's first sexual experience, used to take seven days. The man would be chosen for her. "Not a young man... too rough."

One of the experienced geisha would prepare a chamber for the ritual. She would place three eggs on top of the coverlet by the pillows, and then withdraw with others of the house to an adjoining room. "Once in a while they would cough or rustle, just to reassure the young girl that they were nearby." So that's what my sophomore year roommate was doing.

"The man would tell the maiko to lie down; then, breaking the eggs, he swallowed the yolks and rubbed the whites between her thighs." I'll leave the rest to your imagination.

Impressed with a new-found use for Eggland's Best, my next stop was the culmination, so to speak, of all my Valentine's Day research. I was filled with a sense of purpose as I held the classic text, How to Satisfy a Woman Every Time... and Have Her Beg for More! by Naura Hayden (Bibli O'Phile Publishing Company, 1982). No going back this time. The dedication was interesting: "To Love, which is God... which is Love... which is God... which is Love... which is God..." I would not make that up. Hayden's thesis is that if a man can satisfy a woman in "that way," it will bring them closer to God, and closer together. "I don't believe that God just loves me — I believe that God adores me and wants me to have everything I want." Inexplicably, she also talks a lot about "B vitet," which keep the body "relaxed and sensual."

I was more interested in the aptly-named chapter, "What to Do If Your Man Won't Even Try." Pray? Take the vitamin supplements the biographical note says she produces? I wasn't sure. All I knew was, I had to get my hands (at a later date) on a copy of her little-known work Everything You've Always Wanted to Know About Energy, But Were Too Weak to Ask.

Filled with fresh wisdom, I am certainly ready for love this Sunday. I'm popping Centrums, practicing lipstick application, talking on my cell phone, and praying for passion to hit me, or at least my car. And I have a new carton of eggs in the fridge, in case you were wondering.

Tanya Marines is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY JOYCE BURNASH

Martian Chronicles
Christopher Lloyd stars in My Favorite Martian, one of many new films coming out this February.

Now Open....The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
UltimateFitness
THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Featuring the latest in Fitness Training & Equipment
"Everything You Need in a Gym and More!"
• Certified Personal Trainers
• Fitness Testing & Programming
• Nutritional Consultation
• Tanning
• Sauna
• Juice Bar & Supplements
•Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Step
-Boot Camp
-and many more
Located in the Campus Plaza next to Liquors 44.
For more information call 253-7571
Cardiovascular Equipment
• Stairmasters
• Precor Treadmills
• Lifecycle Recumbent Bikes
• Lifecycle Upright Bikes
• Precor Crosstrainers
State-of-the-Art Strength Training Equipment
• Bodymasters & Icarian Free Weights
• Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

CALVIN
THEATRE & PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

Fri. Feb. 19 • 8 pm
An evening with
Sir George Martin
The Making of Sgt. Pepper, a multi media keynote address

Wed. Feb. 24 • 7 pm
the Iron Horse's 20th Anniversary Concert
featuring
Maura O'Connell, The Bobs, Tuck & Patti, The Nields, Salamander Crossing, Dave Van Ronk

Sat. Mar. 6 • 2 & 7 pm
Calvin Kids Series
Cirque Eloize
4.0 fun for the whole family!

James Galway
Legendary Irish flutist
Thu., Mar. 18 • 8 pm

2/19 An evening with Sir George Martin: The Making of Sgt. Pepper, a multi-media keynote address
2/20 Dollar Night: The Sound of Music
2/24 The Iron Horse 20th Anniversary Concert featuring Maura O'Connell, Tuck & Patti, the Bobs, the Nields, Salamander Crossing and Dave Van Ronk
3/6 Cirque Eloize 4.0

2/24 • CALVIN

Coming Soon: 3/7 Arcadia Players, 3/18 James Galway, 3/27 Citizen Kane*, 3/28 The Wizard of Oz, 4/6 Bruce Hornsby, 4/10 Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Co., 4/11 The Adventures of Corduroy, 4/16 Cassandra Wilson, 4/23 Sonny Rollins, 4/24 Terry Gross, 4/25 Ravi Shankar, 5/2 Laura Ingalls Wilder: Growing Up on the Prarie, 5/15 Vertigo*, 5/23 Phantom of the Opera, 6/19 West Side Story*, 7/15 Gone With the Wind*, 10/15 Cesaria Evora
* Denotes Calvin Theatre Dollar Movie Night

CALVIN THEATRE - 19 KING STREET, NORTHAMPTON, MA 413-584-0610
Tickets for the Calvin Theatre are available at the Northampton Box Office, Thornes Marketplace in Northampton.
To charge by phone: call 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK. Visit www.masslive.com for more information.

all shows Pearl Street Nightclub all ages!

NEW DATE! SUN. FEB. 14 • 8:30 PM
PEARL ST. BALLROOM
FROGWINGS
in
Kofi Burbridge (From Aquarium Rescue Unit) on keys & flute
Oteil Burbridge (from the Allman Brothers Band) on bass
Jimmy Herring (From A.R.U. & Jazz is Dead) on guitar
John Popper (from Blues Traveler) on vocals & harmonica
Marc Quinones (from the Allman Brothers Band) on percussion
Butch Trucks (From the Allman Brothers Band) on drums
Derek Trucks (From the Derek Trucks Band) on guitar

TUE. MAR. 2 • 8:30 PM • PEARL ST. BALLROOM
featuring members of Bad Brains
SOUL BRAINS

FRI. FEB. 12 • 8:30 PM • CLUBROOM
BIM SKALA BIM
SUN. FEB. 14 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
FROGWINGS
featuring Kofi Burbridge, Oteil Burbridge, Jimmy Herring, John Popper, Marc Quinones, Butch Trucks and Derek Trucks
THU. FEB 18 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
THE SAMPLES
TUE. MAR. 2 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
SOUL BRAINS
SUN. MAR. 7 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
LEE "SCRATCH" PERRY WITH MAD PROFESSOR
The Dr. Lee PhD Tour
SAT. MAR. 13 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
SEBADOH
THU. MAR. 18 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
ISRAEL VIBRATION
FRI. MAR. 19 • 8:30 PM • CLUBROOM
BLACK 47
JUST ADDED: THE RESIDENTS 4/4
COMING SOON: Better Than Ezra 3/26

PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB, 10 PEARL ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA • THE IRON HORSE, 20 CENTER ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA
Tickets for all shows available at the Northampton Box Office, 2nd Floor, Thorne's Marketplace, Northampton 1-800-THE-TICK or 413-586-8686. Tickets for the Iron Horse are available at For The Record in Amherst. Tickets for Pearl St. are available at For The Record, Absent Music in Brownfield and Plymouth Records in Westfield. 24-Hour Concert Info: (413) 584-0610 or visit www.massilive.com

all shows music alone shall live all ages!
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL

SUN. FEB. 14 7 PM IRON HORSE Respond: a women's benefit
Mary Lou Lord
MERRIE AMSTERBURG
JULES VERDONE
DEB POSTERNICK

music alone shall live
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL

WED. FEB. 10 • 7 PM
Singer songwriters to watch for
CHRISTIAN BAUMAN, KEVIN SO & MARK ERELLI
THU. FEB. 11 • 8:30 PM
Canadian guitar-pop sensations
SLOAN Plus Local Rabbits
FRI. FEB. 12 • 10 PM
Late '60s style avant rapper
WINSTON GRENNAN & SKA ROCKS
SAT. FEB. 13 • 10 PM FREE SHOW!
Christian Guitars presents
PRESTON REED
With special guest Jeff Pevar
SAT. FEB. 13 • 7 PM
Boston's best acoustic rocker
MELISSA FERRICK
Plus Lori McKenna
SUN. FEB. 14 • 7 PM
Respond: a women's benefit
MARY LOU LORD, MERRIE AMSTERBURG, JULES VERDONE & DEB PASTERNAK
TUE. FEB. 16 • 7 PM
We're having a party
SOUTHSIDE JOHNNY AND FRIENDS "STRICTLY ACOUSTIC"
WED. FEB. 17 • 7 PM
Jazz piano double bill
DANILO PEREZ AND PATRICIA BARBER

THU. FEB. 18 • 7 PM
Poetry cajun up-and-comers
BALFA TOUJOURS
FRI. FEB. 19 • 7 PM
Compelling songwriter/great entertainer
SUSAN WERNER
Plus Corinne Kelsker
SAT. FEB. 20 • 7 PM
Blues guitar master
MIKE WELCH
SAT. FEB. 20 • 10 PM
Groovy avant-jazz trio
LIVING DAYLIGHTS
Plus Actual Size
SUN. FEB. 21 • 7 PM
Masterful local string trio
VIRTUAL CONSORT
MON. FEB. 22 • 7 PM
Celebrate Black History Month
BLACK REBELS
Plus Children of the Most High and Boys Fall Toss Music
TUE. FEB. 23 • 7 PM
20th Anniversary week begins
THE BOBS
THU. FEB. 25 • 7 PM
Amazing Irish vocalist
MAURA O'CONNELL
FRI. FEB. 26 • 7 PM
Valley-based newgrass heroes
SALAMANDER CROSSING
Plus Grypsy Wranglers
SAT. FEB. 27 • 7 & 10 PM
Addictive acoustic rockers
THE NIELDS
Plus Jen Klein
COMING SOON: Anam, the Boys of the Laugh, Percy Hill, Marga Gomez, 10,000 Maniacs, John Scofield, JoAnne Brackeen Quartet

■ singled

continued from page 5

son to spend money and hook-up, making Valentine's Day the exact campus equivalent to any weekend between September and May.

The problem that this overly loving holiday creates is for those of us who are single. Oh, sure, those of you in relationships lose some insane amount of money in this whole process, but, sticking with the Valentine's theme, my heart doesn't go out to you.

You have a lover to give you chocolates and cards that will be gone by the next day. Unfortunately, my right hand doesn't give me chocolates unless my brain tells it to.

Still, serious thought needs to be put into the plight of the single person on this day of duos, and of course, if anybody thinks about things seriously, it's me. Shut up, I mean it.

Some single folks go through denial when trying to deal with this holiday. I've personally done it, and I might consider doing it again this year. You just assume that Valentine's Day does not exist, and, when asked how your special day has gone, you look curiously into the inquirer's eyes and say,"Special?", as though the word was some Lithuanian term that made no sense.

"Valentine's Day," the inquirer then reminds you, idiotically not realizing that your curious response was actually your way of saying "Go screw yourself."

"Don't you remember," the annoying bastard then continues, as he or she begins to recognize his or her reflection in your recently drawn kitana blade. "I got roses from my sweetie!"

You are then faced with the most challenging question that a single person can be faced with on this momentous of days: who do you gut first, your friend or yourself?

Other single people have come to terms with the fact that this day must exist, and do not deny it at all. As amazing as it seems, these people are often proud of the fact that they have nobody to answer to on this day.

When faced with the aforementioned question, these people calmly answer their acquaintances, rather than slice them into quarters like a skeletal-framed pan pizza.

"What did you do for Valentine's Day," these strong- willed souls will be pummelled with.

"Valentine's Day is for wimps! Are you a wimp! Huh?! What's the matter with you, pansy? Why don't you take that fancy bouquet and cram it where the sun don't shine so your head has some company?!"

Perhaps the safest way to field these innocent probings that everybody seems to feel the need to burden you with, though, is to ensure that nobody speaks to you on Valentine's Day.

Sure, you could lock yourself in your room all day, but what good is that? You'd simply have no fun.

Instead, skip melodramatically down the street screaming, "The radio man eats pine trees" while wearing only a bicycle helmet. No one will say a word to you, I promise. Barking sometimes helps, too.

After all these helpful avenues are tried, there remains the old stand-by of finding someone to date. However, contrary to popular belief, all single individuals exist in separate dimensions during Valentine's Day weekend. This is some higher figure's way of saying, "No matter how hard you try, you're not going to get anywhere with the opposite sex today. Ha ha ha ha ha ha!"

With these frustrations in mind, I have a proposition for single UMass — if you see me on campus, give me a piece of candy and I'll reciprocate that gesture. That way, we can celebrate Valentine's Day in our own anti-relationship way! It's like Halloween, only not quite as masculine.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

■ happy

continued from page 5

Of course, this might put a damper on any bedroom action. There's nothing s-e-x-x-y at all about wiping the vomit off of your sheets at four a.m. Think about something else. Well, it's too cold for skydiving. And cowtipping is just out of the question. Not only is it cruel, but it could get you in trouble with the Hadley police. And there's nothing more frightening than the fact that there are Hadley cops out there with guns.

How about staying home and cooking up some extremely dangerous drug concoction? Throw a little LSD or Robitussin into the picture. Be creative. Wander around your dorm in a crazed drug frenzy, or go out and frighten all the other couples. Spend Valentine's Day stuck to the ceiling with your one true love.

If your not into ingesting mind-altering substances, there are ways to avoid the congestion of the extremely stale dinner and a movie routine. Take a pencil and change the phrases on the candy hearts to say something lewd. Just stay away from all the candy and flowers. Treat anything that says "Hallmark" on it like a communicable STD. Love is not a market to be bought, sold and exploited in its prime season on the NYSE. Well, at least not yet.

Kevin Monahan is a Collegian staff member.

■ best

continued from page 5

to me. A burden I must take on in order to show others the error of their ways. Linus slept in the pumpkin patch all night to try and prove there was a Great Pumpkin, without avail. But Linus didn't lose faith.

So I too, will always keep the faith in Valentine's Day, no matter the amount of dressed-in-black-chocolate-protesting-depressing-music-listening-soulmate-craving-pissy-pants cynics there are.

When it comes down to it, I think we all know we love Cupid's special day and for anyone who says otherwise — I'll take you on.

Laura Forster is a Collegian staff member.

COURTESY ANDREW COOPER

Pay day

Mel Gibson's Payback was the clear winner at the box office last weekend; check out a review of the film in tomorrow's Collegian.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

The sound of music

The Fine Arts Center Concert Hall is home to the University Chamber Choir and University Orchestra as they team up for a performance tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

night graphics...we're up all night for you because we care...happy valentines day!!!

GOOD OLD FASHIONED FUN....ITS ART

What's Left SALE! up to 75% off Winter ZANNA downtown Amherst

FANTASTIC SELECTION OF MICROBREW KEGS
Spirit Haus
500 BEERS & WINES FROM AROUND THE WORLD
MICROBREW SPECIALS
Oregon Ale 6pk btls $4.99 + tax
I.P.A, Nut Brown, Raspberry Wheat
Blue Moon 6pk btls $4.99 + tax
White Ale, Honey Blonde, Raspberry Cream
Smutty Nose 6pk btls $4.99 + tax
Pale Ale, Brown Ale, Lager
Sam Adams 12pk btls $9.99 + tax
Ale, Lager, winter, spring
BEER SPECIALS
Ruddles County Ale 4pk btls $5.69 + tax
Newcastle 6pk btls $6.49 + tax
Boddingtons Pub Ale Draught 4pk btls $4.99 + tax
Genesee 30pk cans $9.99 + tax
Beer, Cream Ale, Ice, Light, Red
WINE SPECIALS
BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL 750ml $5.99
KORBEL BRUT ROSÉ 750ml $6.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL with mail in rebate 1.5L $4.99
SEGURA VIUDAS BRUT RESERVA 750ml $8.99
Grad Students 10% Discount off Regular 'Fine' Wine Prices
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Southern Comfort 750ml $9.49
Smirnoff Vodka 1 Liter $9.99
Jack Daniels 750ml $14.49
Dekuyper Peppermint Shnapps 750ml $7.49
Black Haus Blackberry Shnapps 750ml $15.99
338 COLLEGE ST, RTE 9 • 1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER
MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER - (413) 253-5384

A World of OPPORTUNITIES
NORTHWESTERN COLLEGE OF CHIROPRACTIC can provide you with an education uniquely focused on the 21st century. Just ask our 3,000 alumni. They are practicing from America to Zimbabwe, as solo practitioners and in interdisciplinary settings. They know that our FOCUS ON EXCELLENCE has earned us an international reputation as a pioneer in chiropractic education, patient care and scientific research. Northwestern is a single-purpose, limited enrollment, private institution featuring a well-rounded, RIGOROUS EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM integrating the basic and clinical sciences, diagnosis, X-ray, chiropractic therapeutics, wellness care and practice management. Our pioneering clinical internship programs, interdisciplinary study opportunities and a state-of-the-art student clinic provide our graduates with an UNPARALLELED CLINICAL FOUNDATION. Add our Career Services Center, where we assist our graduates in job placement, and you can understand why our graduates have such a high satisfaction level with their careers. For a personal visit or more detailed information, call a Northwestern admissions counselor at 1-800-888-4777...Or go virtual at www.nuchiro.edu
NORTHWESTERN College of Chiropractic

ASH WEDNESDAY SERVICES
Newman Center
Wednesday, February 17, 1999
8:00 A.M. Mass and distribution of Ashes
12:15 P.M. Mass and Distribution of Ashes
5:15 P.M. Mass and Distribution of Ashes
7:00 P.M. Liturgy of the Word and Distribution of Ashes
9:00 P.M. Liturgy of the Word and Distribution of Ashes
The Catholic Community at the Newman Center invites you to join them to begin the 40 days of the Lenten journey.
Turn away from sin, and be faithful to the Gospel.

IOC scandal continues; more to be tossed

LONDON (AP) — With one-fifth of its ranks now implicated in the Salt Lake City bribery scandal, the International Olympic Committee said yesterday it may expel more members to try to restore its credibility and reassure big-money sponsors.

"We will act decisively," said Anita DeFrantz, an IOC vice president from the United States.

A 500-page report issued Tuesday by a Salt Lake Olympic ethics panel detailed more than $1 million in cash payments and other favors lavished on IOC members during the city's successful campaign to land the 2002 Winter Games.

The report linked an additional 10 IOC members to the scandal, bringing to 24 the number accused of accepting improper benefits. The IOC had 115 members before the scandal.

"The IOC remains fully committed to investigating and taking action based on all available evidence," the IOC said in a statement from Lausanne, Switzerland.

Last month, the IOC panel identified 14 members involved in alleged excesses stemming from Salt Lake's bid. Nine of those members have either resigned or been expelled by the IOC executive board. Three others — including powerful executive board member Kim Un-yong of South Korea — remain under investigation, one received a warning and one has died.

Further expulsions now appear likely before a special IOC assembly in Lausanne, March 17-18.

"If you find something that's a real breach, we basically have only one sanction, and that's expulsion," said IOC vice president Dick Pound, head of the internal inquiry.

IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch has also written to all cities that bid for the Olympics of 1996 through 2004, asking for any documented evidence of misconduct. The deadline for responses is Feb. 15, meaning even more members could be implicated before the March meeting.

IOC marketing director Michael Payne, on a trip to the United States to meet with Olympic sponsors, said the IOC is doing everything in its power to stamp out corruption and institute reform.

"Has the IOC been damaged?" Payne said. "Yes, clearly it has. On the other hand, it's the opportunity to clean house and to reform. You have to take two or three steps backwards to move one step forward."

Patriots appear to be on their way to Hartford

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Paul Cellucci said Tuesday that he had no plan to keep the Patriots in Massachusetts, but stood ready to go back to the Legislature if the deal in Connecticut falls through.

"The Patriots are in the process of trying to finalize the agreement in Connecticut and I don't think they're interested in talking to anyone while they pursue that," Cellucci said.

"But if in fact it cannot go forward, I've said I'm very willing to go back to the table and try to get a bill through the Legislature that will keep the Patriots here," he said.

Patriots owner Robert Kraft plans to move the NFL team to Hartford, Conn., but a development deal has not been signed. Cellucci said the topic was mentioned in passing Monday during his routine weekly meeting with Senate President Thomas Birmingham and House Speaker Thomas Finneran.

Cellucci commented then that the costs associated with the tentative $350 million agreement Connecticut has with the Patriots seemed to be increasing.

Should the move to Connecticut fall apart, Cellucci said, a starting point for talks in Massachusetts might begin with a plan proposed by Birmingham. Cellucci had backed the measure, but it was rejected by Finneran.

Birmingham (D-Chelsea) told the Boston Herald that he believed the obstacles facing Connecticut will be worked out.

"I think there's some wishful thinking going around in Massachusetts that it's crumbling," he said. "But who knows? These are complicated deals." Finneran (D-Boston) said he doesn't plan to take any action until he is told the deal in Connecticut is off.

"Until either the state of Connecticut or the New England Patriots or the governor informs me that deal down there is off, it's not immediately before us, so it's not anything that warrants any response today," Finneran said Monday.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Bring on the Wolfpack

Shaun Skeffington and the Massachusetts baseball team are currently getting ready for their season opener, March 5 against Atlantic Coast Conference foe North Carolina State.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Payback time is almost here

After dropping a heartbreaker to UMass-Lowell earlier this season, captain Dean Stork and the Minutemen will look for some sweet revenge tomorrow night at Tsongas Arena.

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
New Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9.
2 miles East of Town Center
256-6446
Hurry, Our 15 Week Special Ends Sunday ($169)
AND GET A FREE HFC T-SHIRT

DUNKIN' DONUTS
MULLINS CENTER PRACTICE ICE RINK
For your Sweetie...
$1 OFF 50 Munchkins
Available at UMASS locations. One coupon per customer, per visit. Offers may not be combined. Shop retains coupon. Taxes not included.
LIMIT ONE OFFER EXPIRES 2/17/99

Valentine's Day
It's right around the corner, and we've got the gifts that could save your life!
Shopping.com
500 Minute Pre-Paid Phone Cards $59.99
11.9¢ per minute
All Bestsellers 30% Off List Price...
We also carry VALENTINES at Incredibly Low Prices!
All Billboard Top 40 CDs only $8.97 each... TODAY ONLY!
Shopping.com

BILLIARDS
10A BELCHERTOWN ROAD
AMHERST, MA 01002 256-8284
15 Tables
Big Screen TV
Thursday Night at 9:45 '24 hr band'
"Everyday from 3-7pm $4.00 hour pool"
Live Music Every Thurs, Fri & Sat

Winter Special
Domino's Pizza
Buy Any Pizza... Get One For 99¢
PICKUP OR DELIVERY!
• ONE TOPPING ONLY • HIGHER PRICE PREVAILS • MENTION COUPON WHEN ORDERING
• NOT VALID WITH ANY OTHER OFFERS • EXPIRES 2/17/99
AMHERST • 256-8911 EASTHAMPTON • 527-0821

Tonight!
alanis morissette
FEB 11
junkie tour 1999
with special guest
liz phair
TIX AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE, THRU OUTLETS ONLINE
MOVIES & MORE • MAIN MUSIC SHOPS & CHARGE-BY-PHONE (413) 733-2500
(800) 525-4500
New CD "Supposed Former Infatuation Junkie" in stores now
PRODUCED BY MUTHONI / AN EMI/ATLANTIC/WEA GROUP

Heat are off to an ice cold start this season

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Heat are losing players faster than they can win games, and at this rate, they'll become the first team in Pat Riley's 17-year coaching career to miss the playoffs.

The two-time defending Atlantic Division champions were touted during training camp as NBA title contenders. But with two starters sidelined by injuries, the hobbling Heat hardly look like a team ready to step into the void left by the breakup of the Chicago Bulls.

A 1-3 start is the worst in Riley's four years at Miami, and the league's abbreviated 50-game schedule makes the situation more alarming.

"The season's too short to dig such a deep hole," forward P.J. Brown said. "We need to get out of it real quick. This team has enough here to get the job done. We're a little down right now, but we believe in what we have."

What the Heat have is a shortage of manpower and firepower. Forward Jamal Mashburn, who appeared on the brink of a breakthrough season, was diagnosed Tuesday with a deep knee bruise that is expected to sideline him for four to six weeks, roughly half the season. Guard Voshon Lenard could miss the entire season with a stress fracture in his leg discovered last month.

In their absence, All-Stars Tim Hardaway and Alonzo Mourning are trying to carry the offense, with dismal results. Hardaway is shooting 35 percent, while Mourning is shooting 43 percent with 17 turnovers and three assists.

"It has been almost 2 1/2 years since we had this kind of doubt," Riley said. "Since two of our key guys aren't here, we've got to find a game we can play that's a little bit different now that's going to be effective."

Riley considered acquiring Latrell Sprewell before the season but opted not to make a blockbuster deal. As a result, his options to replace Mashburn and Lenard are mostly unappealing. There's Keith Askins, Mark Strickland, an aging Dan Majerle and three newcomers: Clarence Weatherspoon, Terry Porter and Mark Davis.

"We've got to find some combination, some way to make this thing work," Riley said. "We're not going to feel sorry for ourselves."

Early results suggest the pack in the Eastern Conference is gaining on the Heat. They're 0-2 at home against Detroit and Boston, two teams that failed to make the playoffs last year. Miami also lost at Charlotte and barely beat the Knicks in New York.

Although the offensive options look bleak, Riley is more concerned about breakdowns in areas that have traditionally been Miami's strengths.

"Our defense and rebounding simply have to get together," he said. "We're having a lot of mental lapses in those areas right now. Teams are getting right to the rim on us, and that can't be tolerated."

"The first four games, our defense just hasn't been there," Brown agreed, "and that's been our trademark."

The Heat always count on Riley to find a solution. Last season, they went 26-8 without Mashburn in the starting lineup and 17-9 without Mourning.

But at the moment, a team that hoped to reach the NBA finals for the first time in franchise history is playing poorly. Miami will try for a turnaround beginning today against Toronto.

"In every facet of the game, we're just not getting it done," Mourning said. "Something has to change before it gets worse.

Ditka doing best to ensure quality health

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New Orleans Saints coach Mike Ditka wants to be sure the fluttering of his heart was not an indication of anything more serious than an irregular heartbeat.

Ditka planned to have further tests to follow up on the emergency treatment he received last week.

"I want to get an angiogram, and then make sure I don't have any blockage," Ditka said. "If I have blockage, then I have to get done what has to be done whether they have to bypass it or whatever."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

It's about that time again

All-American and National Player of the Year candidate Danielle Henderson will lead the Massachusetts softball team into their season opener against Alabama tomorrow afternoon.

De La Hoya & Quartey set to step into ring

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Eighteen years after they first met in one of the great welterweight fights of all time, Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns got into a bit of a tussle again yesterday.

This time, though, it was just over who would get to sit next to female boxer Mia St. John on the dais at the Las Vegas Hilton. Hearns won the friendly skirmish, then he and Leonard turned to their main job at hand — promoting Saturday's welterweight title fight between Oscar De La Hoya and undefeated Ike Quartey as the next great welterweight bout.

As much as they tried, though, it just wasn't the same.

"It's hard to top the magnitude of what Ray and myself had," Hearns said. "These guys are in our shadow."

De La Hoya's defense of his WBC title against Quartey, a former WBA champion, is certainly on paper the best 147-pound title fight in some time, perhaps even stretching back into the era where Leonard, Hearns and Marvelous Marvin Hagler created some memorable bouts.

It promises to give De La Hoya his first major test against an undefeated fighter in his prime, and could set the stage for a series of big fights among the smaller fighters.

But, though it may be a fight fan's favorite, it comes no where near being the event that Leonard-Hearns was when they met for the first time at Caesars Palace nearly two decades ago.

"We generated far more intrigue, far more interest," Leonard said. "Thomas Hearns was a personality. I was a personality. Everybody knew the power Thomas Hearns had and everyone knew what a ring technician I was."

Leonard and Hearns were brought in by promoter Bob Arum to help generate interest in the fight, which matches two undefeated fighters who have distinctly different styles and have both been champions in the 147-pound class.

De La Hoya may be the biggest name in boxing outside of Mike Tyson, but only those in the know have heard much about Quartey, despite his impressive credentials.

"We were concerned about how this fight would sell because of Quartey's relative anonymity," Arum said. "He's from Ghana and doesn't talk much so people don't know about him."

De La Hoya, fighting in his 16th title bout at the age of 26, will be defending for the sixth time the WBC welterweight title he first won from Julio Cesar Chavez.

He'll be doing it against a big puncher who is 34-0-1 with 29 knockouts and held the WBA version of the title before having to relinquish it to go after big money fights.

WITH ONLINE BANKING, THIS ACCOUNT ALERTS YOU WHEN YOUR BALANCE IS LOW.

HELPING YOU DECIDE BETWEEN GOING TO THE MOVIES OR RENTING ONE BEFORE YOU EVEN LEAVE YOUR ROOM.

Check your balance from your room 24 hours a day using Online Banking with HomeLink℠. Only the Student Value Package gives you so much for so little

BankBoston

Get Free Subway Sandwiches

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game& System Rentals
2 movies $2
w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent Video Games
Best Selection in Town
9 E. Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst - 549-4505

TRAVEL SMART!
BEST PRICES TO EUROPE, WITHIN THE U.S., AND DESTINATIONS AROUND THE WORLD
CALL 800-272-9676
E-MAIL sales@prismtours.com
VISIT US AT www.prismtours.com
Eurailpasses and Student ID cards available.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Avenue
New York, NY 10017
In NYC: 212-986-8420

You'll Find A "Sweetheart" Of A Deal At... LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive

Everyday Pricing
1/2 KEGS NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $34.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, ROLLING ROCK $36.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE $40.99 + DEP.

Miller High Life, Genuine Draft & Genuine Draft Light, Case of 30-12 oz. cans $11.49 + dep.
Genesee Cream Ale, Red Ice, Case of 36-12 oz. cans, Sale $9.49, Mail-in Rebate -3.00, Final Cost $6.49 + dep.
Bass Ale 12 pk. bottles $10.99 + dep.
Harpoon 12 pk. bottles $9.99 + dep.
Pabst Blue Ribbon Case 24-12 oz. bar bottles $8.99 + dep.
Corona 12 pk. bottles $8.99 + dep.

WINE OF THE MONTH
Hardy's Nottage Hill, Imported from Australia, Chardonnay, Shiraz, Merlot, Shiraz/Cabernet, 750ml $5.99
Carlo Rossi Chablis, Burgundy Blush, Fin Rose, Paisano Wine, Sangria, White Grenache, 4 Ltr. $7.49
Rene Junot Red & White, 1.5 Lt. $5.99
Martini & Rossi Asti Spumante, 750ml $7.99
Freixenet Cordon Negro Brut, 750ml $5.99
Beringer White Zinfandel, 750ml $4.29

Rubinoff Vodka 1.75L $8.99
Kahlúa Coffee Liqueur 750ml $13.99
Jameson Irish Whiskey 750ml $16.49
Fleischmann's Preferred Whiskey 1.75L $11.99
Poland Springs Rum 1.75L $9.99
Amaretto di Saronno 750ml $15.99

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
SALE PRICES THURS. 2/11/99 THRU WEDS. 2/17/99

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
Budweiser Night
Pint Ticket Raffle
9-11
26 oz. bow Tie draft.
Thursday, Feb. 11
37 North Pleasant St.

GRE your №2 days are numbered
Taking the GRE? You'd better start exercising your mouse finger. Because April 10th is the last time you can take the GRE on paper with a pencil. Get the point?
Both the computerized GRE and the Paper & Pencil format have advantages. We've got all the tools to help you decide which is right for you.
Call us at 800.2.REVIEW. We'll help you sharpen up.
800.2.REVIEW www.review.com
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

Earnhardt hoping for repeat in tough field at Daytona 500

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt hasn't had to answer that awful question once this year:

"When are you going to win the Daytona 500?"

Before his stirring victory a year ago at Daytona International Speedway, the seven-time Winston Cup champion had to field that query almost every day.

He tried to joke about it, but it was no use. The question became a burden.

"It's funny," he said as the Richard Childress Racing team worked nearby on his trademark black No. 3 Chevrolet Monte Carlo. "It feels great to come down and not be asked if you think you can win it this year and talk about all the things that have gone wrong the last several years.

"All that's behind us. But now they want to know how it feels not to have that question asked," Earnhardt said, laughing. "Now they can go along and bug Terry Labonte and Rusty Wallace and some of these other guys who haven't won it.

"It's definitely special to win the Daytona 500. Now when Darrell [Waltrip] and me are sitting in a rocking chair on the front porch when we're both about 70, he can't say, 'I won it and you didn't.'"

Before he won the Daytona 500, Earnhardt already was among the best in the history of his sport, with 71 career victories.

Now, besides a record eighth championship, what else does the 47-year-old driver have to accomplish?

"I want to win the Daytona 500 again, and I want to win a whole bunch more races," he said.

Considering he has won just once in his last 92 races, that seems a stretch. But he insists his team can still win.

"We'll go out and work hard to prove that again," he said. "It seems like it's just been a couple of years that we've had some turn of events that hasn't allowed us to be in the top five every race."

Childress says the team has kept its key personnel, added two engineers and reorganized its shop during the winter in an effort to strengthen its hand.

The team owner also pointed to the strong combination of Earnhardt and crew chief Kevin Hamlin.

Larry McReynolds began the 1998 season as Earnhardt's crew chief, but their relationship deteriorated after the Daytona victory.

At midseason, Childress switched crew chiefs, putting McReynolds with Mike Skinner and Hamlin with Earnhardt.

"Both of those combinations seem to be working just fine," Childress said.

Now it's time to make it work on the track.

"I know Dale Earnhardt probably as good as anybody," Childress said. "We talked at the end of the year about getting everybody in shape and he's ready to go. I see that desire when I'm talking to him. He's still got the desire to win."

The next order of business is qualifying for Sunday's race.

Earnhardt will start fifth in the second of two 125-mile qualifying races Thursday on the 2 1/2-mile Daytona oval.

He has won 11 of these qualifiers, including his last nine.

This time, he will have to beat, among others, teammate Skinner, Rusty Wallace, former Daytona 500 winners Ernie Irvan and Dale Jarrett, and Jeremy Mayfield.

Surprising rookie Tony Stewart, who will start from the pole in the race, has already locked in a front-row starting spot for Sunday with his qualifying speed.

Jeff Gordon, two-time defending Winston Cup champion and the 1997 Daytona winner, will start from the pole in the first qualifying race and on Sunday after leading first-day time trials with a lap of 195.067 mph.

In the unique Daytona qualifying format, positions 3-30 will be determined by Thursday's races. positions 31-36 will revert to the remaining fastest drivers from time trials and the rest of the 43-car field will be provisionals.

Allen becomes richest player in Bucks history with a record–breaking six–year contract extension

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Guard Ray Allen signed a $70.9 million, six-year extension yesterday, becoming the highest-paid player in Milwaukee Bucks history.

"For a coach, my job is to piece this thing together," new coach George Karl said at a news conference to announce Allen's extension. "And now I've got a very big piece."

Allen negotiated directly with team owner Herb Kohl, the senior senator from Wisconsin.

Allen, who saved a 4 percent commission — $2,836,000 — that he would have had to pay an agent, said Kohl agreed to pay him the maximum salary allowed a third-year player by the new collective bargaining agreement: $9 million to start, with annual raises of 12.5 percent.

That works out to $70.9 million over six years, the same contract recently signed by Kobe Bryant, Allen Iverson, Shareef Abdur-Rahim and Antoine Walker, all three-year stars who would have been eligible for free agency after this season.

Allen didn't want to become a free agent, where he wouldn't have been able to make as much money anyway, according to the new collective bargaining agreement.

But with his budding movie career — he starred alongside Denzel Washington in Spike Lee's "He Got Game," last year, many felt he'd rather live in New York or Los Angeles.

"I didn't want to," Allen said. "Milwaukee is not a big market but you can create that here. Utah did it with Karl Malone and John Stockton. Green Bay has done it with Brett Favre."

Although Allen didn't have an agent, he did hire celebrity lawyer Johnnie Cochran at $500 an hour to look over the contract. He also had a business manager, an accountant and his personal lawyer, collectively known as "Team Allen," to make sure the deal was to his liking.

Allen's deal surpasses the $68.25 million contract that Glenn Robinson got as the top pick in the 1994 NBA draft.

Allen met with Kohl late last month and said he was satisfied not only with the offer but with the owner's commitment to building a championship contender in Milwaukee.

Karl was delighted that Allen worked without an agent, saying last week "contract negotiations are simple stuff now."

Karl also said it didn't concern him that Allen might get bogged down with money matters instead of the business of playing basketball.

"You all think negotiating a big contract is bothersome," Karl said, chuckling. "It's fun negotiating to be rich."

UMass pool players are off to national championships

By Matt O'Neill
Collegian Correspondent

Last weekend, some of the finest pool players from around the Northeast gathered at Fitchburg State College for the regional championships in nine-ball.

Juniors Christine Maxwell and Tim Perry represented Massachusetts at the one-day tournament, which took place on Saturday, Feb. 6. Both of them emerged victorious and will represent the Northeast region in the National Championships in Tennessee, April 23-24.

For Perry, it was like a scene from the movies. Amid the smoke and the crowds, he won eight matches in a row after losing his second match of the tournament.

"At one point I had 30 people watching me," Perry said. "No one was watching the rest of the tournament. I just clicked in after I lost [the second match]."

By losing his second match of the day, the only way Perry could win the tournament was to win two matches in a row in the championship round.

"I knew I had to beat [the defending national champ] twice to win it," Perry said. "There was a couple of times where I had to step back because I hadn't eaten all day and there was a lot of smoke in the air."

The path to victory was smoother for Maxwell, who made it through to the finals without suffering a loss.

"I was not all that worried because I knew what to expect because I was there last year," Maxwell said.

Competing at this level is not new for either Perry or Maxwell. For Maxwell, this year's appearance marked her third showing at regionals. As a freshman, she finished third in the region in the eight-ball competition.

Last year, in nine-ball play, Maxwell made to the national championships in Green Bay, Wis. where she finished in the top eight.

This year was also Perry's third consecutive trip to the Northeast regionals. Two years ago, he finished sixth at the eight-ball tournament. Last year, Perry ended up finishing third in the region.

Both Perry and Maxwell feel confident in making strong showings at the national championships.

"I think that I have a good shot down there," Perry said. "Since I beat last year's national champ, I feel pretty good."

Maxwell also likes her chances in April.

"I've been there before," Maxwell said. "My experience from last year should help me in Tennessee."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Leap of faith

Chris Kirkland scored eight points, grabbed eight rebounds and collected three steals in the men's hoop win over the Bonnies last night.

Please, Please, Please Read that filler over there

Write for Sports. It's more than a job... It's a way of life.

Contests, Coupons, & Giveaways AmherstOnline.com Bookmark It!

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
We have over 30,000 pints of fresh ales & lagers. WE SHARE!!
Thurs- Tom & Jami Filiault & Friends
Fri- Martos & The New Horizon
Sat- Aloha Steam Train
Sun- Johnny Clark Jazz
Mon- Amherst Jazz Orchestra
• Fully Stocked Bar
• Late Night Menu Till Midnight
24-36 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-4400

There's a whole world out there! Explore it with Contiki- The #1 tour for 18-35 year olds
Cheap tickets. Great advice. Nice people.
Boston/Sydney $1407
Boston/Nairobi $955
Newark/Quito $290
New York/San Juan $255
Boston/Paris $344
Council Travel
Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone: 413-256-1261

Be A Resident Assistant
Applications for Fall 99 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted.
Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Recieve an Application
RA -just be
February 11 Gorman 2nd Floor Lounge 7:00pm
February 16 Field Classroom 7:00pm
February 18 Campus Center Room 917 12:30pm
Kennedy 19th Floor Lounge 7:00pm
February 22 Stonewall Center Lounge 5:00pm
Cashin Main Lounge 7:00pm
February 24 Campus Center Room 917 12:30pm
Cance Main Lounge 7:00pm
February 25 New Africa House Room 109 5:30pm
March 1 Campus Center Room 904 5:00pm
March 2 Patterson Main Lounge 7:00pm
March 4 Mary Lyon Basement 7:00pm
For More Information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545-0472.

FREE DELIVERY
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
5 8 6 - 7 2 7 2
OPEN 'TIL 3AM FRIDAY & SATURDAY
PAPA JOHN'S is now accepting
DON'T FORGET TO Get Extra Cheese & Extra Sauce Every Time!
OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan
HOURS OF OPERATION
Sunday - Thursday 11am - 2am
Friday & Saturday 11am - 3am
Accepting: MasterCard VISA
1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99
3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99
•Not Valid with any other offer •Valid only at participatin locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax •Additional toppings extra

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FUNK CLUB AUDITIONS!
Hip hop dancers wanted. Sat Feb.20, 12 to 5 pm. Boyden 237. Callbacks, Sun Feb. 21 Questions? Call Charlene 6-5590 or Amelia 665-8649

Fraternities/Sororities: Looking for a DJ for your next function? OJ Fooz is now booking, specializing in date parties and formals. Call Tim 549-9127

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Putton Village partially furnished availible immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment Sunderland. Available now, February Free Call 577-0375

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Vw Jetta Silver good running condition. 128,000 miles. $1600.00 Call 256-8634 - 256-0222

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag. black $3500 584-6090

1986 Jaguar VDP Elegant 350 LTI conversion. Hella Lights. Nardi wheel All reciepts $9500 Jim @ 413-256-0966

'95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer 546-5366

COMPUTERS

AST 133 MHz pentium with 16GB, windows 95, Netscape, microsoft word, Lotus Applications, plus more. $700.00 or B/O. Call Noah 546-2147 Free delivery within UMass or nearby Amherst area!

COMPUTERS

Packard Bell 8xspeedCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach gymnastics, athletics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, riflery, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, newspaper, yearbook, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary ! 6/20/99-8/17/99. Call (800)832-8228 or E-mail: camp4you@aol.com for an application. Visit us: WWW.CANADENSIS.COM.

Camp Wayne For Girls - sister half of brother/sister private camp in Northeastern Pennsylvania (3hrs from New York City) 6/22-8/20/99. If you love children and want a caring, fun environment we are looking to hire staff for Tennis, Golf, gymnastics, Swimming (W.S.I. perfered), Sailing, Waterskiing, Piano, Basketball, Softball, Volleyball, Soccer, Self-Defense, Low Ropes, Drama Director, Drawing and Painting, Ceramics, Photography, Jewelry, Linoleum Cuts, Batik, Calligraphy, Sculpture, Guitar, Silk-screening, Cheerleading, Aerobics, Video, Group Leaders, Drivers, Housekeeping, Night watchperson, Kitchen/Salad. On Campus interviews March 5th Call 1800-279-3019 or e-mail: Campwayneg@aol.com

EMPLOYMENT

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA, overnight Jewish Federation camp - 3 hours from NYC - General, Sport, Drama, H20 & Arts. 1-800-973-3866 poyntell@ix.netcom.com or www.poyntelle.com

"LEADERS NEEDED: Summer teenage bicycling trips .US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, Ashfield Rd., CONWAY, MA 01341 (800) 343-6132"

COUNSELORS: TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: All Competitive Teams Sports, All Water Sports. PLUS: Camping/Hiking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Riflery, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top Salaries, Awesome Facilities, Rm/Bd/Lndry, Travel. CALL Steve Rubin at (800) 473-6104, or E-MAIL COBBACHIEF@AOL.COM

Are you HIP, and in the scene? Give us a call at (212) 615-6773

Housework good pay near by. Car needed. 548-9635

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3 hrs/NYC)— Sports oriented, Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or wayneboys@aol.com.

EMPLOYMENT

HELP WANTED
EARN EXTRA CASH!!! MAKE YOU OWN HOURS!! RESPONSIBLE STUDENTS TO MARKET/MANAGE CITIBANK PROMOTIONS ON CAMPUS. FREE GIVEAWAYS! EARN $400+/WEEK. CALL JOANN AT 1-800-950-8472 EXT.117

PRESTIGIOUS NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP
Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, Nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool, Musical Director and General Counselors INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd TRAIL'S END CAMP 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99?
College Pro, a $25 million company, seeks highly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goal-oriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

TRAVEL

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details:Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire Dj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester. Call Tim 549-9127

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUK!

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

INSTRUCTION

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

1/2 of House to Rent $300.00 per month or 20hrs of Babysitting or 20hrs of maintenance Native Russian speaker preferred. Maria 323-8949

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Do you have questions about you rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

TRAVEL

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $835. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplashtours.com

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 ww.classtravel.com

SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

TRAVEL

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

WANTED

Bereau For Apartment Call 253-4826 Willing to pay cash

Do you need some cash?

Are you looking for a job?

You might need money for spring break!

Check out The Classifieds and find a good one!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, FEB. 11

Community — There will be a blood drive in the Campus Center basement from 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Coupons for a free frozen yogurt will be given to donors.

Film — The Black History Film series will show the film Glory in the Student Union Ballroom at 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — The UMass School of Nursing will sponsor a lecture entitled "Interrupting the Cycle of Oppression: What is a Practitioner's Role?" from 4-6 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. A book-signing opportunity is also available.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Creating Communities: Giving and Volunteering by GI RT People" will take place in room 803 of the Campus Center at 12:30 p.m.

Production — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of "My Sister in this House" about two sisters who brutally murdered their employer and daughter will be held in Kirby Theater at Amherst College at 8 p.m. Reservations are suggested by calling 542-2277.

FRIDAY, FEB. 12

Hypnosis — Something Every Friday presents hypnotist/comedian Jim Sportaro at the Bluewall Cafe at 8 p.m. The movie Antz will follow.

Lecture — "As part of the Geoscience Lecture Series, a lecture entitled "Progress Towards and Understanding of the Origin of the Earth's Magnetic Field" at 3:30 p.m. in Morrill II South, room 136. A reception will follow.

Production — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of "My Sister in this House" about two sisters who brutally murdered their employer and daughter will be held in Kirby Theater at Amherst College at 8 p.m. Reservations are suggested by calling 542-2277.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Presents your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — Last Information sessions for the Domestic Exchange program will be held Feb. 9, 10, 16, and 17 in room 604 of Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Deadline for applications is March 1. Call 545-5351 for more information.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 24R of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is February 12. Also searching for the 1998-99 cover contest winner. Deadline is the end of December. Call 5-4220 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs — The University Store Not like a mall.. Better.

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	15	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
16	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
17	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
18	HSCN Programming

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 11, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Legendary Lighthouses		Mystery! "Heat of the Sun"		Keeping Up	Wait for God	Is It Legal?	This Old Hou.
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder "Rescue Me"		Turks "Tell" (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder "Rescue Me"		Turks "Tell" (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Vengeance Unlimited		Cupid "The Children's Hour"		Crime & Justice (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's Cl.	ER "The Storm"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Judge Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lane	"Lost in the Bermuda Triangle" (1996, Adventure)		Tom Yarrick		Newsradio	Newsradio	Married... With
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hart Cop	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's Cl.	ER "The Storm"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	World's Wildest Police Videos		When Good Times Go Bad 2		News		Friends	Mad Abt. You
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's Cl.	ER "The Storm"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Dvs. on Call	Mystery! "Heat of the Sun"		Jonathan Creek (In Stereo)		Cherlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Vengeance Unlimited		Cupid "The Children's Hour"		Crime & Justice (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Lost in the Bermuda Triangle" (1996, Adventure)		Tom Yarrick		Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	27	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder		Millionaire		Sports	Moneyline
ABE	28	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Mad Dog"		Biography: Colin Powell		Unexplained		Newsstand: Entertainment		Sports	Moneyline
CNN	29	Worldview	Moneyline	Newshour		Crossfire		World Today		Larry King Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money
COM	59	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	(4:51) "Pinocchio" (1984, Comedy)		Goldie Hawn, Chris Sarandon,		Robin Williams: Off the Wall		Spytek "Dreidy Game"
DISC	31	New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery	Tyler	Spytek "Dreidy Game" (R)		Science Mysteries: Area 51		Into the Unknown (R)		Sportscenter
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Illinois at Michigan State (Live)				College Basketball: Memphis at Alabama Birmingham (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five (R Stereo)		Chicago Hope "Internal Affairs"		Mildred Blessings" (1995, Drama) Gabrielle Carteris,				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	49	Countdown	Out (In Stereo)	Beethythm (R)	Behind Fan.	Sift & Dilly	Video Clashes	Undrcvr Snow, Snow Brawl		Celebrity	Boardbloat	Brama Game	Loveline
NICK	52	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Skeeter	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Laverne	Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	63	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Amaz. Stories	Star Trek: "The Changeling"			Highlander: The Series		Friday (In 3Di: The Series		Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC	65	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "In the Danger Zone"		Medical Detect	Without Warn.	Climate Chaos (R)		Ultimate Mission: Mars (R)		Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	67	Due South "The Duel"		ER "House of Cards" (In Stereo)		(4:53) "Back to the Future" (1985, Fantasy) Michael J. Fox, Christopher Lloyd				(4:53) "Back to the Future" (1985, Fantasy)
USA	69	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger		(4:57) "Panther" (1995, Drama) Kadeem Hardison, (In Stereo)				New York Undercover
HBO	70	(5:00) "Last of the Dogmen"		(7:04) "Out Sand" (1995, Adventure)		Val Kilmer, "PG-13"		(4:57) "The Ex" (1996) Yancy Butler, "R"				Sex Bytes 2.1 (R) (In Stereo)
MAX	71	(5:45) (R) "The Pelican Brief" (1993) Bruce Willis, "PG-13"										(6:15) "Conspiracy Theory" (1997, Suspense) Mel Gibson, "R"
SHOW	72	"The Deli" (1997, Comedy) Mira Sorvi, Matt Keeslar, "NR"						"The Fisher King" (1991, Comedy Drama) Robin Williams, Jeff Bridges, "R"		Lina's (R)		Rude Awaken.	"Hangin' With"

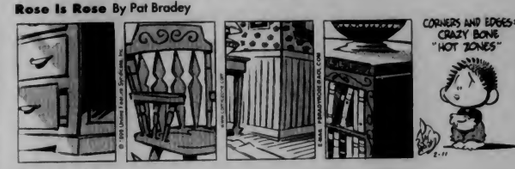
Down By The Waterline By Charles L. Thayer

VonHess By Joseph Hession

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Rose Is Rose By Pat Bradey

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagen

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You should be able to do the "impossible" today for at least the second time this week! Friends and loved ones are universally impressed.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — A change of scene can work wonders today, especially if you're suffering from any kind of creative block. New surroundings can be inspiring.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Someone "in charge" may be counting on you to go above and beyond the call of duty and perform a "miracle" today. You can oblige, with pleasure.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may want to change the way you do something today, just to see how things are on the "other side of the fence." Soon, you'll be coming back home!

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — How you start your day makes all the difference. You don't want things to seem so unsettled that you're unable to make immediate progress.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You'll be impressed by an unexpected encounter with someone who seems to have all the answers. You may realize that you have a great many, too.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — What ultimately begins in the most routine fashion today is likely to offer you the greatest rewards. All sorts of surprises are in store.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You may want to change the way you do certain things at home today, but only on a temporary basis. You can benefit from a change of routine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — What has been practiced most recently can serve you best when the time comes for the "real thing." A contest can be won.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — The most obvious answer isn't likely the one that you'll want to believe in when the chips are down. Conduct your own investigation and discover the truth!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Things that are difficult for a close friend are likely to be easy for you, and vice versa. You can help each other out today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — An unexpected discovery takes your day in a new direction, and you'll be prepared for something new and different when all is said and done.

Quote of the Day

"Sloth love Chunk."

-The Goonies

Close to Home By John McPherson

"They take a few days to get used to, but eventually you'll appreciate how much quiter apartment living is with rubber floors."

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Fiesta Fice and Cheese
Lentil Chili

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Baked Tofu with Roasted Vegetables

Worcester
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Fiesta Rice and Cheese
Lentil Chili

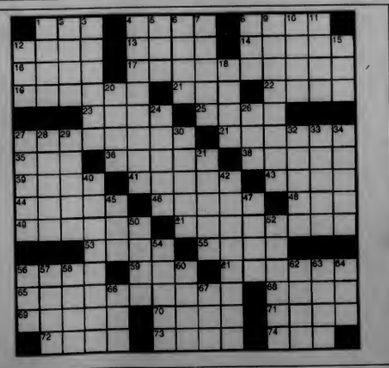
DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Baked Tofu with Roasted Vegetables

Hampshire
LUNCH
Chicken CutCet Sandwich
Fiesta Rice and Cheese
Lentil Chili

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna

Berkshire
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Fiesta Rice and Cheese
Lentil Chili

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Baked Tofu with Roasted Vegetables



ACROSS
1 Mineral spring
4 Beyond
8 Canters
12 Penny, e.g.
13 Norwegian port
14 Cove
16 Too
17 Béchamel, e.g.
19 Shortage
21 Steno's need
22 Greek cheese
23 Middle Easterner
25 Parjurer
27 Acted like a traffic officer
31 Pamphlets
35 Garden tool
36 Soothed
38 City in Italy
39 Night birds
41 Taboo items
43 Lucille's partner
44 Dinner course
46 Newspapers and radio
48 ABA member
49 Resulted
51 Some blazes
53 Jeans' partners
55 Flip through
56 Loafer, for one
59 Actor Chaney
61 Actor Borgnine
65 Greenhouse item, perhaps
68 Singing voice
69 Reddish dye
70 Farmland unit
71 Tight
72 Do it on the dotted line
73 Scorch
74 Finale

DOWN
1 Part of 56-Across
2 Leaning Tower site
3 Hooded jacket
4 Pocahontas' father
5 Type of tray
6 Lose one's balance
7 Sum
8 Not hers
9 Not scared
10 Sea color
11 Denomination
12 Scoundrel
15 It's brewed!
18 Change (text)
20 Squirrel's abode
24 Broom made of twigs
26 Limb
27 Not these
28 Des Moines resident
29 Cons' rooms
30 Star in Cygnus
32 Transparent
33 Preference
34 Tizzies
37 Flightless birds
40 Frying quickly
42 More heartfelt
45 Ruby or Sandra
47 From a distance
50 Sandwich shop
52 Natural
54 Couches
56 "Quiet!"
57 Shades of color
58 Science magazine
60 Pleasant
62 Verve
63 Small earring
64 Small child
66 Newscaster Rather 67 Significant period

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	L	L	S		S	A	M	O	A		H	O	O	P
S	O	A	P		E	M	E	N	D		A	R	G	O
A	G	R	A		C	U	T	C	O	R	N	E	R	S
P	E	A	R	L		L	E	E		A	S	S	E	T
			G	A	G	E	D		W	H	O
A	C	R	O	B	A	T		J	A	S	M	I	N	E
T	R	O	W	E	L		H	U	T		S	N	A	G
T	A	P		L	I	M	I	T	E	D		R	I	G
A	V	E	G		L	I	P		R	E	M	O	V	E
R	E	S	U	M	E	D		R	E	C	U	M	E	D
			A	E	O		P	E	D	A	L
S	T	A	R	E		A	L	A		L	E	A	D	S
C	O	U	N	T	O	P	A	S	S		A	U	R	A
A	N	N	A		S	O	D		C	L	E	A	N
M	I	S	I	T		T	E	E	N	Y		E	L	B	A

2-11/99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Night Editor	Michael Perry
Photo Technician	Melinda Nokes
Copy Editor	Mike Messaros
Production Supervisor	Joseph D. Savitch
Production Staff	Lisa Metcalf, Jeanette Santoro

SPORTS

Minutemen trounce Bonnies in hoops by 18

Mack overshadows St. Bonaventure's Winn by pouring in 24 points

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

With a little under three and a half minutes remaining in the Massachusetts men's basketball team's 84–46 victory against St. Bonaventure last night at the William D. Mullins Center, Minuteman guard Monty Mack finally got a chance to sit down... for a second.

Mack, aggressively pursuing a juggled loose ball on the defensive end of the court, vaulted out of bounds and, as a result, momentarily found himself seated atop the press table. UMass was awarded possession due to its leading scorer's effort. Mack then completed the job by taking a crisp jump shot on the offensive end to push his point-total on the night to 24. He complimented that with seven boards.

Mack's teammates also came out to play on this night; often times in ways that they hadn't in weeks past.

With 5:49 to go in the first half, forward Mike Babul, often overlooked as an offensive threat because of his defensive prowess, stood with the ball at the top left corner behind the arc. Babul glanced down to the blocks where center Lari Ketner was insistently calling for a pass, but decided not to go underneath. Instead, the forward seemed to give the UMass fans a subliminal "Aw, what the hell" before knocking down an impromptu three–pointer.

The Minutemen almost made things look easy against the Bonnies.

Right off the bat, Ketner, who has been sporadic during the course of the year, set the tempo of the game. The NBA prospect capitalized on a turnaround hook from the right baseline on the Minutemen's first offensive possession, and followed that with an encouragingly physical defensive stint.

"I think it was the best overall effort of the year by far," UMass Coach Bruiser Flint said. "We came out and the first play of the game Lari tried to dive to save the ball out of bounds so that pretty much set the tone."

Ketner even successfully hit both of his free throw attempts in what has been a disappointing season from the charity stripe for the entire squad.

The team shot 11 of 15 from the line in the second half, and .714 for the game in an uplifting performance.

"We just took our time and followed through... I just stepped to the foul line and wasn't worried about anything," Ketner said. "I just shot well."

The team also had to deal with four Bonnies who entered the game averaging in the double digits, while playing without the support of junior forward Ajmal Basit, who was abruptly dismissed from the program because of his relationship with Flint.

"I think he's a good person, but this was not a good fit between him and me," Flint said.

Even without Basit, the team contained the well–rounded offensive unit of SBU. Only point guard Tim Winn could manage to peak past 10 points, with 16 on the night. No St. Bonaventure bench players got on the scoreboard, and Winn, who at times was exiting with a handful of acrobatic lay–ins against dense Minuteman traffic in the paint, turned the ball over five times.

All throughout the game, UMass continued to hit key shots that kept the momentum on their side.

A Mack trifecta with just under seven minutes left in the opening half pushed the early Minuteman lead to 20–9, but Flint could not afford to breathe easy quite yet.

Against the Bonnies earlier this season in Olean, N.Y., UMass had secured a 40–30 advantage with roughly a quarter of the contest left to play before the hosting team rattled off 11 unanswered points en route to a 53–50 victory.

This time, Massachusetts would not let up. With an even more convincing second half than first, the Minutemen outscored their Atlantic 10 opponent 35–25 in the final period.

This conference win keeps UMass in a second place tie in the A–10 East with this Saturday's opponent, Rhode Island, who defeated Virginia Tech last night 76–67. Both the Rams and the Minutemen are 7–4 in conference play.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Massachusetts men's basketball coach Bruiser Flint and the rest of the Minutemen defeated St. Bonaventure, 64–46, last night at the William D. Mullins Center.

Flint–Basit relationship boils over; junior forward off team

Aaron Saykin

Last night's 64–46 win over St. Bonaventure was a mere footnote to what happened behind closed doors two days ago.

No one is sure about what exactly transpired. The only certainty is that Ajmal Basit will never play for UMass again. He was dismissed after practice on Tuesday by Bruiser Flint due to conduct detrimental to the team. But here's the real question: What does "conduct detrimental to the team" really mean?

"It was just the relationship between myself and the kid," Flint said of the situation. "...I'm going to help the kid as much as I can. It just didn't work out between me and him. That's the bottom line."

Not that one can fault Flint for his hesitancy to comment on the situation, but it was evident that his relationship with Basit had seriously deteriorated throughout the course of the season. This may have begun after the Minutemen's 59–54 loss to Connecticut on Dec. 9 — when Flint was openly critical about Basit's glamorous behavior and antics, e.g. sticking his tongue out and waving his arms. Less than a month later, Basit was removed (mutually) from the starting line–up and watched his minutes and production significantly decline.

So whatever may have constituted Basit's "conduct detrimental to the team," it was not out of the blue. It was most likely the straw that broke the camel's back, and it could not have been put off for another 19 days, when the regular season ends. The wording used to describe his dismissal does insinuate that the faulty relationship between Flint and Basit may have begun to affect the other players. Flint, however, stated that the problem was confined between Basit and himself.

"The decision for him to leave had nothing to do with his relationship with any players. It had to do with me," he said.

At any rate, Basit's dismissal could not have come at a more inopportune time, or during a more inopportune season. The Brooklyn, N.Y. native had recently strung two of his best performances of the season against Rhode Island and St. Joseph's.

And now, Flint must look to his bench... deep, deep into his bench. For the first time since early in the season, Flint looked to reserve center Anthony Oates for early–game duty — almost four minutes into last night's contest to be exact. Even seldom–used forward Winston Smith has begun to earn playing time to fill the void left by Basit's departure.

But the real burden may fall upon Lari Ketner and sophomore center Kitwana Rhymer. Ketner will somehow have to stay out of foul trouble and in the game. That won't be easy for a 6–foot–10 giant who, lately, seems to be whistled for breathing on the player he's guarding. As for Rhymer, he'll be expected to pick up the rebounding slack, and hopefully create a physical presence beneath the basket.

"Ajmal's gone now, and the next man will step into that spot," Flint said. "That's all... I think [this will give Kitwana a chance to grow a little], but he's been growing anyway. He was the first person off our bench. Ajmal played good the last two games, but Kit has been playing well [all season] and he'll move back into that first spot. I've got all the confidence in the world that Kit's going to step up and do the job."

There is no questioning the fact that Rhymer has been a significant contributor to the Minuteman throughout the course of the season. He's perhaps the most promising of Flint's underclassmen, but he doesn't score... and neither does anyone else on the bench for that matter. The UMass reserves accounted for only one field goal at the buzzer in their win against the Bonnies.

This decision by Flint was not a basketball issue. It was an off–the–court issue — perhaps one serious enough for Flint not to regret dismissing Basit. But he'll never let us know if he does...

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian columnist.

Despite adversity, UMass women's hoops is still alive

O'Brien fights through harsh criticism to help build a relentless unit

Sanford Appell

In athletic competition, every team faces adversity over the course of a season. Some teams deal with injuries, others with disgruntled players — which sometimes may lead to near scandals — not to mention grueling traveling schedules, and a high level of competition throughout the year.

At this late juncture in the 1998–99 season, Massachusetts women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien and her players (she only has eight to work with now), have overcome not only one or two of these problems, but every single one of them.

The Minutewomen know a little something about playing after a rough hand had been dealt to them.

Last season, UMass lost to injury vital team members in Kelly Van Huisen and Jaywana Bradley, a pair of guards that figured to be two of O'Brien's biggest weapons in her offensive arsenal.

Van Huisen played only six games, and Bradley missed the entire campaign, but somehow O'Brien rallied the troops on the way to guiding her team to its second ever NCAA appearance.

Not coincidentally, the program's only other NCAA berth was also under the direction of the Penn State graduate who has taken this program to unprecedented heights.

Entering this season with a talented, and finally healthy squad composed of 14 players, all of which were bringing something to the table, O'Brien was looking to climb another set of rungs in the proverbial ladder.

O'Brien had said at basketball media day that this was clearly the deepest squad that she ever had a chance to instruct.

Well, a few things happened on the way to heaven. Tori Grant, a junior transfer from Seton Hall was excused from the team for disciplinary reasons. Then Kara Trent, a sophomore guard, excused herself from the squad partially in defense of Grant.

In spite of these departures, the Minutewomen still appeared to have a competent unit that could at least defend its Atlantic 10 East crown successfully.

To begin the season, UMass split a pair of Big East tilts with St. John's and Boston College before the roof began to cave in.

After making what seemed like an opportunistic excursion to Hawaii for three games against nationally acclaimed programs, disaster struck... again.

Van Huisen was lost for the second consecutive season on the opening night in the 50th state. She tore her anterior cruciate ligament, this time in her right knee, and minutes later Bradley went down with another knee ailment of her own.

The Minutewomen were officially reeling, dropping all three contests in Hawaii, before falling to No. 6 Georgia despite a valiant effort at home.

The team finally began to regain momentum with a blowout victory at home over La Salle to improve its record to 7–8 overall, 2–0 in the A–10. Then the injury bug stung again. After returning for several games, Bradley was forced back to the sidelines. In addition, freshman center Caroline Nehls was forced to sit due to stress fracture in her foot.

More recently, senior center Yolanda Rayside separated her shoulder in practice, which will likely force her to miss the final games of her college career. With Rekiya Penton continuing a prolonged leave of absence for personal reasons, UMass has gone to battle with as few as seven bodies.

The funny thing is that the Minutewomen have started to play their best basketball of the season, as they have now won six of their last eight games. With that sort of production, it seems like UMass has a pretty good coach running the show. The Minutewomen are now 13–12 overall, 8–4 in the A–10 — good for second place in the conference.

Even with the unbridled success in the constant shadow of adversity, some people seem to be disgruntled with O'Brien's no–nonsense approach to coaching.

Some onlookers who have not even been to one practice, think her language is abusive, and that she even dared to grab the wrists of her players while instructing them.

Not too many men's coaches have come under similar criticism to my recollection. Seems as if every time Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight throws a chair onto the court, the media makes a highlight out of it on nightly wrap– up shows.

If you listen to the vast majority of her players, past and present, you will hear what a great motivator O'Brien is, what a terrific leader she is, and more over how much she cares about her players as people off the court.

The bottom line is that this is the stretch run for the UMass women's basketball team, so if one wants to share their view on the team, let's keep the discussion to basketball until one has actual proof to move in another direction.

But whatever you do, don't underestimate what O'Brien and her resilient players have achieved thus far. Don't ever say these athletes quit playing for O'Brien day in and day out no matter how many or how few players they actually had to practice and compete with.

Sanford Appell is a Collegian columnist.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Massachusetts women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien has heard it all from the critics off–the–court this season, but on hardwood the Minutewomen are still hopeful for a post– season berth.

UM's Pryor takes home Athlete of the Week honors

•Massachusetts men's gymnastics team member Stephen Pryor was named the WHMP/UMass Athlete of the Week at the sports luncheon yesterday afternoon. Pryor won the all– around title on Sunday in a UMass win over Vermont and Springfield College. Pryor posted a total of 36.3 points, highlighted by a 9.6 on rings, and a 9.45 on pommel horse.

•Massachusetts coach Roy Johnson praised the senior captain who been a constant contributor to his team.

"I can't say enough about what Stephen has meant to this program," Johnson said. "He had a great performance on Sunday, and he is most deserving of the award."

•The Snowboarding Club at UMass was represented this weekend at the Bay State Games held at Brodie Mountain in New Ashford.

•The club had a tremendous amount of success, as members captured all three top spots in the 18–and–over half–pipe competition. Brad Rossini, Chris Coburn and Eric Silva placed first, second and third respectively.

•Phoebe Lehman captured the gold medal in the women's division of the half–pipe.

— Sanford Appell

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 14 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, February 12, 1999

Chancellor Scott speaks at evolution conference

By Will Thomson
Collegian Staff

They say the devil's in the details, but one biochemist may have found proof of God on a cellular level.

Speakers discussed the origin of life in a program called "Evolution or Intelligent Design," drawing a crowd of about 300 to the University of Massachusetts Campus Center Wednesday night.

Michael Behe is the author of Darwin's Black Box. Behe supports a theory of intelligent design, which says that evolution can't explain the variety and complexity of living things.

Professor Lynn Margulis from the UMass geoscience department defended evolution. She said that intelligent design's supporters are not interested in finding the scientific truth.

Speakers cited cartoonist Gary Larsen, Sonny Bono's memoirs, and the inventor of the granola bar, but avoided referring to the Bible. Behe and other proponents of the theory of intelligent design were careful to distance themselves from Creationists who believe in the literal interpretation of scripture.

Behe said his theory was based on science, not religious ideology.

"The theory of intelligent design is purely based on empirical evidence. Scientists shy away from the theory because they fear something beyond nature. They fear the theological implications," he said. "Science should follow the evidence no matter where it is leading."

Behe told the audience about his theory of irreducible complexity. When something cannot be simplified and needs all its parts to function, it is called irreducibly complex.

"Irreducible complexity is a big headache for Darwinian theory," Behe said.

Behe showed a mousetrap to explain his theory. "We know that a mousetrap is designed because if any part were taken away, the trap wouldn't function."

You can't catch a mouse with just one part, he said. A mousetrap could not have gradually perfected itself because all its parts are vital for it to perform. "We look at it and know that it was designed by an intelligent agent," Behe said.

"The real question is if there are any irreducibly complex biological systems," said Behe. "As it turns out, there are tons of them."

One of the examples Behe used to explain his theory was a bacterial flagellum that functions as a hydrogen–powered outboard motor. He said that every part is crucial for the flagellum to work.

"It requires about 50 different proteins to function," Behe said. If any one were taken away, it would be useless.

Behe said that we know from common experience how to tell if something is the product of intelligent design or if it has occurred by chance.

"The theory of irreducible complexity simply substantiates ignorance," Margulis countered. "The crux of his [Behe's] argument is that something is complex, that he doesn't understand it, and therefore evolution could not have occurred."

She said that there was a form of bacterium that had adapted to its extremely acidic environment by using a power source other than hydrogen, and that the adaptation required the change of only three amino acids.

"He's not one of those rabid creationists." Margulis said of Behe. "But by formalizing ignorance and calling it intelligent design, he represses the search for truth and open–mindedness. I respect his opinion, I just say it's not science."

"If there is a designer, then God is making AIDS and poisoning babies. What makes you think this is a benevolent creator?" Margulis asked a student who was challenging her.

Chancellor David K. Scott

On the panel, Chancellor David K. Scott fell in the middle. Scott said that "they're both right and they're both wrong. In a large sense, the jury is still out on this issue."

Scott felt Behe raised interesting questions but that neither side had proved its case fully. "They are both groping in the dark," he said. "Both are myth and both are fancy."

Scott said that he would support equal time for the theory of evolution and for the theory of intelligent design.

Dorion Sagan, a panelist and co–author of Into the Cool, argued for the theory of evolution. He said that for proof you don't need to investigate at the microscopic level; ostriches and penguins have vestigial wings.

"What kind of intelligent designer would make wings that don't flap?" Sagan asked. "Are they just doodads thrown in to keep us guessing?"

Sagan said that complexity and order can be seen in the physical world. He also said that there are phenomena that seem to have been organized by a grand designer, but are just behaving according to the laws of physics.

"We are nature." Sagan said. "Evolution is a part of the wisdom of nature."

The Episcopal Chaplain Chris Carlisle said that he has organized talks in the past on all kinds of issues and their theological implications.

"This year we wanted to find a more contentious issue," Carlisle said. "We wanted to find a speaker who was critical of evolution, but also scientifically credible."

The program was presented by the Episcopal Chaplaincy, and co–sponsored the Dean of Students Office, Athletes in Action, the Campus Crusade for Christ First Baptist Church, The 4 C's, Hillel, the Muslim Student Association, the Newman Center, the Navigators and the United Christian Foundation.

Five file election signatures

Boston officials review Pruddy application

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

And they're off.

Five candidates are in the running for two Amherst Select Board positions, but one candidate's position is up in the air due to a discrepancy between town law and information given to the candidate.

Marjorie R. Crossman, Paul DiBenedetto, Prudencio Gomez–Cepero Sr., Eva Schiffer and Carl Seppala will be vying for the seats that carry a three–year term.

The two seats opening up are currently held by Homer Cowles, who is not seeking re–election, and Schiffer.

While the candidates have filed the proper paperwork and obtained the requisite 50 signatures, the town clerk has until Feb. 24 to validate the signatures before the candidate can be on the March 30 ballot.

But due to a difference between what is required by law and what Gomez was told was required to get on the ballot, his signatures are being reviewed by the Elections Division in Boston.

Gomez obtained 68 signatures that were valid according to a sheet of information he was given when he took out papers from the town clerk. But the signatures may not be certified by the clerk based on town law.

Assistant Town Clerk Sandra Burgess said there was a problem with the addresses of some of the individuals who signed in support of Gomez. The addresses of the individuals had to be where they lived when they registered to vote, not necessarily where they currently live.

"The actual form [given to Gomez] was misleading to the signature gatherer," Burgess said. "[The clerk is] waiting on a decision from the Elections Division."

Burgess said the Elections Division has to come up with an answer by Feb. 24.

Gomez, while acknowledging that the clerk recognized the discrepancy and was working to remedy it, said he was still upset.

"They apply the law when they want," he said.

Despite the problem, Gomez said the reason he is running is to give the Select Board a different perspective.

"I think the Select Board needs a new vision," Gomez said. "They don't have the perspective of the Latino or business man or all those things I represent...it doesn't matter how good–intentioned they are... when they appoint others to boards, they appoint their friends."

Seppala sees a Select Board position as a natural step.

"[It's] a natural progression with my experience in town politics," said Seppala, who is member of Town Meeting, Amherst Redevelopment Authority, and a committee for a multicultural regional school system. "We are heading into a difficult time financially... I'm not a hard–core, cut–and– slash type, but I do have a critical eye for spending."

Schiffer said she wants to continue her ready–for–anything philosophy when handling Select Board issues.

"I feel it's extremely important to be able to deal with problems that arise and not go into it with any personal agenda," Schiffer said. "I do really enjoy contributing in this way."

Crossman feels her life experience would be a valuable asset to the Board.

"I've lived on the same street for over 79 years so I feel I have enough wisdom to put a little bit of experience into town affairs," Crossman said. "I just think there's a lot of things that could be straightened out."

DiBenedetto could not be reached for comment after three calls to his place of business. His home phone number could not be found in the phone book by the operator, or on the Internet.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Acting talent

Tim Mahoney's Theater 140 acting class shares laughs while performing a class exercise.

UMass prof speaks of new Jordan king

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

As the world remembers Jordan's late King Hussein, all eyes are on his successor, his son Abdullah.

King Hussein died Sunday, Feb. 7, of heart failure brought on by non–Hodgkins lymphoma.

Hussein had ruled Jordan for 46 years, making him the Middle East's longest–running leader. Shortly before he died, he abruptly changed the line of succession, removing power from his brother Hassan and shifting it to Abdullah, his eldest son.

King Abdullah II has little political experience, although he has extensive military training. After attending Deerfield Academy, he went on to study at Oxford University in England and Georgetown University in Washington D.C., and eventually became a student at Britain's Sandhurst Military Academy.

"We in the West know very little about Abdullah," said Mary Wilson, professor and chair of the University of Massachusetts history department.

Wilson is also the author of King Abdullah, Britain and the Making of Jordan.

"His contacts and position were in the Jordanian Army. King Hussein kept his children out of the limelight, so we really don't know what to expect," she said.

Abdullah was sworn in as king just four hours after his father's death. In his first speech as king, he referred to his

Turn to KING, page 2

Profs question teacher testing

By Martin Finucane
Associated Press

BOSTON — A small band of education experts raised questions yesterday about the exam the state is using to test prospective teachers.

Walter Haney, a professor of education at Boston College, called the test a "fiasco" and said testing should be suspended. The test caused an uproar last April when 59 percent of the teaching candidates who took it for the first time flunked.

Haney, along with Clarke Fowler, an education professor at Salem State College, and Anne Wheelock, an education policy writer and researcher, said in a report that the test results were "unreliable and of poor validity."

The critics focused on the literacy portion of the test. A second portion of the test looked at a student's knowledge of subject matter.

Couple celebrates V-Day, engagement

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

As Valentine's Day arrives at the University of Massachusetts, single students and couples alike will be celebrating. One student couple in particular will be spending its first Valentine's Day engaged.

On Thursday Dec. 10, 1998, junior Jeff Sauvageau, a hotel, restaurant and travel administration major, proposed to senior animal science major Janine Gwozdz. He popped the question in a unique manner—through a Quote of the Day in the Collegian last fall.

The proposal stated, "Janine— I love you with all my heart. Will you marry me? — Love, Jeff."

Sauvageau says he had been planning to propose for quite some time and wanted to do the procedure differently. When his Quote of the Day proposal was approved by the Collegian, he knew it would be an unforgettable moment in both their lives.

"It was a proposal that just seemed different, but it is more than just a memory now, for we can reflect on the quote as being a special moment," Sauvageau said.

Sauvageau explained how it was very difficult to get his girlfriend to go to classes that morning. When she finally consented, he drove her to the Goessman laboratory.

Happy Valentine's Day!!

"I dropped her off and told her I'd see her in 50 minutes," Sauvageau said. "I pulled away and did a quick u–turn around the building and secretly followed her in."

Gwozdz picked up the Collegian and sat down to read the paper. Sauvageau says she completely skipped over the Quote of the Day and went to the horoscopes. One of her sorority sisters told her to read the quote.

"Her mouth just dropped," Sauvageau said. "It was just weird because it was the last day of classes before finals, and she didn't want to go to classes that day."

According to Sauvageau, all 125 people in the class were aware of his intentions. When she read the response, she turned around to look for him.

"She started walking fast up to me," Sauvageau said. "I went down on one knee and I had a whole spiel I wanted to say. My heart just melted, and I asked her to marry me."

Gwozdz said "yes" to the proposal, and now they will be sharing their very first Valentine's Day as an engaged couple.

They had been going out for two years and were very committed to each other, but weren't sure what the future held. Sauvageau said that Valentine's Day was a way of proving his love for Gwozdz and showing her he wants to always be there.

"I was crying and he was going on this speech and it made me nervous," Gwozdz said. "That didn't bother me, I was just so excited I said yes. I was taken by surprise because I didn't know it was coming. It made it all the more special."

The engaged couple have agreed to wait until they have finished their studies to get married, but they estimate the date of the wedding to be around May 2002.

Although the common acts of love associated with Valentine's Day are known and performed by many people, the origin of the holiday is what remains a mystery.

One common myth is that during Christian persecution, a priest named St. Valentine restored the sight of a jailer's daughter through faith. For his act, he was executed by Emperor Claudius. On the eve of his execution, Valentine wrote a farewell message to the girl and signed it, "from your Valentine." Since then, this message has always been associated with abiding love.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 32	HIGH: 40 LOW: 32	HIGH: 34 LOW: 18

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Love it or leave it?

Find out about the best and worst student Valentine's Day experiences in Campus Perspectives.

NEWS PAGE 3

Go ahead— make my day

Mel Gibson's new movie, Payback, is about guns and fights and people killing each other in a world of senseless violence. Check out our review.

ARTS PAGE 5

Babul is able

Mike Babul hopes to add some offense to his spectacular defensive season in order to help lead the UMass men's basketball team into Rhode Island tomorrow.

SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 10
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
FYI 10
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

~News Briefs~

Search efforts continue unsuccessfully

Search efforts for missing student Jose Figueroa have yielded nothing. Montague Detective Ray Zukowski said yesterday. An extensive search was conducted Wednesday; six search dogs, 20 police officers, and a mounted State Police unit recombed the wooded areas previously searched.

Det. Zukowski said searchers may begin using air-scenting dogs that can detect the distinct odor of humans. Search efforts along the Connecticut River will also intensify, he said.

"The worst-case scenario is that he went in the water," Zukowski said. "If that is the case, it takes time for nature to take its course [for the] body to surface."

However, Zukowski said there has not been sufficient enough indication that Figueroa might have fallen into the river for police to employ divers and put them at risk. But he said they are discussing the option, and will probably choose it should the land search continue to turn up nothing.

Figueroa has been missing for 14 days. He was last seen leaving a party at a friend's house in Turners Falls.

Student arraigned for illegally accessing computer

K-Lone C. Steele, 18, of Charlton, was arraigned in Hampshire District Court in Northampton yesterday on charges that he illegally accessed a female student's computer last December.

Steele was delivered a summons on Jan. 19 which charged him with accosting and annoying a person of the opposite sex, and three counts of illegally accessing the computer system of a female student. According to court documents, he confessed to at least three instances of computer violations.

Steele was released yesterday on the condition that he have no contact with the victim, and was ordered to reappear in court for a pre-trial hearing on March 11.

State Police Officer Michael C. Barrett, an expert in computer crime investigations, stated in an affidavit that he was contacted on Dec. 22 by Officer James Roberts of the UMass Police Department about an incident that occurred on campus on Dec. 18.

According to the affidavit, on Dec. 19 the victim said "pictures of sexually explicit web sites were being opened on her computer, and sexually explicit pictures of individuals and individuals engaged in sexual acts had been left on her computer screen when her computer was left unattended."

She also told Roberts that her disc drive door was opening and closing on its own, and that writing was appearing on her computer screen from an unknown source.

Roberts had a conversation with Scott Conti, Network Operations Manager at the Office of Information Technologies (OIT), regarding the illegal accessing of the victim's computer.

Conti told Roberts "it was possible that another computer user had installed a program on [the victim's] computer via the ethernet, which would have allowed an unknown subject to take control of [her] computer from another site," according to the affidavit.

Conti and Roberts agreed to trace "any further harassing messages or computer commands" sent to the victim's computer.

On Dec. 22, Conti received a voice mail message from the victim saying she had discovered a message on her computer that said, "A large penis has entered your komputer."

Conti conducted a check of the UMass computer network and determined from where the message had been sent. The police then obtained a search warrant and confiscated computer equipment from Steele's room in Washington Residence Hall.

Orchard Hill student sexually assaulted

Ansuman Mittra, 22, of Sudbury, was arrested Wednesday morning in Orchard Hill Residential Area, and charged with indecent assault and battery of a person age 14 or over. Mittra was taken into police custody and later arraigned at Hampshire District Court in Northampton.

He was released on probation under the stipulation that he have no contact with the victim and stay off the UMass campus. He will be returning to court on March 4 for a pre-trial hearing.

According to court documents, Mittra assaulted the victim "in an indecent manner, by touching the victim in the area of her upper thigh and buttocks against her will and without her consent." The victim states that Mittra had engaged in similar behavior approximately one and a half years ago at Smith College.

UMass students struck by car in downtown Amherst

Two UMass students were injured in a car accident Wednesday evening on North Pleasant Street, near Bart's Ice Cream.

Claudia Sierra, 21, and Ximena Gutierrez, 21, were struck by a car driven by Renee Bessette, of 117 Jacob St., Chicopee at 6:52 p.m. According to Amherst Police, the students emerged from between parked cars, attempting to cross the street. Bessette struck the students while swerving to go around two cars stopped in front of her.

Sierra had serious visible injury; Gutierrez had no visible injury. Both were taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

No citations were given, but the incident is still under investigation.

— Stacey Shackford and Jill Carroll

Italians protest court ruling that rape impossible in jeans

By Hermonie Toros
Associated Press

ROME — Women lawmakers wore jeans to Parliament yesterday and Italy's highest appeals court was accused of sexism after ruling it is impossible to rape a woman wearing jeans.

"If we go on like this, every woman that doesn't wear a chastity belt will have the 'right' to be raped," said Sonia Viale of Parliament's Equal Opportunities Commission.

The Court of Cassation ruled Wednesday it is impossible to take off tight pants like jeans "without the cooperation of the person wearing them," and impossible if the victim is struggling.

Baggy jeans aren't popular in Italy, and many women prefer tight pants.

The decision overturned the 1998 conviction of a 45-year-old driving instructor in southern Italy. Carmine Cristiano, for raping an 18-year-old student. A lower court had sentenced Cristiano to two years and eight months in prison, but the appeals court said the girl must have consented to sex and sent the case back for retrial.

The court also questioned why the victim, identified only as Rosa, waited several hours to tell her parents she'd been attacked.

"It could be seen as a manual for aspiring rapists," the Rome daily Il Messaggero fumed in a front-page story.

"Jeans: An alibi for rape," read a sign held up in Parliament by five jeans-clad lawmakers.

Alessandra Mussolini, a deputy of the rightist National Alliance who led Thursday's protest, called the ruling "shameful" and said it "offends the dignity of women.

"Women are already scared of reporting rapes, this just makes it worse," she said.

Massimo D'Alema said he could not comment on the ruling as prime minister. But he said, as a private citizen he expressed "solidarity" with the female lawmakers.

Protesting lawmakers called on women all over Italy to join a "skirt strike" and wear jeans, and the anchor of a popular television show known for her chic dresses donned a pair of denims.

"We thank the court for having enriched women's wardrobes with a new garment. To the business suit and the little black dress we can now add the anti-rape outfit: a comfortable and resistant pair of jeans," said union official Stefania Sidoli.

A housewives federation ridiculed the court by offering a prize to any designer who comes up with "easy-off jeans," and it planned a march in dungarees to the Justice Ministry.

Although many were upset at the ruling, Federica Snider, a 17-year-old in Rome, agreed with the three-judge panel. "It's impossible to rape someone wearing jeans. You've got to really overpower them," she said.

The ruling also drew attention to the makeup of the appeals court, which has 10 female justices and 410 men.

"Nothing can be done [justice in the court is in the hands of men, often elderly, with old ideas," a veteran female justice, Simonetta Sotgiu, told the newspaper La Repubblica.

She denounced the ruling as setting a dangerous precedent. "It paves the way for the rape of women in jeans," she said.

■ king

continued from page 1

countrymen as "my family and tribe," just as his father had.

His first official decree was to name the 18-year-old Prince Hamzeh crown prince. Hamzeh is the son of King Hussein and Hussein's widow, the American-born Queen Noor.

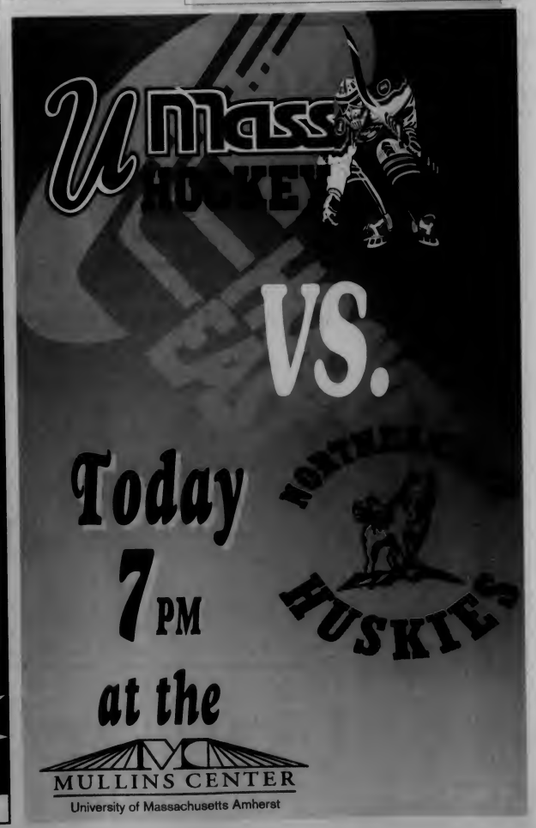
"Jordan is a very poor country in terms of resources," Wilson said, "but it has gotten political as well as financial support over the years by creating a constellation of states that will support it."

One example of this, Wilson pointed out, was in 1970 when King Hussein's army threw the armed wing of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) out of Jordan. Although the Arab world alienated Hussein, the United States and Israel provided support.

However, Wilson said the tides can turn as history has shown.

"During the Gulf War, when King Hussein refused to lead the American-led coalition, the United States, Israel and the Gulf States stopped sending him financial subsidies. But in that difficult time, the Palestinians who were kicked out of Kuwait came to Jordan with their capital, giving Jordan's economy a temporary boost to get it through that period," said Wilson.

Hussein was still able to maintain some independence through transitions of support. Wilson wonders whether Abdullah II will be able to demonstrate such political skill.



ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Doggy

Monesha, accompanied by her owner Fernando Cabral, strikes a pose for the camera yesterday afternoon.

Campus Perspectives

What was the best or worst Valentine's Day you ever had?

Compiled by Danielle Fugazi • Photos by Roberto Delgado

"The worst was when I went out with a girl and then broke up with her on Valentine's Day. She wasn't very happy."

Travis Cormier
Freshman
Theater

"My Valentine's Day is pretty boring; there usually isn't a lot of action, but I'm looking for something this year."

Bridget Overson
Freshman
Engineering

"All of mine are usually the worst because I don't have a valentine."

Amy Stowe
Junior
Psychology

"I'm not really into Valentine's Day. I don't support the commercialism of it."

Brian Gomes
Senior
Education

"This year will probably be the best. I have money and a boyfriend."

Cecilia Deandrade
Junior
Biology/Pre-Med

"My first Valentine's Day with my girlfriend because I am still with her."

Mike Sullivan
Sophomore
Landscape Contracting

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

A blast from the sun

An unknown UMass student pauses for a moment to admire the sunset from the back doors of Hasbrouck Lab.

Town officials meet in secret about smoking ban

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts District Attorney's office said yesterday private meetings about the smoking ban between the Select Board and Board of Health did not violate the Massachusetts Open Meeting Law, but did violate its spirit.

"Since the meetings described above did not constitute quorum, or simple majority, of either board, the meetings may not strictly be governed by the requirements of the Open Meeting Law," wrote Assistant District Attorney Cynthia M. Pepyne. "These meetings raise concerns that the spirit of the Open Meeting Law has been violated."

The District Attorney's office investigated a report that Select Board Chairperson Bryan Harvey, Select Board member Eva Schiffer, Board of Health Chairperson Valerie Steinberg, Board of Health member David Buchanon, Health Department Director Epi Bodhi and Town Manager Barry Del Castilho met on at least two occasions to discuss issues of the smoking ban in meetings that "were not posted, not open to the public, and [in which] no minutes were taken."

The dates of these meetings were not confirmed at the time of print.

Steinberg said the individuals met to inform members of the Select Board about recent Board of Health decisions.

"What it was intended to do was inform the members. David Buchanon and I met with two members of the Select Board and the Town Manager to explain our position, not to negotiate or make any decisions," Steinberg said.

Steinberg said the decisions concerned allowing variances in the smoking ban for bars. She also confirmed that Bodhi had attended the meetings.

Harvey said this type of meeting is a "discussion that regularly occurs" between government officials. He said he "couldn't speculate" as to why an individual might consider the meetings worthy of report to the district attorney.

Steinberg would not comment about the decision because she had not yet heard about it.

The Assistant District Attorney did make a recommendation.

"While this office can take no further action with regard to this matter, we recommend that future meetings between members of the Select Board and the Board of Health be posted and open to the public," Pepyne wrote.

Schiffer and Del Castilho were not answering the phone but messages were left with both. Bodhi was unlisted and Buchanan was not called for comment late last night.

www.dailycollegian.com

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY!!!!
-FROM COLLEGIAN GRPACHICS

DESIGN SUPPLY
ART STUDIO SUPPLIES
AT THE TOWN COMMON
65 SO. PLEASANT STREET
AMHERST, MA 01002
FREE DISCOUNT CARD WITH THIS COUPON
413-253-5592

INTERESTED IN FILM STUDIES?
Sign up now for the FILM STUDIES CERTIFICATE in the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies. You get:
- a certificate for 18 credits of coursework in four years
- individual advising
- the only on-campus resource for graduate programs and schools in film and video
- exciting information on internships and jobs
- free subscription to the newsletter In Focus, with film course listings
- advance notice of upcoming film screenings and lectures
- a community of students interested in film and video

Apply in 101 South College during office hours or call 545-3659.
CHECK OUT OUR NEW WEBSITE!
http://www.umass.edu/film including listings of film courses, internships and competitions, grants and festivals, and links to other film sites

SPRINGBREAK
SKI and SNOWBOARD
CANADA
MOLSON SUN SNOW
PARTY IN THE SNOW!
5 NIGHTS LIFT/LODGING PARTIES/LIVE BANDS
$369
1-800-999-SKI-9
www.skitravel.com

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
For those in love & for those who love movies- No two better films to celebrate Valentine's weekend
5th week! Daily 7 & 9:20
GOLDEN GLOBE WINNER BEST PICTURE
"THE RICHEST AND MOST SATISFYING ROMANTIC MOVIE OF THE YEAR!"
Shakespeare In Love
Valentine's Late Show Fri. & Sat. 11:45 p.m.
Tickets $5.00 on sale from 1 p.m. – avoid lines
"Here's Looking At You Kid" ON THE GIANT SCREEN
Casablanca
Humphrey BOGART Ingrid BERGMAN
HENREID RAINS VEIDT GREENSTREET LORRE
http://www.angelfire.com/biz2/academyofmusic/
ACADEMY OF MUSIC Cinema House NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
JIM SPINNATO
Hypnotist
Bluewall Cafe, 8 p.m.
February 12, 1999
FREE
The movie "ANTZ" will be shown following perfomance
For more info, please call 545-3600 or visit our website
http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm

Driving Me Crazy

I have finally received some concrete proof that old people should not be behind the wheel. I'm not talking about moderately old people, I'm talking about the kind of old people who cough dust and whose fingernails could be carbon-dated to get their exact age.

An elderly—scratch that—very elderly couple set out from their house in Dedham, Mass. on Christmas day to drive to their daughter's house in Sharon, Mass. This is roughly a 45 minute ride. Apparently, all was going well for Mr. and Mrs. Savill until a few miles from their daughter's house, when they were thrown off course by a detour. This was the longest detour in the recorded history of mankind because they drove through Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont, and finally Rhode Island before police caught up with them 27 hours later! Remember... This is a true story.

Brian Lohnes

The couple's ages are 89 and 90. Mr. Savill suffers from temporary memory loss: His wife is blind and has a weak heart. Hello?! What the hell are these people doing behind the wheel of a car? I wonder why the family even allowed them to make the drive. Lord knows, when I am 90, my family should come to me. I don't want to be traveling all over creation. I think that when a person turns 62 and starts getting Social Security checks, he should be required to take another driving test. Then, when this person reaches the age of 75, his license should be not stripped away but "retired" like a sports jersey.

I just don't think that anyone who was around to drive a Model-T is really capable of keeping up in today's fast times. A car in the wrong hands, whether the driver is drunk, sleepy, old or just plain stupid, becomes a one-ton guided missile.

On the flip side, I know several senior citizens who are very capable behind the wheel. In fact, my grandfather, who is 68 years old, still drives a flat-bed truck (and he could still probably whoop me in a fight). Old people deserve all of our respect and admiration but I think we would all benefit from a little "tough love" towards them.

Back to the Savill's tale of automotive mayhem. This was the quintessential "guy driving" story; as every self- respecting guy knows, you never, ever, under any circumstances, ask for directions. I can hear Mr. Savill saying to Mrs. Savill after the first 12 hours or so, " I remember this, we must be getting close!" Then I can hear the toll collector saying, "Welcome to Maine!" One can only dream of hearing the old married couple bicker and fight about where they were going.

"I told you Authur, it was the first exit!"

"Goddammit, Amelia, go back to sleep!"

In all honesty, I feel really bad for the couple and they shouldn't have had to endure what they did. Elderly people in general need to be loved and cared for just like other family members. This care and appreciation could and should include taking measures to ensure that their lives are not put in jeopardy, as in the case of the couple you have just read about. The tale of the Savill's all-inclusive tour of the Northeast sector of the U.S. needs to be taken with a dose of concern (however small it is), simply because this type of thing must happen more often than we hear about.

Sadly, it is probably more of an exception that the Savill's case was concluded with no injuries. Many older folks would not have kept the level head and seemingly impossible stamina that Mr. Savill maintained. Not to mention the fact that they must have spent about $2000 in gas money. I'm sure the entire Savill family knows how lucky they are to have gotten their family members back in one piece.

I am not trying to put older people down or make fun of them, but something needs to be done with our licensing requirements in this state and country. This is an issue of public safety, not just one of personal convenience. I aspire to be an old person someday. If all goes well, I will be a healthy and competent old person. Hopefully, I will "know when to say when," when it comes to driving and my ability to do it well.

I would like everyone with elderly family members to call and tell them how much they are appreciated. They deserve it. Then, if you are ever visiting them at home, snatch the keys, make like a duck and get the flock out of there.

Brian Lohnes is a UMass student.

As good as it gets

I wish Bill Clinton would get removed from office. Oh, don't give me that look. You and I both know that it won't happen. Anyway, the reason I want to see him impeached really has nothing to do with Democrats, Republicans or the Constitution. In fact, I'm not even really concerned about the facts of the case.

It's not that I really dislike the guy. I don't even think what he did was that bad. He is, after all, the leader of the free world. Considering he has to decide every day how many Iraqis live and how many die, I am not going to criticize him for having unusual ways of "relieving stress."

No, in the end, those things don't really matter that much to me. I'd like to see Bill Clinton impeached for a couple of reasons different from those put forth by senators and congressmen. First of all, I would like to see what effect having a completely new president would have on us. I mean, does anyone really believe that Bill Clinton is all that different from any other person who might become president? Sure he's in touch with us emotionally, and he has that soft voice and way of looking that makes It seem like he really does care, in a special way, about you. But is he actually any different?

Jason Owens

Other than the feel-good speeches, would life be any different for me if Al Gore was President? I kind of doubt it. Even a Republican wouldn't be changing things all that much, right? Newt Gingrich would what, try to make abortion illegal? Or maybe he would stiffen penalties for crimes I'll never commit? Nope, still not different enough for me or most smart people I know.

Having Newt as president would be annoying and just looking at his face would start to drive us all crazy, but the actual effects on our lives — changes in our jobs, our schooling, housing, what we see every day on television, the way we conduct our everyday lives in any way shape or form — would any of them be different? Oh, I'm sure there would be some small changes (a tax here, a law there), but by and large, things would be pretty much the same.

That would be the first reason I'd like to see Bill go—just to see if anything changes. I would bet that the change in my life would be miniscule, insignificant, and microscopic if he left office. Peter Jennings would be talking about someone else on the news, but it would still have about as much to do with me as anything having to do with our current president. It might be harder to "believe" in our president, but what is "belief?" In the end, it is secondary to the hard facts of life, correct?

Like I said before, there are a of couple of reasons I want to see Bill Clinton impeached. You just read my first one. Here's the second biggest reason for a person to be pro- removal. We all know that what goes on in the lives of Washington politicians is not terribly connected with what is going on in the life of the average person. We worry about paying rent, finding good jobs, avoiding trips to the hospital—things like that. We don't expect much help from the government in our lives.

The average politician worries about which companies are going to donate to his campaign, which ones already have, the wants and needs of those who are going to vote in his district (about what, 30 to 50 percent of the population of that area?), and creative ways to look like he's (it is usually a he) doing a good job. That way he doesn't have to go back to a low--paying, boring job, like the one he had at the law firm.

What I'm saying is that they don't care. If they impeach Clinton, that would prove it. If they would throw Clinton out of office despite his unwavering and enormous popularity, both here and around the world, it would demonstrate in such a clear, uncompromised way how little they really care about what the public thinks. We could all look at the TV and say, "They really did it! I always knew it was all b.s.. They were only pretending to care about what I think, but this really opens my eyes!" They have been absolutely bombarded with a direct order from the American people: leave our president alone! But you get the feeling that if they were just a little more arrogant, just a little more full--of--themselves, they'd go ahead and do it. The majority of the Senate, supposedly our "representatives," is voting for it.

So why do I want to see these things happen? Why would I want to see that it doesn't matter — Republican or Democrat — who is in the White House? Or Congress and the Senate proving to us once-and-for-all that they don't care about our opinions, thoughts or beliefs? What would motivate me to support Clinton's impeachment despite the fact that I believe he's the best out of the select group of men who could be president at this time?

First, it might make people think. You know, if it doesn't matter who's president, and if Congress, comprised only of Republicans and Democrats, doesn't care at all about the opinion of the American people, it should tell you something. It should tell you that there's something wrong with those two political parties. Since those are the only two groups we have in our system, maybe that would tell you something is wrong with the system itself.

Personally, I think that most of us know these facts. We live with them and accept them because our politicians (perhaps even our culture in general), have been presenting a front that says, "Trust us and ignore the inconsistencies because we have the finest standard of living in the world. We are American and life is pretty good!" And we listen to this! We ignore the problems with the facts and details because they are only inconsistencies. Our lives are pretty good and as long as the front is fairly decent, we won't complain.

It has been said that the public is like a sleeping dragon. It is lazy and docile as long as you keep it warm and well- fed. It seems like Washington, right now, is poking a stick into the side of the dragon. It's risky, but we'll probably ignore it. It's not enough to wake us up. But still, it makes you wonder—what if they poked a little harder? If they impeached Clinton, awakened the beast, and showed us enough of the truth to make the dragon angry, what would happen?

I can't speak for anyone else. I like Clinton, but I really have to say that I wouldn't mind seeing him go...just to see what would happen. It might even wake us up just a little.

Jason Owens is a UMass student.

Notes from the C.C. Basement

Picture this: You're young. You're impressionable. You're standing around the school yard with your young, impressionable friends.

The cool kids come by. They're wearing the latest fashions. They're swearing like sailors on shore leave. They're cool. And, they're smoking.

Cool, huh?

So you start smoking too. Now you're cool, right?

Fast forward three decades. You're older. You're not as cool anymore. But you're still smoking.

Not cool anymore. In fact, it's so uncool you've got inoperable cancer because of your 30-plus years of smoking.

So what do you do? What any red-blooded, right-minded American would do these days. You sue. For lots and lots of money.

That's exactly what happened in California. Three-pack-a- dayer Patricia Henley wanted to lay blame for her cancer and Phillip Morris is going to be footing the guilt bill, to the tune of $1.5 million.

Hey, wake up smokers! What you're doing could kill you! Consider yourself warned.

Sure, maybe Henley can (and did) argue that there were no warning labels on cigarettes when she first lit up. She can (and did) argue that tobacco companies knew a lot more about the danger of their wares than they publicized.

Give me a break. They could package cigarettes in boxes with skulls and crossbones on them and smokers would still flock to the gas stations and convenience stores.

But over the last decade, the last 15 years even, more and more has been learned — and publicized — about the harmful effects of smoking. And you know what, Patricia? Quitting 15 or 20 years into the habit may not save you from health problems, but it sure will help your situation.

Henley doesn't deserve Phillip Morris' money. She doesn't even really deserve our sympathy.

* * *

Who the hell drinks Fresca? I just want to know.

* * *

"The shamed man always stuffs his pants." — Fyodor Dostoevsky. Now those, my friends, are words to ponder.

* * *

Forget Valentine's Day, there are only 33 more days until St. Patrick's Day, the holiday that features green rivers, green milkshakes and green beer. I can't wait.

* * *

Swangy.

* * *

You know, about the same time former men's hoop coach John Calipari left campus, the guy who dressed up in a cat mask and stood on the Student Union steps protesting everything about life disappeared too.

Hmm... Coincidence? I think not.

* * *

Talk about tasteless.

The Back Bay Brewing Company, a microbrewery in Boston, is considering changing the name of one of its newest beers. Boston Strangler Stout, a Russian imperial stout, has drawn complaints from many of the brewery's patrons and several relatives of the Boston Strangler's victims.

Boston Strangler Stout is a seasonal beer that won't be available after next week, thereby giving the bar's owners 11 months to consider changing the name.

The company says it names its brews after Boston's famous and infamous historical events and also features Boston Tea Party Porter and Boston Massacre Lager.

* * *

It's all about love. Don't rock the boat, baby.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Remember, you can respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Come down to the Collegian or send an email to: letters@oitunix.oit.umass.edu

Letters must be no more than 400 words and should be single-spaced. Be sure to include your name, address and phone number. The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

Letters to the Editor

Joanie O'Brien wrongfully attacked

To the Editor:

I am writing this in response to an article that ran in The Boston Globe on Feb. 10. To my disappointment, a certain "fan" of UMass women's basketball has started another round of discussion into the behavior of head coach Joanie O'Brien.

As Sports Director of WMUA, I have had the opportunity to broadcast nearly every one of the Minutewomen's games this season and have attended a number of their practices. It is amazing to me that the words "abusive" and "unacceptable behavior" are being thrown at Joanie and her coaching style. The UMass Minutewomen are a Division I basketball squad, playing in one of the toughest conferences in basketball. O'Brien's coaching style is consistent with top-notch programs around the country; she coaches to win and expects 100 percent effort at all times. If she doesn't like what she sees, she lets her players know it.

To quote "the fan,": "Her displays of temper and her public dressing-down of young women is unacceptable behavior..." As a fan of basketball for over 15 years, I know basketball coaches yell. Get over it! They stomp their feet, get into players' faces, and sometimes physically show their players how to play the game they love. This is normal behavior for coaches and if this was a male coach with male players, we wouldn't be having this discussion.

I question Peter May, Boston Globe staff writer, as to why he has let a fan of a college team influence him into the character assassination of Joanie O'Brien on two separate occasions. This is O'Brien's eighth season as head coach of UMass, and only this year, now that players are leaving the team due to broken rules and personal problems, are questions being raised about her coaching style.

This situation is unfair to the basketball program and is not helping anyone. I would also urge any of you planning on handing out leaflets pertaining to this matter to call attention to this situation and re-evaluate your motives. I applaud the UMass Athletic Department and Chancellor Scott for not responding to such hurtful accusations. They know as well as I do that O'Brien is a great coach who cares about her players.

Personally, I would like to find out how people know that Joanie leaves "psychological scars." It's an unfortunate distraction to the season and I urge people to come out to the Mullins Center this Friday and form their own decisions. This season has been full of ups and downs for the team, and I'm sure that Joanie will overcome this and move on to bigger and better things.

Matthew Perrault
WMUA Sports Director

Write for Ed/OP!!!!!!!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Flatkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Presties Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A Clockwork concerto

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

The late British novelist Anthony Burgess, who is best known as the author of A Clockwork Orange and as a master of language, was also a composer of music. The world premiere of Burgess's Concerto for Pianoforte and Orchestra in E-flat will be performed by the Pioneer Valley Symphony, conducted by Paul Phillips, on Saturday, Feb. 13 at 8 p.m. Pianist Gary Steigerwalt, professor of music at Mount Holyoke College, will be the soloist.

The performance will take place in Greenfield High School Auditorium, Greenfield, as part of the symphony's fourth concert this season. In addition to the premiere of Burgess's piece, the works of Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy and Peter Maxwell Davies will also be performed.

Composed in 1976, Burgess's three-movement concerto is said to be, like his writing, ebullient and fascinatingly eclectic. Throughout the work, a wide range of musical styles are exhibited.

The solo portion of the piece features many athletic musical gestures, including black-and-white key glissandos that sweep from one end of the keyboard to the other.

Paul Phillips, music director of the Brown University Orchestra and the Pioneer Valley Symphony, will conduct. In 1997, he presented the first performance of Burgess's Symphony No. 3. Phillips currently is researching a book about Burgess's compositions.

Gary Steigerwalt received his doctorate in music from the Julliard School. A popular artist in the Pioneer Valley, he has lectured and performed nationally and internationally as a soloist and in four-hand concerts with his wife, pianist Dana Muller.

His recordings include the piano concertos of William Schuman and Walter Piston, and solo works of Johannes Brahms and Franz Schubert. Steigerwalt was the first American prize-winner of the Liszt-Bartok International Piano Competition in Budapest.

Composer-author Anthony Burgess was born Feb. 25, 1917 in Harpurhey, England. The son of a bookkeeper and part-time pianist, Burgess attended Manchester University, where he majored in English. He originally wanted to study music, but lacked the science background required by the Music Department.

He served with the British Army for six years, during which time he wrote and arranged many pieces for a dance band. He became a professional writer because there was no money to be made as an amateur musician.

When he died in 1933, Burgess had written well over 140 musical compositions and more than 60 large-scale literary works, the most famous being A Clockwork Orange. The scores to a number of Burgess's compositions have survived, but very few of them were ever performed in his lifetime.

In addition to the concert on Feb. 13, a free lecture/demonstration on the Burgess concerto will be held in the Pratt Hall auditorium at Mount Holyoke College on Friday, Feb. 5 at 4 p.m. The afternoon event, open to the public, will offer a historical perspective on the piano concerto and draw ties between Burgess's music and literature. Conductor Paul Phillips and pianists Gary Steigerwalt and Dana Muller will perform and discuss the work.

At the door, tickets for the performance are $15.00 general, $14.00 seniors, $5.00 children under 18. Advance tickets are $13.00 general, $12.00 for seniors and are available at the Broadside Bookshop in Northampton and For the Record in Amherst or through PVS Box Office at 773-3664 with Mastercard or VISA. Additional information can be obtained by calling 773-3664 or 800-681-7870.

COURTESY ACADEMY OF MUSIC

Sweethearts of Rhythm

On Sunday, Feb. 14, at 2 p.m. the Academy of Music in Northampton will present a special Valentine's Day Concert entitled Sweethearts of Rhythm in collaboration with the Young at Heart Chorus.

A violent way of communicating

COURTESY ANDREW COOPER

Mel Gibson, looking rather intimidating, shakes things up in his new movie Payback.

By Rob Roensch
Collegian Staff

PAYBACK
Directed by Brian Helgeland with Mel Gibson, Maria Bello and Gregg Henry
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

Payback opens with Porter (Mel Gibson), a professional thief, sprawled out on a grimy, back-alley surgeon's table. The surgeon drinks a glass of grimy whiskey, pours some brews after Boston's famous and infamous historical events and also features Boston Tea Party Porter and Boston Massacre Lager over Porter's wounded back, and then digs out two bullets with a whiskey-sterilized scalpel. After this gentle opening, the movie gets violent.

Payback is a movie about violence — about guns and fights and people killing each other. Thankfully, the violence actually serves a purpose deeper than escapist thrills. Violence is simply the way this world works. You get the sense that shooting each other is the only way these characters can communicate.

The continuous stream of violence is only one part of the movie's carefully created bleak world. The photography is particularly distinctive, painting the city in deep greys and dull blues, as if drained of emotion. Through this dead landscape moves Porter, the "hero" whose central characteristic is his ability to focus completely on one objective at the expense of everything else. In this case, all Porter wants is the return of money that was stolen from him—$70,000 to be exact. It's a meager amount in the world of crime movies, where million dollar paydays are common, but the money itself isn't what's important to Porter, it's the principle. All the violence in the movie isn't there for its own sake, but only as a means to an end. Porter's incredible concentration, then, is almost inspiring.

As the lead here, Mel Gibson seems more tired than stubbornly determined, but he's still a strong enough presence to hold center stage. All the men with guns would be little more than statues staring each other down, were it not for the acting of the women. Lucy Liu adds a jolt of energy to the story as a professional dominatrix, and Maria Bello (ex-"F.R.") lends traces of welcome softness and steel to her high-class prostitute role. In particular, Bello provides a human backdrop to contrast with Porter's sub- (or super) human single-mindedness. Why the only interesting roles for women are prostitutes is another matter.

Payback doesn't have the multi-layered soul of Out of Sight or the storytelling virtuosity of Tarantino's recent gangster movies, but it does have satisfying twists, great cinematography, and a crisp screenplay. It sets its goals low, but it hits most of them. The unceasing violence is a bit much, but by the last scene, Porter wants to get away from it as much as the audience does. That has to be worth something. B

Write for Arts & Living!

There's a whole world out there!
Explore it with Contiki-
The #1 tour for 18-35 year olds
Cheap tickets, great advice
Nice people

Boston/Sydney	$1407
Boston/Nairobi	$955
Newark/Quito	$290
New York/San Juan	$255
Boston/Paris	$344

Council Travel
Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone: 413-256-1261

www.daily-collegian.com

RUTGERS NEW BRUNSWICK
1999 SUMMER Session

Registration begins February 22
June 1-July 8
June 28-August 5
July 12-August 18

Three six-week sessions
A variety of 3, 4 and 8 week courses
Undergraduate/Graduate courses
Day, Evening and Saturday A.M. classes available

For a 1999 Summer Session Catalog, including registration procedures and form, phone (732) 932-7565.
Outside the 732 area code call
1-800-HI-RUTGERS or 1-888-4RU-SUMMER, or e-mail your request to: catalog@rci.rutgers.edu

THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW JERSEY RUTGERS
Division of Summer Session
191 College Ave. • New Brunswick, NJ 08901-8546
web site: http://www.summersession.rutgers.edu

Always in Bloom
Valentine's Day!
February 14th
Roses, Dutch & Exotic Bouquets
Local Special
Hugs & Kisses
Kisses: Cuddly Soft Bear, Red Rose & Balloon $25.00
Hugs: Bud Vase Bear with Red Rose $17.50
Uncompromising Quality, Selection, Presentation & Service
220 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
253-5545
We Deliver Anywhere!

What's Left

SALE!

up to 75% off Winter

ZAMA

downtown Amherst

Q: Looking for a Valentine Gift?

A: August the First

♥ Silver Jewerly
♥ Candles & incense
♥ Clocks
♥ Pottery
♥ Picture Frames
♥ Cards ♥ Journals ♥ Stationary

197 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-0276

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market
Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537

Follow Your Heart To Atkins Farms

You'll Find Valentines Gifts in Every Department.

Sweets for your Sweet,
Chocolates, Fudge, Truffles & Specialty Valentine Baskets

Cookies for your Cookie,
Heart Shaped Cakes & Cookies
Cookie Trays & Valentine Cupcakes.

Blossoms for your Blossom,
Roses, Bud vases, Arrangements & Mixed Bouquets

We deliver to the surrounding area or can wire-out flowers.

Valentine
Great Gifts

Hats Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves Bags
RINGS Blouses Skirts Dresses GLOVES

Cards Earrings Bracelets Candles T-Shirts India Print Bedspreads
Incense Toys Chains Mugs

Sweaters Cards Area Rugs Dresses
Chinese Shoes Posters

Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing

The Mercantile
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-108 Main St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

Valentine's Day

Collegian Classifieds...

Making Your Valentine Feel Special

'99

All the love to Bob's Unit from the ex-Hobart girls!!
I love you guys. AJ, Matumba, Jewel
Love, Ziggy

Poindexter,
I'll never let anybody talk smack about you either!
Yours until the next revolution.
Your boy, Fyodor

To the bridgekeeper,
May all the lundergagel girls come down and visit you under the bridge
For they never go down at any other time.
-PrimeTime

Sol and Lan,
Happy Valentine's Dey
Love Xena the Warrior Princess

Korrine,
You're my love and my all. Happy V-Day
Love, Justin

Lorraine and Beth-
Thanx for makin' time at the motel so fun!
Love ya!

Jun-
You perfuse my heart.
Love, Will

Lo-Gong,
How you've changed my world you'll never know. I'm different now, you've helped me grow. The joy I feel when you are near, the lonesiness when you're not here. May these words somehow impart, the loving feelings in my heart.
Love, Lo-Paw

Dear Mayra
If you never knew what you mean to me. There is no one else who does it quite like you. You could spend half a lifetime trying to find someone that is why I'm glad I found you. You are more than a woman, a goddess for all it seems. I love you always and forever.
Love Kassan 11/08/95

Happy Valentine's Day Marcela
Love,Kassan

Happy Valentine's Day.
To the girls at Salem Place Katie Kerry Ayanna
Love Kassan

To my Love Sandy
Thanks for all the fun times and great m e m o r i e s
I Love You Very Much
Mike

To my favorite madscientist on campus
All my love today and everyday Happy Valentine's Day Sweetheart
Love,
Mer

Dear 37 Phillips St.
No amount of mac'ncheese could say how terrific you guys are! Happy Valentines Day!
Love, Julie

Dear Collegian Lovelies
Thanks for being so damn loveable
Happy V-Day!
Love, Julie

My dear Brenda, there's more to us than Marx and mischief. I'll miss you so much when we graduate, you are my closest friend. I wish you romance on Valentine's Day. Love, Tanya (& Ig)

Choo
If you can read this, then you know exactly how much I adore you!
I love you always!
Lex
xo

To Emily, Thank-you for taking such good care of me y dad.
Love, Weazy

Freulavin— You can wriggle-wiggle with me anytime! Happy First Kiss! Love You! SBY

Happy Valentine's Day Jessie
You silly bitch
I Love You

Mike,
No matter what pushpin you're at, I'll always be thinking of you.
Kobo

Sarah, I had to cheat a little. Be my Valentine? B Boop

Dear Mr. Horne,
The love that we possess is nothin the world can take away. You mean plenty to me. I love you. Happy Valentine's Day -- Claudette

Kon Tiki, come island hop the Caribbean with me on my private ship. Captain Morgan

Happy Valentine's Day Wesley!
Everything will turn out for the best (thoughts of yours truely will make things even better!!)
-DY

Dear Nikki I Hope our love never ends
Love hernan

Dear Bryson, I'm sorry for everything. I still love you with all my heart. Please forgive me and make a brand new start. Love, Sonny

Karina, 3 months to 3 years is not long enough. love you. Brian

To Driscom:
What's you sign, baby?
Love,
Silly

To Colleen Deg
Is you father a thief? I was wondering who stole the stars from the sky and put them in your eyes.
-Your Secret Admirer

Happy Valentine's Day Mindy I wish you were here n New Orleenes with me. Don't worry I'm behaving most of the time. I'm so lucky to have a girlfriend as sweet as you. I'll see you in a few days.
Love,
Brian

To My Brian
I am the luckiest girl in the world to be able to share such a special day with someone as special as you I LOVE YOU

Reptar
Happy Valentine's Day TD you! What do YOU feel like doing?
Love,
Your Princess

Happy Valentine's Day Melissa
I love you too much - Marc

Ode to my Muffin
Wholesome goodness and nutty too. Filled with the sweetest stuff. You always know how to make me smile. You are the GREATEST MEGGIE MUFFS.
HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY LOVE.
LITTLE d

Dear Christine,
Happy Valentines Day. To my Bride to be Love Always
Adam

Garrett,
I am so happy you're here! Will you be my Valentine?
Love Always Me

Loa Yee'
I truly appreciate everything you did for me. You are the best thing in my life. I hope we can stay together forever.
Love ya
Xue Er

MP,
Thanks for the support!
Love, Joanie
P.S.- Keep all your cars revved and ready!
P.P.S- And if you see this I think you've got the notion!

Roth William Lanpheer-
More than words can ever say and more than you will ever know - I love you.
Love always, Erin

Stouty,
Elephant juice.
Love, Supping

V-Day #2 and my love for you is forever true.
-Love Blue

Justin,
"You are the sunshine of my Life"
Thanks for keeping me! I love you!
Love always,Jenise

To the Best Man: Love is not necessary to life, but it's what makes life worth living. Love, ME

Tiago I love you Big Bro! Mey your 22nd Birthday and Valentine's be superb! What will I do without you next year? Party! Woohoo!
Love,
Your Lil Sis
Terese

Michael,
I love you, sweetheart
Kristen

Mike Happy Valentine's Day. Your my best friend and I love you so much baby. Love Always, Your Little Peanut.

Kiki: Happy V-Day. Thanks for being the ying to my yang. Love you—Faggot p.s - Happy birthday

To Davey K
My love for you is on tenure track. You can't revoke my love like you revoked housing vouchers.
Love, Darling

For Sale: broken heart, one year old must sell soon

128.119.717.177- everytime I see you my CPU overheats and my buffer overflows...you can crash my hard drive any time - 128.119.717.72(Kermet)

Booger
Happy Valentine's Day Honey. A day without you is like a day without rain. I love you forever.
Love always
Me
xoxoxo

To the SGA
Ruthly my heart you wacky bastards!
Mike M

Stephen-
Roses are red, violets are blue, I can't wait till we say "I Do" I love you always and forever
Love,
Lindsay

My little tenderloin,
I love you best. Happy Valentine's Day
Love, Little Pig

Roses are red, violets are blue. I really don't love computers more than you.
To PYARI PAPI, with sweet Love
oh. oh.

Happy Valentine's Day to the coolest Ladies on campus, fourth floor Webster!!
-from Your Radude

Who's my baby? Christine's my baby! Bedead let's make this Valentine's Day better than last.
Tons of Hugs and Kisses 4 u
Love, Your Brien
p.s. The moose is going to squeeze your guts out

Jane-Jane
I fell in love with you in high school. Who whould have ever thought that 25 years later I would still feel the same. Now that I am finally with you all I can say is..it was worth the wait.
I Love You!
Me

To the lovely ladies of the MVA. Have the very best Valentine's Day because your ours when Spring Break come.
Love TPC

Dear Last Year's Special Someone, please be mine again. It gets lonely out here in the woods. -JL

Dear JL,
please don't bother me. I've been trying very hard to forget. -SS

Jen,
We've had Paris and the Eiffel Tower, movies and quiet nights by the fire. We've had picnics on islands and hours on beaches. Thank you for those and the countless others. But thank you most of all for loving me
Love,
Doug

Rena my Futuristic Sex Kitten
Happy Valentinas Day Tap Dat A
MG and remember keep squeezin yo buttcheeks! Love Ofay AKA Gdogg

To my Mom
I love you Happy Valentine's Day I hope to see you soon Thanks for being such a great Mom For Valentine's Day I'll take the kind that jingles but I'd prefer the kind that folds. Love you Little Guy Happy Valentin's Day, Josh

Jessica Karen Jen & Alpert, I hope Valentin's Day brings you a hot guy, a copy of my Al Green, and a cheap motel room Love Ddogg oh yeah! Meana I love most of all the lighting in my room is being adjusted as we speak for that little movie we gonna make. I got the Boogie Nights Soundtrack all set so give me a call after classes Love Josh

Hey Audrey Bell you sexy little bunny Happy V-Day If Jeff's not around later I am gonna come over we gonna pop in the Al Green and lets get it on! Uh Na Na Na Na! Love Ddogg

Megan, Two great years since the operation. Friendly's? I think not Happy Valentine's Day. I Love you.
Love Always, John

A.J
Happy Valentine's Day! Good Luck tomorrow- don't bruise your bum. Love you lots, Allison

To my Hot Sexy Stud Muffing
Kassan Happy V-Day From your Spicy Girlfriend

Will you be our Valentine
Jackie L?
From your Secret Admirers

Erin, Thanks again for you loving support. You are such a great part of my life and I want you to know I will always be there for you! Happy Valentine's Day
Love,
Jason

Sha Ney Ney,
Happy Anniversery
Happy V-Day and get ready for the weekend
Your my love Juan Pablo

Neyia
I can't weit to sneak into bed and give you Big wet kisses
Your Hairy Lover ACE

Phil
I love you Love, Deb

SUBWAY

Taipei & Tokyo

ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1995
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1996
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1997
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1998

Chinese & Japanese Restaurant
Sushi Bar • Luncheon Specials • Dine In or Take Out

(413) 582-1888
OPEN 7 DAYS
18 Main Street • Northampton MA

Lonely Parts Club
BECK-ASHLEY WORLDWIDE

Finding a Part-ner is easy at...

PELHAM AUTO PARTS
RT 9 AMHERST
BELCHERTOWN LINE
256-0457

Saucy Suzuki Samari - New to area - seeking non smoking muffler assembly to mate with existing pipes. Long term commitment desired...must be willing to pass inspection several times. 726-vhm

TIRED but willing to go another 150K! Red GTI is overbored and waiting for that special piston. Give me a ring! 838-TSI

Don't be fuel-ish! Newer (low 30's) style Camry seeks to climb hills with fresh electric pump. Please - no "universal" types! 598-ABJ

Petite, Low mileage Sprint - seeks discrete filter changes at regular intervals. Light viscosity only. 242-PTG

Too Hot to BELIEVE! Middle aged Honda hits 280º day or night! Seeking a thermally responsive individual about 160º to control my steamy personality. 145-SCH

TIRED of rock and roll? Join me for a Dutch treat shocks and struts - (Maybe eventually 4 wheel alignment together?) 518-SJJ

$1 Sushi
ROCK & ROLL
10:30 - 2:30
Fri-Sat
Nites

Healthy Choice

ICHIBAN いちばん

Authentic Japanese Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, off Main St.)

#1 Sushi
Daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice. Stay healthy & live longer!
"This one is what everyone falls in love with"

#1 Tatami Room
• Cozy and Private
• Parties available up to 25 people
• Tradtional Japenese Style

10% OFF Dinner w/ Student ID expires 3/31/99

SPECIAL CATEGORY
Exceptional Catering Service
Sushi chef works at your party
Lunch Specials $4.95 and up reserve for karaoke

Birthday Party:
Chef's Free Meal
4 person table
no extra charge

Big Y has Gifts from the Heart

Big Y
We've Got It All!

175 University Dr., Amherst

UMass women's tennis faces Yale & Princeton

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The women's tennis team heads to the Ivy for a pair of crucial contests in the East.

By Matt O'Neill
Collegian Correspondent

This weekend, the Massachusetts women's tennis team will take on two regionally-ranked teams. Both Princeton and Yale are currently ranked in the top 15 in the East.

The Minutewomen (8–2) will play at Yale, currently ranked sixth, today at 2:30 p.m. The team will then travel to Princeton and take on the No. 10 Tigers tomorrow at 11 a.m.

These matches come in the middle of the toughest part of the season, according to head coach Judy Dixon.

"This is the three or four week period where we play the cream of the crop," Dixon said. "Our tough preseason is meant to prepare us for the Atlantic 10."

Playing ranked teams in the pre season will help Dixon's young team mature and prepare for the rest of the year.

"We have a young team. There are three freshman in our top six," Dixon said.

While her team is loaded with youth and inexperience, Dixon still feels that this is one of the best teams in a long time.

"This the best team we have put together," Dixon said. "What separates us from teams like Yale and Princeton is not athletic talent, but the ability to compete. We need to go out there and compete, not just play this weekend."

One of Dixon's growing concerns is the team's tough schedule, coupled by the sicknesses the members have been fighting off.

"My number one, Ola [Gerasimova] is sick, but she will still play," Dixon said. "I told her that I needed a good No. 1 this weekend and to give me what she could."

Dixon is not only looking for victories this weekend, she would also like to see improving individual efforts from her team.

"Against Yale and Princeton, I would like to see strong individual effort from the lower half of the line-up," Dixon said.

Along with being ranked teams, both Yale and Princeton have individual players ranked in the top 25. Yale team members ranked in the top 25 singles are Somer Khanlarian (No. 23) and Sara Naison-Phillips (tied for No. 25). The Tigers also have two players individually ranked. Their No. 1 singles player, Blair Farr is ranked No. 21 in the East, while their No. 2 singles player Jyotsana Vasisht is tied for the 25th ranking.

The immediate goal for the team is to get a couple of wins. The overall goal is much larger for coach Dixon's squad.

"Our season's goal is to come in second in the Atlantic 10 and to knock off a couple of nationally ranked teams in the process," Dixon said.

Getting a victory this weekend will help propel the team to those goals.

UM men's tennis to face Brown

By Seth Szilagyi & James Piehl
Collegian Correspondents

Today at 4 p.m. in Providence, R.I. the stage is set, the gloves are off, the gauntlet is down, and UMass men's tennis is ready for a fight. At the Cornell Invitational, they proved their ability to perform well against tough opponents. Now they face an even tougher challenge against the Ivy League big boys of Brown.

The Brown match will set the tone for the rest of the tennis season for the Minutemen. Brown is the No. 11 seed in the Eastern Division of the NCAA and this is the first time the men's tennis program has faced an Ivy League team in head-to-head competition during coach Judy Dixon's seven-year career. A victory would show that UMass is capable of upsetting an eastern powerhouse and would be a certain confidence-builder for the up-and-coming tennis program.

"I have a firm belief that we have a legitimate shot at beating them [Brown]," Dixon said.

Also in favor of the Minutemen is the transfer of Brown's No. 1 man to Cornell. The UMass team is currently unranked, but a win could catapult them into the top 15 of the Eastern Division. The squad will also play two other top-ranked teams before the season is over.

"This will give us an idea if we can perform at the next level of play," said Dixon of the matchups.

The muscle of the team comes from the often-overlooked men's doubles squad. Three teams are set to compete in the doubles bracket and a majority win would put UMass ahead going into the singles competition, where they would have to split the results, winning three of six matches.

"We have strong doubles teams, which we proved at Cornell. I was encouraged by our talent and competitiveness," Dixon said of her doubles squads.

Although very talented, the Minutemen prefer an underdog status. Sports teams often thrive off of this type of element, which gives them something to prove.

Currently the men's team is 0–0 in the spring, and 4–3 overall. The No. 1 doubles team to face Brown is that of Steve Prisco and Rob Manchester. They will have to set the tone for the matchup, while No. 2 Todd Chaney and Bo Navarro, and No. 3 Josh Bainton and Todd Champeau, must come up big for the Minutemen.

As for the singles competition, UMass will have standout freshman transfer Steve Prisco at No. 1, Bo Navarro will be No. 2 for this competition, moving Rob Manchester to the three spot, Chaney, Fabian Rabanal and Parsa Samii will round off the singles at Nos. 4, 5 and 6 respectively.

"There isn't a position we can't compete at," said Dixon, explaining the talent of her team. "Everyone needs to play."

After the Brown matchup the Minutemen rest up until Feb. 20, when they face Army at 9 a.m. and Stonybrook at 12:30 p.m.

Minutemen Notes: Prisco and Rob Manchester acquired big wins in last weekends matches at the Cornell Invitational. Prisco advanced to the Flight A semifinals and then teamed up with Manchester to win the Flight A doubles title 8–6.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The men's tennis team gets set to challenge at the net against nationally-ranked Brown.

Andrea Comeau named Atlantic 10 performer of the Week after URI meet

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

For her performance at a quad meet held at Rhode Island, junior Andrea Comeau was named Atlantic 10 Performer of the Week by the league office.

Comeau helped lead the Minutewomen to a second-place finish in the meet that hosted the University of Rhode Island, Rider University, Holy Cross, as well as the Minutewomen.

Comeau set the school record in the long jump with a leap of 5'10.5", bettering a mark that she set earlier in the season (5'9.25"). Her jump was enough to qualify her for the New England Championships, the ECAC Championships and the NCAA Championships. She also placed second in the 55- meter-high hurdles with a time of 8.38 seconds.

The junior ranks among the top UMass athletes in the 55-meter–high hurdles, 500-meters, 800-meters, high jump, long jump and shot put, and is the school record-holder in the pentathlon. With her statistics, she is among the top performers in the Atlantic 10 in the 55-hurdles, 500-meters, high jump and long jump.

Comeau has been an outstanding performer all year for the Minutewomen, leading the squad to a 3–1 mark this season.

The Collegian says: Happy Valentine's Day!!

■ HOOP

continued from page 12

confidence for the rest of the year."

After tonight's matchup, UMass will prepare for Duquesne on Sunday at the Mullins Center. The Dukes are a competitive team, but will not likely pose as serious a challenge as the Hokies. This weekend's lineup of opponents is set up in the opposite format of last week's tasks at hand.

In Philadelphia, UMass first defeated Temple, a squad they had punished 71–43 earlier before meeting its match in St. Joe's.

O'Brien, for one, feels that it is to her team's advantage that they attempt to tackle Tech first, before playing the Dukes.

"Clearly we will have all of our energy for Virginia Tech tonight," O'Brien said. "While we won't overlook Duquesne, it is very important that we beat a team at Virginia Tech's level."

The Dukes is certainly not a team to be overlooked, as they are above .500 at 12–10 overall, with a 5–7 mark in the A–10.

Unfortunately for Duquesne coach Dan Durkin and his troops, the team will be without the services of its top-scorer in guard LynnDee Howell.

Howell, who was averaging 17.8 points per contest, recently suffered a broken clavicle, and is out indefinitely.

The Dukes' second leading scorer is senior forward Kelly Eberhardt, who has posted 14.7 points per game.

Minutewomen Notes: Injury report on senior center Yolanda Rayside is not encouraging... Despite hopes she might return from a separated shoulder for the A–10 tournament, O'Brien now sees that as an unlikelihood.

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game& System Rentals
2 movies $2 w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent Video Games
Best Selection in Town
9 E.Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst • 549-4505

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1997
Rte. 5 & 10 Whately, MA 413-665-8733
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1998
AMATEUR NIGHT
$$$ BEAUTIFUL GIRLS, need money? $$$
No experience? No transportation? We will provide everything!
Call (413) 665-8733 - Ask for Jim

MARDI GRAS FESTIVAL
"Turn up the Heat"
Beach Theme
Sponsored by the Newman Student Association
Come
The Newman Club Social Hall
Tuesday - February 16th
8 p.m. - midnight
Free Admission Food and Beverage
3 Live Bands
1. Waterpistol
2. Hayu Tu
3. Uncle Traveling Matt
Come dressed in your Best Beach Attire, whatever it might be
The Best Male and Female attire will win $50 CASH.
Come join in the fun, go for a swim in the pools
Win Great Prizes
Newman Center · 472 North Pleasant Street 413-549-0300

Goten OF JAPAN
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
Valentine's Day Special
Two for $28.00
Tuesday - Sunday Tues., Wed., Thurs., Fri. and Sat. 5:00 til close Sunday 12:00 til close Steak
Chicken
Shrimp
Scallop
Please call for reservation today! 413-665-3628
Your choice any two!
Happy Holidays!!
Rt. 116 - Sunderland (413) 665-3628

Child Care Needed
Reliable, non-smoking, articulate person needed to care for our 4 year old boy in our Amherst home.
- 4 afternoons per week, 2:00 - 6:00 PM
- Must have own transportation
- Prefer someone who will be in area during summer
- $7.25 per hour to start; $8.25 per hour after 3 months
Call Kathy at 549-4242 to arrange interview

SPRING BREAK
CANCUN NASSAU
150% PRICE PROTECTION
32 hrs Drinks 14 FREE Meals
Space is limited, Restrictions & Cancellation Penalties Apply; Please call for details or Stop in our Office at 930 Commonwealth Ave
800-838-6411 www.classtravel.com

UMass skiing to compete in NH

By Adam White
Collegian Correspondent

In practically any other athletic competition, home-field advantage is something that is taken very seriously. That outlook can change drastically, however, when your home "field" is a mountain.

When the UMass men's and women's ski teams hit the slopes of Charlemont this weekend as visitors to the Smith College Tournament, they will be racing on familiar ground. Not only do both UMass teams practice at Charlemont's Berkshire East, but both have enjoyed great success competing there this season.

As the home team:

Not that the mountain has proved overly challenging to this year's squads. Having honed their skills at Berkshire East throughout the preseason, UMass opened its 1999 schedule by hosting January's Winter Carnival Tournament there. Both the men and women cruised to fourth place team finishes in the giant slalom at that tourney, with freshmen Lauren Brodey and Ken Thoman finishing 11th and 15th, respectively.

The Minutemen also captured fourth as a team in the slalom race, paced by senior captain Thomas Holden's second place run. Thoman again displayed skills that transcend his experience, finishing third behind teammate Holden.

The benefits of the teams' youth and enthusiasm have blossomed with the progression of the season. Last weekend's Boston College Tournament in Vermont was a showcase for several young stars, most notably freshman Tina King of Easthampton. The graduate of Holyoke Catholic won the giant slalom and placed third in the slalom at Ascutney, cementing her place among the prodigies of UMass skiing.

Fellow first-year competitor Ericka Olson has also turned heads all season, highlighted by an 11th place run in the GS at Plymouth State's Waterville Valley Tournament in January.

Yet the youthful phenoms have not been confined to the women's team. Rich Granger of Princeton and St. John's High leads a crew of no less than six highly-touted freshman prospects on the men's squad. Granger's consistent intensity has made him a force in both the slalom and GS, where he hopes to finish among the fastest 15 for the third straight week.

Along with Granger and Thoman, fellow newcomer Chris Pomeroy has stepped up as an impact racer, with several top–50 finishes this season.

With so many thrilling young competitors tearing up the gates for UMass this season, it seems possible that some more experienced skiers might slip unnoticed into the background. Yet that is not the case on the UMass ski teams. These veteran racers will simply not be denied.

Senior captains Holden and Katie Keane have combined talent, effort and perseverance in providing the strongest of influences over the young stars of their respective teams.

Holden, a three–time Academic All–American has consistently wiped out his competition, blazing to a top–three finish in every tournament this season. His personal best came during the Brown/UConn Tournament at Loon Mountain in New Hampshire, when he added a 12th place GS run to a fiery third in the slalom. Along with spreading his desire for success to the less–experienced racers on the team, Holden has managed to keep his eyes on the golden ring at season's end.

"I want our team to get to nationals," says Holden, who chalked up a sixth–place slalom finish at last year's USCSA National Tournament. "We have a very young...fiery group of kids...that will turn into something positive."

Keane's story is one of determination. When injuries she sustained in a nasty preseason fall quelled her chances of competing last season, the senior from Acton committed herself to returning to top form in '99. While knee surgery and its subsequent rehabilitation can often cause irreparable damage to a skier's form, Keane actually came back stronger this season. She also enjoyed her top seasonal finish at Loon, pacing the Minutewomen with a fifth place slalom run. And while her individual triumphs on the slopes have undoubtedly boosted the team's overall success, her value as a model teammate is immeasurable.

"Seeing Katie work so hard off of knee surgery inspires me to work hard to achieve what she has accomplished," says Brodey, who has also contended with knee problems throughout her solid freshman season.

Coach Bill MacConnell laid it all on the line to his troops before the season: "College ski–racing is a team sport. If you cannot put the...success of the team above your personal... success, then team skiing is not for you."

Judging by the phenomenal seasons of both the individuals and their teams, UMass skiing has seized an advantage over its competition. Even when they're not the home team.

■ Basit

continued from page 12

more debatable.

After Keiner graduates this year, Basit would have been the logical choice to supplant him as starting center, at least until Rhymer proved to be more qualified for the job.

Not only will that not happen now, but the Minutemen will be forced to attempt extending their season with post– men who clearly do not have the scoring ability or experience that Basit now possesses.

Flint insists that he did not even consider Basit's value to the team in regards to basketball when he made this fateful decision. That would lead one to believe that this move was made out of virtual necessity.

Knowing Flint, this writer would highly doubt that the coach would act in an arbitrary manner without realizing the ramifications of his actions, as he always has gone out of his way to maintain positive relationships with his players.

At the same time, if Flint were to consider the basketball aspect of banishing Basit, he would realize that other than Rafael Cruz and Rhyner, no bench player has given him any sign of being a factor on offense, a category this team is lacking in.

In closing, this piece is not to accuse either Flint or Basit of any personal wrongdoing, other than the fact that they could not get along because they never saw eye–to–eye.

It is also to say that Basit will be missed by some supporters of the program, because of the fearless and unrestricted emotion that he brought onto the court. These assets may be fully appreciated somewhere down the line.

Sanford Appell is a Collegian columnist.

League follows Vikings model in free agent market

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

The Minnesota Vikings conquered free agency last season by signing all their high-priced, high-quality players. Now they'll have to do it again.

As the free agent signing and trading period begins today, the Vikings, who finished 15-1 before being upset by Atlanta in the NFC championship game, have seven starters who are unrestricted free agents and not a lot of money with which to work.

That's because most of it went last season to defensive tackle John Randle, offensive tackle Todd Steussie, running back Robert Smith and wide receiver Jake Reed, to whom the team committed $95 million. They've since re-signed quarterback Randall Cunningham and offensive tackle Korey Stringer, who could have become free agents this year.

Women's gymnastics set for first bout with Yale

By Matt Melo
Collegian Correspondent

For the fourth time in almost two weeks, Dave Kuzara and the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team (3–2 overall, 3–0 Atlantic 10) will be packing their bags, this time for a non-conference date with the Lady Bulldogs of Yale (4–2 overall, 0–0 Ivy).

Tomorrow afternoon's tilt with Yale completes a long four–meet road trip for the Minutewomen who have compiled a 2–1 record along the way. The momentum was provided by a two–meet winning streak that included tough back–to–back road wins against George Washington and most recently Temple.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Mandy Mosby

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jobi Goldberg

The road hasn't seemed like such an awful place for the youthful contingent of the women's gymnastics team of late. Huge contributions have been made by the likes of sophomores Jobi Goldberg and Mary Moore. Along with freshman Tracy Chow, the trio captured the top three overall spots in the previous meet against Temple. Other crucial performances have been put in by senior Michelle LoPresti and another promising sophounore, Kyla Palombini.

The Lady Bulldogs are also coming off of a victory of their own in a tri–meet win over MIT and Bridgeport. Yale was lead by the tandem of Betty Ky and Katie Kleiner. Ky had a spectacular outing, scoring a career–high in the floor routine with a lofty 9.775. Kleiner led all of Yale gymnasts with a score of 36.475 all–around. The Yale squad has a number of athletes who can post nines in almost any event. The floor event seems to be Yale's strongest with five women scoring a 9.4 or above against MIT and Bridgeport.

Sarah Van Wart and Lisa Crowley are also catalysts for this Yale team, which is eager to match up with the Minutewomen this weekend.

Approaching the midway point in a compact schedule makes every meet just as important as the next. The Minutewomen can't afford to look ahead either to the second in a two–part installment of Yale vs. UMass, which returns to the Curry Hicks Cage on March 6, or to the perils that lay ahead next week with a much needed home meet against a top notch Alabama. Alabama has consistently been nationally–ranked all year, and will provide some stiff competition for the UMass women.

Judging from past performances of this tested gymnastics team, it does not have too many problems with adversity. A win over Yale tomorrow could launch the team into the second half of the season with plenty of confidence to battle some of the dominant teams in the land — and being at home wouldn't hurt too much either.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Michelle LoPresti will need another stellar performance in order to help the Minutewomen up–end Yale in this weekend's contest.

WE LOVE COLLEGIAN SPORTS, HAPPY VALENTINES DAY

BUCCI HAIRCUTS $10. 25 n pleasant st amherst 256 0733 145 main st northampton 586 0158

Winter Special
Domino's Pizza
Buy Any Pizza...
Get One For 99¢
PICKUP OR DELIVERY!
AMHERST • 256-8911 EASTHAMPTON • 527-0821

Support your Umass hockey team this weekend when they tackle Northeastern at the Mullins Sat at 7pm

BURTON SESSIONS AIRWALK LAMAR ARNETTE OAKLEY K2
Snow / Skate
Up to 50% off Burton and Sessions Jackets and Sweaters
20% TO 50% off ALL SNOWBOARD EQUIPMENT
CHILLS at 32 Main Street • Northampton MA • 584-3620
M-W 9:30-5:30, Thurs. & Fri. 9:30-8:30, Sat. 10-6

GRE your №2 days are numbered
Taking the GRE? You'd better start exercising your mouse finger. Because April 10th is the last time you can take the GRE on paper with a pencil.
Got the point?
Both the computerized GRE and the Paper & Pencil format have advantages. We've got all the tools to help you decide which is right for you.
Call us at 800.2.REVIEW We'll help you sharpen up
800.2.REVIEW www.review.com
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

DELI CLERKS
Immediate openings for weekday and weekend shifts at our Hadley Cumberland Farms/Summit Subs. We offer steady employment, competative wages, 90 day pay increase and benefits. Apply in person or call 1-800-828-0869 x-7922

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550 Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 • 586-9353 Mt. Farms Mall
Thanks to all our Loyal Patrons for 20 Great Years!
We'll be changing the way you see movies with....
16 NEW SCREENS
Fall '99

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Live @ The Hadley Pub "Sugar Maple Voodoo" Local Amherst Blues-Rock Three sets 21+ Wednesday Feb.17,1999 10PM Contact Alex@546-1755 for info

FUNK CLUB AUDITIONS! Hip hop dancers wanted. Sat Feb.20, 12 to 5 pm. Boyden 237. Callbacks, Sun Feb. 21 Questions? Call Charlene 6-5590 or Amelia 665-8649

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Pufton Village partially furnished available immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment Sunderland. Available now, February Free Call 577-0375

AUTO FOR SALE

85 Jeep CJ7, 4-cyl, 4-spd, 73k miles, Hunter Green, soft top, New Alpine stero, Rims, 31" tires, Call Matt 253-9170

1990 Vw Jetta Silver good running condition. 128,000 miles. $1600.00 Call 256-8634 - 256-0222

FOR SALE'89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag. black $3500 584-6090

'95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer. 546-5366

COMPUTERS

AST 133 MHz pentium with 16GB, windows 95, Netscape, microsoft word, Lotus Applications, plus more. $700.00 or B/O. Call Noah 546-2147 Free delivery within UMass or nearby Amherst area!

Packard Bell 8kspeecdCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

Co-Managers Wanted Campus Design & Copy is seeking highly motivated students for Co-Manager positions in a student-run collective. Applications available at CD&C,2nd floor Student Union Application Deadline Feb 16

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smart-bot.net 770-937-6764Campus Interviews March 5th. Call 1-800-279-3019 or e-mail: camp-wayneg@aol.com

Sbarro's Restaurant at Hampshire Mall needs closers. Flexible hours Good pay Apply in person

HEY YOU - Got something to say ??? Why not put it in writting !!!

EMPLOYMENT

EARN EXTRA CASH!!! MAKE YOU OWN HOURS!! RESPONSIBLE STUDENTS TO MARKET/MANAGE CITIBANK PROMOTIONS ON CAMPUS. FREE GIVEAWAYS! EARN $400+/WEEK. CALL JOANN AT 1-800-950-8472 EXT.117

Camp Wayne for Girls-sister half of brother/sister private camp in Northeastern Pennsylvania (3hrs from New York City) 6/22- 8/20/99. If you love children and want a caring, fun environment we are looking to hire staff for: Tennis, Golf, Gymnastics, Swimming (W.S.I. preferred), Sailing, Waterskiing, Piano, Basketball, Softball, Volleyball, Soccer, Self-Defense, Low Ropes, Drama Director, Drawing and Painting, Ceramics, Photography, Jewelry, Linoleum Cuts, Batik, Calligraphy, Sculpture, Guitar, Silk-Screening, Cheerleading, Aerobics, Video, Group Leaders, Drivers, Housekeeping, Night Watchperson, Kitchen/Salad.

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99? College Pro, a $25 millinon company, seeks hightly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goalorienter leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the sutomated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us howl 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

HEALTH & BEAUTY

AMAZING METABOLISM BREAKTHROUGH Lose 10-200 lbs. Natural,safe,easy. Free samples call 877-792-1234

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

LOST & FOUND

Found in Upper Central Necklace Describe and Receive 6-3690

Found orange locker key 546-1257

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

1/2 of House to Rent $300.00 per month or 20hrs of Babysitting or 20hrs of maintenance Native Russian speaker preferred. Maria 323-8949

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

TRAVEL

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $835. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplash-tours.com

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 ww.classtravel.com SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter- Campus 800-327-6013

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

Roses Are Red ,

Violets Are Blue.

Here Is A Greeting From The Classifieds To You

Happy Valentine's Day

To You and Yours !

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, FEB. 12

Hypnotist — Something Every Friday presents hypnotist/comedian Jim Sprimato at the Bluewall Café at 8 p.m. The movie Anz will follow.

Lecture — As part of the Geoscience Lecture Series, a lecture entitled "Progress Towards and Understanding of the Origin of the Earth's Magnetic Field" will take place at 3:30 p.m. in Morrill II South, room 136. A reception will follow.

Production — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of My Sister (in this House, about two sisters who brutally murdered their employer and daughter, will be held in Kirby Theater at Amherst College at 8 p.m. Reservations are suggested; call 542-2277

SATURDAY, FEB. 13

Celebration — There will be a celebration of Black History Month at 2:30 p.m. in the Jones Library in Amherst. A documentary on African-Americans in World War II will be shown, followed by a presentation of dancing.

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable, the UMass improvisational troupe, will perform in room 163 of the Campai Center at 8 p.m.

Production — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of My Sister (in this House, about two sisters who brutally murdered their employer and daughter, will be held in Kirby Theater at Amherst College at 8 p.m. Reservations are suggested; call 542-2277

MONDAY, FEB. 15

Music — The Old Ship of Zion, the magnificent sixty- voice freedom choir of Springfield, will give a musical tour of African-American gospel music development from the mid 1700s to the present at 8 p.m. in the Abbey Memorial Chapel at Mount Holyoke College.

Talk — Martha Saxton will give a works-in-progress talk entitled "Gender, Class, and Pleasure: French and American Moral Ideas in St. Louis, 1800-1835" at 4:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House living room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities Applications can be picked up at 504 Goudell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — The final information sessions for the Domestic Exchange Program will be held Feb. 9, 10, 16, and 17 in room 804 of Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Deadline for applications is March 1. Call 545-5351 for more information.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577-5316 if interested

Submissions — Submissions are being accepted for the Spectrum Literary Magazine. The deadline is today. Call 5- 4220 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs — University Store Next Best to Free!

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 12, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Prepare-Saints	Wise Old Dog	Antiques Roadshow		News (R) [In Stereo]
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Magnificent Seven		Nash Bridges "Superstition"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Magnificent Seven		Nash Bridges "Superstition"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two of a Kind	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny		Friends		Melrose Place		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Lying the Not"		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Newsradio	Newsradio	Married... With
WTXX	4	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy		Providence "Lying the Not"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy	Providence "Lying the Not"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		Friends	Friends
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	Brimstone "Mourning After"		Millennium "Antipas"		News		Homicide: Life on the Street	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Lying the Not"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Time Goes By	Monty Python	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two of a Kind	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Legacy "Just Kissed"		NHL Hockey Boston Bruins at Calgary Flames (Live)				"The Secret of My Success"
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	Hardball	Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks, Jackie Gleason					Law & Order
AAE	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Brood"		Biography: Hershey		L.A. Detectives		Wildcat Cave "Dolphin"		Sports	Moneyline
CNN	22	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Midsomer Murders (Part 2 of 2)		Up right	Kids in Hall
COM	36	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Robin Williams: Off the Wall		Politically Incorrect		Cold War "Detente" (R)		Spies Above (R)
DISC		New House	Hot-n-Kline (R)	Wild Discovery: Crown		Spies Above (R)		News	Inferno	Storm Warning! (R)		Sportscenter
ESPN	51	Up Close	Sportscenter		Skiing		Figure Skating	U.S. Championships				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
LIFE	59	Ellen	Ellen	Oh Baby (R)	Maggie (R)	Chicago Hope	The Virgin	1970s Precinct" (1995, Mystery) Randy Quaid, Alex Mackthur,				Blame Game	Loveline
MTV	53	Countdown	Cat (In Stereo)	Beavis-Butt.	News	Sift & Dilly	Video Clichés	Say What? Karaoke Snowed In		Say What? Karaoke Snowed In		Jane Lucy	Bewitched
NICK	55	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Offbeats	Oh-Cartoonel	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Lavarne	Twilight Zone	Star Trek
SCIFI	66	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Xenas: Stories	Star Trek "Mirror, Mirror"			Highlander: The Series		Friday the 13th: The Series		Paramedics "The Night Shift"
TLC	26	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Paramedics "The Night Shift"		Ferocious Oceans (R)		Mission Underground (R)		Kung Fu: Legend
TNT	65	Due South "Red, White or Blue"		ER "Men Plan, God Laughs"		NBA Basketball: San Antonio Spurs at Philadelphia 76ers. (In Stereo Live)						"White Men's Burden" (1995)
USA	60	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xenia: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger		Ink "The Lone Wolves" (1994, Suspense) Jeff Fahey, Jennifer Rubin. (In Stereo)				Dennis Miller
HBO	48	"Sleepless: Sleep Big, Steal Little" (1995) Andy Garcia. PG-13										Erotic
MAX	49	"The Addams Family" (1991) Anjelica Huston. PG-13										Outer Limits
SHOW	46	"Warriors of Virtue" (1997, Fantasy) Angus MacFadyen. PG

HSCN Bulletin Board — The Learning Channel
CBS/3 Hartford — UVC-TV19
CBS/4 Boston — ABC/40 Springfield
ABC/5 Boston — Gavel to Gavel
FOX/57 Springfield — NBC/22 Springfield
HSCN Movie Ch. — Sundance
WPN/20 Hartford — Bloomberg Financial
Weather Channel — CTN
WB/30 New Britain — TBS
Fox/61 Hartford — BET
UPN/24 Boston — TV Land
WGGH & HSCN — Univision
Instructional — Comedy Central Connecticut Academic TV — Cartoon
WTNH/8 New Haven — Much Music
Religious Programming

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

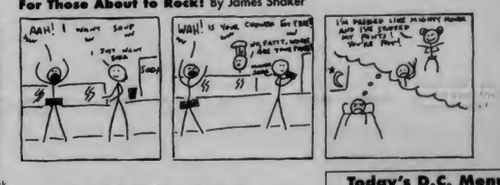
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Non Sequitor By Wiley



FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Von Hess By Joseph Hession

For Those About to Rock! By James Shaker

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Take care today that you don't act without thinking. Irrational or ill-conceived behavior can bring about undesirable results.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may need a little help today when it comes to expressing yourself openly. Trust that the words will come to you when the time is right.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You're in the mood for something stable and reliable, and a loved one may not be providing the kind of consistency that lends you comfort.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may be asking a great many questions today to little avail. The truth is that the time has come for you to stop asking and start doing.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You'll feel more comfortable than expected today when you're reunited with someone from your past. The truth is, the past lives in the present.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You are prepared to talk about almost anything today if given the chance. You are also likely to wax rather philosophically on several occasions.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You can rely on someone else's inconsistency today to win you a friendly bet with a third party. Don't play such games irresponsibly!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You'll have the chance to remember something from your past that is still affecting you quite profoundly though unconsciously today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — It will be important for you to know why certain things happen today. Ask the right questions and you're sure to receive some illuminating answers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may have trouble fitting someone else's requirements into your schedule today. Make room where you can, but demand some give- and-take.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — A comparison with a loved one can result in a major discovery today that will lead you down an exciting new road. Subtle changes can yield big results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may find yourself sharing similar viewpoints today with someone who is quite different from you in many ways. Work together for a while.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Geesh! Your other ski STILL hasn't hit the bottom!"

Quote of the Day

"Love is a piano/ Dropped from a four story building/ And you were in the wrong place at the wrong time"

-Ani DiFranco

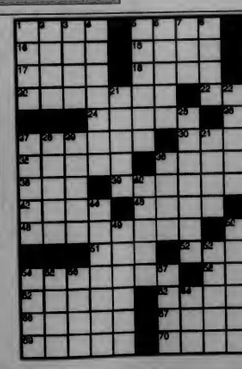
Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese with Tomatoes*
Golden Burger
DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetarian Hot Wrap Bar

Worcester
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese with Tomatoes*
Golden Burger
DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetarian Hot Wrap Bar

Hampshire
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese with Tomatoes*
Golden Burger
DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetarian Hot Wrap Bar

Berkshire
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese with Tomatoes*
Golden Burger
DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetarian Hot Wrap Bar



ACROSS
1 Strapless top
5 Selves
9 Set goals
14 Molecule part
15 Arm bone
16 Morning —; climbing plant
17 Loll around
18 Snips
19 Kukla's friend
20 Snort with glee
22 Pastered
24 Originate
26 Map abbr.
27 Climbed
30 Connections
35 Lingerie item
36 Animal skin
37 Mets' stadium
38 MacGraw of films
39 Had a bite
42 Leatherworker's tool
43 Pan away
45 Can. province
46 Sausage
48 Two couples
50 Gives back
51 Electrical unit
52 Radio parts
54 Save, in a way
58 Hand warmers
62 Objects of devotion
63 Russian river
65 Lotion ingredient
66 Lhasa's country
67 Zoo enclosure
68 Frost
69 Resident of 67-Across
70 Pay attention
71 Abound

DOWN
1 Bath powder
2 Provo's state
3 Clown's name
4 Precious stone
5 Greek mathematician
6 Pastes
7 Toronto's prov.
8 Cummerbund
9 Burrowing rodent
10 Malady
11 Shape
12 Albany's canal
13 Changed colors
21 Low cards
23 Give a speech
25 Voted in
27 Provide with workers
28 Violin's relative
29 "Good-bye."
31 Columnist Chase
32 Scarlett —
33 Informative
34 Preserves (fish)
36 Part of a hand
40 Singer Judd
41 Lived
44 More amusing
47 Parvenu
49 Type of daisy
50 — al: criticized severely
53 Reflection
54 Hotel name
55 Adams or Brickell
56 Baseballer Ty
57 A lot
59 Writer Wiesel
60 Alaskan city
61 Apoer
64 "Norma —"
Pierre"

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

SPA PAST HUBS
COUN OSLO INLET
AIISO WHITESAUCE
DEARTH PAD FETA
ARAB LIAR
TICKETED TRACTS
HOF EASED MILIAN
OMITS NONOSI DIESI
SALAD MEDITA ATT
ENSUED BONFIRES
TEES SCAN
SHOE LON ERNEST
HUMIDIFIER ALTO
HERNIA AORTA TAUT
SIGN SEAR END

2-12-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Night Editor — Vanessa Walker
Photo Technician — Roberto Delgado
Copy Editor — Stacey Shackford
Production Supervisor — Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff — Sathy Am

SPORTS weekend

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Monday, February 8, 1999

Second place in A–10 East up for grabs in men's hoop

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

If only the games ended after 20 minutes. The Massachusetts men's basketball team played well out of the blocks in their match–up with Rhode Island last Thursday night at the William D. Mullins Center, outscoring the visiting Rams 32–27 in the opening portion of the contest.

Unfortunately, the teams are required to return to the hardwood for a second 20 minutes.

When given that window of opportunity, URI exploded for 46 points in the closing period, finishing off the obviously– winded Minutemen by a final score of 73–62. Now, for the second time in two weeks, second place in the Atlantic 10 East is on the line as UMass and Rhode Island square off again, this time in Providence.

In their clear pacing of the home team in the first game, Ram star–rookie Lamar Odom and his teammates breezed through the tired UMass defense on several occasions.

"They played well that game," Massachusetts coach Bruiser Flint said of the Rhode Island surge. "They shot balls. They made shots that [we saw] in our scouting report. We let them shoot. I thought the biggest thing we didn't do was we didn't contest them on a few layups and let them know we were in the game with them. That's the biggest thing."

If stamina was a problem in their first altercation, Saturday could be a long day for the Minutemen.

UMass point guard Charlton Clarke has been playing with a stress fracture in his foot, which appeared to be particularly tender at the tail–end of the UMass victory against St. Bonaventure Wednesday. Steady forward Chris Kirkland has recently recovered from a series of various injuries that never quite knocked him from the starting line-up, and reserve shooting guard Rafael Cruz missed last Sunday's win against St. Joseph's with a violent stomach flu.

To make matters worse, Flint dismissed reserve forward Ajmal Basit from the team prior to the St. Bonaventure game because the two reportedly couldn't work well together. Basit can no longer be called upon to spell center Lari Ketner, whose endurance has never favored a fast–paced game.

Still, with all of those problems lingering, the Minutemen have won two straight, including a 64–46 clobbering of the Bonnies, during which UMass put together a convincing 40– minute performance.

"We've got to play two halves [against Rhode Island] like we did [against St. Bonaventure], instead of one," Flint said.

The strong showing against SBU can be looked at as much as a blessing as it can be a curse, though. The future of the Minutemen is as difficult to read as their past is to understand. Even though Massachusetts came within five points of top–ranked Connecticut and defeated top–25 Kansas 84–60 earlier in the season, they came up short in games against Marshall and Fordham.

"We've still got some games to go," Flint said. "As you know, we've been up and down all season. We [play like we did against SBU] one game, and we don't play this way the next. We've got to carry it over to the next game."

Rhode Island enters the matchup having defeated Virginia Tech 76–67 on Wednesday, bringing their conference record to 7–4, even with UMass.

In the first game against the Rams, Flint double–teamed Odom and senior Rhode Island forward Antonio Reynolds–Dean early in the contest. The coach sent forwards Mike Babul and Kirkland to contain the Rhody stars. Odom abused the strategy for 26 points, while Reynolds–Dean was held to nine. As an indirect result of the attention given to the two Ram leaders, freshman Tavorris Bell capitalized on 13 points worth of open shots.

MEN'S B-BALL
UMASS @ URI
SATURDAY, 12 P.M.
TONY SCANZANI- PLAY
DAVE DUCILLE- COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW

UMass will battle UML & NE

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

There's much more to tonight's matchup between the Massachusetts and UMass–Lowell hockey teams than meets the eye.

To say that the 7 p.m. affair at Tsongas Arena in Lowell is a simple Hockey East game would be a severe understatement. With the Alumni Cup and a crucial two points towards the conference playoffs on the line, it's safe to say that tonight's game is going to be a battle.

And just in case the Minutemen need any more motivation, they can pop in the game tapes from an Oct. 22 contest against the River Hawks in which they saw a one– goal lead with :90 seconds to play, evaporate and transform into an overtime loss.

"A lot of us felt that was a game that we should've won and didn't," Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen said. "The guys are interested in some payback now. Plus there's the Alumni Cup, and we've got to win the second game [tonight] if we want to have a shot at winning it back."

Taking two points from the River Hawks in their own building isn't going to be an easy task. The Minutemen have struggled away from the William D. Mullins Center this season, winning only two games outside of Amherst.

UMass–Lowell, who currently sits in sixth place in Hockey East, have been on a roll as of late. Led by goaltender Scott Fankhouser, the River Hawks have managed to stay right in the middle of the pack in the conference.

"One thing that stands out in my mind is that I saw them [UMass–Lowell] play against Merrimack and I was impressed," Mallen said. "They look good and are a strong team, so we've got to be ready."

After tonight's tilt in "mill town," UMass (7–17–2, 4–12–2 in Hockey East) will return home to Amherst for a date with Northeastern tomorrow night at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center. Home ice has been good to the Minutemen this season, as they have picked up five wins there, including victories over No. 2 Maine and Beanpot champ Boston University.

Mallen feels that support from the fans tomorrow night may play a key role against a Northeastern team that is currently tied with the Minutemen for the final Hockey East playoff spot.

"Our fans, especially our students, have done a great job of keeping other teams off their game," Mallen said. "I encourage everyone to come out. If they haven't seen us play this year, then hopefully that will plant the seeds [for the future]."

A pleasant dilemma of sorts which Mallen will have to settle is regarding his goaltending situation. Both sophomore Markus Helanen and freshman Mike Johnson have been on top of their games as of late. Last weekend, Mallen platooned the two netminders and it worked to the advantage of the Minutemen — Johnson was superb in a heartbreaking loss to Boston College on Friday night, and then a fresh Helanen stopped a hot Merrimack team dead in its tracks the next night — but it appears that it will be a game–time decision this time around.

"We're definitely looking at playing Mike, but I think that Markus has also played well," Mallen said. "Markus is still our No. 1 guy though."

The Huskies, who thumped UMass 8–2 on Jan. 5, but then played to a 2–2 tie with the Minutemen 17 days later, are coming off a tough loss to BU in the Beanpot finals on Monday night. Mallen knows, however, that that defeat may turn out to be a blessing in disguise, so he will be sure to have his team ready to play Northeastern.

"There's two important things about the Northeastern game. First, they play Merrimack on Friday, so a lot of what they bring Saturday will tell [what they have left from that]," Mallen said. "The other thing is the Beanpot. Losing the Beanpot can either be a big letdown or a big motivation. BC's loss of the Beanpot last year told them it was time to put it in gear."

The Minutemen have stepped it up on the offensive end, scoring seven goals last weekend. The all–sophomore line of R.J. Gates, Ray Geever and Jeff Turner has been hot as of late. Other offensive threats for UMass will be leading point–scorer Jeff Blanchard, leading goal–scorer Nathan Sell, and captain Dean Stork, who is second on the team with seven goals from his backline position.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
UMass captain Dean Stork leads the Minutemen into a pair of huge Hockey East battles which will be crucial in determining the playoff future of the team.

Flint, Basit relationship ends
UM will miss Basit's contributions

Sanford Appell

As of now, I don't know exactly why Ajmal Basit was dismissed from the men's basketball team. I do know about Bruiser Flint and Basit's tumultuous on–court relationship over the past three seasons. It has been one of a mutual lack of respect for one another.

Basit never conformed to Flint, the authority figure. His post–basket/rebound celebrations have become notorious among the coaching staff. Flint tried forcefully to eliminate these antics from Basit's repertoire. It never happened. It has been suggested that Basit's tirades have negatively impacted both the play and attitudes of his teammates.

On the other hand, Flint often was not willing to give Basit his rightful due after a solid performance. Flint has on occasion pointed out the negative aspects of Basit's contributions, usually concerning his behavior, before the positive.

The fact that neither man was willing to swallow some pride and adapt to the other may be the single most outstanding factor in the termination of their relationship.

The question of the hour is this: was it absolutely necessary to remove a valuable contributor to the team with only six regular season games remaining?

Flint may have a perfectly reasonable explanation for the move, and I would then support him 100 percent. But if the fact that they could not get along was the only justification, then the dismissal was unwarranted and will in fact be detrimental to the team's future success.

By Flint's own admission, Basit was coming off two of his more productive outings of the season. The junior forward scored seven points and grabbed three rebounds against Rhode Island. He then posted nine points and seven rebounds against St. Joseph's.

These numbers by themselves may not bowl anyone over, but the enthusiastic play and hustle exhibited in these contests has not been seen out of him recently.

Much greater numbers were expected out of the Brooklyn native, who was plucked by Bob Hurley Sr. to play for his prestigious St. Anthony's High School team in New Jersey.

Basit was expected to be an integral player on the UMass squad, especially entering this season, when he was anointed starter in place of the departed Tyrone Weeks.

The inside combination of Basit and Ketner could have been lethal to the opposition. Both post players are excellent shot–blockers who could have created a virtual road–block on defense, not to mention the fact that they would have dominated on the offensive end together. That didn't happen either, because there was simply not enough room for them — mentally, if not physically.

Both players wanted to be the star big–man for UMass and overcome the vast shadow of Marcus Camby. But they failed to play exceptionally well together as a unit.

Partially as a result of lack of chemistry with both Ketner and the coaches, Basit was "mutually" removed from the starting line–up by Flint before a loss to Davidson on Dec. 29.

Chris Kirkland's play as a starter at Basit's vacated power– forward slot has more than justified Flint's decision. However, pushing Basit to the middle of the bench behind the talented but raw Kitwana Rhymer was

Turn to Basit, page 8

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
Ajmal Basit was recently removed from the men's hoop team due to conduct detrimental to the team, as described by coach Bruiser Flint.

UM women look to beat VT

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The haunting memories of Virginia Tech's 66–64 overtime win over the Massachusetts women's basketball team will fill the air tonight, as the teams tangle at the William D. Mullins Center at 7 p.m. (WMUA 91.1 FM).

WOMEN'S B-BALL
UMASS @ VTECH
FRIDAY, 7 P.M.
MATT PERAULT- PLAY
MIKE COINEY- COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW

WOMEN'S B-BALL
UMASS @ DUQUESNE
SUNDAY, 2 P.M.
MIKE COINEY- PLAY
MATT PERAULT- COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW

Tonight's contest will be the first meeting since the aforementioned battle for last year's Atlantic 10 Championship.

"Our kids definitely will look back to that game a little bit," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "The important thing is not to dwell on it, and to simply move on."

The No. 11 Hokies have been virtually unstoppable this season, as they are 21–1 overall, with the lone loss coming at the hands of Xavier.

"They are a great team," O'Brien said. "But we happen to match up well with them, which is why we were able to beat them once last season before going down to the wire in the tournament. Post–play will be very important to both teams in this game."

The Minutewomen are currently 13–12 overall, 8–4 in the A–10 East, which places them in a comfortable second.

The team may have squandered their final opportunity to overtake St. Joseph's last Sunday by dropping their final encounter of the regular season with the Hawks.

That setback aside, UMass has refocused its efforts on knocking off the strongest team in the conference tonight.

"This is a very big game," junior guard Jaywana Bradley said. "We need a boost; a win over Tech will give us a lot more

Turn to HOOP, page 9

UMass Softball heads to Tempe for season opener

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

The first signs of spring will hit the UMass campus tomorrow when the Minutewomen softball team heads to Tempe, Arizona to face five USA Today/NFCA Coaches Poll top–25 teams.

UMass opens the season ranked 10th in the country. This is the highest preseason ranking ever. Last year the team was ranked 12th in the preseason poll. The Minutewomen finished last year ranked No. 9 after competing in its second consecutive Women's College World Series.

In opening–day action, the Minutewomen will face No. 19 Alabama and No. 18 Arizona State. On Saturday they will face No. 13 Long Beach State and No. 2 Arizona. Before the weekend is finished, UMass will also battle No. 7 Texas. Both Arizona and Texas were College World Series teams last season.

Last year's team posted the best record in school history finishing with a 45–14 mark. The 45 wins broke the school record that was held by the 1995 squad which turned in a 40–22 mark. UMass won 22 of its last 24 games last season. It one point holding a 22–game winning streak (second in the country, behind Arizona's 27).

Head coach Elaine Sortino begins her 20th season behind the bench for the Minutewomen. She boasts a 610–281–3 record. She has been Atlantic 10 Coach of the Year numerous times. Under her leadership UMass has won 11 Atlantic 10 regular season titles and 10 A–10 Tournament Championships. Sortino has led the Minutewomen to three College World Series appearances in the '90s and eight NCAA Regional appearances.

The Minutewomen will be led by senior captain and All– American Danielle Henderson. Henderson has rewritten all the record books at UMass and became only the fifth pitcher in NCAA history to strike out 400 batters in a season (430). She led the nation last year in strikeouts–per–seven–innings with an average of 11.9. She ranks 18th in NCAA history with 878 career strikeouts.

Senior Captain Becky George will also be looked upon to provide a spark for the team. George was an All–Atlantic 10 selection last year. She started 55 of 56 games, splitting time between left field and shortstop. She posted a .289 batting average and 44 hits. In addition to her successes on the field, George excels in the classroom, being selected a GTE Academic All–District and Atlantic 10 All–Academic.

Playing such stiff competition this early in the season will be a test which the Minutewomen will be able to build the season on. UMass could possibly play No. 1–ranked and defending National Champion Fresno State at the Florida State Invitational next month.

UMass will have to be on the top of its game to fare well in the Fiesta Bowl Tournament. The Minutewomen will be tested early and often this season and another trip to the College World Series is not far from sight. The next chapter is yet to be written, but begins tomorrow.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 15 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, February 16, 1999

Students want increase in late-night PVTA bus service

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

When the Amherst bars close at 1 a.m. on Sunday morning, a majority of students are deciding to get behind the wheel instead of riding on the public transit system.

According to students, the University of Massachusetts Transit Services, a division of the Pioneer Valley Transit Association (PVTA), is an unreliable service for students coming out of bars late Saturday night/early Sunday morning and furthermore, students are unaware of the late service being offered.

Last semester, senior economy major Ciaran Tuomey was charged with operating under the influence (OUI) after returning from a bar on the weekend. He feels the college would do better to supply buses that would conveniently run at their maximum when bars close. Half the people who are driving drunk would change their minds, Tuomey said.

"I don't think most people plan on driving drunk," Tuomey said. "It's just factors like bus schedules that are beyond their control. Believe me, it's not worth it to drink and drive."

Allan Byam, manager of UMass Transit, feels it is a student's choice to take the bus or drive and says the buses run for student's safety.

"We've been operating late night services for 10 years since alcohol was banned on campus," Byam said. "The primary reason was to get people home from the bars safely."

He indicated that he hasn't received feedback from students in a long time and feels students are very aware of the service according to the ridership counts after 10 p.m.

The downtown Amherst bars close at 1 a.m. on Sunday morning and some employees, like senior hotel, restaurant, travel administration major Johnny Carranza, a doorman at The Pub, don't see many people going to the bus when they close.

"We need something that's more of a shuttle service," Carranza said. "What's another bus or two going to cost when it comes to safety; is there a price on our safety?"

Last Sunday morning, the 1:05 a.m. Sunderland bus arrived on time, and of the eight passengers who got on the bus, only two of them admitted coming from a bar. Approximately five minutes later, the Northampton bus stopped at the Amherst post office bus stop, and no one got on, but around 12 people got off. At approximately 1:20 a.m. the Mt. Holyoke bus arrived and again no one got off or on, this time at both stops in downtown Amherst.

Senior sport management major Erin Rothman says she'd rely on the bus to get her home only if they ran later.

"If the buses ran from the bars to my Boulder apartment later than 12:50, I would take advantage of it," Rothman said.

Officer John Chudzik of the Amherst Police Department feels the lack of riders may attest for the increase in drunk drivers.

"It's a generality, but most people are getting arrested after the bars close while driving their vehicles home," Officer Chudzik said. "There aren't that many buses running this late comparative to the daytime."

BETH KANTORIAN / COLLEGIAN
Some students are questioning the reliability of PVTA buses in getting them home after bars close on weekends at 1 a.m.

According to some late–night students in Amherst last Saturday night, they don't even believe the buses run late. Junior communications major Molly Kirkendall says she lives by the bars and sometimes will have 10 girls sleeping in her apartment because they missed a bus or ride.

"Some of my friends miss the bus, and they wait for someone to drive them home — usually that's somebody drunk," Kirkendall said. "I disagree with that."

"I'd have to decide to drive," senior chemistry major Jason Rodrigo said. "In this climate, you can't afford to be out in the cold this long."

As Byam explained, the problem with getting more buses and increasing later schedules includes a lack of funding.

"The budget is maintaining what service they have out there," Byam said. "Not unless they came up with a concrete funding source, would UMass Transit consider increasing bus hours after bars close."

Reaction to impeachment verdict differs among Massachusetts students

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Staff

The acquittal of William Jefferson Clinton came Friday after a difficult and unprecedented impeachment trial which left many University of Massachusetts students with mixed feelings.

The Senate vote acquitted the president of the charges of perjury and obstruction of justice.

"I am very upset, even outraged at the events. It was a question of guilty or not guilty and everyone voted in their parties' favor. I find it very difficult to believe that not one Democrat voted guilty on either of the two counts," said Ismes Parisi, a senior economic major.

Senior sociology major Jared Sullivan agreed with Parisi, commenting that the president made a "mockery of the most important institution in our country, the family. It's a disgrace to our nation and an embarrassment that the president got away with such lude behavior."

On the other side of the spectrum, many students are relieved to see the scandal over with and the country getting back to business. Ellen McCabe, a senior accounting major, said, "The Senate made the right decision. Not only would a guilty verdict hurt the country, but it would make us appear vulnerable to outside countries."

President William Jefferson Clinton

Senior Spanish and international relations major Renee Foster is glad it's over. "I didn't want him to be even be impeached. He does a good job for our country, and we don't need to be meddling in people's business."

Allison Meehan, a senior communications major, said she was happy the president wasn't taken out of office.

"Although he is guilty of lying he is a good president and our country is doing well. It should be up to his wife and daughter to deal with it not up to us."

The Clinton scandal came to light more than a year ago, and in September of 1998 independent counsel Kenneth Starr released his report alleging impeachable conduct by the president. Then on Oct. 8, the House voted 258–176 to hold an open–ended inquiry into whether the president should be impeached, and according to The Washington Post, although 31 Democrats joined the majority, the plan was strictly Republican.

On Dec. 19, President Clinton was impeached on charges of perjury and obstruction of justice. And finally, after an impeachment trial, President Clinton was acquitted after two roll calls in which the Senate voted 55–45 and 50–50 for acquittal.

American Airlines back in air after "sickout"

By Katie Fairbank
Associated Press

DALLAS — Most of American Airlines' flights took off as scheduled yesterday as negotiations resumed between the company and its pilot union, 10 days after pilots began a sickout that tangled travel for more than a half–million passengers.

About 800 of American's 9,400 pilots were still listed as sick yesterday, down from the nearly 2,500 who were out Thursday and Friday, airline officials said.

Cancellations of 11 percent of flights was no worse than a day of bad weather in a hub city, officials said.

American's parent company, AMR Corp., and the Allied Pilots Association headed back to the table to negotiate the integration of recently purchased Reno Air.

The two were in virtually the same place they were when pilots began calling in sick and refusing overtime, canceling thousands of flights and costing the airline tens of millions. Neither side has changed their stance on pay for pilots who fly for Reno Air.

About 250 of the 2,250 flights scheduled were canceled because some pilots weren't immediately available for flying.

The Fort Worth–based airline had canceled only 17 flights scheduled for today, spokesman John Hotard said.

According to American, pilots have been taking themselves off the sick list at a rapid rate since a federal judge on Saturday held the union and two top board members in contempt and promised sizable fines against them.

Some pilots complained that the number on the sick list could have been inflated because they had been trying to get off of the sick list and back to work, but airline officials wouldn't let them. Instead, the pilots were told they had to meet with their chief medical officer.

Hotard said that was true for only 12 or 13 pilots who face possible disciplinary action for flying as passengers after they had called in sick to work.

U.S. District Judge Joe Kendall threatened a "significant" fine against the pilots' union Saturday, saying that the union did not do enough to encourage pilots to return to work after he ordered the union to end the sickout last Wednesday.

The judge required the union place $10 million, or one–quarter of the union's net worth, with the court in preparation of a final decision on the fine on tomorrow.

He also ordered union president Rich LaVoy and vice president Brian Mayhew to remit a total of $15,000.

Nearly 6,000 flights have been canceled since the work action began, costing American between $67 million and $90 million, according to Chris Chiames, a spokesman for AMR Corp. The final total has not been projected.

American will see more revenue reductions, since it plans to reduce its schedule 2 percent in the spring, or about 45–50 flights a day, because officials do not believe pilots will volunteer for extra overtime.

Serbia compromises by allowing Albania chance at self-rule

By Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

PARIS — Serbia is willing to make major compromises and grant rival ethnic Albanians broad self–rule, but it adamantly opposes having NATO troops police a Kosovo agreement, the republic's president said yesterday.

For the first time since a Kosovo peace conference started Feb. 6, Milan Milutinovic indicated Serbs were willing to give up most of the demands that have stalled the talks — with the exception of NATO peacekeeping troops.

"We don't think that the troops are needed if the agreement is good and acceptable to the majority of people living in Kosovo," Milutinovic told The Associated Press, adding that abandoning NATO demands for a peacekeeping force was a "precondition" for any eventual peace deal.

Milutinovic spoke as the Kosovo conference headed toward a fast–approaching deadline, with the United States pressuring the Serbians to make a deal with Kosovo Albanians or prepare to be bombed by NATO forces.

More than 2,000 people have been killed in a year of clashes in Kosovo between ethnic Albanian separatists and Serbian security forces. The province is in southern Serbia, the dominant Yugoslav republic, and 90 percent of its 2 million people are ethnic Albanians.

Milutinovic said any NATO deployment would "badly damage our sovereignty" and that NATO bombing raids in the absence of an agreement would amount to "an aggression and a war crime." Also yesterday, British military vehicles and heavy guns were moved from Germany to Greece for use in a possible NATO intervention in Kosovo, the British army said.

With just five days to a deadline set by the United States and five of its European allies for a deal to be signed, Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov yesterday visited the 14th–century French chateau where the talks were being held.

Russia is pushing as hard as the United States for a resolution of the Kosovo conflict by Saturday. But Moscow opposes the use of NATO airstrikes and is nonconmittal on the deployment of international peacekeeping troops.

Ivanov, after meeting with both delegations, told reporters he was convinced "they realize the importance of the moment." "I would like to emphasize, once again, that only a political settlement is possible," he said. "There is no military solution to this problem."

Asked about eventual military intervention in Kosovo to support a peace plan, Ivanov said, "This question will be discussed with Belgrade."

On Sunday, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright berated Milutinovic at a Paris meeting that Serbian sources described as extremely unpleasant.

The Albanians, she said later, seemed to accept the international peace plan granting them virtual self–rule in Kosovo but keeping the Serbian province within existing borders.

But the Albanians want NATO troops to police any agreement because they don't trust the Serbian government.

NATO already is making plans to send up to 30,000 troops into Kosovo, including 4,000 U.S. troops.

A Kosovo Albanian close to the talks, speaking on condition of anonymity, said yesterday that Albright laid out three possibilities to their delegation:

- The Kosovo Albanians don't sign and they lose all American support. The United States shuts down Kosovo's borders with Albania and Macedonia, closes all roads and cuts off supplies to the rebels.
- The Kosovo Albanians sign and the Serbs don't. The United States gives strong support to Kosovo's Albanians and bombs the Serbs.

Clinton works to restore faith in presidency

MERIDA, Mexico (AP) — President Clinton went to work on rebuilding his tarnished presidency yesterday, saying "everything will be fine" if Republicans and Democrats put aside bitter differences and work on the nation's business.

Clinton spoke in a brief exchange with reporters at talks with Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo. They met at a 17th century hacienda in the middle of Merida's Mayan archeological ruins. U.S. and Mexican officials signed nine modest agreements on air transportation, the war on drugs, trade, border safety and fighting forest fires.

Three days after his impeachment trial concluded with a solid acquittal, Clinton signaled his interest in moving on. It was clear he wanted to take some questions from reporters to begin clearing the air after months of tension, and White House officials expressed satisfaction afterward.

"This is a time for reconciliation and renewal," Clinton said, repeating the hope he expressed after the Senate's vote Friday.

ELSA RUEN / COLLEGIAN
A busy day for looove
Valerie Knightly of Shutesbury prepares a Valentine's Day bouquet at the Always in Bloom flower shop on Sunday.

EXTENDED FORECAST

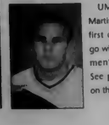
Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 24	HIGH: 43 LOW: 24	HIGH: 38 LOW: 25

SOURCE: CNN.COM

First Lady to be Senator?

Although Hillary Rodham Clinton has not yet decided whether she will run for senator of New York in the 2000 election, advocacy for her candidacy is in the works.

NEWS PAGE 3



Thank you, Alanis

Superstar Alanis Morrisette hit the Mullins Center Thursday night. Check out our review inside.

ARTS PAGE 5

Did you see that one, Mom?

UMass freshman Martin Miljko scored his first collegiate goal to go with 2 assists for the men's hockey team. See page 10 for more on the action.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 8
Comics 9
Crossword 8
Editorial 4
FYI 2
News 3
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

ELSA ALLEN / COLLEGIAN

Deer crossing
A deer blends into the trees off of University Drive Saturday afternoon.

~International Briefs ~

Protestants want IRA to disarm

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestants heaped scorn on Sinn Fein leaders during a debate yesterday that illustrated a peace process strained by approaching deadlines and the question of when — if ever — the IRA will start disarming.

The Belfast Assembly was discussing plans that would create a joint Protestant-Catholic government for Northern Ireland when one spectator, a relative of an Irish Republican Army victim, yelled, "Hand in your guns, you murderer!"

The shout in the Assembly followed Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams' call for Protestant politicians to accept his IRA-allied party's democratic credentials "without preconditions."

And when Martin McGuinness complained that Protestants on the other side of the Assembly should stop calling his party "Sinn Fein-IRA," hard-line Protestant politician Peter Robinson sarcastically resorted that McGuinness shouldn't feel "embarrassed and ashamed" of his IRA links.

Following debate that could last until tomorrow in the Assembly, elected in June to serve as the launching pad for Northern Ireland's new government, most of the legislature's 108 members are expected to vote in favor.

That vote is supposed to clear the way for Protestant politician David Trimble and Catholic politician Seamus Mallon to oversee the formation of a 12-member administration drawn from four parties: Trimble's Ulster Unionists, Mallon's Social Democratic and Labor Party, Sinn Fein and Robinson's Democratic Unionists.

The British government, which has directly ruled Northern Ireland since 1972, wants to start handing over responsibilities to the local administration on March 10, but already has conceded that that deadline probably won't be met.

Instead, this week's vote is likely to confirm growing dissent within the ranks of the Ulster Unionists, whose backing for the accord is essential to making it work.

Trimble emphasized again yesterday that he won't allow Sinn Fein to join the administration if the IRA doesn't start disarming, but that hasn't placated two party members who already have said they will join the ranks of the anti-agreement Protestants.

Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern, speaking in Paris after meeting with French leaders on European Union issues, said yesterday that he couldn't envision a Northern Ireland government without Sinn Fein.

But Ahern refused to give his view on whether the IRA must disarm in order for Sinn Fein to take part in the new government. He said the final decision remains with Gen. John de Chastelain, the Canadian army general who leads a disarmament commission.

"The issue won't go away. We have to find a resolution to it before we move on," Ahern added. "And that resolution has to be credible."

Protestors demand Greece help Kurdish rebel

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A protester set himself ablaze outside parliament yesterday in demonstrations to demand Greece grant political asylum to fugitive Kurdish rebel leader Abdullah Ocalan.

The flames were put out by other protesters and firefighters, who were on the scene after threats of self-immolations from some of the estimated 200 protesters.

The demonstrator suffered serious burns to the face and hands, while another protester standing nearby received slight burns and was also treated for shock, police said. It wasn't immediately clear what the protester used as an accelerant.

Riot police scuffled with the demonstrators, including many children, who carried flags and banners bearing pictures of Ocalan. No other injuries were reported, but 50 protesters were detained. Greece has refused to offer political asylum to Ocalan, who is sought by Turkey on terrorism charges connected his Kurdistan Workers Party's 15-year fight for autonomy.

Meanwhile, another group of Kurds, some 500 refugees from Iraq, were stranded on buses yesterday as police tried to persuade an Athens hospital to allow them to be temporarily housed in the hospital's abandoned leper wing.

The hospital said it couldn't accept the refugees and neighborhood residents blocked the entrance to the hospital. The Kurds have been living in tents in central Koumoundourou square for months.

An estimated 50,000 Iraqi Kurds illegally enter Greece each year, many en route to Western Europe.

The Kurdish homeland encompasses a geographical area overlapping parts of Turkey, Iraq and Iran. In Turkey, more than 37,000 people have died in the Kurd's fight.

In Turkey on yesterday, a Kurdish singer, Ahmet Aya, was arrested for allegedly aiding Kurdish rebels. A conviction could result in five years in prison.

Ahmet Kaya triggered a controversy by saying at an award ceremony that he would begin singing in the Kurdish language. He was also seen as a concert in Germany that was organized to benefit a Kurdish rebel group. He reportedly also made a speech in favor of the rebels.

Turkey is frequently criticized for human rights violations in connection with the Kurds.

The country's 12 million Kurds are prohibited from using their language in education or broadcasting.

Clinton backs wife's possible campaign

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

MERIDA, Mexico — Hillary Rodham Clinton would make a "terrific" senator from New York state, her husband said yesterday, "but that's a decision that she'll have to make."

With that, President Clinton became the latest member of his administration to pump air into a Hillary Clinton-for-Senate boomlet.

On Sunday, Sen. Patrick Daniel Moynihan, whose retirement next year will create the vacancy, said New York could use some of Mrs. Clinton's "magnificent, young, bright, able, Illinois-Arkansas enthusiasm."

"She'd be welcome and she'd win," Moynihan said.

Still to be heard from: the potential candidate. About all Mrs. Clinton has said about running for the Senate in 2000 is that she hasn't had time to think about it — and she said that through a spokesperson.

Clinton, talking to reporters who accompanied him for a meeting with Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo, said the same thing.

"I think she would be terrific in the Senate. But that's a decision that she'll have to make," Clinton said. "And for reasons I'm sure you'll understand she hasn't had anything like adequate time to talk to the people who think she should do this — much less people who think perhaps she shouldn't. She just hasn't had time to deal with this."

Clinton said he wanted everyone to understand that the idea did not originate with Mrs. Clinton. "I don't think it had ever occurred to her before a lot of people started calling and asking her to do it," he said.

Then he added, in what amounted to an endorsement:

"It's her decision to make. I will support whatever decision she makes enthusiastically. She has a lot of other opportunities for public service that will be out there. She and I both would like to continue to be useful in public affairs when we leave office. But it's a decision she'll have to make. She'd be great if she did it."

A few weeks ago, New York Democratic Chairwoman Judith Hope said the odds were 50-50 that Mrs. Clinton would run.

Mrs. Clinton is expected to visit New York City in early March for a women's leadership forum and some Democrats think she might use that setting to give an indication of her intentions.

New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani is a possible Republican candidate for the Moynihan seat.

"It would be an incredible race," if both the first lady and the mayor ran, Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) said Sunday.

Be a part of New England's biggest and best college daily newspaper.
Come and write for The Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

ELSA ALLEN / COLLEGIAN

Feeding the birds
Kara Leistyna meets a swan yesterday afternoon near the campus pond.

TOMORROW !!!

THE ALANA JOB FAIR

DON'T MISS THIS CHANCE TO MEET PROSPECTIVE EMPLOYERS

Coop/Internship Opportunities
Networking
Summer/Permanent Employment

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1999
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
UMASS AMHERST

6:00PM~9:00PM

ALL STUDENTS ARE INVITED !

SPONSORED BY: Bilingual Collegiate Program (BCP), Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and other Minority Students (CCEBMS), Diversity in Management Education Services (DiMES), Minority Engineering Program (MEP), United Asia Learning Resource Center (UALRC) and The Campus Career Network (CCN).
For more information, please call Ruth Carey @ (413) 545-6252 • www-ccn.acad.umass.edu

MARDI GRAS FESTIVAL
"Turn up the heat"
beach theme
Sponsored by the Newman Student Association
NEWMAN CENTER SOCIAL HALL
Tuesday, February 16th
FREE ADMISSION FOOD AND BEVERAGE
Come dressed in your best beach attire, whatever it might be... Best Male and Best Female Attire will win $50 CASH
3 LIVE BANDS
Have Tu
Waterpistol
Uncle Traveling Matt
NEWMAN CENTER 472 North Pleasant Street (413) 549-0300

ASH WEDNESDAY SERVICES
Newman Center
Wednesday, February 17, 1999

8:00 A.M.
Mass and distribution of Ashes

12:15 P.M.
Mass and Distribution of Ashes

5:15 P.M.
Mass and Distribution of Ashes

7:00 P.M.
Liturgy of the Word and Distibution of Ashes

9:00 P.M.
Liturgy of the Word and Distibution of Ashes

Newman Center 472 North Pleasant St. 413-549-0300

The Catholic Community at the Newman Center invites you to join them to begin the 40 days of the Lenten journey.

Nixon top advisor Ehrlichman dies

ATLANTA (AP) — John D. Ehrlichman, President Nixon's domestic affairs adviser who was imprisoned for 18 months for the Watergate conspiracy, has died. He was 73.

Ehrlichman died Sunday of natural causes at his home in Atlanta. He had suffered from diabetes, his son, Tom, said yesterday.

Ehrlichman, who along with H.R. Haldeman was one of Nixon's two top advisers, resigned from his White House post in April 1973 and was convicted two years later for obstruction of justice, conspiracy and perjury in the attempted cover-up of the burglary of the Democratic National Committee offices at the Watergate complex in Washington.

Early on June 17, 1972, burglars tied to Nixon's re-election campaign broke into the Democratic offices. They were trying to replace a faulty telephone bugging device installed during an earlier break-in. They got caught by a security guard.

Nixon, who won re-election that November, and his aides tried to cover up the growing scandal.

As the cover-up began to unravel and pressure mounted, Nixon summoned Haldeman and domestic counsel John Ehrlichman to the presidential cabin at Camp David, Md., in April 1973 and told them they would have to resign. The next day, he fired White House counsel John Dean, and accepted the resignations of Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Attorney General Richard Kleindienst.

Under threat of impeachment, Nixon resigned on Aug. 9, 1974. He was later pardoned by President Ford.

Ehrlichman spent 18 months at Swift Trail Camp, a minimum-security federal prison south of Safford, Ariz., and was released in 1978. Haldeman also served 18 months in prison and died in November 1993.

Ehrlichman was born March 20, 1925, in Tacoma, Wash. He graduated from University of California, Los Angeles and got a law degree at Stanford University in 1951.

ELSA ALLEN / COLLEGIAN

One nice ride
Chauffeur Charlie Todesca waits to pick up a customer in his limousine this weekend.

"Fat" folks protest ads for club

By Ron Harris
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — More than 30 overweight people chanted "Eat me!" while performing aerobics on the sidewalk in front of a health club to protest a new ad campaign they say demoralizes fat people.

The "fat advocates" banded together to protest a 24-Hour Fitness billboard campaign that depicts a hungry space alien and reads "When they come, they will eat the fat ones first." Company officials say they didn't intend to offend anyone.

"Sometimes humor helps make things easier, and can even be motivational," 24-Hour Fitness officials said in a release.

But the protesters said they saw little humor in the ad. "It's really hard for fat people to get into the gym anyway. To alienate them before they even walk in the door is cruel," said Rebekah Bridges, who handed out lollipops to passersby.

"I may be fat, but I'm fit, I'm happy, I'm sexual, I'm all of those things. How dare an ad man decide for society that we're not allowed to be someplace," Bridges said.

Others waved handwritten signs that read "Bite My Fat, Alien Butt," "Fat and Fit" and "Honk If You're Fat," which received loud support from traffic on the busy downtown street.

A fitness trainer for the rival World Gym ran a low impact aerobics session at the sidewalk protest, leading hefty participants through a rigorous, high-kneed, arm-pumping routine.

Marilyn Wann organized the event and is the author of "FatTo5," a book that seeks strip away the common cultural notion that fat is bad. Wann said the 24-Hour Fitness ad is not funny and took her "fat rebels" to the front lines to be seen and heard.

"We've got an epidemic of eating disorders, an epidemic of exercise disorders, people who have to work out twice a day or they're not worthy human beings," Wann said. "It really makes me sad to think the fitness isn't about health, they're just about looks."

Wann said she'd like to see the company retract the ads and work with advocates to fill out its membership.

Carlsbad-based 24-Hour Fitness has 284 gyms in 10 western states, Europe and Asia.

As a row of bike, Lycra-clad gym members streamed out the club's doors past protesters, most agreed the ad was an unusually demeaning stab at potential customers.

"The ad is very derogatory. The ad is abusive. The ad is prejudicial," said club member Nancy Cook, who heard about protest on television and joined in a show of support.

~News Brief~

Retired professor Gerard Braunthal was presented with the Commander's Cross of the Order of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany on Friday, Jan. 29. This took place during a quiet ceremony at the home of University of Massachusetts Chancellor David K. Scott. The medal was presented on behalf of German President Roman Herzog.

The award recognizes Braunthal's many academic achievements in German politics and his contributions to the international exchange programs involving UMass and the Universities of Frieburg, Bonn and Frankfurt.

Braunthal's thoughts are that he received this award because of his "attempts to further democracy in Germany through the student exchange program" at the University.

The ceremony was attended by friends, relatives and colleagues of the professor, who said it was "certainly a joyful occasion." Short remarks were made by Scott, Hauswedell and Professor Eric Einhorn, chairman of the political science department.

Braunthal has written a number of books and articles on the political system in Germany and has been a guest lecturer at the Universities of Freiburg, Bonn and Frankfurt. He has also organized a number of conferences, including one consisting of German and American scholars who gathered at UMass to discuss politics.

Braunthal, born in Germany in 1929, fled to Brussels in 1933 to escape Adolph Hitler and the Nazi political party. His family emigrated to the United States in 1936. Braunthal has taught at UMass since 1954, specializing in German and European politics and retired in 1987. — compiled by Matthew Call

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Capturing the moment
Mechanical engineering graduate student Gabriel Bianco photographs along North Pleasant Street yesterday afternoon.

spend more time
online than
in class?
Come put your job knowledge to good use. Stop by the Collegian Graphics Department in the Campus Center Basement and fill out an application to work on our Web Team. Knowledge of the Internet and web design/HTML is a plus. Put completed applications in David Voidan's mailbox.

STRENGTH • FLEXIBILITY • COORDINATION
CARDIO KICK BOXING
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB • 256-0060
Mon. @ 5:30
Thurs. @ 4:45
Fri. @ 4:15
Sat. @ 2:00
www.amherstathletic.com

Arousal
Get it at
"Adult's Only"
Videos & Magazines
8 Russell Rd.
Hadley
585-0416

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game & System Rentals
2 movies $2
w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent
Video Games
Best Selection In Town
9 E.Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst • 549-4505

Does your calculus class demand electronic countermeasures?
...just infiltrate the software section of your campus bookstore.

www.wizpewr.com

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING
MATH • ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • BUSINESS ANALYSIS

TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.

When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.

Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower – Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircraft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.

At Raytheon, you'll take technology – and your career – to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth.

We have a lot to tell you about the new Raytheon Systems Company and the exciting opportunities we have available. Plan on visiting our booth at your college career fair. If you are unable to attend the fair then check out our website at www.rayjobs.com and please send your resume to: Raytheon Resume Processing Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266.

Raytheon

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Come again?

Big news! Extra! Extra! Read all about it in the latest issue of The National Enquirer! Jesus is coming in 1999!

That's right, the full-grown Christ child is reportedly on his way to Earth as we speak. Enquirer correspondant Nostradamus claims that not only will the son of God be visiting our world, we will also be engulfed in vicious flames for our sins upon his arrival.

"Yes, it appears as though the blazing inferno of hell will overtake the planet when Jesus gets here," Nostradamus said, citing such accurate sources as a dream he had three weeks earlier. "Christ will only save those whom he sees as worthy."

Seth Koenig

Pope John Paul, being the only human to have spoken to God in the past four months, refused to comment on the situation. George and Ringo, however, were willing to talk for $6.50 and a box of mints apiece.

"Jesus is cool, I think," the Beatles' former drummer, Ringo Starr, stated.

With even more apparent enthusiasm, George Harrison said, "Yeah."

Experts are cautiously weary despite these sure-fire signs of the second-coming, as Christ was expected to arrive during each of the last 16 years, according to The Enquirer. Several leading authorities are skeptical, but, for fear of eternal damnation, chose to remain anonymous.

"Why wait so long?" one source reportedly close to Jesus said. "We've been sinning now for years. Why not judge us earlier?"

Just in case the savior is coming, Republicans and Democrats alike are preparing for his arrival.

President Bill Clinton is proposing an increase in the Supreme Court from nine to 21, so he can attempt to appoint 12 close friends who will appeal Jesus' ruling when Clinton, a known adulterer, is set ablaze by the wrath of the heavens.

The GOP is planning to use its Senate majority to up NASA's budget to include a gargantuan space shuttle that can carry the entire Republican party to Pluto during the fiasco. When they return to Earth, the Republicans hope to not be hunted down and killed by the few non-sinners remaining. On second thought, they are also considering staying on Pluto.

Jesus was not available for comment, but if he shows up 30 feet tall and glowing, as portrayed on the cover of most tabloids, his main problem will not be choosing the sinners from the saints, but subduing Godzilla, who will be backed by a $300 trillion budget and New Line Cinema.

"I'm looking forward to the encounter," offered Godzilla during a break from his strict training schedule. "As you know, I'm much more agile and lizard-like than in the 1940s. Fire obviously doesn't bother me, as I exhale a fierce stream of concentrated flames every time I sneeze."

Christ might also want to consider the French paparazzi when coming to this world. Allegedly responsible for the deaths of Princess Di and the Bat Child (reported in The Enquirer), the savior will need to frequently check his car to be sure that his brake lines are intact. His driver will also need to undergo several drug tests before each 108 mph stroll through Europe.

To even get here, religious figures fear, Jesus will need to cash in his Visa Frequent Flyer miles, which have almost expired despite having been acquired only six days ago.

Once aflight, it is estimated that it will take at least 43 years for Christ to arrive, after lengthy holdovers and ticket disputes at Delta terminals in the Andromeda galaxy, Neptune, and, of course, Newark, N.J. With the standard number of delayed and overbooked connecting flights, being seven in each case, the trip could take longer.

"Well, there's no way to really tell how quickly the heavenly Boeing 747 will be prepared for takeoff," one anonymous source from Delta said. "It should be in the air shortly."

In airline terms, that means the plane will leave the ground sometime in 2018.

For the sinners of the world, Pat Robertson is reportedly offering a Get-out-of-Hell free card in exchange for a generous donation of $69.99 per person.

Operators of his 1-900 number are to be available during televised poignant stories of athletes finding God, in such places as under their pillow or in their laundry basket.

Those unwilling to donate such a lofty amount can opt in spring for the lower priced Biblical flame repellent, running at $68.99. According to Robertson's spokesperson, the only other option is death at 6,000 degrees.

Jesus was still unavailable for comment.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Promise of a new day

Sometimes, our greatest triumphs are born from our most searing pain.

That which does not kill us does indeed make us stronger, and more vibrant, and more beautiful, and more alive.

> "He tells me that when he wakes in the morning, almost every day, he looks forward to that day in a way that he never had before. He senses, in a way that I suspect many people never will, the promise that each day holds."
>
> Michael Hinkley

I began thinking about this idea over the past year, while working as a full-time Americorps volunteer, serving migrant farmworker families in Central Florida. (Americorps is sort of like the Peace Corps, except the term of service is one year, and rather than go abroad, you work in the United States.)

Most of the primarily Hispanic and African-American individuals who I worked with lived under physical, fiscal and emotional pressures more powerful and more potentially disastrous than any that I had ever seen.

Yet, the prevailing collective beauty was a genuine spirit of depth and magnitude also unlike any I had ever seen.

This is not a glamorization of the "wonders" of poverty; poverty always is, as Gandhi said, "the worst form of violence."

Rather, this is recognition that the mind-boggling pressures that these people experienced on a daily basis engendered a spiritual, familial harmony, an egalitarian dignity — and an emotional richness greater than the wealth of a king of kings.

Upon my return from Florida, I had cause to continue to think about this idea. Coming home meant that I could spend more time with my younger brother Joey, someone else who has, for me, brought an intimately human face to this phenomena; and this face, his beautiful face, is one that is fiercely important and instructive to me.

Joey is a freshman in high school, a shining, kind, gifted teenager whose entire life has been rocked by the onset of severe epilepsy.

Two years ago, 13-year old Joe, a bright, effusive, athletic, compassionate, tender young man, began experiencing sudden, massive seizures that unexpectedly wracked his beautiful, powerful, helpless young body violently against the ground, chattering his head and his arms and his legs against the asphalt or the concrete or the ice where he falls.

Once, while alone, he collapsed face first in the street and was left with a face so completely bloodied and torn that it carried the shattering resonance of a burn victim's face.

Worse, the medication he was given to interrupt these seizures plunged him into an all-encompassing depression so severe that Joey, my brother, became virtually unrecognizable to me.

He literally became a different person; a comparison of the handwriting in his journal during his medicated state and his post-medicated state suggests that two completely different people wrote the entries.

My magical, beautiful brother, with whom I had always shared a very special relationship, had been transformed into a sullen, uncommunicative, miserable person whom I did not know and could not help, someone whom I could hardly even talk to, try as I might.

Eventually, Joey was taken off this medication, and, as if by magic, the old Joe reappeared, open, warm, compassionate, and loving.

While he continues to suffer from seizures and their attendant miseries, a wonderfully new component of his life has emerged, seemingly wrought from his struggle.

Joey has begun to tell me, with all of the gravity and sincerity and wisdom of a kindly priest, or of a wizened, humble sage, of the newfound appreciation that he has for life, each and every day of his life.

He tells me that when he wakes in the morning, almost every day, he looks forward to that day in a way that he never had before. He senses, in a way that I suspect many people never will, the promise that each day holds.

Joe has told me that he doesn't look beyond that day. He simply experiences a powerful and reverential realization of how wonderful it is to be alive, and a genuine appreciation of all of those things that he does have.

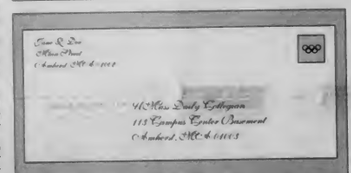
Joe tells me that he has radically changed his plans for his life. Rather than the big money fantasies that he, like so many of us, has envisioned, Joe now tells me that all that he wants to do with his life is to help other people and to be close to his loving family. That's it.

He says, "I don't want a lot of money, or a mansion, like I used to think I did. Now I just want to use what I have to help other people, for the rest of my life."

When he says this, the sincerity in his eyes and in his voice and in his heart is true and powerful and free.

And I think to myself: "This is a 15-year old kid saying these things, this wisdom and this wonder."

Crushing pressure forges the diamond.



Does it have to be this way?

My plan is to spend a lot more time living and loving life, listening to and learning from and unconditionally loving my brother Joe, and thinking more about these questions.

I want to know the answer.

I love that kid so much.

Michael Hinkley is a UMass student.

Letters to the editor are always welcome. Since our e-mail account is down, bring a typed copy down to the Collegian in the Campus Center basement. Your name, phone number and where you live should be included. If you have any questions, talk to Tanya, Alexis or Gary.

Infertility nightmare

On Jan. 26, at the Greenfield Courthouse, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) held a pre-trial hearing about how much radioactive pollution Yankee Atomic is allowed to leave behind after its final decommissioning of the Yankee Rowe nuclear power plant.

Citizens Awareness Network (CAN), represented by Debbie Katz and CAN lawyers, discussed the plan with judges from the NRC. In a shocking moment, Waffles the Clown walked into the courtroom with a Nazi outfit on and took the only seat in the room, next to the nuclear industry lawyers.

> "My genes were exposed to fallout from the thousands of nuclear tests that have been conducted at the Nevada test site."
>
> Doctress Neutopia

During the night session, citizens were able to give testimony to the NRC judges about nuclear pollution and the health risks of nuclear power.

It was a spiritual experience to watch people express their concerns, frustrations, fears and anger at the nuclear industry in such intelligent ways.

Waffles appeared again, this time dressed in drag as a very fat woman. He sang a song about nukes and money. His skirt reminded us of how "safe" radiation levels, according to Yankee Rowe, are based on what a 200-pound male can withstand. Women and children are not considered with this measurement.

The industry selected this measurement standard to lower clean-up costs. CAN is trying to get the clean-up measurement changed to the amount of radiation exposure that is safe for children.

The testimony brought out a whole range of emotions, from laughter to tears.

I had taken part in a 45-minute Buddhist meditation sitting at a friend's house in Greenfield before the testimony. It helped me prepare my thoughts.

My speech went something like this: "My name is Doctress Neutopia. It is ironic that I am a futurist, because on the biological level, I have no future. I am a dead-end gene. You see, I am sterile. After a year of painful fertility tests, doctors diagnosed me as having unexplainable infertility. Why after four billion years of my ancestors reproducing, have my genes been unable to pass on to the next generation? Is there really no explanation for this?

"In my mind, there is an obvious explanation. I was born in 1956, when the superpower paranoia of the Cold War was in the insane process of producing stockpiles of thousands of nuclear weapons. Nuclear power plants were popping up like cankers caused from a fatal venereal disease across the American landscape.

"My genes were exposed to fallout from the thousands of nuclear tests that have been conducted at the Nevada test site. Is it really any wonder why my genes were terminated, since deadly radiation attacks the reproductive organs?

"Boston doctors informed me that I had the option of taking fertility drugs or using the reproductive technologies such as in vitro fertilization to create an artificial contraception. Being that I am a struggling artist who is living without health insurance, this option was not open to me. I quickly realized that the new reproductive technologies of the medical establishment only work for the rich.

"Now, Nuclear Regulatory Commission Judges, you must know what the word 'plutocracy' means. It means government by the rich. Is it any wonder that the plutocracy's by-product is the most poisonous substance on Earth: plutonium? As more and more plutonium is released into the water and soil, is it any surprise that infertility in both men and women is increasing? What a sad world it becomes when more and more people are doomed to live lives without the joy of intimate relationships and the pleasure of being parents!"

Let's hope and pray we can find a way to clean up the radioactive nightmare, so that unlike my own personal genetic death story, the human race can have a future based on true love, healthy reproduction and safe, clean solar power.

Doctress Neutopia is a UMass alumna.

Welcome to the working week

"What skills do you possess, Mr. Messaros?"

"I, uh, have this great backhand move I use in NHL 99. Beats the goalie every time."

"Is that all?"

"Uh, I lose my patience quite easily."

"Hmm. Well, there's a shortage of underqualified English majors out there. Especially ones with a short fuse. Welcome aboard."

"Great. Is it alright if I don't show up for a couple of months?"

"Going on a little European vacation after graduation?"

"No. I'm just really into the Magnum P.I. reruns on USA. I'd like to see the episode where Higgins finally admits that he's Robin Masters."

"Can't you tape it?"

"Oh, then it loses something."

"I hear you. Show up whenever."

And that's how I figure the job fair will go tomorrow. I mean, I haven't been told otherwise. It's my first one and I'm actually looking forward to it.

From what I can gather from Up All Night movies and Saved by the Bell, I'm going to get a great job, preferably in some exotic locale, by turnin' on the charm.

Mike Messaros

And unless movies from the '80s have been lying to me, I'm going to get it on with the boss' wife.

"Mr. Messaros are those peanut butter stains on your resume?"

"Yup."

"Creamy or chunky?"

"Superchunky."

"You're hired."

I'm going to leave the Dilbert-type jobs to those computer science and engineering geeks. The English major, if you didn't know already, is for the dreamers.

We don't like to get our hands dirty. Fix a car? No thank you. Tell you about the symbolism of the baroque door handle in early Russian literature? Yes, sir. And employers eat that up.

"Do you have experience with a computer?"

"Ever hear of a program called 'Solitaire?'"

"Ooh, you're well-versed."

"Well, once I get someone to turn the comp... comp... I'm sorry, I'm drawing a blank."

"Computer?"

"Hells yeah! Once I get that kitten purrin' there's no stopping me. Did you know I once won 1,208 games in a row?"

"You did not!"

"I did. I had the hint option on the whole time, but whatever."

"Ah, someone who's not afraid to ask for help. What do you want for a starting salary?"

The thing is, computers are going to be obsolete after the dawn of the millennium. We're going back to abacuses. So why even worry about computers?

You're going to be seeing Steve Jobs at Bickfords during the graveyard shift trying to convince a bunch of stoned high school kids that a side order of hash isn't what they think it is.

Chump.

"You put down here as your career objective... what's this?"

"To kick some ass and break some hearts."

"Oh, yeah. Couldn't make that out, what with the peanut butter stain and all."

I've been talking to some people, you know, around, and I've gotten the impression that supposedly I should be worried about this.

Supposedly I should speak the King's English in my interview.

Supposedly I should wear pants.

Listen, the world is turning on its head and people have to be ready. The old rules don't apply.

We're going to be using abacuses, casual day is going to be on Wednesday (hump day will now be on Tuesday).

Cathy, that loveably neurotic cartoon character, will finally fit into a pair of pants.

And Busta Rhymes will make a video where he's not mugging into a fish-eye lens. It's a whole new world.

"Says here you were a 'drifter' for a number of years. You want to talk about that?"

"Well, I basically went around solving people's problems, healing old wounds, bringing families together, talking to God. I was sort of on a mission."

"Sounds like that show Highway to Heaven."

"Yeah, well... hey, you know what? That's what I was thinking about. Man, I do that all the time. I was actually in middle school during those years. Boy, I don't even give blood much less heal old wounds. Whew! What was I thinking?"

"I don't know, but I like your style kid. You've got fire in your belly."

"That's because I had Pepsi for breakfast and I didn't wake up until 10 minutes ago."

Mike Messaros is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Mary Miles Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Flatkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Amherst becomes lost city of Alanis on Thursday

Alanis Morrisette played all her hits for her fans Thursday night at the Mullins Center.

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

ALANIS MORISSETTE
Mullins Center
Feb. 11

The queen of vengeance reigned over the William D. Mullins Center last Thursday night in a show that did not let down the Alanis Morissette faithful.

Morissette was preceded by a riff-oriented opening set played by Liz Phair, who proved the perfect tune-up for the headliner. To steal an inappropriately tame and overused line from American Bandstand, Phair "had a beat that you could dance to" — had there been room to really dance among the dense Mullins Center crowd.

Phair's most recent album, whitechocolatespacegg, was well represented during the performance, which culminated, at least from the fans' point of view, with the single "Polyester Bride."

Despite the energizing introduction, it was clear who the screaming masses came to see. As Alanis Morissette took the stage and opened her show with "Baba," a number off of her latest release, Supposed Former Infatuation Junkie, the brunette star took to thrashing about the stage, as any even casual follower has come to expect and eagerly anticipate.

Her excitable physical routine stood at an interesting juxtaposition to the arrangement of the stage. Peaceful, herbally decorated wall-hangings were draped high to either side of the band, while a downright sedating filtered light splashed patterns around the Mullins Center.

"You Live, You Learn," a single off of her debut album under her current title, Jagged Little Pill, was backed by a symbolic snow-boarding video game graphic displayed on a gargantuan screen behind the singer and her mates.

These peripheries were all but invisible as a frame to Morissette's antics, however. At one point, the headliner even clutched a six-string and offered the crowd a personal song-long axing.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the evening, though, was the spin that Alanis took on some of her earlier songs. Beginning with the forth song of the show, "Hand in My Pocket," Morissette played most of the numbers off of her first album over an almost tribal-sounding rhythm of bongos.

Most notable was the night's rendition of "You Oughta Know." Quite possibly her most recognizable ditty, this song, when released in 1995, instantly became an anthem for all those who have felt romantically slighted in life.

Morissette began the song off slowly and methodically, steering clear of the raw-pace of the radio version. The tune took a dark and conniving feel to it; almost seeming on the verge of explosion before, at the third repetition of the chorus, finally let loose in its usual fit of rage.

Alanis did a superb job of stripping her songs of their refined radio clarity and replacing that with emotion and personality, precious qualities that are often lost in the control of the studio.

Strangely, with two LP's worth of material under her belt, Morissette's best-received number of the night was released on the City of Angels soundtrack. "Uninvited," the eerie epic that graced the radio airwaves on a regular basis this past spring and summer, was easily the most popular selection of the evening. It was during the tail-end of this song that Morissette left the stage for the first time.

Responding to the beckoning of ceremonial cigarette lighters waving throughout the sea of supporters, Morissette returned for two separate encore sets, each consisting of two songs. The first encore boasted two hit singles: "Thank U" and "Ironic," one from each of her albums, and the second offered "Unsent" and "Not the Doctor" to put a cap on what was a pleasantly exhausting night.

Indie-rock queen and new mother Liz Phair hit the big time Thursday night, opening for Alanis Morrisette at the Mullins Center.

Sloan rocks the Iron Horse

By Matthew Nixon
Collegian Staff

SLOAN
Iron Horse
Feb. 11

NORTHAMPTON — Last Thursday night was one of those times when something lined up. Alanis Morisette, Liz Phair, Ladysmith Black Mambazo and Sloan could all be found within the same 10-mile radius.

Mambazo sold out long ago. Liz Phair was opening up for Alanis, so it came down to which Canadian(s) to spend the evening with. My choice to see the lesser known act was a good one.

No cavernous venue for these guys, just the small raised stage up by the windows at the Iron Horse. The Halifax, Nova Scotia's four-piece, hour-and-a-half-long set catapulted the audience back 20 years to a time when music was full of harmonies, guitar licks aplenty and a general good time.

It is an outrage that such a talented band escapes major label attention. Sloan are rock heros in their native land and easily fill 4,000-seat venues. Around 50 people showed up for their area appearance.

Main vocalist Chris Murphy (looking like a poor woman's Val Kilmer a la The Saint) in a turtleneck sweater apologized for the evening's quiet performance after the show. What was he talking about? Sloan rocked.

Murphy took over drumming duties from Andrew Scott in order for Scott to get the retro thing in full gear with organ solos. Every band member sang a song or two.

Murphy let the band members run to the bathroom while he strummed a few tunes. He asked for requests and one of the many guys on the dance floor shouted "hoser" at the man. Such a refined bunch in the Valley.

Up–and–coming Pat McGee Band enlivens Pearl Street

Next-big-thing the Pat McGee Band performed to an enthusiastic audience Thursday night at Pearl Street.

By Tom Sadlowski
Collegian Staff

PAT MCGEE BAND
Pearl Street Nightclub
Feb. 11

NORTHAMPTON — Practically emerging overnight and having one of the fastest word-of-mouth publicity campaigns that an act may have, the Pat McGee Band is packing clubs across the country. This past Thursday night at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton was no exception.

In only their second trip to the area and without the benefit of mainstream airplay, the Pat McGee Band was able to captivate their mostly first-time audience. "Girl from Athens" off of lead vocalist Pat McGee's solo project quickly got the crowd moving, before the band stimulated the audience with "Rebecca."

"Straight Curve" delightfully kept up the pace before "Haven't Seen for a While" offered a special treat. As frontman Pat McGee left the stage with the rest of his band, acoustic guitarist Al Walsh remained to perform a fancy James Taylor cover.

The band returned to re-energize the audience with "Can't Miss Much" and "Never Had."

"Passion" got the crowd singing, and by the time "Could Have Been a Song" was played, the entire venue was serving as the chorus for the band. The encore got the crowd moving even more, and a second one was requested, but unfortunately never given.

Opener Owsley performed a spectacular set as well, with "Sentimental Favorite" striking the audience's fancy before the magnificent closing "Good Old Days," which is sure to gain remarkable attention. Owlsey is presently awaiting their Giant debut late this Spring.

The Pat McGee Band is riding the wave of good fortune. Their second self-release, General Admission, an extraordinary, well-crafted disc, came out in January. The band got a tour bus this past December, and expects to sign a major recording contract soon. The band's music has been featured on MTV, they have received high praise from both Billboard and MTV Online, and have opened for such artists as Jimmy Buffett, Fleetwood Mac and the Counting Crows.

The Pat McGee Band will return to Pearl Street Nightclub in April. They are expected to record their major label debut this summer before returning to the touring scene next fall. The Pat McGee Band's recordings can be heard on the Internet at www.patmcgeeband.com.

Go to College – Tuition Free!
Work One Weekend a Month and Earn 100% College Tuition!
In the Army National Guard
YOU Can...
- Receive 100% College Tuition
- Receive the Montgomery G.I. Bill!
- Learn a Job Skill of your choice!
- Earn over $110.00 per weekend to start!
- Call today and discover just how easy paying for college can be!

CALL: 1-800-GO-GUARD
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY NATIONAL GUARD YOU CAN

amc
Hampshire 8 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Thanks to all our Loyal Patrons for 20 Great Years!
We'll be changing the way you see movies with....
16 NEW SCREENS
Fall '99
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9353
Mt. Farms Mall
Message In A Bottle (PG-13)
Monday-Thursday 1:45 | 5:30 @ 52.50 | 8:20
A Civil Action (PG-13)
Monday-Thursday 1:45 | 8:30
Payback (R)
Monday-Thursday 2:00 | 6:00 @ 52.50 | 8:40
Blast From The Past (PG-13)
Monday-Thursday 2:00 | 5:50@ 52.50 | 8:40
Varsity Blues (R)
Monday-Thursday 5:40 @ 52.50

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 Savings on eyeglasses from the new on-site Optical Service at UHS.
2 A great place to get contacts leases.
3 Convenient hours and location.
4 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
5 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

DELI CLERKS
Immediate openings for weekday and weekend shifts at our Hadley Cumberland Farms/Summit Subs. We offer steady employment, competative wages, 90 day pay increase and benefits. Apply in person or call 1-800-828-0869 x-7922.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

WMUA FM 91
The voice of UMass is looking for dependable & enthusiastic people to help in the following depts.
News
Publicity
Sports
Visual Media
Underwriting
Fund Drive
If this strikes your interest come by and check us out! All are welcome to visit us at 105 campus center (next to the collegian) or call 545-2876

BARTENDING COURSE
✓ Student Discounts
✓ Professional Bartending Training
✓ Tips on Finding a Top Paying Job
✓ Become a Talented, Socially Conscious Bartender
✓ National Restaurant Association Alcohol Awareness Program
✓ Taught by Seasoned Boston Bartenders
Call Now Space is Limited
1-800-467-2028
We Accept
Class Begins
Friday, Febuary 26th @ 6:00pm
Mullin-Faeber Rm
Valintine Hall
Amherst College

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

You've worked hard to get where you are. Isn't it time to start seeing the results?

At PricewaterhouseCoopers, you will.

free your mind

KWASHA HR SOLUTIONS

Please join us for the:

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

CAMPUS WIDE CAREER FAIR

Date: Wednesday, February 17th
Time: 10 A.M. – 3 P.M.
Place: The Campus Center

Please visit our website at www.pwcglobal.com/khrscareers

PricewaterhouseCoopers is proud to be an Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Employer.

You'll find us consulting to global and national Fortune 500 companies providing an array of Human Resources Services. You'll find us using cutting edge technology to best serve our clients. And you'll find yourself contributing from the very moment you join our team.

Whether it's Benefits Solutions or Human Resources Consulting Services, Kwasha HR Solutions has an integrated team of professionals and services for every HR need. Our entry level opportunities include:

- Actuarial Analysts - Retirement & Healthcare
- Defined Contribution Account Analysts
- Defined Benefits Administration Analysts
- Health & Welfare Administration Analysts
- Compensation Analysts
- Systems & Technology Associates
- Benefits Service Representatives

© 1999 PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP. PricewaterhouseCoopers refers to the U.S. organization of PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP and other members of the worldwide PricewaterhouseCoopers organization.

Softball takes lumps in FBT

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

Although senior pitcher Danielle Henderson was her usually excellent self during the Fiesta Bowl Tournament, the rest of the Massachusetts softball team may not have been.

Up against Arizona, the No. 2 ranked team nationally, Henderson fanned 10 batters and walked only one. The 1998 national strike-out per game leader was instrumental in the Minutewomen's near upset of the Wildcats, who prevailed 2-1 in a seven-inning thriller.

The defeat was one of three for No. 10 UMass during the weekend tournament through Saturday. Despite their highest pre-season ranking in school history, the Minutewomen escaped the Arizona invitational with two victories, one of which came during another Henderson performance against Alabama, 8-1.

The Commack, N.Y. native struck out seven batters, while third baseman Annie Smith collected two hits and an RBI for the Maroon and White. Teri Rooney and Jacqueline Scarlett also added a pair of hits for UMass, which finished the season-opening trip with a mark of 2-3.

The other win, which proved to be the highlight of the trip, was earned Sunday against a highly-touted No. 7 Texas team. The Minutewomen shocked the Longhorns, 3-1, behind seven strong innings from Henderson, who powered her team to its second win of the tournament with no earned runs and 13 Ks. Mandy Galas and Kiley Schofield drove in the UMass runs.

The other contests, however, were not quite as productive. Despite a two-run flurry in the final inning, the Minutewomen fell to Arizona State, 7-3. Sophomore Carrie Jeffries threw six strong innings for UMass. The Placentia, Calif. native struck out three and walked three while yielding seven earned runs. Junior catcher Nikki Faessler chipped in with two hits and an RBI.

The remaining game was a 16-4 trouncing at the hands of No. 13 Long Beach State. Freshmen Jennifer Hadley allowed 10 runs in three innings pitched for the Minutewomen, who collected only six hits in defeat.

UMass will next play on Feb. 26 at the NFCA Leadoff Classic, which takes place in Columbus, Ga. The team is slated to meet Michigan State, Nicholls State and Oklahoma.

■ women's hoop

continued from page 10

Despite falling behind by as many as eight points in the first half, UMass did not let its guard down, and battled back to capture its first lead, 20-19 with 6:21 to go before the break.

After relinquishing the lead, UMass was able to take its next advantage when Kathy Coyner drilled an open three- pointer, for a 29-28 edge, with 1:16 left.

Michelle Houseright answered Coyner with a long jumper just inside the arc, before Lucia Madajova sent UMass to the lockers on a high note with a put-back in the lane off a Coyner miss.

Unfortunately, UMass would connect on only four more field goals for the remainder of the ball game.

Only because UMass shot a perfect 12-for-12 from the free throw line in the second half (16-for-16 overall), were the Minutewomen able to keep the contest within reach late into the game.

The Hokies claimed a 47-40 lead with 10:29 to play, and appeared to have things in control, but UMass was able to close the gap to 49-45, as Caroline Nehls sank a pair from the charity stripe roughly four minutes later.

The Hokies reeled off a 9-2 run that effectively dashed hopes of an upset.

Amy Wetzel sealed the deal by knocking down a trifecta from the right corner to make the score 61-49, and the game quickly turned into a free-throw shooting fest for the Hokies.

The Minutewomen set a new Mullins Center record for shooting futility in a half with their 13-percent inaccuracy, but they were also plagued by poor ball movement.

UMass collectively only tallied three assists, another Mullins Center low, which was perhaps the most disturbing figure of all to O'Brien.

"We our not going to beat anybody with three assists," O'Brien said. "I don't care who we are up against, you have to distribute the ball much better than that."

The Minutewomen, sparked by the outstanding two-way play of Alison MacFarland, were able to salvage the weekend by dumping the Dukes on Sunday.

MacFarland shared the team lead in scoring with birthday-girl Nekole Smith, as each had 16 points, but it was her defensive intuition that stole the show.

The Brick, N.J., native came up with three key steals, two of which came in succession off in-bounds passes and were part of six consecutive points for MacFarland.

After coming off their worst shooting exhibition in a half on Friday night, the Minutewomen assembled one of their best, as the team shot 15-for-25 (65 percent) in the first half on Sunday.

While the Minutewomen appeared to be in cruise control with a 59-44 bulge and only 6:12 to play,

The Dukes went on a 13-0 rampage to massively trim the deficit to two. Gina Naccarato (eight points, four assists) was responsible for the last five points of the run. She knocked down two jumpers and a free throw in succession.

After furious encouragement from O'Brien, UMass regained its collective composure, and scored seven straight points in a run of their own.

MacFarland was one of the main calming influences, as she buried four straight free throws to push the lead back up to 63-57 with 40 seconds remaining, to reposition UMass for the win.

"We let up a little in the second half," O'Brien said. "But it was a good sign that the whole team responded at the end, and made the big plays when we needed them."

Mac's magic ignites UMass on Sunday

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

After losing a crucial Atlantic 10 tilt to No. 11 Virginia Tech Friday night, the Massachusetts women's basketball team was in dire need of a spark against Duquesne on Sunday.

The aforementioned boost came in the form of junior guard Alison MacFarland who dazzled the William D. Mullins Center faithful by turning in her most complete game of the season.

MacFarland contributed to the 68-59 win over the Dukes with superb defensive intuition, complimented by solid shooting on her way to a 16-point, three-steal and two-assist output.

She was 5-9 from the field, and a spotless 6-6 from the free throw line.

Much of MacFarland's offense was the direct result of her stellar play on the opposite end of the floor.

She got act rolling on Sunday, by leaping to intercept an errant pass at mid-court, slapping the ball upcourt to herself for an uncontested lay-up from the right side.

That play put UMass ahead 16-15 at a point when the offense was playing somewhat lethargically.

However her first steal was only a prelude to more Mac magic, as she was largely responsible for one of the most exciting sequences of the season late in the first half.

After Nekole Smith hit a turn-around jumper in two defenders' faces, Tez Kraft stole the ball in the right corner on defense, and then fired the ball upcourt to a streaking MacFarland who hit another lay-in.

Instead of basking in her accomplishment, MacFarland turned around and headed back to defense to snatch the inbounds pass, and then dashed to the hoop for another lay-up in the form of left-handed scoop shot.

Before one could even blink, there was MacFarland intercepting yet another inbounds pass, leading the crowd to break into hysteria.

As MacFarland was about to swoop into the lane for her third consecutive lay-up, she was aggressively fouled by Sherri Hannan in frustration.

After Kathy Coyner emotionally congratulated her with several chest bumps and a hug, MacFarland nailed both free throws to complete her personal six-point outburst.

"I was just glad to be able to stop for a second after the foul," MacFarland said. "It was such an exciting moment, even more so for Kathy," she joked.

All kidding aside, UMass found itself comfortably ahead 39-21 with one minute to go in the first half after MacFarland completed the theatrics.

The sort of well-rounded, and fiercely competitive play that she exhibited on Sunday is exactly what Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien expects from MacFarland every time out of the gate.

"You have to play the game out of sheer reaction," O'Brien said. "Mac did that today, and that was one of the keys to victory."

Entering yesterday's contest, MacFarland had averaged 9.1 points, two assists and just over one steal per game.

For UMass to succeed in its final two regular season games as well as the ensuing A-10 tournament, similar production out of MacFarland will be imperative, even if she is not able to repeat the thrilling feat she accomplished on Sunday.

■ playoffs

continued from page 10

the stretch is their schedule. UMass has the easiest remaining schedule of the Hockey East contenders who are battling for the last spot. The teams the Minutemen have left have a combined Hockey East record of 32-40-1 [illegible] the Minutemen have [illegible] the road?

"I look at the other teams on the schedule and they really have it tougher. Lowell will be a huge league game for us. The Providence series will be important and of course Merrimack. But it's Hockey East and anybody can bet on anybody on any given night," Mallen said of the remaining schedule. "We will need to use this game as momentum to keep moving forward."

The Minutemen will need to build off the momentum of the recent Northeastern win and will need to also find a way to win on the road in order to qualify for the Hockey East postseason.

"We are keeping ourselves in contention. With our team being that young, it's really important to keep fighting tooth and nail until the end, and I like our chances," Mallen said. "The team played really good tonight [referring to the Northeastern win]. I still can't believe we are down so many points in this league. We should be in fourth or fifth position. This team is coming along. We are going to make the playoffs and we are going to surprise a couple of teams," said UMass captain Dean Stork.

UMass will continue it's quest starting Saturday night in a return trip to Tsongas Arena in Lowell for a battle with the River Hawks. The Minutemen will follow that with a weekend home-and-home with Providence, and then a trip to Merrimack on March 5. Before the Hockey East schedule finishes up for UMass they have a date with Army at the Mullins Center Friday at 7 p.m.

Paul Teves is a Collegian columnist.

Lackluster effort hurts hockey

By James Murphy
Collegian Staff

LOWELL — On Oct. 22, in its Hockey East opener, the Massachusetts men's hockey team held a 3-2 lead over the UMass-Lowell Riverhawks with two minutes left. The Riverhawks tied the game with 1:31 left in regulation, and won the game with 32 seconds left. Since then, UMass has been plagued by third-period let-downs and the lack of a 60-minute effort every game.

On Friday night at the Minutemen traveled to Lowell for their second tilt with the Riverhawks, one would imagine revenge and proving they are capable of playing 60 minutes of hockey was on their minds.

The playoff picture might have also crossed the mind of the young Minuteman squad as they stood only one point out of the final playoff spot in the tight Hockey East race.

Unfortunately, none of the above seemed to be on the Minutemen's minds when they took the ice at Tsongas Arena. They came out flat, giving up two first-period goals, the second of which proved to be the difference, in a tough 2-1 loss to the Riverhawks.

The Minutemen were only able to muster up six first- period shots as their offense continued to remain invisible. Riverhawk forward Jeremy Kyte capitalized on a Minutemen defensive lapse early in the first, putting one by goalie Mike Johnson (who was stellar in net once again) at 7:44 of the period.

At 15:36 of the first period, Lowell forward Yorick Treille broke in with Dan and Mark Fontas on what basically was a three-on-none and ripped one short side for a 2-0 Riverhawk lead.

The Minutemen came out in the second with a little more spunk in their game when Kris Wallis let loose a shot that rung off the post, and Jeff Blanchard scored his team-leading 19th goal at 11:06, cutting the Lowell lead in half. Blanchard took a feed from Nick Stephens and blasted it by Riverhawk goalie Scott Fankhouser.

The third period saw the Minutemen come out with the same intensity, but once again they were plagued by bad luck. In what would have been the tying goal, Jeff Turner hit the post with four minutes left.

The Minutemen outplayed the Riverhawks for the last 40 minutes, but their lack of a 60-minute effort and some bad breaks late in the game had built a hill too steep to climb.

■ minutemen

continued from page 10

Philadelphia, Massachusetts could conceivably break into the NCAA tournament. If not, an NIT berth would be assured.

In a similar respect, the Rams did not quite steal the lead from the Minutemen until URI guard Preston Murphy sunk the second of two free throws with 4:29 left in the contest, making the score 53-52.

Like against Rhody, UMass continues to cling to last-gasp chances in this season. With 41 seconds left, Minuteman guard Monty Mack hit a layup to cut the URI lead to one.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

while the other is praying just to make it to the National Invitation Tournament.

"It was a two-half game. They came out and jumped on us, and just beat us in every phase of the game," Harrick said. "And we're lucky enough to have come out and had enough down the stretch to win."

After falling into third-place of their conference division, the Minutemen will likely be unable to earn the first-round bye in the Atlantic 10 Tournament. With NCAAs no longer a realistic goal, Flint hopes his team can finish on a strong note and set [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Live @ The Hadley Pub "Sugar Maple Voodoo" Local Amherst Blues-Rock Three sets 21+ Wednesday Feb.17,1999 10PM Contact Alex@546-1755 for info

FUNK CLUB AUDITIONS! Hip hop dancers wanted. Sat Feb 20, 12 to 5 pm. Boyden 237. Callbacks, Sun Feb. 21 Questions? Call Charlene 6-5590 or Amelia 665-8649

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Pufton Village Partially furnished availible immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

AUTO FOR SALE

85 Jeep CJ7, 4-cyl, 4-spd, 73k miles, Hunter Green, Soft top, New Alpine stero Rims, 31" tires, Call Matt 253-9170

1990 Vw Jetta Silver good running condition. 128,000 miles. $1600.00 Call 256-8634 - 256-0222

COMPUTERS

AST 133 MHz pentium with 16GB, windows 95, Netscape, microsoft word, Lotus Applications, plus more. $700.00 or B/O. Call Noah 546-2147 Free delivery within UMass or nearby Amherst area!

EMPLOYMENT

Co-Managers Wanted Campus Design & Copy is seeking highly motivated students for Co-Manager positions in a student-run collective. Applications available at CD&C,2nd floor Student Union Application Deadline Feb 16

Work in the Music Business! Seeking college reps to work on grassroots marketing campaigns for emerging recording artists. Fax resume to Mike Nowicki at (212) 629-3605 or email miken@metroent.com

EMPLOYMENT

COUNSELORS: TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: All Competitive Team Sports, All Water Sports. PLUS: Camping/Hiking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Riflery, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top Salaries, Awesome Facilities, Rm/Bd/Laudry, Travel. CALL Steve Rubin at (800) 473-6104, or E-MAIL COB-BACHIEF@AOL.COM

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach gymnastics, athletics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, riflery, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activiteies, arts and crafts, newspaper, yearbook, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/20/99-8/17/99. Call (800) 832-8228 or E-mail: camp4you@aol.com for an application. Visit us: WWW.CANADENSIS.COM

DJ Wanted For Mobile Parties For greater Springfield area experience helpfull DWN Transportation needed Call 413-525-8260

FREE RADIO +$1250! Fundraiser open to student groups & organizations. Earn $3-$5 per Visa/MC app. We supply all material at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box. 1-800-932-0528 x 65. www.ocmconcepts.com

Housework good pay near by. Car needed. 548-9635

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Wayne for Girls-sister half of brother/sister private camp in Northeastern Pennsylvania (3hrs from New York City) 6/22-8/20/99. If you love children and want a caring, fun environment we are looking to hire staff for: Tennis, Golf, Gymnastics, Swimming (W.S.I. preferred), Sailing, Waterskiing, Piano, Basketball, Softball, Volleyball, Soccer, Self-Defense, Low Ropes, Drama Director, Drawing and Painting, Ceramics, Photography, Jewelry, Linoleun Cuts, Batik, Calligraphy, Sculpture, Guitar, Silk-Screening, Cheerleading, Aerobics, Video, Group Leaders, Drivers, Housekeeping, Night Watchperson, Kitchen/Salad. On Campus Interviews March 5th. Call 1-800-279-3019 or e-mail: campwayneg@aol.com

PRESTIGIOUS NORTH-EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a life-time? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool Musical Director and General Counselors. INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd TRAIL'S END CAMP 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

HELP WANTED EARN EXTRA CASH!! MAKE YOU OWN HOURS!! RESPONSIBLE STUDENTS TO MARKET/MANAGE CITIBANK PROMOTIONS ON CAMPUS. FREE GIVEAWAYS! EARN $400+/WEEK. CALL JOANN AT 1-800-950-8472 EXT.117

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)—Sports oriented, Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or wayneboys@aol.com.

Sbarro's Restaurant at Hampshire Mall needs closers. Flexible hours Good pay Apply in person

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net or 770-937-6764

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99? College Pro, a $25 million company, seeks highly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goal-oriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $7.30-$9.00/hr doing work you care about! Campaign for tough antipollution laws to protect our air and water. Paid training, resume value, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours, casual/fun workplace. Clean Water Action 413-584-9830

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Full size mattress and boxspring great condition $150/bo 367-0095

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

HOUSE FOR RENT

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

LOST & FOUND

Found in Upper Central Necklace Discribe and Receive 6-3690

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Do you need to pay off your bills once and for all? Personal, Debt Consolidation. Credit Card Repair Call 1-888-780-8082

TRAVEL

BOSTON SPRING BREAK '99 To Mazatlan from $399 To Cancun from $369 7 nights, 5 to 14 FREE meals 10 to 32 hours of FREE drinks CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463 Visit our web site www.college-tours.com

#1 Spring Break Specials!Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Panama City vacations! Free Parties - No Cover. Best beachfront hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

TRAVEL

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $835. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplashtours.com

CANCUN*NASSAU* JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 ww.classtravel.com

SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter- Campus 800-327-6013

It's not too late! Affordable spring break trips to Florida and other destinations. Call Erich for details 549-5287

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

ARE YOU GRADUATING THIS SPRING?

DO YOU WANT TO SELL YOUR HOUSE OR TURN OVER YOUR LEASE?

DO IT NOW!

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE READ THE DAILY COLLEGIAN.

SO, MAKE LIFE EASY ON YOURSELF AND ADVERTISE IN THE

CLASSIFIEDS PLACE AN AD NOW!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, FEB. 16

Community — The UMass Black Student Union presents "Remember the Times" paying tribute to the memory of Brother Kwame Ture and others at 7:30 p.m. in the Top of the Campus at the Campus Center. Dinner will be served.

Video — Elisabeth Subrin will show two experimental videos, entitled "Swallow" and "Shulie," which examine intersections of history and subjectivity within female biography at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House living room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 17

Community — The UMass Black Student Union and the W.E.B. Du Bois Library present "Story, Legacy, Saga: A Black History Celebration" at 4 p.m. in the Du Bois Library. There will be five student performances, food, a mural presentation and a lecture.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — Last information sessions for the Domestic Exchange program will be held Feb. 9, 10, 16 and 17 in room 604 of Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Deadline for applications is March 1. Call 545-5351 for more information.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-7:30 p.m. for eight weeks. Call 577-5316 if interested.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSA, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

CIBAVISION AOSEPT OPTICAL DISINFECTANT SOLUTION 12oz. Size.

ALL MONTH LONG!

Minuteman $6.99

University Store UMass Campus Center 413-545-2619

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

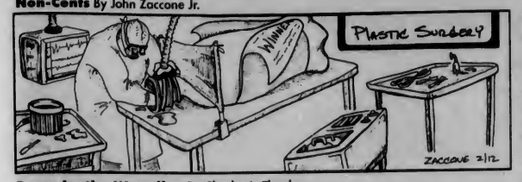
We give all of our profits to support University Programs

University Store "Not like a mall... Better."



HSCN Hosting Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
10	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
11	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
12	ABC/5 Boston	21	Govt to Govt
13	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
14	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	Sundance
15	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Bloomberg Financial
16	Weather Channel	26	CTN
17	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 16, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEOH	9	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Nova "Escape!" "FireCar Crash" (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 2)				★★½ "Malcolm X" (1992, Drama) Denzel Washington,			Prepare-Sanita
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Rivers' Run" (In Stereo)		"God's New Plan" (1999, Drama) Kelly Segal, Annabeth Gish,	News		Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Rivers' Run" (In Stereo)		"God's New Plan" (1999, Drama) Kelly Segal, Annabeth Gish,	News		Nightline
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Home Imp.	Hughleys	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	NYPD Blue "What's Up, Chuck	News		Nanny
WLVI	56		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Felicity "Todd McKinley"		News		Tonight Show
WHDH	6		News	NBC News	Wheel of Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Married...With
WTXX	20	6	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lana	Moesha	Clueless	Malcolm-Eddie	Between Bros.	News	Newsradio		News	Tonight Show
WVIT	30	18	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Friends	Med Abt. You
WTIC	61	10	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Frasier	King of the Hill PJs (In Stereo)		Guinness World Records		News	News		Friends	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	8	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Nova "Escape!" "FireCar Crash" (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 2)					Washington the Beautiful	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	2	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Home Imp.	Hughleys	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	NYPD Blue "What's Up, Chuck	News		Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha	Clueless	Malcolm-Eddie	Between Bros.	Med Abt. You	Med Abt. You		Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	49		Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	★½ "Crazy Young" (1961, Drama) Judy Roberts, Campbell Scott,
A&E	51		Northern Exposure	Law & Order	"Indifference"	Law & Order	Biography "Tony Randall"		Inside Story		Murder, She Wrote			Law & Order
CNN	43	23	Moneyline Newsnight			Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Late Edition Primetime	Sports		Moneyline
COM	49	29	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★½ "She-Devil" (1989, Comedy) Meryl Streep, Roseanne Barr				Saturday Night Live	Daily Show		Stein's Money
DISC	69		New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery	Rattlesnakes	Pyro-Tech (R)		New Detectives: Less Studies		FBI Files "Murdering Cowboy"	Pyro-Tech (R)
ESPN	46		Up Close	Sportscenter			College Basketball: Purdue at Michigan State (Live)				College Basketball: Arkansas at Florida. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	69		Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five "Ah-Nigrams"		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		Any Day Now (In Stereo)		Intimate Portrait			Golden Girls
MTV	48		Countdown	Cut (In Stereo)	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Biorhythm (R)	Biorhythm (R)	Biorhythm (R)	Biorhythm (R)	Real World	Biorhythm		Blame Game	Loveline
NICK	44		Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Catdog	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Laverne		Love Lucy	Stretched
SCIFI	45		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Amaz. Stories	Star Trek: "The Doomsday Machine"			Highlander: The Series			Friday the 13th: The Series		Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC	59	24	Home Again	Home Again	Medical Emergency		Trauma – Life in the E.R. (R)		Superfires					Trauma – Life in the E.R. (R)
TNT	50		Doa South "Flatliners"		★½ "Motherhood" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball: Miami Heat at Indiana Pacers. (In Stereo Live)				Inside NBA			Kung Fu: Legend
USA	47		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Black Rain" (1989, Drama) Michael Douglas, Andy Garcia. (In Stereo)					Undercover
HBO	60		(5:00)	★★½ "4 Little Girls" (1997, Documentary) (In Stereo) NR			★★★ "Amistad" (1997, Drama) Morgan Freeman. (In Stereo) R				★★ "No Contest" (1994, Drama) Shannon Tweed. R			"Different Str
MAX	61		(5:00)	★½ "Chairman of the Board" (1998) Carrot Top.			★★★ "Under Siege" (1992, Steven Seagal) R				★★ "Broken English" (1996) R			★★★ "Broken English" (1996) R
SHOW	62		(5:45) "The Sweetest Gift" (1998)	Helen Slayer.	★★ "Sloppy and the Drinkers" (1998) B.D. Wong.		★★½ "Bound" (1996, Drama) Jennifer Tilly. (In Stereo) R							★★★ "Broken English" (1996) R

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Down by the Waterline By Charles L. Thayler

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Take care today that you don't act without thinking first. Irrational or ill- conceived behavior can bring about undesirable results.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may need a little help today when it comes to expressing yourself openly. Trust that the words will come to you when the time is right.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You're in the mood for something stable and reliable, and a loved one may not be providing the kind of consistency that lends you comfort.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may be asking a great many questions today to little avail. The truth is that the time has come for you to stop asking and start doing.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You'll feel more comfortable than expected today when you're reunited with someone from your past. The truth is, the past lives in the present.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You are prepared to talk about almost anything today if given the chance. You are also likely to wax rather philosophically on several occasions.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You can rely on someone else's inconsistency today to win you a friendly bet with a third party. Don't play such games irresponsibly!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You'll have the chance to remember something from your past that is still affecting you quite profoundly though unconsciously today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — It will be important for you to know why certain things happen today. Ask the right questions and you're sure to receive some telling answers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — A little more care should be taken today when dealing with people you don't know well. Someone may not understand your way of doing things.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Your prospects are exciting today, but there is only so much you can do at this time before exhausting yourself. Pacing is essential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You'll have a chance to explore a new way of doing things today with someone who inspires you to "cut loose" and trust your gut feelings.

Quote of the Day

"If peeing your pants is cool, consider me Miles Davis!"

–Old woman from Billy Madison

Von Hess By Joe Hession

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Close to Home By John McPherson

Before performing a vasectomy, Dr. Credman always played the same song to help get himself psyched up.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Broccoli Rice Casserole
Falafel Pocket Sandwich

DINNER
MARDI GRAS

Worcester
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Broccoli Rice Casserole
Falafel Pocket Sandwich

DINNER
MARDI GRAS

Hampshire
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Broccoli Rice Casserole

DINNER
MARDI GRAS

Berkshire
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Broccoli Rice Casserole
Falafel Pocket Sandwich

DINNER
MARDI GRAS

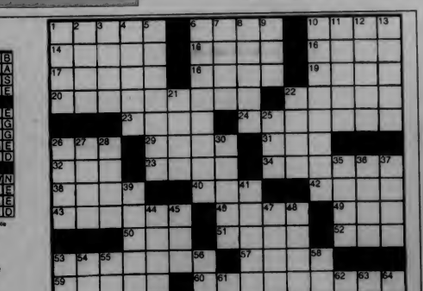
MARDI GRAS

Pan Fried Catfish with Pecan Butter Sauce
Cre[illegible] Bbq Marinated Pork
Roy Boy Jambalaya
[illegible]
Fried Rice
Fresh Vegetables
Bread Pudding
Cajun Bread Pudding
[illegible]
Cajun Fries
Cajun Rice
Cajun Beans

Night Editor	Casey McKana
Photo Technician	Brian McDermott
Copy Editor	Kenny Mc - Donald
Production Supervisor	Rob McSnow
Production Staff	D.J. McCorey Davey McPormenter

ACROSS

1 Sun-dried brick
6 Almanac tidbit
10 Hems and —
14 Pops
15 Molding
16 Strong metal
17 Spy
18 Moon goddess
19 Just
20 Cold-weather wear
22 Minister's residence
23 Name in elevators
24 Human necessity
26 Timid
29 Baseballer Slaughter
31 — loss for words
32 Large parrot
33 Mailed
34 Yellowstone sight
38 Annoys
40 Blank space
42 Friendly nation
43 Strut
46 Coarse file
49 Bullring cry
50 Physicians' org.
51 — Stanley Gardner
52 Fuel
53 Grad's possession
57 Pie crust ingredient
59 Archeologists' finds
60 Hallucinate
65 Polynesian lood
66 Nimble
67 See 66 Across
68 Gnaw
69 Evergreen tree
70 Cockpit occupant
71 Coal scuttles
72 Made an A
73 One-pot dinners



DOWN

1 Pronto (abbr.)
2 Venetian magistrate
3 Theaters
4 Ukulele cousin
5 Properties
6 Cowboy ballad, e.g.
7 Flu symptom
8 Pennies
9 Oolong, for one
10 Tibet's — Mountains
11 — We All?
12 Less promising
13 Scornful look
21 Movie
22 Allot
25 Witch
26 Alpine gear
27 Zeus' wife
28 Shaggy beasts
30 Rubberneck
35 Trudge In mud
36 Actress Raines
37 Some whiskeys
39 Fording places
41 Discussed
44 Biblical prophet
45 Thanksgiving treat
47 Thin strip of wood
48 Maybe
53 Moat
54 Boise's state
55 — over (studied)
56 Tomato jelly
58 Number
61 Sea eagle
62 Cleopatra's river
63 Shimmer
64 Lays the table
66 Hot spring

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

C	O	V	E	T	A	M	P	A	K	N	O	B
E	B	B	E	D	E	D	U	M	I	D	E	A
S	E	R	F	W	I	S	P	Y	D	A	I	S
H	Y	A	C	I	N	T	H	A	N	K	L	E
T	O	S	S	T	I	N	A
B	R	A	I	N	W	O	O	D	P	I	L	E
L	I	M	O	S	V	U	R	I	S	L	U	G
O	V	E	N	A	O	R	T	A	S	T	I	N	G
W	E	B	A	M	U	S	E	I	M	A	G	E
S	T	A	L	W	A	R	T	B	O	D	E	D
		P	O	N	S	M	A	I	L
Y	O	D	E	L	E	T	S	D	O	W	N
E	M	I	T	R	A	R	I	E	L	E	L	I	T	E
L	O	V	E	D	E	L	T	A	A	L	I	E
L	O	A	D	A	B	Y	S	S	O	N	O

2-16-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS weekend
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Tuesday, February 16, 1999

UMass hockey wears down Northeastern

UM hockey preps for tough stretch run

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts hockey team used a 12-man scoring effort to down Northeastern, 6-3, at the William D. Mullins Center Saturday night. UMass notched its first win over the Huskies (9-17-3, 4-13-2 in Hockey East) since a 5-4 overtime victory on Jan. 18, 1997.

Massachusetts	6
Northeastern	3

UMass (18-18-2, 5-13-2 HE) received a two-point effort from Kris Wallis, Nick Stephens and Toni Soderholm, and a three-point effort from the star of the game for the Minutemen, Martin Miljko, who tallied a goal and two assists on the night.

Although the Minutemen would cap the night on an empty-net goal by Nick Stephens with 45 seconds remaining, the game really ended on the goal by UMass captain Dean Stork with 3:31 remaining in the third period.

The goal by Stork came just 2:09 after the Huskies had pulled the game to within one on a Todd Barclay tally to make it 4-3. Stork's goal helped to solidify the win for the Minutemen putting them up by two.

"We got the huge goal from Dean Stork late in the game when things were really getting tight, Dean finds a way to get the puck through," UMass coach Joe Mallen said.

The captain's tally was his eighth of the season. The puck floated out in front of the net off the stick of UMass winger R.J. Gates and Stork pulled up to it and one-timed the puck past Northeastern goalie Jason Braun.

"The puck just popped out to me, Gates passed it out and I just wanted to one-time it hard. I wanted to get it on net, because when the puck is on net good things happen, and it just went in," Stork said of his goal.

The other stars of the night for the Minutemen include the guys who helped build the lead. Miljko, a freshman, and sophomore linemate Kris

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Captain Dean Stork and the Massachusetts men's hockey team pulled off a big win over Northeastern to remain within reach of the LOWELL — The Massachusetts men's hockey team took one step back this weekend and one step forward. Heading into this weekend's competition with UMass-Lowell at Tsongas Arena, and their date with the Huskies of Northeastern, the Minutemen really needed to make a statement to the rest of the most difficult conference in NCAA hockey, and that was that the Minutemen are ready to start to make some noise in Hockey East.

Like the weekend prior to this one, the Minutemen lost the first game of the weekend and then came back and pretty handily won the second game at home. But this weekend, the Friday night game wasn't No. 7 Boston College, it was the 16-14 River Hawks of Lowell, and UMass still fell, 2-1.

"The Lowell loss and the BC games are losses, but one- goal losses. We have just missed on some chances, but I think we are playing pretty well for freshmen and sophomores," UMass coach Joe Mallen said.

Paul Teves

In games like Merrimack and Northeastern, which the Minutemen absolutely had to win, they did. But the games were at home, where the Minutemen are 6-6-1. The recent Lowell road loss, coupled with losses to Northeastern and Western Michigan on the road, doesn't bode well for the Minutemen (2-12-1 on the road), who have three of their four remaining Hockey East contests on the road while competing for a playoff spot.

The loss to Lowell this weekend causes an even bigger problem for UMass. It makes it almost necessary for the Minutemen to win at least one out of two of the games with Providence, which is currently 16-15, 10-9 in Hockey East.

"We felt [Lowell] out last night, and we had two really good periods against them, the second and the third. I think if we play like that, then we will be able to take care of them in their barn, and steal one there like they did here," freshman winger Martin Miljko said.

The Northeastern victory, which puts the Minutemen in eighth place by themselves, two points ahead of Northeastern, one point behind Merrimack and three points behind Boston University, is likely to build confidence in the locker room at UMass. The win is also something for Mallen to build off of.

"We needed these two points. We were tied with them [NU] and they had a game in hand on us. These two points are really big for us in the playoff race," Miljko said.

The one thing the Minutemen can point to down

Turn to PLAYOFFS, page 7

Men's hoops come up short against Rams

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Lari Ketner scored a bundle but it wasn't enough to defeat Rhode Island as the Minutemen fell, 56-59 on Saturday.

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — For some strange reason, the Rhode Island men's basketball team has played its two best halves of the season against UMass.

The only problem for the Minutemen is that it has cost them both games against the Rams this year.

Rhode Island	59
Massachusetts	56

After opening the contest with its most productive 20 minutes of the season at Rhode Island on Saturday, UMass watched a 15-point halftime advantage dwindle into a 59-56 defeat... and then waived goodbye to second place in the Eastern Division of the Atlantic 10 Conference.

Junior guard Monty Mack had played one of his finest first halves of the 1998-99 campaign, but was held to a meager two points on only five shots in the second frame. The South Boston native, who picked up his fourth foul with 8:15 remaining, finished with a team-high 16 points and had an opportunity to tie the game with an open three-pointer at the buzzer but could not convert.

UMass still held a one-point advantage, 52-51, with four and a half minutes remaining, until two Preston Murphy free throws gave the Rams the lead for good. Mack had helped his team cut its deficit to one point, 57-56, after connecting on a jump shot with 42.6 seconds left. But with just under 10 tics remaining on the clock, URI forward Lamar Odom responded with a put-back off his own miss to set the stage for Mack's buzzer shot, which rolled around the rim before popping out.

After consecutive victories over St. Joseph's and St. Bonaventure, the Minutemen had opened the game with the momentum and enthusiasm which they lacked all season. But, for the second time in less than two months, UMass (11-13, 7-5 A-10) transformed a 15-point intermission lead into a last-second loss.

"We scored 18 points in the second half. That's tough," UMass coach Bruiser Flint said. "We shot 28 percent. I thought my guys played pretty hard, though. It was a hard- fought game on both ends of the floor. We just didn't get a couple of things to drop for us."

Perhaps the most compelling reason behind the URI (15- 10, 8-4 A-10) comeback was the foul trouble of both Mack and Lari Ketner (12 points, 14 rebounds), who was whistled for his fourth foul at the 12-minute mark in the second period. The duo, which had combined for 21 points in the first half, finished with only 28 at game's end.

"That hurt us," Flint said. "Those are the two guys [we] go to try and score. [It's tough] when they're out of the game that long."

Although Rams' coach Jim Harrick will argue that the Ketner-Mack foul trouble didn't affect the way his team had played in the second frame, he admits that Saturday's contest was a tale of two halves for two very different teams. One seems to be on the cusp of qualifying for the NCAA tournament,

Turn to HOOPS, page 7

Women's hoops finishes weekend A-10 split

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team had No. 11 Virginia Tech on the ropes Friday night at the William D. Mullins Center, but

Virginia Tech	67
Massachusetts	51

the Minutewomen let the Hokies off the hook by shooting only 4-for-31 in the second half.

The Minutewomen were leading the Hokies (22-1, 12-1 Atlantic-10) 31-30 at the half before coming apart at the seams in the second frame, which led to a 67-51 Tech triumph.

UMass (14-13, 9-5 A-10) did rebound to knock off Duquesne (13-11, 6-8) on Sunday afternoon, 68-59, after solidifying second place in the A-10 East.

Friday night's night contest was clearly the focal point of the weekend, as UMass was attempting to earn its first major upset of the season, and keep its slim hopes for first place in the A-10 alive in the process.

Massachusetts	68
Duquesne	59

Failing to Virginia Tech now puts the heavy weight of having to win the A-10 tournament to qualify for additional post-season play on the team's shoulders.

"We knew before this game that we will probably need to win the tournament," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "But at the same time, I was disappointed that the team didn't give it their all towards the end tonight.

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 7

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Alison MacFarland came up tall when the rest of her team fell short this weekend with stellar outings against Virginia Tech and Duquesne. See page 7 story.

Men's hoop season crumbles in their own hands

Seth Koenig

As the 1998-99 season winds down, the Massachusetts men's basketball team can only reflect on what has quickly become the season that could-have-been. Despite the cards being decked in its favor, UMass has continually stumbled and jeopardized its lofty season-opening tournament goals.

This Saturday's three-point loss at the hands of Rhode Island became the perfect personification of what has nearly become a lost year.

There was a 15-point lead when the first half ended. The winner should have been clear. The Minutemen outhbot, outrebounded and downright outplayed the hosting Rams during the opening frame on Saturday at the Providence Civic Center.

In the same respect, UMass entered the season with four starters and its top sixth-man returning. Center Lari Ketner and guards Charlton Clarke and Monty Mack, the team's three leading scorers, were all back and still improving. National publications saw the potential and jumped on the bandwagon: Sports Illustrated and Athlon, among others, named Massachusetts a Top 10 team when evaluating preseason potential.

Then the nightmare came. When UMass jogged out of the locker room for the second stanza, the lighting at the Civic Center seemed a little dimmer, the crowd seemed a little angrier, and the basket seemed a little smaller.

It took nearly four minutes for the Minutemen to put their first point of the second half on the board. At the 15:36 mark, a Chris Kirkland dunk became the team's opening field goal.

UMass shot 7-of-25 in the final frame, including a big goose egg from beyond the arc, 0-for-5. The Minutemen could not break 20 points in the last 20 minutes of the game.

Early season losses include those to Marshall, Iona and Davidson; games that the aforementioned publications seemed to take for granted would be Massachusetts landslides. Like against Rhode Island this weekend, the apparently overwhelming UMass advantage was not enough, and the great potential was not realized.

The Minutemen had the Rams, like they had the entire Atlantic 10 Conference before the season began, by the throroats. As had happened over the course of the year, Massachusetts allowed that positioning to slip away.

Still, the season has never quite completely escaped in the eyes of the optimist. Prior to the weekend's loss to URI, the Minutemen held an 11-12 record with five games to go. A year-ending sweep would give UMass a 16-12 overall mark, and would make them 12-4 within the conference; possibly winning them the regular season A-10 East Division crown. With a good showing at the conference tournament in

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 16 · New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 · Wednesday, February 17, 1999

UMass student caught selling drugs to police; will serve two years in jail

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts economics student was sentenced to two years in jail Friday for selling drugs to an undercover police officer on campus last April.

Aldwayne O. Lindsay, 20, of Springfield, was arrested and charged with two counts of distribution of a Class D substance, three counts of distribution of a Class B substance and one count of possession of a Class D substance with intent to distribute.

Lindsay was originally released on $5,000 bail on June 29, but he will now be facing a two year sentence, six months of which must be served. He will also be subject to three years of probation and forced to pay $1,875 in restitution to the UMass Police Department for the amount used to purchase the drugs.

Hampshire Superior Court Judge C. Brian McDonald disregarded Lindsay's plea to postpone jail time so he could complete the spring semester. According to an article in the Springfield Union-News, McDonald said he wanted UMass students to realize the impact of Lindsay's actions.

According to court documents, Lindsay sold marijuana to State Police Trooper Christopher Brown from his dorm room, 103 Gorman, on the evening of April 3, 1998.

Brown returned to Gorman on April 16 with Trooper Michael Andrews, and again purchased marijuana. Brown was also sold 2.24 grams of cocaine. A person named "Mondo" gave the cocaine to Brown. However, the court documents state, Lindsay "arranged the sale and is responsible as a joint venturer."

Lindsay and "Mondo" sold an additional amount of cocaine to Brown in Andrews' presence on April 22, between the hours of 8 and 10 p.m., in a van operated by Brown on the UMass campus.

Seven days later, Lindsay sold more cocaine to Brown, in Andrews' presence, in a van parked outside Gorman Residence Hall between the hours of 7 and 9 p.m. He also had on his person one pound of marijuana, intending to sell it to Brown.

The court documents indicate that police used an informant in the initial stages of the investigation, but the informant was not present at any of the drug purchases charged in the incident.

At the time of print, UMass Police Chief John Luippold was unable to comment on the incident.

BETH KIRKORIAN / COLLEGIAN

Cigarette break
Senior Carrie Richter, freshman Dan Clason and sophomore Liza Katz sit outside the Student Union yesterday.

Author to give talk in area about book, negative images of the female body in media

By Julie Fiatkow
Collegian Staff

If Barbie were a real woman, she would have a 42" chest, wear size three shoes and have two missing ribs in order to maintain her 18" waist.

In Ophira Edut's new book, Adios Barbie, 28 young women penned essays about body image including race, ethnicity, sexuality and power. All of whom have grown up in a society that treasures Barbie as the ideal woman.

Edut will be speaking tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. at the UMass Campus Center room 1101, and again at 7 p.m. at Food For Thought Books in downtown Amherst. Also in attendance will be the writers who contributed to the novel.

Concern over body image, said Edut in an interview yesterday, is a universal theme for women.

"There is a lot of advertising and media that puts pressure on women. We need a space where we can say who we are, opposed to what the media says we are," she said.

Edut, 25, is the founding publisher of HUES (Hear Us Emerging Sisters) magazine, a national publication for multicultural women in their twenties. In a press release, she said she started the magazine as a University of Michigan women's studies class project.

Edut started the magazine up with friends who she called "vending machine philosophers— girls who sat around scarfing down Snickers bars and talking about the way that teen magazines and TV show fucked up our self-esteem."

Adios Barbie expands on the typical dialogue about body image.

"It is easy to say 'it doesn't matter what you look like on the outside, it's the inside that counts,'" said Edut.

"Most women who I've spoken to don't want to ignore the outside, but want it to express who they are on the inside. They don't want their outside appearance to overshadow who they are on the inside though."

Like many college-aged women, Edut herself has struggled with negative self-image.

"My father was an Israeli immigrant and I felt like a freak. I was a five foot one inch Jewish woman instead of a Barbie," she said.

Many women in their 20s, she said, struggle with eating disorders, issues with their sexuality, and general self- acceptance.

In an excerpt from the book, Nomy Lamm, a contributor, refers to herself as "a fat, sleazy, one-legged anarchist dyke and a total hottie."

"I don't want to feel like I can't embellish my natural appearance, have fun with it, be a total girl if I wanna — it's called self-determination," she wrote.

Edut's work has been featured in Ms., Glamour, VIBE, Sassy, Harper's Bazaar, Chicago Tribune, Boston Globe, and Entertainment Weekly.

Thursday's events are sponsored by the Everywomen's Center and are free and open to the public.

Iraq threatens neighbors with possible air attacks; U.S. doubts Iraqi ability

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Iraq's threats against Turkey, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia for supporting recent U.S. air attacks are being taken seriously, but there is little chance Iraq's depleted air force could launch attacks deep into neighboring territory, a Defense Department official said yesterday.

"It's a sign of Saddam Hussein's desperation and isolation that Iraq is making such threats," said Kenneth Bacon, spokesman for Defense Secretary William Cohen. "I think the threats will get him nowhere."

Bacon said Iraq could try three ways to carry out its threats: fire Scud missiles, attack by air with planes, or conduct terrorist raids. "All of these would be difficult, given the circumstances that Iraq faces today," Bacon said, referring to the deterioration of its military since the 1991 Persian Gulf war, the effect of the U.N. economic embargo and the strength of U.S. forces in the area that could retaliate.

Iraq's state-controlled media warned U.S. allies yesterday they will pay a high price for playing host to American and British warplanes that patrol "no-fly" zones over Iraq. The planes have attacked Iraqi air defense installations almost daily in recent weeks in what the Pentagon calls self defense.

Iraqi Vice President Taha Yassin Ramadan said Monday that Baghdad would attack Incirlik Air Base in south-central Turkey - used by U.S. and British warplanes - if the jets continue patrolling Iraqi skies. It was the first time in years Iraq has threatened to attack its northern neighbor.

"Whether or not he means this threat to be taken seriously, we have to take seriously threats like this," Bacon said.

In Ankara, Deputy Iraqi Prime Minister Tariq Aziz defended his government's threat.

"The U.S. and British planes are killing Iraqis, are destroying Iraqi property and this is not acceptable," Aziz said yesterday. "A Turkish air base should not be used by the Americans and British to hurt Iraqis."

Bacon said Incirlik is at "the very outer edge" of the range of Scud ballistic missiles that Iraq might use against Turkey and is protected by a small contingent of U.S. Army Patriot antimissile missiles.

Iraq says it has no more Scud missiles, but U.N. arms inspectors are not sure.

Bacon said Iraq's depleted air force would stand little chance against U.S. and allied air defenses in Turkey, Kuwait or Saudi Arabia.

"I don't think that they have significant air power to be able to launch a longer-range attack against bases deep inside another country's territory, and it would be extremely unwise for them to try to do that," Bacon said.

At the State Department, meanwhile, spokesman James Foley said the administration remained opposed to lifting remaining U.N. restrictions on Iraqi oil sales.

With U.S. approval, the U.N. Security Council permits Iraq to sell $5.2 billion worth of oil every six months provided the proceeds are used to purchase food, medicines and other humanitarian supplies.

President Jacques Chirac of France is expected to urge President Clinton during a White House visit on Friday to end remaining restrictions.

Foley said the United States and France agreed "on many tough challenges." But, he said, "the United States does not favor the lifting of the oil embargo."

M.I.T. professor dies underwater during photo dive

WAKULLA SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Physicist Henry W. Kendall, a Nobel Prize-winner for physics for his work on the building blocks of matter and a co-founder of the anti-war group Union of Concerned Scientists, died during an underwater photography dive.

Kendall, 72, a professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was diving with a National Geographic magazine mapping team at Wakulla Springs State Park when his body was found in shallow water, Wakulla County Sheriff's Capt. Gene McCarthy said. Investigators had not yet determined whether Kendall died of a heart attack or encountered a problem in the water and drowned. There was air left in his tank, McCarthy said.

An autopsy was planned for today.

Kendall, along with Jerome I. Friedman and Richard E. Taylor, worked for years starting in the late 1960s uncovering evidence that protons and neutrons, once thought to be basic building blocks of matter, were made up of smaller components called quarks. They all shared the Nobel prize in 1990.

"It was a remarkable discovery at the time and contributed to the deeper understanding of things," he once said.

Kendall was a founding member

Turn to PROFESSOR, page 3

Conference addresses the threat that bioterrorism presents to U.S.

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Va.—It will fall to doctors - not the military or police - to recognize when bioterrorists have struck and to react in time to stop thousands of Americans from getting sick or dying, experts told the first medical conference on the danger yesterday.

Imagine a truck driving by a football stadium during a fall game. It sprays a mist that drifts over the stadium. Nobody notices.

Germs are the ultimate sneak attack. Leave a germ-tainted package in a subway, and the terrorist is long gone before anyone knows there's a problem.

Publicly, the most feared germ weapons program has been Iraq's. But the Japanese cult that released the nerve gas sarin in a Tokyo subway in 1995 attempted bioterrorism first, said terrorism expert Kyle Olson of Research Planning Inc.

Four times before the nerve gas attack, the cult attempted to spray botulism toxin and anthrax around Japanese government buildings, he said. Although there were some reports of pet deaths, the attempts apparently failed to sicken any people, for unknown reasons, Olson said.

And nobody knows what has happened to the former Soviet Union's vast stockpiles of weaponized germs, including smallpox, said Christopher Davis of ORAO Consultancy, who investigated Soviet bioweapons for Britain.

But terrorists don't have to dispense germs to cause terror, Stern said, pointing to a spate of anthrax hoaxes starting last year that have so far affected more than 5,000 Americans.

A typical case: An abortion clinic opens a letter mixed with powder that says, "You have just been exposed to anthrax." The local fire department makes everyone in the clinic take a decontamination shower, and the hospital doles out antibiotics, which can prevent anthrax if taken soon after exposure.

A huge attack like the Hopkins' anthrax scenario is unlikely, but possible, said Col. Gerald Parker, the U.S. Army's chief of infectious disease. The worst agents would be anthrax and smallpox, which are highly deadly and can be manipulated into weapons that victims inhale.

A more likely scenario is small attacks, said former National Security Council member Jessica Stern. Americans already have experienced one: In 1985, a religious cult poisoned Oregon salad bars with salmonella, making 750 people sick.

Two days later, hundreds show up with sniffles and fevers that doctors believe is the flu. But five days later 300 people are dead before a local scientist solves the mystery: It's not flu, it's anthrax.

Johns Hopkins University used that fictional scenario to tell doctors that the danger is real - and the nation isn't yet ready to handle it.

"To remain unprepared is to invite disaster," said Hopkins' Dr. D.A. Henderson, who led the world's eradication of smallpox and now is mobilizing health workers and the government against bioterrorism.

Policy-makers know how to respond to bombs, but have "an almost total lack of understanding of the implications of epidemic disease" that bioterrorism would cause, Henderson said.

The average American is far more likely to die in a car crash than ever face a bioterrorist attack, other experts reassured the conference. But the threat is real, so the government is starting to prepare doctors and hospitals.

"We must not be afraid, but we must be aware," said Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala, whose office is spending $158 million this year, and has asked Congress for $230 million next year, to prepare.

Currently, there is no national stockpile of treatment or vaccines. And doctors must be educated how to spot unusual symptoms and then what to do. They may not know, for example, that anthrax can't be spread person-to-person but that smallpox is highly contagious.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 46 LOW: 26	HIGH: 42 LOW: 34	HIGH: 40 LOW: 32

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Enlightenment abroad
Find out how a semester abroad changed one student's outlook on life in this week's Campus Profile.
NEWS PAGE 2

Hanging tough?
NKOTB release their greatest hits, and check out our review of Message In a Bottle.
ARTS PAGE 6

Of mice and men
Shawnta Rogers of G-W, one of the best players in the A-10 is averaging over 20 points per game. His Colonials will host UM, one of the tallest all-around teams in the A-10, tonight.
SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Classifieds 10
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
FYI 10
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Feb. 12
An individual, driving on the sidewalk near Mary Lyon Residence Hall, struck a drainage ditch.

Animal Complaint
Feb. 15
An injured possum was reported on Chancellors Drive.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 15
A poster in Brett Residence Hall was defaced with a swastika and homophobic graffiti.
Feb. 13
Student security was threatened by an individual attempting to gain entrance to John Adams Residence Hall.
Homophobic graffiti was written on an erase board in Brett Residence Hall.
Individuals were reported throwing soda cans at Brown Residence Hall.

Assault and Battery
Feb. 12
A domestic assault between two individuals was reported from John Quincy Residence Hall.
Janelle A. Scuderi, 19, of 46 Thankful Ln., Cotuit, was arrested in Coolidge Residence Hall and charged with domestic assault and battery.

Disturbance
Feb. 13
An M-80 firecracker exploded in a barrel in Emerson Residence Hall.

Fraud
Feb. 12
An individual in McNamara Residence Hall reported fraudulent use of a credit card.
An individual from Leach Residence Hall reported that illegal purchases were made on two credit cards.
Feb. 10
An individual in Johnson Residence Hall reported illegal transactions on a credit card that was never received.

Health/Safety Hazard
Feb. 10
Environmental Health and Safety was dispatched to check on a burning odor in the Engineering Laboratory.

Larceny
Feb. 13
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in Lot 49, north of the water tanks and solar house.
Feb. 12
Physical Plant staff reported two oxy-acetylene units (welding torches), valued at more than $1000, stolen from two locations.
Feb. 11
A package delivered to an individual in Van Meter Residence Hall was missing cash.
A telephone, valued at more than $100, was reported stolen from Tobin Hall.
Feb. 10
Housing staff reported a "sawzall" used by carpenters, valued at more than $250, was stolen from Thoreau Residence Hall.

Noise Complaint
Feb. 12
A group outside McNamara Residence Hall was reported making noise.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 15
Amanda L. Van Dreumel, 19, of 36 Maple Crest Cir., Holyoke, was arrested on North Pleasant Street and charged with operating a motor vehicle with suspended license and speeding.
Feb. 13
Brian P. Lipka, 24, of 58 County Rd., Lakeville, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue on a warrant and charged with a crosswalk violation.

Vandalism
Feb. 15
Skateboarders caused more than $1000 damage to cement work done by Construction Co. at the Student Union.
A vehicle in Lot 22, west of University Drive, was keyed.
A fire extinguisher was thrown at a resident's door in Coolidge Residence Hall.

CAMPUS PROFILE

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Staff

In spring of 1998 Renee Foster took a trip to Colombia. A semester later, she returned with a whole new outlook on life.

When Foster left the University of Massachusetts to study abroad she was an engineering major, but when she returned she changed her major to Spanish and international relations with a concentration in conflict resolution. Foster is also minoring in Latin American and Caribbean studies.

Colombia played a part in Foster's decision to get deeper into conflict resolution.

Going to Colombia was a "life changing experience."

"For me it broke down barriers and shed insight on some of the ignorance people have in the United States about Third World countries, specifically Colombia," Foster said.

Foster used to want to be an ambassador but now feels there are so many options she can't really pinpoint what she wants, but is considering conflict resolutions.

In fact, as a senior Foster hopes to use her knowledge of Colombia, Spanish, and conflict resolution in the "real world."

"I hope to apply all that I have learned to an independent project next fall," said Foster. "I hope to be working in Colombia with a group that works with Afro-Colombians concentrating on different problematic issues that are similar to the problems African Americans face in the United States.

"I just completed a training session to become a trained mediator and I am now part of the mediation and negotiation team. I can assist in mediating between students faculty and staff. I hope this will get me further into the field of conflict resolution," said Foster.

The training session lasted for a week during winter session, and was sponsored by the legal studies department.

Education Abroad Advisor Cristina Sosa found the transformation Foster went through to be the greatest part of her experience.

"Her outlook had changed since the first time she came in here. Her growth is incredible. It was so wonderful for her to discover an Afro-Colombian group. I didn't even know there was one. And I am extremely happy that she is going back to work with them," said Sosa.

When Foster returned from Columbia she applied for a job at the International Programs Office (IPO) where she is now a peer advisor. "It's a good way to meet people and to learn about their interests," said Foster. At IPO, Foster's job entails helping students figure which country would be most suitable for them to study in. She advises students on decisions that could potentially change their lives.

Long after Foster leaves UMass she would like to see more Asian Latino African Native American (ALANA) students participating in the study abroad opportunities the International Programs Office has to offer.

JoAnne Bernhard, the coordinator of study abroad advising and Foster's boss describes her as a girl with a "sense of humor that stands up for herself and personifies self determination. It is very unique that she put all of her experiences together and created a direction to go in. The direction Renee is planning to take is so unselfish and will be self-fulfilling at the same time."

Other than getting a job at IPO when she returned, Foster decided to live in Thatcher foreign language and international programs dorm. Her interest was first sparked in Thatcher when she was an assistant for Northeast/Sylvan Special Interest Residential Program (SIRP), a year and a half ago. She became completely intrigued after her trip to Colombia. Thatcher promotes speaking in different foreign languages depending on which hall you live in.

"It's a good way for people to practice a foreign language and the atmosphere is conducive to learning about different cultures. We learn through different activities, programs, and optional cross cultural outings," said Foster.

Many changes took place for Foster upon her return from Colombia but a few things have remained constant for her at UMass. One of these being her place in the UMass marching band. Foster has played the clarinet since fourth grade and has been playing for UMass for four years now.

"I wanted to go to college where I could play. It's a lot of commitment but I get a lot out of it," said Foster.

During fall semester the band practices an hour and a half Monday through Friday and that does not include the time they spend at the games.

"The marching band is not everyday knowledge. You actually have to participate in it to know how to do it. It takes daily practice, time, techniques, and as our band director Mr. Parks would say "you have to have style," said Foster.

Foster is also a member of Born Again Student In Christ, or BASIC.

BETH KIMCROWAY / COLLEGIAN

Renee Foster found her exchange to Colombia very rewarding.

Campus Career Network

University of Massachusetts Amherst

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS, ALL MAJORS, THE DAY YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR IS ALMOST HERE.

The Center Career Network Field Experience Office invites you to the 16th Annual Co-op Job Fair

Thursday, February 18, 1999
10-3pm
Campus Center Auditorium

Employers will attend from:

Ames Department Stores
Cigna
Data General/Clarion
Federal Express
Fidelity Investments
General Electric
I.E. Interns
IBM
Lego Systems
Marshall's
Reebok
Rexam Graphics
Sears Roebuck & Co.
Sikorsky Aircraft
Sun Life of Canada
Toys R Us
Walt Disney World
U.S.Food & Drug Administration

And many more!

Don't let this opportunity to get a summer or semester PAID position pass you by!
There's something for everyone at the Co-op Job Fair!

Call the Field Experience Office for more information at 545-6265

~News Briefs~

2389 signatures supporting a marijuana-related ballot question were submitted to the Amherst Board of Registrars yesterday.

The ballot question urges "the members of the Select Board, and the Town Manager, to persuade our State Representative, State Senator, U.S. Representative, and U.S. Senators to repeal the prohibition of marijuana."

It also asks that "the Amherst Police Department deprioritize the enforcement of laws covering the possession of marijuana against persons over the age of eighteen."

In past weeks, several local groups, Including the University of Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition, have gathered signatures on the UMass campus.

If 1746 or more of the signatures are verified as belonging to registered Amherst voters, the question will appear on the March 1 Amherst town ballot. Originally the ballot's supporters had hoped to collect 3000, to compensate for invalid signatures.

"There's a bit of a safety margin," said Terry Franklin, the campaign's spokesperson. "We'd like [the list of signatures] to be a little longer, but there's a good chance we got 10 percent."

"We really could have gotten another 1000-2000 signatures if people hadn't been so afraid to sign," he added.

In 1976, a similar referendum was passed at an Amherst Town Meeting. That question, however, did not deal with the issue of deprioritization.

The votes will be counted and verified by Monday, February 22, at 4:30 pm.

***

The Executive Board of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian voted 6-1 yesterday in favor of continuing to publish diversity pages.

The Executive Board consists of editors and managers from every Collegian department, including the Editor-in- Chief, the Managing Editor, the Senior Diversity Editor, the Production Manager, the Editorial Production Manager, the Business Manager and the Advertising Manager.

Their vote followed a decision by the Board of Editors, the governing body of the Collegian newsroom, not to make any changes to the current policy.

"I think it's nice that this matter is finally resolved, and that it was done with so much discussion and input from all sides," said Casey Kane, the Collegian's editor-in-chief.

"I think people just felt in their own minds that keeping the pages is what's best for the paper and the readers," she added.

"I can't wait to get [the pages] off the ground," said Mike Messarus, the Managing Editor.

In recent weeks, the Collegian had considered eliminating the pages in order to Incorporate more diversity issues into the news and editorial sections of the paper.

On Wednesday, Feb. 9, a forum was held in which the Collegian staff met with community members to discuss the future of diversity pages. Most of the students in attendance supported keeping the pages.

The diversity pages will begin running on Monday, Feb. 22, with the first edition of the Black Affairs page. The schedule for the remaining diversity pages is currently being determined.

-compiled by Jake Lilien

BETH KIMCROWAY / COLLEGIAN

The Cannabis Reform Coalition collected signatures to have the issue of marijuana legalization on the town election ballot.

■ professor

continued from page 1

of the Union of Concerned Scientists in 1969. He had served as that organization's chairmen since 1973, leading efforts to warn against the dangers of nuclear weapons, safety hazards in nuclear power industry and space-based weapons.

Through the group, he challenged President Reagan's "star wars" defense system proposal — a system of satellites to defend American cities against nuclear attack. Kendall had also helped brief President Clinton in 1997 on global warming. His organization had studied the greenhouse effect, which many scientists say is raising temperatures around the globe.

"We're all in a bit of a state of shock over here," Howard Ris, the organization's executive director, said this morning. "It's almost too trite to say, but he was a great inspiration for all of us and he had the rare gift to see where the world was headed and tried to make it a better place."

Ris said Kendall was a cautious, experienced diver and underwater photographer and a longtime friend of the late undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau. National Geographic spokeswoman Barbara Moffet in Washington said Kendall was not part of the group's project in Florida but was accompanying a friend who was in the project.

BETH KIMCROWAY / COLLEGIAN

Put your overused basketball cliche here

Freshman Greg Porter and Dan Foley play basketball at the horseshoe in Southwest yesterday.

U.S. spy photos unearthed

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. spy satellite photographs of the Soviet Union taken during the Cold War are emerging from their shell of secrecy.

They were taken in the urgent context of the U.S.-Soviet nuclear standoff, but many now have been declassified and can be used for peaceful purposes, helping to verify and even advance arms reduction efforts, researchers say.

Thousands of images taken by CIA spy satellites from 1960 to 1972 had lain in the National Archives, spooled in reels 30 inches long by 2.5 inches wide. Now arms control experts are beginning to pore over the pictures, using microscopes to examine satellite pictures of such places as Krasnoyarsk-45 in south-central Russia, a super-secret Soviet uranium enrichment facility, and Zlatoust-36, a nuclear warhead assembly plant in Siberia.

At a symposium yesterday at the Carnegie Endowment for Peace, Joshua Handler of Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School said the photographs show that Russia may have enough secure storage space to enable thousands more nuclear warheads to be removed from missiles under the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty.

Both Russia and the United States have faced a daunting task of financing adequate security for thousands of weapons storage sites scattered across the former Soviet Union. The specter of terrorists raiding a storage site, or of impoverished nuclear commanders selling them to rogue states, has been the driving force behind annual U.S. expenditures of more than $350 million per year in disarmament aid.

As Ukraine, Belarus and Kazakstan have eliminated their nuclear arsenals, however, the number of active storage sites has shrunk dramatically as has the cost of providing adequate security, Handler argued.

"Now it is clear that the number of storages is much smaller, their locations are more well-known and the possibility of understanding the cost of upgrading their security is much greater," Handler said. Based on Russian cost estimates, 20 national-level weapons storage sites and 60 smaller, military storage sites could be secured for $400 million.

The satellite photographs being used by Handler and others were taken under the CIA's Corona program, the world's first successful spy satellite system. The program was developed by rocket scientists pressing to find a replacement for U-2 spy planes after the downing of Francis Gary Powers' U-2 in 1960, and by optical scientists at Kodak in Rochester, N.Y., and Polaroid and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, both in Cambridge, Mass. Images of the Soviet Union taken by Corona satellites were among the most highly classified documents in U.S. hands until 1995 when the Clinton administration approved their declassification, mainly for use by environmentalists and historians.

"There's the gee-whiz factor - nobody had seen these nuclear weapons storage sites before, whether from space or on the ground," Handler said.

To the untrained eye some of the photographs look like distant views of vast construction projects in a dense wood. Closer examination, however, reveals clues and patterns.

1999 REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

The Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice is soliciting innovative proposals for educational activities and programs which have the following goals:

- promote mutual respect
- enhance understanding of community, diversity and/or social justice issues
- encourage collaboration between different campus communities and constituencies

Eligibility: Undergraduates, graduate students, staff and faculty, as well as individuals or groups

Award Criteria: Proposed activities

- must bring together persons from two or more communities or constituencies in a joint activities
- must demonstrate collaboration of communities or constituencies in the proposal planning process
- must promote mutual respect and understanding on the campus or in the largercommunity
- should represent new programs or collaborating partnerships as opposed to annual programs or continuations of past projects
- should be completed by the end of the fall 1999 semester

Examples of Activities Which Could be Funded: Forums, speakers, film/video series, seminars, workshops, training programs, public education programs, outreach activities to secondary schools and home communities, community public service programs, faculty/student collaboration to develop new courses, performance events, printed materials, posters.

Proposal Components:

- a clear description of how the proposed activities will meet both the goals and award criteria
- a list of groups involved and contact person or persons responsible for the activity
- a plan for evaluating the impact and effectiveness of the activities
- a time line indicating when the activities would start and conclude
- a budget

Award Ranges: $250 to $1500, with all awards expected to total $15,000

Submission Date and Location: Mailed, e-mailed am@admin.umass.edu, faxed to 577-2455 or hand delivered by noon on Friday, March 12, 1999 to the Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice, c/o Office of Human Relations, 206 Middlesex House.

Proposal Review and Award Announcements: A committee of the Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice reviews all proposals. Awards will be announced during the week of Aprll 29, 1999.

Proposal Writing Assistance: http://www.umass.edu/funding/FundHowTo.html

Additional Information: Contact Anne Malone at the Office of Human Relations at am@admin.umass.edu or (413) 545- 0851.

OUTSTANDING ADVISOR AWARD

COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
students, faculty and staff are invited to submit nominations for the award for 1998-99

NOMINATION FORMS ARE DUE MARCH 1
(Available in room 113 Stockbridge Hall or in departmental offices.)

Faculty in the following majors are eligible for nomination:

Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology
Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design
Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture • Microbiology • Natural Resource Studies
Plant and Soil Sciences • Resource Economics
Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

EDITORIAL / OPINION

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Triangle man

It is purple, has a triangle on its head, and carries what seems to be a purse. Certainly, then, it must be a promotion of a gay lifestyle, which of course is immoral.

This is the assertion of Reverend Jerry Falwell, the editor of a right-wing religious magazine called the National Liberty Journal. He says that one of the four characters of the hugely popular show the "Teletubbies" promotes the gay lifestyle to young children. He says that "As a Christian, I feel that role modeling the gay lifestyle is damaging to the moral lives of children."

Falwell is correct in pointing out the symbol and color used for gay-pride. The triangle is the known symbol, while purple is the known color. However, as Steve Rice, a spokesperson for the company that licenses the British show to this country says, "To think we would be putting sexual innuendo in a children's show is kind of outlandish."

Each of the characters have names, but none have a gender or sexual distinction. In fact, one cannot be sure the purple character, Tinky Winky, is a male. True, he has a boyish voice but the characters themselves do not refer to Tinky Winky as male or female. If it indeed carries a purse, one would be inclined to think that it is female, not male.

The spokesperson for the show says that it is not a purse that Tinky Winky carries, but a magic bag. It seems, then, that Falwell has no proof for this specific claim, but is merely interpreting it to meet his own personal interests.

That is also what the creators would assert as well, and anyone who did not have a specific homophobic agenda when viewing television. Each character has something on its head, which is used for an antenna to receive signals that are displayed in little TVs in each characters' stomachs. The colors, as the show's spokesperson tells us, were chosen because they are bright, not because of a sexual orientation.

Jason Wiesenbach

One character, then, having both gay pride symbols seems little more than coincidence. Furthermore, due to Falwell's past history with the denunciation of the gay lifestyle, it becomes harder to look at his comments as anything more than serving his homophobic, religious interests.

When the show "Ellen" aired the main character's episode about her admission of homosexuality, Falwell had similar comments. He told major sponsors such as GM, Chrysler, and Johnson and Johnson to pull their ads because presumably it showed they promoted the gay lifestyle as well.

It seems Falwell likes to use highly popular television shows as his vehicle for condemning homosexuality. This is because use of them, combined with his high respect among the religious right allows for quick publicity for his ideas.

But, while "Ellen" legitimately promoted the gay lifestyle, "Teletubbies" only promotes it if you are attempting to search for it. I feel this shows that the religious right and its respected leaders are beginning to enter a more desperate stage, hoping that the American public will listen to any of their ideas, since homosexuality continues to gain more respect nationwide.

It also shows how deeply prejudiced the religious right is against homosexuality, considering some of them have nothing better to do than interpret children's shows for their supposed immoralities. If these people, like Falwell, are truly supporting religious doctrine, then it tells us something about the Christian religions. It demonstrates that these religions themselves are one of the main obstacles to equality for the gay community.

Falwell seems to be afraid of two things. First, I believe he fears that some children will grow up to become non- heterosexual because of such shows. However, most homosexuals, like heterosexuals, believe that their sexual preference is biological, not something learned. Therefore, even if this show has sexual innuendo, it still will not matter because these children will not suddenly convert to one sexual orientation because of watching it.

I believe that Falwell's other fear is the underlying one of his cause. He fears that children who watch any television show that supports equal treatment of homosexuals will then grow up to become adults who practice the same ideas. Thus, with Falwell and his supporters likely fearing these two ideas, it shows how much the religious right wants the inequalities of the past and present to continue.

But, then, what if the "Teletubbies" program did use Tinky Winky to help legitimate homosexuality? Would this be so damaging to a child to see that a person's sexual orientation is just another in a countless list of personal characteristics?

The amount of power television has in this country is astounding. Proof of this is in the multi-billion dollar sales the "Teletubbies" toys generated last year. With this kind of influence in children's and parents' (who buy the toys) interests, the promotion of all forms of equality would find a very powerful home on television. But, until television stops glorifying such things as gender differences or stops ignoring homosexuality, equality can never be achieved.

There it one thing, though. I feel that Falwell should be thanked for. By bringing up such an absurd notion that a Teletubby is gay shows how ridiculous homophobia is. With all of the jokes surrounding Falwell, he may have not achieved his purpose of supporting further inequality. Instead, his absurdities may have promoted homosexuality.

Jason Wiesenbach is a Collegian columnist.

My career in English

Warning: the following is written in response to the often-voiced question that all English majors hear at least four-thousand, five-hundred, thirty-two times every day. This question — although it is often posed differently — usually occurs resembles this:

English Major: "Yes, I am majoring in English."

Random Person whose major involves numbers in some way: "Oh... [pause to consider how to respond to this piece of news with tact] so what are you going to do with an English degree?"

Consider yourself warned.

I invite all English majors (not to mention comparative literature, and other related majors who have heard the dreaded question before) to use all the following material freely and without a guilty conscience.

Anyway, the pervasiveness of this question is a terrible thing, mostly because it forces English majors to lie. You see, almost all English (or similar majors) truly want to make their living by being published writers or poets. Of course, expressing this view makes you an instant laughing stock if your name is not John "I can write ten novels with the same young Southern lawyer" Grisham or Michael "My new movie, cops, book is coming out soon" Crichton. Thus, we usually mumble something about teaching or graduate school, and change the subject.

I, for one, got fed up with having to answer in a low mumble, so I began to develop snide, sardonic answers. My all-time favorite was, "I'm an English major so I can use proper grammar when I say, 'Would you like fries with that?'" My second favorite was, "With an English major I will be writing the Cliff's and Monarch's notes that got you through high school English class."

This method, although a marked change from the normal, "Yeah, I figure I will teach," was still unable to stop people from asking me to predict exactly what my life will be like once I get a diploma. So I needed to try something new.

My new idea was not only a sarcastic remark, but a viable plan on how I was going to live the rest of my life. It's really simple actually. There are 52 weeks in the year, right? I figure that I can spend Christmas week and Easter week with my parents. I also have two brothers, both of whom should be able to take me in for a week. Then I have about seven really good friends from high school who should, as far as I'm concerned, be ready to extend their homes to me.

Chris Collins

Thus, forty-one is the lucky number so to speak. At a place as huge as UMass, it should be relatively easy to make forty-one friends who, of course, will all be more than willing to take me into their home or place of business and allow me to crash on the couch for a week or so. Of course, I will have to find my own transportation to get me to all these places, but hey, I'm an English major. If I'm going to write the great American novel, I better see what America has to offer, right?

So, all you English/comparative literature/art history/"Insert Your Major Here" majors, the next time someone says to you, "What are you going to do with that?" I encourage you to answer them simply by handing them this column or by relating my ultimate plan to them so that they can see the light and never put a poor English major through that type of interrogation again.

Of course, if you think about putting my plan into action, then think again. Yes, it is perfect. Yes. it will lead to the perfect life, but if everyone in the world were to follow my genius then whom would I be able to leech off of? Remember, the world exists to make my life (as an English major) easier.

Chris Collins is a Collegian columnist.

Spring breakers beware

Spring Break in Nassau, the Bahamas, turned into a group of UMass students last year. Unexplained flight delays began the ordeal, but it was the unsafe and unsanitary conditions of the Colony Club Hotel in Nassau that defined their spring break experience. Their story contains important lessons for anyone considering investing in a spring break vacation package.

Posters advertising vacation packages to Florida, Mexico, and the Caribbean for spring break can be found on campus bulletin boards in increasing numbers as spring break approaches. The Student Legal Services Office (SLSO) warns students to carefully investigate a spring break trip before making reservations, and to treat travel bookings as they would any other major consumer purchase. A significant number of travelers are hurt every year when their actual vacation experiences do not measure up to the promises in the advertisements.

Last year, Staff Attorney Michele Leaf of SLSO represented a group of 32 UMass students and their traveling companions who had serious complaints about their charter trip to Nassau. When they arrived in Nassau, they expected to be assisted by Class Travel representatives, but none were present. Although the students understood that the Colony Club Hotel provided economy lodging, they expected the basics in accommodation: clean facilities and minimal services. In addition, they expected the extras that were promoted by Class Travel, which included air-conditioning and color TV in every room.

> "The "all-inclusive" nature of their travel package contradicted the reality of the trip."
>
> Cecilia Lim

Among the dismaying conditions which the students experienced were a frequent lack of running water, overflowing toilets, water in the showers which caused a burning sensation to the eyes and throat and smelled strongly of sulfur, loss of power, roach infestation, inoperable windows, lack of air-conditioning, and infrequent and inconsistent cleaning services.

Several students complained that they were solicited for drugs and prostitution in the hotel parking lot. When some of the students told local residents that they were staying at the Colony Club, they learned that their hotel was a brothel during the off-season, and were warned not to walk around the neighborhood at night. There was minimal or no security within the hotel and the surrounding neighborhood. The attitude of the hotel staff was dismissive towards monitoring those using the hotel's facilities, with the result that non-guests were often in the lobby and by the swimming pool. Consequently, many of the students ended up spending considerable amounts of money and time traveling to the beach and shopping areas by taxi.

The "all-inclusive" nature of their travel package contradicted the reality of the trip. Upon arrival, the students were required to pay an unexpected cash deposit on their rooms. Advertised as "buffet-style", the included meals were in reality "cafeteria style" and required waiting in a long line for a small portion of food. Many of the students made unanticipated expenditures for food, thereby paying again for what should have been included in the package price.

When the time came to depart, confusion abounded. The students were told that weather had delayed their return flight, but later they learned that the flight they had been sold was not scheduled until the next day. In effect, it was the lack of a plane to board that delayed their trip home.

Attorney Leaf was able to negotiate a settlement with Class Travel, resulting in over $12,500 in refunds for the group, which was about 75 percent of the total they had paid for the packages. However, she cautions students that refunds are highly unusual in the student travel business. In the past, the SLSO has not been as successful in pursuing claims against spring break travel operators because the tour companies are often unresponsive or not subject to the jurisdiction of Massachusetts courts.

Attorney Leaf urges students to do some homework before booking any travel package. It is important to investigate the reputation of travel companies and to seek references from previous customers. Booking through an established travel agency with a good reputation gives an added measure of protection against unscrupulous tour operators, because the agent can provide assistance in negotiating with the tour operator. Some spring break providers are members of the U.S. Travel Operators Association, a voluntary organization that requires its members to post a $1 million bond for the protection of consumers, so it may be advisable to deal with one of those companies.

It is important to carefully read the contract before signing with particular reference to the policy regarding cancellations, refunds, the departure date, and possible substitution of accommodations. Most spring break travel tours utilize charter flights, which are governed by federal laws and regulations that require escrow accounts and full contractual disclosure by the operator of respective rights and obligations.

The contract must state exactly what is included in the package price and what extra charges will be incurred. Some tour companies add room and energy surcharges, "add-on" airfare from certain cities, room upgrade fees, and "taxes and service charges." Consumers should obtain the charter number and escrow agent information from the tour company before booking and verify this in advance. It is also recommended that information about the hotel be verified from an independent source, including location and proximity to the beach, shopping, and transportation.

While spring break tour operators offer vacation packages at an affordable price, it is important that students read the fine print and not get swayed by colorful advertising. Although thorough investigation does not absolutely guarantee a good trip, it will certainly go a long way toward assuring that spring break is an enjoyable vacation, and not a big, expensive headache.

Cecilia Lim is a UMass student.

Write for Ed/Op!!!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Mary Miles Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylarski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Flaikow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

My life as a rock star

Dreading the onset of another miserable Valentine's Day, I decided to plan ahead this year. So several weeks ago I sat down and contemplated who my ideal Valentine would be. Immediately it hit me: Britney Spears. That girl is unbelievably talented and she can dance too. She was the reason Catholic schoolgirl outfits were invented.

I sat down and drafted a beautiful hand-made Valentine complete with glitter and paper hearts. My naivete at this point was overwhelming. How many other college kids were sitting at home, skipping classes, making Valentines, and neglecting homework just for the glimmer of hope that Britney would come on the College Television Network and sing her "Hit Me Baby One More Time" song. Millions.

Matt Frascella

I had to do something great to capture her attention. I contemplated what girls like. I know they like guys who are jerks and mistreat them, but that isn't my style. I furrowed my brow and thought harder. Boy bands! Girls love 'em. Not just the ordinary boy bands, but the packages. However, she cautions students that refunds are highly unusual in the student travel business. In the past, the SLSO has not been as successful in pursuing claims against spring break travel operators because the tour companies are often unresponsive or not subject to the jurisdiction of Massachusetts courts.

Now I needed to find other hot sexy studs for my band. I immediately needed a front man, someone who would look great in leather pants and on the cover of Tiger Beat magazine. Singing: optional, just as long as he is young and looks good in Abercrombie.

Unfortunately my first choice, Chancellor Scott, was much too busy kicking welfare recipients out of the University and eliminating faculty. The next 50 guys were all too busy as well, so I was forced to settle for Collegian heart throb, Mike Messaros. I was reluctant at first to name him front man due to his pictures in Playgirl magazine; I thought that might ruin our wholesome image, but the band did need a front man. We agreed that his name would be Mikey because it was sassy.

Collegian ed/op and sports superstar Seth Koenig was our next addition. We chose Seth because he has his own style. Forcing him to conform to a world of pink shirts, lip syncing, orchestrated dancing, and MTV gives us that cutting edge that every good boy band needs to climb to the stratosphere of teen music.

Having three members was just not good enough. All great boy bands have five. The New Kids did, so we must as well. Desperation was setting in. Two more members were needed. We were scraping the bottom of the barrel when we approached Collegian photographer Brian McDermott. After some initial concerns about this stint ruining his reputation as a reputable photographer, he finally acquiesced. I can't understand why he wasn't flattered to be a part of this.

Four down, one to go. I knew that we needed some youth. All boy bands have that one member who is so young and cute that it just melts your heart to see him dressed in a leather jacket with bleach-blond hair. Our first choice, Jonathan Taylor Thomas, was busy wrapping up his role on "Home Improvement."

Seth was more in favor of going for some home grown Western Massachusetts talent anyway. So we cruised over to the Amherst Middle School and checked out the possibilities. We decided that the kid who could handle the monkey bars the best would be our choice. Little Joey won and immediately won our hearts as well.

Wasting no time, we piled into the car and drove to New York. Using our enormous Collegian paychecks we hired a choreographer and some bum off the street to write us some hit songs and rip off some old ones. We paid the bum in booze and "The Total Package" boy band was born.

Almost instantly we were on the road to the fast track. Our hit video, "Britney, Be My Valentine" climbed quickly to the top of the charts. It must have been the thongs we wore in the video. McDermott used his expert photography skills to do some layouts that hit Tiger Beat and Teen Girl Power as quickly as we attacked the charts. Messaros' skills in Playgirl helped us all have killer spreads.

Unbeknownst to us we were getting added publicity thanks to Little Joey. Caught up in the whirlwind that had become our lives he had forgotten to inform his parents that he was dropping out of middle school and beginning a life in the entertainment industry. Joey's parents contacted the authorities and his picture was posted on every milk carton in the nation. Nothing beats free press.

Soon the price of stardom began to set in and dash the dreams of the ambitious Total Package. Seth developed an addiction to painkillers and crack. He honestly believed that the drugs made him a better performer. Mike Messaros began to talk about starting a solo career and accused us of not being good enough to play with the E-Street Band. He even insisted that we address him as "The Boss." Bri Guy took a little too kindly to shooting and got wrapped up in the real guns. He brought one through airport security and nearly ended the group.

Our worst problems were with Joey. Amherst selectman Hill Boss had ordered a nationwide manhunt for him. He even received town approval for the Amherst Police to carry tear gas and rocket launchers. We were wanted men. Who knew that kidnapping was such a big offense? Being reasonable men, we did what any other sane men would do, we ran. We fled like crazy, booze, guns, drugs, and all.

My dreams of Valentines Day with Britney were shattered. I returned home bruised and beaten with my dreams lying mashed upon the floor. I haven't seen Seth, but I heard a rumor that his rehab is going well. The psychologist says that Mike will be OK, but that we must address him as "The Boss" for a little while longer until the medication kicks in. Bri Guy is back to work photographing campus events but I wouldn't arouse his anger if I were you. As for Joey. He received the most Valentines in his class and I heard on MTV news that he was offered a solo record deal and that he is opening up for Britney on her latest world tour. At least I have a VH1 "Behind the Music" special to look forward to someday.

Matthew Frascella is a Collegian columnist.

Show me the money!

I spend a disproportionate amount of time worrying about money these days. I mean, I spend a lot of time thinking about monkeys humping each other and odorless garlic supplements, but the rest of the time I think about money. After all, most of what I do outside of school is spend money because that's pretty much all there is to do. For example, movies cost money, eating in restaurants costs money, disco bowling costs money, shooting heroin costs money, and psychotherapy for needle trauma costs money.

I attribute this need of money to a culture which has thrived on making "stuff" for us to buy. But it's sort of like having a tapeworm: the more you consume, the hungrier you are. We don't need half the stuff we buy, but we buy it anyway, perhaps to increase our status among people we know.

Alexis Pushkar

I didn't realize until recently that I was pretty lucky. I have everything I need and a lot of stuff that I don't need. My good fortune stems in part from UMass's inexpensive cost. On-campus, in-state students shell out a little more than $10,000 a year. Students attending Harvard, Tufts, Boston College, and Boston University spend three times that in a given year. I mean, think of how much more heroin or odorless garlic supplements UMass students can afford.

I have a huge problem with paying $30,000 a year to attend school — UMass proves that it doesn't take that much money to run a successful educational institution. During the 1980s, the cost of attending private and public colleges and universities rose. For some reason, prestige increased with the costs so that suddenly, private schools were only cool if they all cost the same ridiculous amount of money.

In an era when graduate school is a necessity, spending approximately $120,000 on an undergraduate education for one child is appalling. UMass is a more affordable alternative for many families, but although UMass is more affordable than most schools, it still strains the piggy bank for some people.

I suppose some people were alarmed last week when UMass trustees voted to increase the cost of attending UMass-Amherst. Tuition has apparently decreased but fees have increased, and thus the overall cost has gone up.

Tuition and fees at other public schools across the country are significantly cheaper. Although the tuition and fees at each UMass campus varies, the average per student cost for next year is $4,794 but the national public school average is $3,243 which means some schools could possibly be half as expensive as UMass.

So what are these mysterious fees used for? They are listed on our bills with such titles as "service fee," which according to UMass Wise is used for services and a curriculum support fee which is used for supporting the curriculum — like a bra? Apparently these mysterious services and curriculum supports are a necessary part of running a university, so I'm not squabbling with the idea of paying fees.

However, it seems like a bad idea to anger Governor Celluci, who threatened to cut state funding for UMass because the price had gone up. UMass provides a great education at a fairly reasonable price, but there is much work that needs to be done on this campus to improve buildings — you all know which horrendous lecture halls I'm talking about. Angering key people in Massachusetts' state government is not a great idea. We need more money from them to repair and renovate many existing structures.

The price increase ends up being $78 more than what we in Amherst paid to go to school this year. Compared with the thousands of dollars that students will pay over their four years in college, $78 is a drop in the bucket, the cost of a cheap textbook. But this increase reverses the trend that started in the 1996-1997 school year. Of course, the trend of cutting prices is counter-intuitive because prices inevitably go up over time, but UMass was able to do it and thanks to Billy Bulger's efforts at public relations, somehow the prestige of the school went up.

Yes, public education should be more affordable in this state, but UMass is trying to provide a less expensive alternative to compete with some of the private schools in and around Boston; and doing a decent job of it I might add. A university education does not have to put an average middle class family into poverty. The extra money at some private colleges and universities seems to go into frivolous things like state-of-the-art gym facilities and exceptionally nice flowerbeds. In this society we don't need to spend nearly as much money on "stuff" as we do. I hope that the increased cost of fees at UMass is money well spent.

I'm sure at some point in the future we'll discover that the money from all these mysterious fees is really being used to finance Billy Bulger's house in the Mediterranean with its 80-car garage and private harem in the basement.

Until that day, we can only trust that our public officials are doing the right thing by increasing our fees. We actually need a lot more money for things like repairs and renovations as well as more professors, but this money should not come from student tuition and fees but rather from state grants. I hope that the cost of attending UMass doesn't become a runaway train like a really bad alternative song from the early '90s.

And heroin is bad for you. Didn't you see Trainspotting?

Alexis Pushkar is a Collegian columnist.

Back to the playground

I like to think that most of my actions can be justified, rationalized, or at the very least, laughed at. Sometimes it's a little more difficult, such as last week when I was caught off guard and I had to try to explain to my roommate why I was humming that Britney Spears song. The most difficult part was justifying exactly how and why I knew the lyrics. But, anyway, apart from my imminent humiliation, there was no harm done.

Sometimes, people's actions are rather difficult to justify, rationalize, and can most certainly not be laughed at. I'm not talking about serious issues like impeachment, war crimes or albums produced by John Tesh. Those actions are much more heinous than I am capable of addressing.

I am simply talking about actions taken every day by our fellow students and friends, often after trips to the bars, frat row or the like. Actions that, perhaps under the haze of a dozen or so cheap beers, may appear to be slightly amusing.

Elsa Allen

There was an incident this weekend, that they were solicited for drugs and that they were staying at the Colony Club, they learned that their hotel was a brothel during the off-season, and were warned not to walk around the neighborhood at night. There was minimal or no security within the hotel and the surrounding neighborhood. The attitude of the hotel staff was dismissive towards monitoring those using the hotel's facilities, with the result that non-guests were often in the lobby and by the swimming pool. Consequently, many of the students ended up spending considerable amounts of money and time traveling to the beach and shopping areas by taxi.

But, then, what if the "Teletubbies" program did use Tinky Winky to help legitimate homosexuality? Would this be so damaging to a child to see that a person's sexual orientation is just another in a countless list of personal characteristics?

But this wasn't enough excitement for them. They decided that they wanted to try and move one of the cars. They popped it into drive, not being aware that for this purpose, neutral would have been a better option, and pushed. The car did move forward, and had it not been for a large boulder in front of the left tire, the car would have rolled into the woods, down a small hill and into a rather large ditch.

A kind citizen noticed this ruckus and called the police. The boys were arrested and may even be held accountable. However, now there are several people who have to deal with insurance companies, police reports, repair estimates, bringing their cars to the body shop, etc. The boys who did it (I'll call them boys because I don't think adults would do this) had to go to jail, post bail, go to court, pay lots of fines, and have the sheer joy of letting their parents know what they've been up to in college... from the pay phone at the jail.

I could only wonder that night, as my roommate, the owner of the violated car, raged in our living room about how she wanted to go to the police station and personally castrate the guys who did this, was fun for them? Could they somehow justify their actions?

My final conclusion was probably not. If, in fact, my roommate is actually able to get a hold of their names and their bodies, definitely not.

In my mind, I re-create the conversations that may have occurred between these guys as they contemplated their actions:

"Hey man, let's f some s up."

"Yeah dude, that would be wicked cool."

"Look, I can kick stuff."

"Hey, me too!"

"Far out."

So there they were, in the throes of passionate destruction, thinking that surely they would get away with their slick little crime. How young and naive we, as students, can be. First they get us believing that there's actually chicken in those DC pucks...

We learn in kindergarten that hitting stuff is bad, kicking stuff is bad, and I'm pretty sure that somewhere we must have been told that trying to push large steel Volkswagens into the woods is bad.

So why, then, did they decide to do this?

I wish that I could come up with some witty remark that would sum up my concise opinion, thus preventing further actions such as this. But then I would be a miracle worker, and what would I be doing here?

We've all done stupid things. I mean who here doesn't remember high school?

We sometimes drink 'til we puke slip on the same patch of ice five times before remembering to walk around it. Heck, singing Britney Spears songs won't exactly strengthen you mentally. What most of us can comprehend is that it is bad to wantonly destroy private property for no apparent reason. If this had been, perhaps, a retaliation by a scorned boyfriend, I may be able to throw some points the way of the guy. Just a few points. Hey, we've all been scorned. But, such was not the case this time.

These boys simply could not muster the R-E-S-P-E-C-T that most of us average students possess. I think we should all feel bad for them. If they can't handle the basics that we all learned in kindergarten, imagine just how hard it must be for them to get through their gen-eds.

Elsa Allen is a Collegian columnist.

Reality over coffee

I was enjoying my breakfast and reading the Collegian when a news blurb caught my eye, Hate crime bill fails to pass in Wyoming. For the uninitiated, I'll sum it up. Cheyenne, Wyo., site of the brutal slaying of gay college student Matthew Shepard, failed to pass hate crime legislation. It never occurred to me that this could happen. That in the wake of something as horrific as another human being beaten and executed simply for being gay, that hate crime legislation could be denied.

Over a cup of coffee and a hard boiled egg, the print formed a familiar face. Suddenly it wasn't about a person I never met, in a place that I have never visited, and a people I may never understand. Perhaps the names are different but there are Matthew Shepards in my life. It became personal and I got angry.

It wasn't that the news of his death hadn't bothered me before, but it is easy to become so engrossed in our day to day life that emotion spent on news is fleeting. It becomes lost in the momentum as I rush off to the next class, work, or exam, selfishly assuming that the problem would resolve itself. After all, what could I possibly do? I just thought some random group of people would make it all go away, and there was no need for me to worry about it. This morning, however, it suddenly hit me that this assumption was dangerously wrong. This type of hate crime could just as easily obliterate my own life.

As my coffee became tepid, I thought of Michael and Mike and our apartment of rescued animals. I thought of their commitment to each other, an example of love and balance. I remembered Michael's soft heart continually smuggling animals out of the shelter on the day they were to be euthanized and then finding them homes. Or Mike's specialty in lending an ear; he had a way of making your troubles disappear.

You could depend on either of them to be there when it counted. The summer of transition I spent living with them taught me to walk with my head held high and a smile on my face. Who would I be if one of them was ripped from this world by hate before I had a chance to know them?

What if it happened to one of my friends because of their nationality? My sister because she is female? Or brother because he has brown eyes? When do we say enough? What will it take to lift my eyes from my own existence and see what is happening? When will I stop taking the easy way out by pretending hate will not affect me? Will it take a cold afternoon standing alone, listening to my voice echo off the grave of a friend? There are no words to capture pain and loss. Every time something like Matthew Shepard's death occurs we all are victims.

Dora Ferrari

Who knows how many people would have met him or what he may have done with his life had it not been stolen. Which one of us may have learned from him and who he would have helped. In this way we all lose to hate. By allowing such anger to continue unchecked we will all hide in fear, scared to admit anything which makes us separate. By not insisting on written legislation promising retaliation, we give permission, we encourage, and we welcome brutality.

It was not just a crime against a person's sexual orientation, it was a assault against what makes us all unique beings. An irate assassination of human variation, attacking what makes my eyes brown and my friends eyes blue. You can bet I want solid, written law telling everyone that the murder of anybody for being who they are is wrong.

I pray I never forget this moment of awareness. A moment of looking beyond printed words and pictures and allowing myself to feel. In fact, I will make you all this promise: I will not remain ignorant. When such legislation comes to my vote, if an opportunity for my voice comes about, I will do my best to help. For the love of my friends and family I will remember.

So for Michael, Mike, my sister and the rest, thanks for the love and the laughs, and I will remember you. For you, I will speak out. A part of me belongs to each of you.

Dora Ferrari is a UMass student.

Letters to the editor are always welcome. Since our email account is down, bring a typed copy down to the Collegian in the Campus Center basement. Your name, phone number and where you live should be included. If you have any questions, talk to Tanya, Alexis, or Gary.

Campus Career Network
University of Massachusetts Amherst

Today!

Wednesday, February 17, 1999

THE CAMPUS-WIDE CAREER FAIR
10am - 3pm
Campus Center Auditorium

Full-Time Opportunities for Undergraduate and Graduate Students

All Majors Welcome!

138 Employers there to see YOU!

For more information call (413)545-2224

The entirely true confessions of a closeted New Kids on the Block fan

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

GREATEST HITS
New Kids on the Block
Columbia/Legacy

Girls — keep your panties on. The New Kids on the Block are back; and not in another sad attempt as "NKOTB." Legacy has decided to release a greatest hits album, and just in time as far as I'm concerned.

Almost a decade after "I'll Be Loving You Forever" and "Hangin' Tough" hit the charts at No. 1, the album is being released, according to a Legacy press release, "in celebration of the original five bad boys from Boston" (bad boys? I ask) and "in recognition of the boy band phenomenon thriving today."

Or, as the Legacy promotional website states: "Before there were Backstreet Boys... before the other guys got N' Sync... Danny, Jordan, Johnny, Donnie and Joey changed the rules."

I was never much of a New Kids fan. Neither was my sister — at first. In fact, we were very bitter when we went to see Tiffany at the Warwick Musical Theater and all these annoying girls were screaming for the opening band (New Kids). We didn't even think they were that cute, especially Joey McIntyre; but I guess they grow on you, like the Cabbage Patch Kids (now they were ugly).

My sister later developed an outright obsession; she ate, slept and breathed Joey McIntyre. So did my friend Julie. I found out. She said she thought she got over her New Kids phase, but once she saw Joey "pumping his hips on stage," she fell in love all over again.

But not me. No, I asserted my musical independence early, rejecting the mainstream obsession and embracing Milli Vanilli and INXS instead. In fact, I still have my Milli Vanilli tape and video — I refused to give into the large- scale recall — and I almost shed a tear when I found out Fab (or was it Rob?) died.

COURTESY SONY MUSIC

New Kids on the Block's albums can currently be found on the reduced rack at any local record store.

The lesson here is everyone succumbs to cheesiness at some point in her life. Don't be embarrassed to admit you once collected New Kids trading cards or checked out the Danny Wood website while bored last week. And don't be embarrassed to buy this album.

And why not? The album has several redeeming qualities. As I listened to "Step by Step" I realized I have never actually heard New Kids on the Block music on CD. The music was so clear and undistorted that I heard "Oooooo"s I didn't know existed. If you are, or were ever, a New Kids fan, the album is worth buying for sound quality alone.

Not to mention that the album is a collection of hits spanning four years and six albums (who knew they had so many?), and the liner notes are full of fun facts. Can you believe the album Hangin' Tough spent 132 weeks (that's two and a half years for all you arts majors) on the Billboard charts? Or that 1-900-909-KIDS was getting approximately 100,000 calls per week in 1990? Neither did I. Amazing! By the way, the number is no longer operational... I checked.

I'll admit it, I loved the song "Tonight." And I, too, donned torn acid-washed jean shorts and a black felt hat on my way to Foxboro Stadium for a New Kids concert in hopes of meeting them backstage (my mom knew some guy working stage crew who promised to sneak us in, but we waited for an hour after the show and he never showed up, sending my sister into a fit of tears).

I'll also admit that in some small

Turn to NKOTB page 8

Please return to sender

COURTESY JANE BRADLEY/SONY

Kevin Costner sinks his Message In a Bottle.

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

MESSAGE IN A BOTTLE
Directed by Luis Mandoki with Kevin Costner, Robin Wright Penn, Paul Newman
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

Message in a Bottle has a chance to be a poetic and creative romance, but instead resorts to humdrum formulas and tired melodrama. Everything in the movie, from the story, to the acting, to the ending, comes off flat and stale. In fact, the movie appears almost completely devoid of any emotion, not to mention the fact that it is painfully obvious and agonizingly slow. The script is so sloppy that about half way through, the movie has to reinvent itself, yet still somehow manages to limp to the finish.

On the surface, Message in a Bottle appears glossy, even beautiful, but underneath the pretty exterior, an ugly atrocity lurks. Admittedly, the cinematography was far and away the best part of the movie. Flowing shots of peaceful ocean water, eerily gray beaches, and stunning sea cliffs provide the ideal background for the story of star-crossed lovers. Rustic houses on the Cape and perfect little North Carolina sea cottages add immeasurable depth to the movie, even if they are probably filmed at the same location. Even Chicago seems new and shiny thanks to some fabulously arty shots.

Unfortunately, the settings are about the only things in this movie that shine. Message in a Bottle is about a Chicago journalist who finds, well, just that while on vacation. Touched by the enclosed letter to a mysterious Catherine, the journalist decides to track down the author — because that's obviously the natural thing to do.

With help from her newspaper and under the pretense of a news story, she tracks the origin to one man on the Carolina coast. They meet, somehow fall in love and spend the rest of the movie struggling to reconcile their pasts with their relationship.

The unavoidably lame plot is forgivable, perhaps, but the atrocious storytelling is not. First of all, the two main characters have an obvious propensity for writing, but nothing they say or write is even remotely intelligent, nevermind poetic or beautiful. Girls, beware: "You are my true North," is a lousy pick-up line coming to a town near you.

Second, the movie, for all intents and purposes, is over after about an hour and the second half serves only as a forum for cheap sentiment. Tear the lovers apart, make them doubt their "love" and introduce some tragedy to make the realization more powerful. It's too bad because the ending is fairly clever and would have been well done if it weren't so poorly filmed.

Also, it could not have been impossible to assemble a

Turn to MESSAGE page 8

Be A Resident Assistant

Applications for Fall 99 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted.
Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Recieve an Application

RA -just be

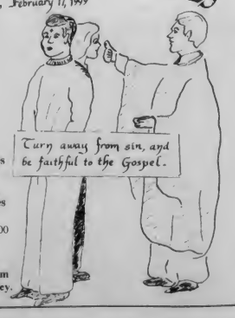
February 11	Gorman 2nd Floor Lounge	7:00pm
February 16	Field Classroom	7:00pm
February 18	Campus Center Room 917	12:30pm
	Kennedy 19th Floor Lounge	7:00pm
February 22	Stonewall Center Lounge	5:00pm
	Cashin Main Lounge	7:00pm
February 24	Campus Center Room 917	12:30pm
	Cance Main Lounge	7:00pm
February 25	New Africa House Room 109	5:30pm
March 1	Campus Center Room 904	5:00pm
March 2	Patterson Main Lounge	7:00pm
March 4	Mary Lyon Basement	7:00pm

For More Information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545-0472.

ASH WEDNESDAY SERVICES
Newman Center
Wednesday, February 17, 1999

8:00 A.M.
Mass and distribution of Ashes

12:15 P.M.
Mass and Distribution of Ashes



5:15 P.M.
Mass and Distribution of Ashes

7:00 P.M.
Liturgy of the Word and Distibution of Ashes

9:00 P.M.
Liturgy of the Word and Distibution of Ashes

Newman Center 472 North Pleasant St. 413-549-0300

The Catholic Community at the Newman Center invites you to join them to begin the 40 days of the Lenten journey.

A+
...for the teacher.

OUTSTANDING TEACHER AWARD

COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
students and faculty invited to submit nominations for the 1998-99 award

NOMINATION FORMS ARE DUE MARCH 1
(Available in room 113 Stockbridge Hall or in departmental offices.)

Faculty in the following majors are eligible for nomination:

Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology
Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design
Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture • Microbiology • Natural Resource Studies
Plant and Soil Sciences • Resource Economics
Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

■ NKOTB

continued from page 7

way I actually respect the New Kids — they actually spent time choreographing dance routines to put on a good show. Every once in awhile I miss the spectacle of stadium concerts. Probably because I spend my evenings at concerts performed in tiny venues where you're lucky if the lead singer looks up from the floor or stops staring at the back wall long enough to engage the audience.

This album made me think. Well ... not too much, but a little. Julie and I were belting out "Didn't I Blow Your Mind" all the way to Rhode Island this weekend (the toll booth collector raised his eyebrows when he heard "Please Don't Go Girl"). We spent the majority of the drive reminiscing about the good old days. Frankly, I felt old. And a little sad.

Then scary things started happening. I started singing "Please Don't Go Girl" in the shower, and have not been able to get the tune out my head since. The other night, I actually had a New Kids on the Block dream. Eek!

I also stayed up really late, neglecting homework and other priorities, to do a little Internet "research." I found myself at www.nkotb.com, my roommate sitting anxiously next to me. We had already explored five other sites, most of which consisted of either tales of hopeless obsession or bickering banter ("New Kids suck! All fans should be dropped in acid and burned to death then cast in molten iron!"). But this one was a winner. And it had 30 links to other New Kids sites, one-stop New Kids shopping if you will.

There was a catch, however. Only true fans were admitted, and there was a New Kids trivia question to distinguish true fans from imposters. Do you know the name of Jon Knight's dog? I did. My roommate was shocked. I was scared. (The dog's name is Nikko by the way).

COURTESY SONY MUSIC

New Kids from left: Donnie Wahlberg, Danny Wood, Jordan Knight, Joey McIntyre, Jon Knight.

I also visited www.JordanKnight.com and www.joemcintyre.com. Both have new albums coming out soon, and Joey has already started touring. I could kick myself for missing his Jan. 23 appearance at Big Daddy's in Providence. Big Daddy's, you wonder? So do I. Hmmm...

Both sites had wonderful photos, and Joey's had a wonderful "Page me" feature where fans ask the tough questions. Laura from Boston University wanted to know whether he preferred the name Joe or Joey to which he replied: "I usually tell them you can call me whatever you want, just play my record." And to clear up the on-going debate about who is more popular, Jordan's site had a whopping 678,839 hits, whereas Joey's only had 210,922.

All in all, this CD afforded me a mystical journey down memory lane. In my travels, I discovered a great many scary things about myself (like perhaps I am a closet fan after all) but it was worth it. I wholeheartedly recommend buying this album. It's already in high demand among my friends and around the Collegian office. Crazy. A

■ message

continued from page 7

less-humanistic, less appealing cast than this one. Other than Paul Newman, who is marvelous and gives the movie a few fleeting breaths of air, the rest of the actors are virtually passionless. Granted, he doesn't have much to work with, but Kevin Costner is just plain unlikable in this role. Somewhere along the line, he lost his unparalleled charm and boyish smile, both of which would have helped the film.

And thankfully, Robin Wright Penn did not decide to become an orator. She blunders her way through the letters so badly, that it hurts one's ears to listen. It's hard to say which is worse, the letters or her pathetic attempts to sound moved while reading them. Through the rest of the movie she struggles just to be Michelle Pfeiffer or Sharon Stone and fails miserably.

It's pretty sad when Newman, at 74, is far and away the funniest and most endearing character among actors almost half his age.

Give credit to Message in a Bottle for what it is — a sappy, unimaginative, poorly executed romance with a depressing twist designed exclusively to coincide with Valentine's Day. The characters are not only unoriginal but also unbelievable, lacking any depth even as stereotypes. The story is poorly conceived and the acting makes it more so. The movie may be pretty to look at, but it's pretty sad to watch. It's quite possibly the most unromantic trite, emotionless, tired "romance" that I've ever seen. D

The all–time hip–hop top tens

Concluding the all–time hip–hop evaluation, there are still some loose ends to tie up. The emcee, which has been the primary focus of this survey, is after all only one–fourth of hip–hop's earth, wind and water. (Check out the February issue of Blaze magazine for a thorough analysis of the other elements). In this primitive version, it is my intention to further examine aspects of music, targeting producers, groups and deejays. From my relatively young perspective, these are my selections which again reflect my opinions and tastes of all–time hip–hop.

David Katzoff

For production, the emphasis is based upon melody, breakbeat, scratch phrasing, use of samples, use of live instruments, originality, innovation and consistency. Without further ado...

1) DJ Premier
2) RZA
3) Dr. Dre
4) Prince Paul
5) Organized Noise
6) Pete Rock
7) Erick Sermon
8) Marly Marl
9) Mobb Deep
10) DJ Muggs

Off the bench: Da Beatminerz, D.I.T.C.

Groups are judged upon two primary aspects: Their contribution to hip–hop and their contribution to enhancing the sound cavity in my ear drums:

1) Wu–Tang
2) Tribe Called Quest
3) Run DMC
4) Gangstarr
5) EPMD
6) De La Soul
7) Public Enemy
8) N.W.A.
9) Mobb Deep
10) The Roots

Off the bench: Outkast, Fugees & Brand Nubian

Since the deejay has been the silent foreman of hip–hop since the beginning, it is essential to recognize the roots of its origins. Building from there, we can then acknowledge the torchbearers and innovators of today:

1) Kool Herc
2) Grand Wizard Theodore
3) Grandmaster Flash
4) Afrika Bambaataa
5) Q–Bert
6) Roc Raida
7) Kid Capri
8) Red Alert
9) Jazzy Jeff
10) DJ Shadow

Off the bench: DJ Krush & Rob Swift

Well, that's that. For further discussion, once again thoughts and opinions can be directed towards dynamic_unc@yahoo.com.

Stay tuned...

David Katzoff is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY GUY ARDON

De La Soul hold their position in the hip–hop community.

Interested in writting for Arts?
Then give us a call or come down to the Collegian visit us on the web at www.dailycollegian.com

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHAMPTON / HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
✔ Complete Bartending Course
✔ On Campus
✔ For a Fraction of the Cost of other schools
✔ National Certification Available
✔ Hands on Pouring Lab
✔ Tips on how to get a fun, high paying job
Free Info Session
Wed, Feb. 24th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program With valid college Student I.D.
No Now! Space is Limited!!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX

DELI CLERKS
Immediate openings for weekday and weekend shifts at our Hadley Cumberland Farms/Summit Subs. We offer steady employment, competative wages, 90 day pay increase and benefits. Apply in person or call 1-800-828-0869 x-7921.

Go to College... Tuition Free!
Work One Weekend a Month and Earn 100% College Tuition!
In the Army National Guard
YOU Can...
- Receive 100% College Tuition
- Receive the Montgomery G.I. Bill
- Learn a Job Skill of your choice!
- Earn over $110.00 per weekend to start!
- Call today and discover just how easy paying for college can be!
CALL:
1-800-GO-GUARD
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY NATIONAL GUARD YOU CAN

Student Union Showcase
Wednesday, February 24
Open House: Noon to 6p.m.
RSO and GSO groups may reserve information tables by registering with the receptionist in the campus activities office.
To all RSO and GSO groups who wish to perform in the student union showcase; please reserve time and space.
Registration board is located outside the campus activities office, room 416, Student Union building.
Deadline for registering performances or reserving tables is monday, February 22.

Learn German This Summer
At URI
1999 German Summer School
June 26 - August 6, 1999
The University of Rhode Island, in cooperation with the Goethe Institut Boston, is hosting the 19th Annual German Summer School. The German will be the sole language of communication, and focus will be on the art of this six-week residency program.
Contact: Dr. John Grandin or Dr. Norbert Hedderich, Co-Directors, Dept. of Languages, URI, Kingston, RI 02881 Phone: 401-874-5921 E-mail: grandin@uriacc.uri.edu or hedderic@uriacc.uri.edu Hearing impaired: 401-277-5020

TRAVEL SMART!
BEST PRICES TO EUROPE, WITHIN THE U.S., AND DESTINATIONS AROUND THE WORLD
CALL 800-272-9676
E-MAIL sales@prismtours.com
VISIT US AT www.prismtours.com
Eurailpasses and Student ID cards available.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Avenue
New York, NY 10017
(212) 986-8420

Racketeers swept by Brown

By Seth Szilogyi
Collegian Correspondent

The expectations were extremely high for the match–up this past weekend, as the Massachusetts men's tennis team visited Brown University. Hoping for an upset of the 11th–ranked Bears, the Minutemen were primed and ready for the challenge. Unfortunately for the Minutemen, Brown thwarted their hopes with a convincing victory, as UMass lost every match, 7–0.

"Brown was better than we thought," said coach Judy Dixon. "[Brown's] a good, tough squad, very deep."

No. 1 singles man Steve Prisco had a hard fought battle against Phil Cheung of Brown, 7–6(5), 6–4. He almost forced a third set, but lost in a tie–breaker game. Bo Navarro, No. 2 singles for this match, went down to Chris Wolfe, 6–3, 6–0. The former No. 1, Rob Manchester, now No. 3, couldn't find his stroke as he lost 6–3, 6–2.

"Robbie is not playing with confidence right now. He can't seem to find his way," said coach Dixon of the struggling Manchester.

Todd Chaney and Parsa Samii were at No.'s 4 and 6, respectively. They played competitive matches but eventually fell to the powerful Brown players. Cheney was defeated 6–3, 3–6, 6–1, winning the middle set, and Samii lost 6–5, 6–2.

The hardships continued for the Minutemen, as No. 5 singles man, Fabian Rabanal was forced to wait three hours before his match, going in cold.

"He sat for an hour and a half after the doubles and another hour and a half for a singles court to open up," Dixon explained. "Under the circumstances, I was pleased with his performance."

In doubles action, the team of Prisco and Manchester gave Brown's No. 1 doubles team all they could handle, losing the intense match 9–8. The No.'s 2 and 3 doubles of Cheney/Navarro and Josh Bainton/Todd Champeau were overwhelmed by the Brown players going down 8–1, 8–1 respectively.

Overall coach Dixon was pleased with the effort out of her players.

"We need to be competing at this level," said Dixon. "I thought they (UMass) played well. We know what we have to work on."

Now the focus of the Minutemen must change to the next match–up against Army and SUNY Stonybrook on Feb. 20th. Army will again be a big test for UMass, as they are ranked 8th — three spots higher than Brown — in the Eastern division of the NCAA. Coach Dixon believes, "We need to work on our footwork, balance, and our focus. We also need to take more high percentage shots."

The Minutemen currently stand at 0–1 in the spring and 4– 4 overall.

Women overpowered by Ivy leaguers

By Jason Owens
Collegian Correspondent

Losing 9–0 to Yale and 7–0 to Princeton this weekend, the Massachusetts women's tennis team received a dose of Ivy League competition in what coach Judy Dixon hopes will be a "learning experience."

On Friday, the team marched into New Haven, Connecticut to face a Yale team ranked No. 64 nationally, and No. 6 in the region. What they found was a very good team.

"They were just better then us," said Dixon.

Despite the lopsided score, Dixon wasn't too discouraged by the loss.

"We played very well, I thought," Dixon said. "We had opportunities in spots, but we just lacked the confidence to take advantage of what they gave us."

One such opportunity came in the match of freshman Helena Horak, who took Andrea Goldberg to three sets in the third singles slot, before losing 6–7 (5), 7–6 (4), 6–2.

"She just ran out of gas," said Dixon.

Also playing well for the Minutewomen was Annie Hamilton, who lost to Lauren Muehl 4–6, 6–2, 6–2 in the No. 6 singles spot. Junior Ola Gerasimova, UMass' Russian import, lost to Somer Khanalarian, the No. 21 ranked player in the East Region, 6–3, 6–4.

"We lacked the confidence to close things out," said Dixon, whose No. 1 doubles team of Gerasimova and Horak were up 5–1 against Yale before losing 8–5.

According to Dixon, "[Yale] became more aggressive and it was like we almost began to quiver. We were very close. If someone could have just won one of those matches, I think the other players would recognize that they could do it too."

Coming off the loss to Yale, the Minutewomen rolled into Princeton, New Jersey on Saturday to take on the school of the same name. Things weren't too much better for the Minutewomen there.

In fact, according to Dixon, "Princeton is probably a bit better than Yale."

Princeton, a perennial national and regional contender, put the hurt on the UMass women as they swept the tournament convincingly, 7–0.

"They are just very aggressive. They were up on the base line while we sat behind it. Princeton is a very good team," said Dixon.

While the scores weren't close, Dixon says that the team could learn some important lessons from the losses to the Ivy League powerhouses.

"We need to get the ball out of the middle of the court, move up on the baseline, and take advantage of second serves," Dixon said. "That's what we've been working on in [each] practice since this weekend."

"The matches were both heartening and disheartening. It was encouraging that we could play with some of their players, but we could have gotten two or three [wins]. Because we lack confidence, we didn't get any."

Next up for the Minutewomen is a home match this Friday against Fordham, who Dixon calls "a very important A–10 opponent." Beating them is an important step towards the team's goal of gaining a high seed in the Atlantic 10 tournament.

After that league match up, the team again returns to action against the Ivy League, traveling to Brown, ranked No. 15 in the East Region, on Saturday, Feb. 27th, in Providence, Rhode Island.

■ skiing

continued from page 12

largely attributed to Easthampton's own Tina King. The freshman phenom scorched the GS field for the second straight week, with a winning time of 1:27.76. King has been the team's best GS skier since the second tournament of the season at Plymouth State, after missing the opener with bronchitis.

Another freshman, Ken Thoman of Lebanon, Ohio, tore through the GS in 1:24.43 en route to seventh place. Thoman finished among the fastest 15 in every GS race of the regular season, complementing a pair of top–10 runs in the slalom.

As a team, the Minutemen chalked up a third–place finish in the GS, behind Plymouth State and Colby–Sawyer.

The teams now turn their focus toward the NCAA Regionals, which take place this upcoming weekend at the Middlebury Snow Bowl in Vermont. Ten racers, five from each team, will represent UMass against USCSA conference foes Plymouth State, Boston College, Colby–Sawyer, and Brown.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Thomas Holden

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Tina King

Holden and Thoman lead the men's selections, which also include Mike Hadden of Westfield, Rich Granger of Princeton, and Ashburnham's Chris Guertin. Sophomore Hadden completed his best meet as a Minutemen this past weekend, placing 15th in both the slalom and GS.

Holden turned in an amazing performance at last year's regional, cruising to a second place finish in the slalom and fifth in the GS.

For the Minutewomen, Keane and King will be accompanied by sophomore Margaret LaBombard and freshmen Olson and Lauren Brodey. LaBombard and Brodey, both New York natives, have combined for five top–20 finishes this season. LaBombard also competed in last season's regionals, earning a sixteenth place in the slalom and 28th in the GS.

The NCAA nationals are slated for March 10–13 at Black Mountain, Maine

■ track

continued from page 12

ond in the 55–m dash with Andrea Comeau coming in sixth place. Teaming with Comeau, Shelandra Irish, and Taneka Miller they secured second place in the 4x200 relay with a time of 1:42.72 .08 seconds off the season best time of 1:42.64. Comeau also finished in fifth place in the high jump with a jump of 5–feet–5–inches.

Junior Sally Hirsch and Melissa Henderson placed second and ninth, respectively, in the 3,000m with times of 10:04.63 and 10:30.72.

Irish and Abby Rubino finished second and fourth in the long jump with jumps of 18–feet–9–inches and 17–feet–7– inches, respectively.

To round out the top finishers for UMass, Giselle Nicholas placed fifth in the weight throw. In the pentathlon, Melissa Ward placed third.

UMass will next compete in the Atlantic 10 Championships on Saturday.

Dettloff earns honors

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

Despite not competing this weekend, Anne Dettloff, the Massachusetts women's swimming team phenom has collected another honor. This time the freshman from Barrington, Ill. was named the Atlantic 10 Conference Rookie of the Week. This is the third time this season that Dettloff has taken home rookie of the week honors.

Dettloff was recognized for her efforts in a UMass trouncing of A–10 foe Fordham, 131–97 on Saturday Feb. 6.

Dettloff was the winner in both the 200 yard freestroke with a time of 1:57.44, and the 200 y backstroke in a time of 2:13.39.

Not only was the Illinois native impressive at the Fordham meet but she also has been the pillar of consistency all season.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Anne Dettloff

Dettloff holds the team's top times in the 100 y free (53.81), the 200 y free (1:55.60), the 500 y free (5:03.50) and the 1000 y free with a time of 10:20.41, which is a new school record in that event.

Dettloff assaults on the record books continues. She is a member of the three best freestyle relay teams in the 200 y, 400 y and 800 y free's, as well as being part of the record setting team in the 400 medley relay (3:58.55).

The freshman has been consistent in other races like the 50 free (25.04), where she has the third best time on the team behind Julie Dragon and Andrea Kazanjian. Dettloff also owns the second best time on the team in the 100 back (1:01.21), and the fourth best time in the 200 back with a time of 2:12.74.

Her excellent times have helped UMass to a 9–2 dual meet finish this season, one win shy of tying yet another school record.

■ NBA

continued from page 12

Not bad for a guy that hates being in Sacramento.

Charles Barkley — The league leader in rebounds at 17 a game and Houston's leading scorer. Sure, the guy is past his prime, but he was never one to not give it 110 percent, even when he was hurt.

Tim Duncan — The guy is consistent. He puts up a double–double almost every night and gives an all–out effort every second he is on the floor. I love his game and his attitude.

Jason Kidd — He is leading the league in assists and minutes per game. Kidd has put Phoenix back in the elite of the NBA.

Gary Payton — "The Glove" is becoming the best all– around player in the NBA. His nickname comes for his defense, but what he gives on the offensive end is unmatched, second in the league in scoring and fourth in assists.

Bryan Smith is a Collegian columnist.

Two abandoned cities look for pro–football franchises

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Houston and Los Angeles, which lost NFL franchises this decade, will learn in March which will get one back.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said yesterday there seems to be agreement among the owners on adding a 32nd franchise, setting up a vote on where that team will play.

After meeting with the league's expansion committee, Tagliabue said the owners seem committed to approving a fourth expansion this decade.

Jacksonville and Carolina joined the league in 1995, while the new Cleveland Browns begin play this fall. The 31 owners will meet next month in Phoenix, when a decision is expected on the next franchise that could begin play in 2002.

"I think people are getting to the point where they understand that, as we go into the 21st century, we've certainly got to have a 32–team league," Tagliabue said after the four–hour meeting at an Atlanta airport hotel.

He said both the L.A. and Houston markets have fan interest, population, and television appeal.

The main difference is there is only one group, headed by Robert McNair, vying for the franchise in Houston, and it has a plan for a new retractable–roof stadium.

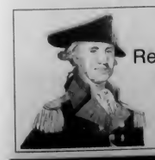
Two rival groups in Los Angeles are bidding for the expansion franchise, each with its own stadium plan.

Hollywood mogul Michael Ovitz has lined up an all–star roster of investors, including actors Tom Cruise and Kevin Costner, to build a combined stadium and shopping mall in Carson, 21 miles south of downtown. Developer Ed Roski Jr. and billionaire Eli Broad are proposing to renovate the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Los Angeles has been without a franchise since the Raiders returned to Oakland and the Rams moved to St. Louis after the 1995 season. The Houston Oilers left for Tennessee in 1997.

Tagliabue said the league may assist in the funding of the Los Angeles stadium, but the money would go toward one of the plans already proposed.

He would not say if the league is committed to picking one of the two ownership groups, indicating there is some trepidation among the owners about the warring bids.



"We've got two different ownership groups and two different stadium plans," he said. "That's something we've got to work through."

The expansion decision likely will spawn a whole new set of issues, with realignment at the head of the list. Tagliabue said the expansion committee discussed various scenarios yesterday, using both Los Angeles and Houston.

Realignment is a hot–button issue in a league where Arizona and Dallas are part of the NFC East, Atlanta and Carolina are members of the NFC West, and the three teams in Florida are spread over three separate divisions in both conferences.

On another matter the league's finance committee decided it needed more information about an $800 million bid by Howard Milstein to purchase the Washington Redskins.

www.dailycollegian.com

Read Collegian Sports: It's your duty as a student!

Child Care Needed
Reliable, non-smoking, articulate person needed to care for our 4 year old boy in our Amherst home.
- 4 afternoons per week, 2:00 - 6:00 PM
- Must have own transportation
- Prefer someone who will be in area during summer
- $7.25 per hour to start; $8.25 per hour after 3 months
Call Kathy at 549-4246 to arrange interview

Contests, Coupons, & Giveaways
AmherstOnline.com
Bookmark It!

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Thanks to all our Loyal Patrons for 20 Great Years ! We'll be changing the way you see movies with.... 16 NEW SCREENS Fall '99
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9163
Mt. Farms Mall
Messages in a Bottle (PG-13)
A Civil Action (PG-13)
Playboys (R)
Blast From the Past(PG-13)
Variety Show (R)
Special Engagement
$2.50 (Twi-Lite)

Massachusetts School of Law
At Andover
A Juris Doctor degree from MSL can give you the skills you need to persuade, advise and be a leader in business, healthcare, law enforcement, government or law.
- LSAT NOT REQUIRED
- DAY AND EVENING PROGRAMS
- AFFORDABLE TUITION PLANS AND FINANCIAL AID AVAILABLE
- ROLLING ADMISSIONS
500 Federal Street, Andover, MA 01810 • (978) 681-0800
www.mslaw.edu
JURIS DOCTOR = A VARIETY OF CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game& System Rentals
2 movies $2
w/ad thru 3/22
Buy/Sell/Trade/Rent
Video Games
Best Selection in Town
9 E Pleasant St. (near the Pub)
Amherst • 549-4505

There's a whole world out there!
Explore it with Contiki-
The #1 tour for 18-35 year olds
Cheap tickets great advice
Nice people
Boston/Sydney $1407
Boston/Nairobi $955
Newark/Quito $290
New York/San Juan $255
Boston/Paris $344
Contiki Travel
Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone: 413-256-1261

Wednesday Night
Steve & Greg Asadoorian
"UMass' Greatest Acoustic Duo Playing your Favorite Tunes From the 60's & 70's today"
☆ Weekly Drink Specials ☆
Miller Lite Bottles $1
16 oz. Miller Lite $2
Bucket of Rocks (4 rocks and a T-Shirt) $6
22 oz. Rolling Rock 2.99
Over 40 Hand Crafted Beers
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street • Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Putton Village partially furnished availible immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

AUTO FOR SALE

85 Jeep CJ7, 4-cyl, 4-spd, 73k miles, Hunter Green, soft top, New Alpine stero rims, 31" tires. Call Matt 253-9170

1990 Vw Jetta Silver good running condition. 128,000 miles. $1600.00 Call 256-8634 - 256-0222

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag. black $3500 584-6090

'95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer. 546-5366

COMPUTERS

AST 133 MHz pentium with 16GB, windows 95, Netscape, microsoft word, Lotus Applications, plus more. $700.00 or B/O. Call Noah 546-2147 Free delivery within UMass or nearby Amherst area!

Packard Bell 8kspeedCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

Co-Managers Wanted Campus Design & Copy is seeking highly motivated students for Co-Manager positions in a student-run collective. Applications available at CD&C,2nd floor Student Union Application Deadline Feb 16

EMPLOYMENT

ACTION JOBS- Listings of America's Best Adventure Jobs: Alaska, Adventure Travel, Cruise Ships, Forest Fire Fighting, Sailing, White Water Rafting, Backpacking, & more... www.actionjobs.com

Work in the Music Business! Seeking college reps to work on grassroots marketing campaigns for emerging recording artists. Fax resume to Mike Nowicki at (212) 629-3605 or email miken@metroent.com

PRESTIGIOUS NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool Musical Director and General Counselors. INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd TRAIL'S END CAMP 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)—Sports oriented, Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or wayneboys@aol.com.

DJ Wanted For Mobile Parties For greater Springfield area experience helpfull! DWN Transportation needed Call 413-525-8260

EMPLOYMENT

FREE RADIO +$1250! Fundraiser open to student groups & organizations. Earn $3-$5 per Visa/MC app. We supply all material at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box. 1-800-932-0528 x 65 www.ocmconcepts.com

Sbarro's Restaurant at Hampshire Mall needs closers. Flexible hours Good pay Apply in person

Housework good pay near by. Car needed. 548-9635

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our Company Mail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net or 770-937-6764

SUMMER MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITY Where are you working during the SUMMER OF '99? College Pro, a $25 million company, seeks highly motivated college students from New England to manage a service business. Summer earnings average $8-10K+ per manager. Internship credit possible. If you are a goal-oriented leader searching for the right opportunity, call for an application and information to be sent by mail. Leave your name, school address, and phone # on the automated voicemail system at (617)576-6833 ext 124.

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Round-Trip air. Logan to Miami. During Spring-Break $100 Mike 6-3236

Full size mattress and boxspring great condition $150/bo 367-0095

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

GREEK AFFAIRS

Sigma Kappa Open Rush 19 Allen St. Behind Hillel 2/17 8-10 2/18 6-8

HEALTH & BEAUTY

AMAZING METABOLISM BREAKTHROUGH Lose 10-200 lbs. Natural,safe,easy. Free samples call 877-792-1234

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Your ad could fill this space!!

INSTRUCTION

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

1/2 of House to Rent $300.00 per month or 20hrs of Babysitting or 20hrs of maintenance Native Russian speaker preferred. Maria 323-8949

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share 3br apt with 2 other students in Belchertown. 250 plus util washer/dryer on busline 323-0120

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Do you need to pay off your bills once and for all? Personal, Debt Consolidation, Credit Card Repair Call 1-888-780-8082

TRAVEL

BE FLEXIBLE... Europe $288 r/t plus taxes TRAVEL ANYTIME IN 1999! Mexico/Caribbean $159 r/t plus taxes CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!!! CALL:800-326-2009 www.airhitch.org

BOSTON SPRING BREAK '99 To Mazatlan from $599 To Cancun from $369 7 nights, 5 to 14 FREE meals 10 to 32 hours of FREE drinks CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463 Visit our web site www.collegetours.com

#1 Spring Break Specials!Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Panama City vacations! Free Parties - No Cover. Best beachfront hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $635. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplashtours.com

TRAVEL

CANCUN*NASSAU* JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 ww.classtravel.com

SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter- Campus 800-327-6013

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

Are you running low on $$?

Check out our Employment Ads and see the numerous oppertunities available!

Are you looking for an apartment or a house for the Fall?

Place an Ad in The Collegian Classifieds and find the home of your Dreams!!

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 17

Community — The UMass Black Student Union and the W.E.B. DuBois Library presents "Story, Legacy, Saga: A Black History Celebration" at 4 p.m. in the DuBois Library. There will be live student performances, food, a mural presentation, and a lecture.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services

THURSDAY, FEB. 18

Concert — The Hampshire College Winter Concert, featuring choreography and performance by Hampshire College alumni, takes place in the Studio Theater. Tickets are $5 for general admission, $3 for students, seniors and children. Call 559-5889. Reservations are recommended.

Lecture — The GLBT Studies Lunch Lecture Series presents "Romeo and Juliet: Heterosexual Romance a Gay Icon?" by UMass professor Richard Burt. The lecture will be held at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803.

Masters Swim — Adult swims are offered at the Amherst Middle School pool between 8:00-9:30 p.m.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — Last information sessions for the Domestic Exchange program will be held Feb. 9, 10, 16, and 17 in room 604 of Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Deadline for applications is March 1. Call 545-5151 for more information.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6–7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577-5316 if interested.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

University Store

Not like a mall... Better.

HSCN Hampshire Satellite Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WCVB & HSCN International	30	Univision
14	UMass Academic TV	31	Comedy Central
15	WB/New Haven	32	Cartoon
17	HSCN Programming	33	Much Music

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 17, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		G. Auriemma	Women's College Basketball: Providence at Connecticut. (Live)				Nova "Escape"	"Plane Crash/Abandon Ship"			Thieves-Time
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Tara Lipinski- This Moment		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Tara Lipinski- This Moment		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Whose Line?	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI		Sister, Sister	Friends	Henry	Friends	Dawson's Creek		Charmed "Secrets & Guys"		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Confirmation: The Hard Evidence of Aliens Among Us?				Law & Order "Sideshow"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lana	Star Trek: Voyager "Dark Frontier" (In Stereo)				Law & Order "Sideshow"		News	Married... With
WWJ	9	News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy		Confirmation: The Hard Evidence of Aliens Among Us?				News		Friends	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo) (Party of Five "Party of Five"				News		Friends	Mad About You
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Confirmation: The Hard Evidence of Aliens Among Us?				Law & Order "Sideshow"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Escape"	"Plane Crash/Abandon Ship"			Great Performances		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Whose Line?	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager "Dark Frontier" (In Stereo)				Law & Order "Sideshow"		News	Cheers
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	National Geographic Explorer				es "The Seventh Sign" (1988, Horror) Demi Moore
A&E	25	Biography: Mary Tyler Moore								Murder, She Wrote		Law & Order "Girlfriends"
CNN	29	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		American Justice		Newsstand: Fortune	Mad Abt. You	Frasier	Moneyline
COM	26	Saturday Night Live						Larry King Live		South Park	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	36	New Houses	Risk-Line (R)	Wild Discovery "Swarms" (R)		Reel ER (R)		Discover Magazine (R)		Vital Signs "101"		Sportscenter
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Duke at Florida State. (Live)				College Basketball: West Virginia at Pittsburgh. (Live)				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
LIFE	35	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five "Idea of Mexico"		Chicago Hope "Hello Goodbye"		Dying Live "A Stranger" (1996, Drama) Kate Nelligan, Ron Silver.		Dana	Fanatic	Blame Game	Lovoline
MTV	20	Countdown	Daria (R)	Daria (R)	Daria (R)	Daria (R)	Daria (R)	Daria (R)	Daria (R)	Jeffersons	Laverne	Love Lucy	Bewitched
NICK	42	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Catdog	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Nickgrounder: The Series		Friday the 13th: The Series	Twilight Zone
SCIFI	39	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Amaz. Stories	Star Trek "Caliban"			Nickgrounder: The Series					Star Trek
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	Don't Be Fooled (R)		Extreme Machines (R)		Future Cars (R)				Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	45	Due South (R) (In Stereo)		ER (In Stereo)		Sports Illustrated Swimsuit '99		Boxing (Tale Night – Floyd Mayweather vs. Carlos Rios. (Live)				es "Who's the Man?" (1993)
USA	33	Hercules: Legendary Journ.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger		es "Air Americans" (1987, Suspense) Michael Douglas. (In Stereo)				Undercover
HBO	43	(5:30) es "It Could Happen to You" (1994, Comedy) Nicolas Cage, Bridget Fonda. (In Stereo)			Artists' Specials (In Stereo)	es "Thr Untouchables" (1987, Drama) Kevin Costner. (In Stereo)		es "Ruthless People" (1986) Danny DeVito. "R"		"A Murder of Crows" (1998, Suspense) Colm Gooding Jr. "R"		Erotic
MAX	44	(5:00) "Primal"		"Anaconda" (1997) Jennifer Lopez. "PG-13"		es "Caught Up" (1998, Drama) Bokeem Woodbine. "R"				es "Bowl the Hood" (1995, Drama) Colm Gooding Jr. "R"
SHOW	46	es "The Spitfire Grill" (1996, Drama) Alison Elliott. "PG-13"				es "Caught Up" (1998, Drama) Bokeem Woodbine. "R"

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

408 Ville By Louis and Allan

Dilbert By ScottAdams

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Even though you know what the outcome will be or think that you do, it is important that you follow the script and plan things out completely.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You'll be at your best today when you are improvising. However, you must take care that you don't leave others in the dark when you are at your peak.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — The healing process is important to you today, for you are recovering from a blow dealt quite some time ago. Look deeply within yourself for strength.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — If you are looking for a "thrill" today, there are plenty to choose from, but use care even while you subject yourself to risks. No one is invincible.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Relationship issues demand attention today, and you will have to take care that you don't say the wrong things at the wrong times. Choose wisely.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Others are looking to you with great expectations today, and you have what it takes to deliver the goods. Indeed, you may even surprise yourself.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You'll be fighting fatigue throughout much of the day, but the demands on you will be outweighed by your sense of duty and completion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You can make improvements in your personal sphere today, and do much to reduce the chance of danger in any affairs of the heart. Things are looking up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Trust your intuitions today and you will profit mightily. Love blossoms despite your reluctance, but be prepared to ask yourself, are you ready to make a new commitment?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — A major disagreement may erupt out of the blue today and it will be up to you to make the first move towards reconciliation. Swallow your pride.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Self-improvement is on the docket for today for you mustn't miss a surprising opportunity to do something special for yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Don't fall into the trap of doing what you can as fast as possible today. It is more important to take things slowly and deliberately than doing a shoddy job

Quote of the Day

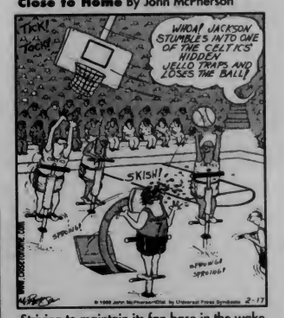
"Is a dream a lie that don't come true / or is it something worse?"

–Bruce Springsteen "The River"

For Those About to Rock By James Shaker

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Fox Trot By Bill Amend



Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Close to Home By John McPherson

Striving to maintain its fan base in the wake of the lockout and Michael Jordan's retirement, the NBA makes some drastic changes to its format.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-3626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Grilled Reuben Sandwich
Tomato Ravioli
Eggplant Grinder
Tofu Ravioli

DINNER
Ham Steak Dinner
Baked Ziti
Casablanca Stew

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Reuben Sandwich
Tomato Ravioli
Eggplant Grinder
Tofu Ravioli

DINNER
Ham Steak Dinner
Baked Ziti
Casablanca Stew

Hampshire

LUNCH
Grilled Reuben Sandwich
Tomato Ravioli

DINNER
Ham Steak Dinner
Baked Ziti
Casablanca Stew

Berkshire

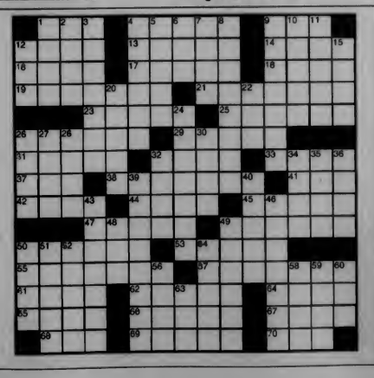
LUNCH
Grilled Ruben Sandwich
Tomato Ravioli
Italian Grilled Cheese Sand.
Eggplant Grinder

DINNER
Ham Steak Dinner
Ellen's Tortilla Casserole
Casablanca Stew

Night Editor: Mike Messaros
Photo Technician: Beth Krikorian
Copy Editor: Kathleen Rolfs
Production Supervisor: Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff: John Burt, Vlad Zakashansky

ACROSS

1 Tiger's home
4 Crosswise, in a ship
9 Musical notes
12 Swig
13 Raccoon cousin
14 Fasten, as shoes
16 Army division
17 Fortunetelling card
18 Spoken
19 Van
21 Vanity items
23 Veal and mutton
25 African country
26 Dismay
29 Maryland exports
31 Brazier
32 Miami basketball team
33 Spill the beans
37 Ely of "Tarzan"
38 Less mature
41 Foot the bill
42 — spumante (sparkling wine)
44 Animal docs
45 Develop
47 Migrating birds
49 Pillage natives
50 Ballpark event
53 Challenged
55 Mischief
57 Hens
61 Smell — (be suspicious)
62 Officeholders' vows
64 Sommer of films
65 Faction
66 Will
67 At a slant
68 Went first
69 Contest submission
70 Smidgen



DOWN

1 New Mexico tribe
2 Ken or Lena
3 Most favorable
4 Real
5 Tool one's own horn
6 Sense organ
7 Molecule part
8 Ease
9 Bouquet seller
10 Baseball great Hank
11 Shout "Boo!" to 12 Chewing —
15 Famous lioness
20 Bear gut
22 Massage
24 Fragrant
26 Taj Mahal site
27 Experts
28 Half a quart
30 Horatio Alger's origin
32 Shades of color
34 Heroic tale
35 Whip
36 Soap-making ingredients
39 Superseded a veto
40 Demolished
43 Kindled
46 Most embarrassed
48 Slippery fish
49 Like lined chicken
50 Harem chambers
51 Danger
52 Get around
54 Detest
56 Knitter's need
58 Columnist Chase
59 — out a living
60 Work as a tailor
63 Small child

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	D	O	B	E		F	A	C	T	H	A	M	S
S	O	D	A	S		O	G	G	E		I	A	O	N
A	G	E	N	T		L	U	N	A		M	E	R	E
P	E	A	J	A	C	K	E	T		M	A	N	S	E
	O	T	I	S		S	H	E	L	T	E	R
S	H	Y		C	O	S		A	T	A
K	E	A		S	E	N	T		G	E	Y	S	E	R
T	I	K	E	S		G	A	P		A	L	L	Y
S	A	S	H	A	Y		R	A	S	P		D	U	E
			A	N	A		E	N	I	D		G	A	S
D	U	P	L	O	M	A		H	A	R	D
T	O	O	L	S		S	E	E	T	H	I	N	G	S
H	A	R	D		S	P	R	Y		A	G	I	L	E
C	H	E	W		P	I	N	T		P	I	L	O	T
M	O	O	S		A	C	E	D		S	T	E	W	S

2-17-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

All the bests and worsts in hoops over the week

The NBA has not seemed to miss a step with its four- month lockout now only a memory. Fans are packing arenas in almost every NBA city to catch a glimpse of what looks to be a wide-open fight to the finish after the first full week of play.

The Eastern Conference has been full of surprises. Teams that are loaded with young talent are outplaying the veterans.

The Orlando Magic (5-1) were picked as a playoff team by most, but in no way were supposed to contend for the Atlantic Division title.

Bryan Smith on the NBA

Free-agent Isaac Austin has been a welcome addition to a front line that lost Rony Seikaly to the Nets. Bo Outlaw has been a force on the glass and as a shot blocker, and with Penny Hardaway contributing his solid all-around game, this team is coming together early.

The Philadelphia 76ers (4-1) are doing what no one expected. Who would have thought that a bunch of self- interested misfits would be playing this well? The team is led by Allen Iverson who is doing it all so far. Matt Geiger looks to be a better pick in the middle than Derrick Coleman, and Theo Ratliff is giving them solid play in the paint. Larry Hughes, who beat UMass in the first round of the NCAA Tournament, and Tim Thomas, are giving them a lift on the perimeter.

With Jamal Mashburn and Veshon Leonard injured, the Miami Heat (2-3) have been struggling to score points. Blue Edwards was signed to score some points in their absence, but he's not the answer.

The Indiana Pacers (4-2) have stumbled out of the gate. With the Bulls now the laughing stock of the league, and the Pacers being the only team to hold practices throughout the lockout, were looked at to become the class of the Central Division. The usual cast of characters is back, so look for them to turn it around soon.

Out in the Western Conference there has been no bigger surprise than the Los Angeles Lakers' 3-3 start. Almost everyone picked the youthful Lakers dethrone the Jazz and go to the finals, but if they continue to give up points like they have been, they will find themselves hard-pressed to outscore all their opponents — even with Kobe Bryant, Shaquille O'Neal, and Eddie Jones.

Another surprise has been the Milwaukee Bucks. Terrell Brandon is in the top five in assists and minutes played and is becoming the floor leader that he was with the Cavs. With Ray Allen now signed and Glenn Robinson finally turning into the player that was drafted No. 1, this might not be such a shock.

Youth is leading the way in Minnesota. Joe Smith and Malik Sealy have been welcomed with open arms to a lineup that lost all-star Tom Gugliotta to the Suns. Stephon Marbury and Kevin Garnett are leading this high octane attack to the top of the Midwest Division.

The Utah Jazz (5-0) are off to their best start in franchise history. The Jazz, with the usual tandem of John Stockton and Karl Malone, who have put together nine seasons in a row of 50 or more wins and consecutive trips to the finals, do not look to not be letting go of their hold on Western Conference champs just yet.

The Seattle Sonics are off to their usual strong start. All- everything guard Gary Payton is leading the charge, but fans need to be reminded that the Sonics started the 1993-94 season 10-0 and finished first in the west, but were ousted from the playoffs in the first round by the eighth-seeded Denver Nuggets.

Charles Barkley is out 3-4 weeks after successful surgery for a torn knee ligament, but look for Scottie Pippen, who has been off to a slow start for his standards, to turn his game around. Hakeem Olajuwon has been doing everything in his power to bring the Rockets back to championship form.

The biggest disappointment has been the Denver Nuggets. Signing Antonio McDyess proved to be a good move because he is in the top 20 in five categories, but he isn't enough. Raef LaFrentz should develop into a well-rounded player and will be a more than sufficient replacement for LaPhonso Ellis. The two point-guard backcourt of Chauncey Billups and Nick Van Exel need to ignite a fire on a team that is lacking a proven leader.

All-Week Team:

Chris Webber — 23.5 points, 16.5 rebounds, 4.25 blocks, 5.3 assists.

Turn to NBA page 9

UMass women's gymnastics floors Yale on the road

Mary Moore's bite was bigger than the Lady Bulldogs' bark this past weekend. She helped the Minutewomen defeat Yale in women's gymnastics competition.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

By Matt Frascella
Collegian Staff

Great teams improve throughout the year, gaining momentum and correcting early-season mistakes and miscues to perform up to their full potential. The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team is demonstrating that it has that ability to become better as the season wears on, and to perform at their best level.

Scoring the highest team score of the season, UMass dismissed Yale by a score of 191.550 to 184.525 to win its third straight road contest, improving the team to 4-2 (3-0 Atlantic 10) on the year and making the four-game road trip a successful venture.

Leading the Minutewomen once again was senior Michelle LoPresti who turned in another stellar performance for the UMass squad. LoPresti won the all-around competition with a score of 38.450. This marks the second time she has taken the all-around in as many weeks after capturing the event last Saturday against George Washington in the nation's capitol.

LoPresti's score of 38.450 was her second highest ever in the all-around. The senior received a 9.700 on the vault to win the event for the Minutewomen and she ranked third in both the floor exercise and the uneven bars to lead UMass to victory.

Helping to secure the win for the Massachusetts team was junior Mandy Mosby. Mosby finished second in the all- around behind LoPresti with a score of 38.025, including a first place finish on both the balance beam and the floor exercise.

The floor was kind to the visiting Minutewomen team as they scored a team total of 48.875 points. The Yale meet marked UMass' highest score in the floor yet this season.

Matching Mosby's score of 9.825 on the floor was Ibi Goldberg. LoPresti ranked in next as Massachusetts swept the first three places from the Lady Bulldogs. In addition, Goldberg placed third on the vault.

The senior contingent of Amy Caputo and Anita Sanyal contributed by scoring points with a second place finish on the vault and a third place finish on the beam, respectively. Sophomore Kyla Palombini came through with a second place finish on the beam as well.

With an important non-conference match against nationally -ranked Alabama upcoming this Sunday, it was crucial that UMass did not look past the Yale team and turn in a subpar performance, especially away from home.

Instead the opposite proved true, as the focused Minutewomen traveled to New Haven and dispatched Yale with one of their best showings of the year thus far. It was even more important for UMass to have a dominating meet against Yale due to the fact that Massachusetts will lock heads with the Ivy League team again later on this season at home. It was the first win that the Minutewomen have been able to capture against non-conference opponents.

Currently ranked at No. 1 in the nation, Alabama is not the first nationally-ranked women's gymnastics team to visit Amherst this year.

In the second meet of the season Michigan edged Massachusetts in front of the home crowd at the William D. Mullins Center. UMass head coach David Kuzara sees Michigan as his favorite to win the national championship. Alabama is expected to bring that same level of competition to the floor this Sunday.

This time around, the meet will take place in the Curry Hicks Cage, an environment that will hopefully be more conducive to the squad, and the site of their first win over Atlantic 10 foe Rhode Island. This Sunday's clash with Alabama also marks the third home meet for the Maroon and White and a welcome change from the recent travelling.

Rogers and GW to host Monty Mack and UM

By Aaron Soykin
Collegian Staff

Tonight may be a convenient time for Monty Mack to fake an injury.

Yes, he's the reigning Atlantic 10 Player of the Week, he's his team's best scorer, and is arguably the second or third best guard in the conference...

But then there's Shawnta Rogers, the best guard and leading scorer in the A-10. He's also the guy Mack will have to guard tonight, when the Massachusetts men's basketball team (11-13, 7-5 A-10) travels to George Washington (16-6, 10-2 A-10) for a 9 p.m. contest.

"They've got the best player in the league right now. Shawnta Rogers is having an outstanding season," UMass coach Bruiser Flint said of the Colonials. "Right now he's the most valuable player and has been killing people. A lot of game, he's scoring half of [GW's] points. If we let him get off [strong], then we'll be in a lot of trouble... and Monty will have to guard him."

Flint will no longer have to worry about coaching against Minuteman-killer Mike Jarvis, who was at the GW helm when the team ousted UMass from the A-10 Tournament the past two seasons. Instead, Flint will deal with new Colonial boss Tom Penders, who is well known for opening up his squad's offense to showcase a talented guard like Rogers (21 points, 7.1 assists, 3.1 steals per game).

"They run up and down the floor, they go and score," Flint said of the Penders-coached team. "When he has good guards, his teams are really good. If he's got good guards, he let's the guys just go. They go up and down, they take you off the dribble one-on-one, they screen and roll. That's the way they play, and he's always played that way."

So which UMass team will come to play against George Washington? Will it be the team which dominated Rhode Island in the first half of Saturday's contest? Or will it be the second-half team — the one which squandered a 15-point halftime advantage and scored only 18 points?

Despite enduring a hectic week, which included the devastating loss and the dismissal of Ajmal Basit, Flint feels that his Minutemen are beginning to show signs of inspiration, and hopes that they can replicate the better half of the URI game tonight.

"We've played a lot harder and with a lot more energy [during the last two games]. We've just got to make some shots," he said. "We shot 28 percent in the second half of the Rhody game, and that killed us. I told the guys that, as long as we play with that type of energy, things will bounce our way. We're not going to shoot 28 percent a half in every game."

Although his coach had felt he had deserved the honor much earlier in the season, Mack was named Atlantic 10 Player of the Week, along with Rogers for his three outstanding performances. Last Sunday, Mack scored 18 points, including the game-winning shot at the Mullins Center against St. Joseph's. The junior guard followed his heroics with 24 points against St. Bonaventure on Wednesday, and 16 at Rhode Island despite foul trouble.

"He's the third leading scorer in the league, and every night he's guarding the best guard on the other team," Flint said of Mack. "People are gearing their defenses to stop him. I'm happy for him. It's about time, to be honest with you. If we were having a better season, they'd be nominating him for player of the year. He's gotten so much better and his game has really stepped up for us."

Among the unlikely recent contributors for UMass has been second-year reserve forward Winston Smith. who has seen a significant increase in playing time over the past two games since Basit's departure. Flint, who was impressed by Smith's defense against URI's Lamar Odom, also expects him to play a key role against the Colonials. GW will test the Minuteman frontcourt with big-man Yegor Mescheriakov, who will see time squaring off with Massachusetts center Lari Ketner, as well as Smith.

"He found his role. That's the key. Sometimes, if you want to play, you have to play a role. A lot of guys accept their role and get more [playing] time. Winston's been great."

MEN'S B-BALL
UMASS @ GW
FEB 17, 8:45 P.M.
81.1 FM-WMUA
JOIN PLACE-PLAY
PREVIEW

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

COURTESY GW MEDIA RELATIONS

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Matching up the best: Minuteman guard Monty Mack against Colonial point Shawnta Rogers, GW post player Yegor Mescheriakov versus UMass center Lari Ketner.

Women's track makes a run at URI

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

This weekend, the Massachusetts women's track and field team finished second in the 20th annual New England Indoor Track and Field Championships that were held at the University of Rhode Island. The Minutewomen savored several first place finishes and an all-around strong showing to secure the second place finish. With 23 women competing in 16 different events, many sharing multiple duties, UMass was well represented in this showcase of individual accomplishments.

To compete in the New England Championships you must meet stiff qualifying standards and it is a chance to compete against the elite in an event.

Senior Nicole Way placed first in the 1,000 meters. She also teamed with Kristin Ciswoki, Erin Hankard, and Melissa Henderson to take home first place in the distance medley, but that's not all. Before her day was through she recorded a second place finish in the 4x800 relay with Ciswoki, Katherine Blais, and Monica Elmore. Way has been a model of consistency this season, holding top times in the 800 meters, the 1,000 meters, and the mile.

Ciswoski was not to be outdone, though. Along with her places in the relays, she captured third place in the mile with a season best time of 5:03.37.

Senior Rose Bryan turned in another stellar performance. Bryan secured first place in the triple jump with a jump of 37-feet-5.75-inches. She also took home sec-

Turn to TRACK, page 9

Skiers hurtle toward nationals
Holden and Keane lead the teams

By Adam White
Collegian Correspondent

All season long, the Massachusetts ski teams have relied on a double-barreled attack of tested race veterans and fiery freshman prospects to spell success. At this weekend's Smith College Tournament, the Maroon and White came out with both barrels blazing.

Paced by blistering slalom runs from senior captains Thomas Holden and Katie Keane, the men's and women's teams placed fourth and second, respectively, in that event. All-American Holden's time of 1:04.32 earned him second place, concluding a fantastic regular season in which the Lincoln native placed among the top three slalomers at every meet.

Keane led the UMass women with an eighth place finish in the slalom, in a total time of 1:11.89. The Acton-Boxboro graduate also took 17th place in the giant slalom, tying with freshman teammate Ericka Olson in 1:33.42.

The Minutewomen's second place team finish in the GS can be

Turn to SKIING page 9

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 17 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday , February 18, 1999

UMass students offered jobs in yesterday's Career Fair

Allison Keeton from Travelers Co. answers the questions of jocelyn White, a Mount Holyoke student, at the campus wide career fair yesterday.

MEAGHAN CAY / COLLEGIAN

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

With more than 138 nationwide employers and organizations at the University of Massachusetts Campus Center Auditorium yesterday, the 1999 Campus-Wide Career Fair was the obvious choice for students looking to place themselves in a career.

Corporate employers and organizations ranging in all fields of interest were present, including Foot Locker, Pepsi Company, IBM, U.S. Air Force, PictureTel, Aerotek Inc. and many more.

The Campus Career Network hosted the event and from the attendance generated, Associate Director Tina Acker felt the event was a huge success.

"It was awesome," Acker said. "Many of the brand new employers choose to do career fairs because it is an opportunity to meet many students when they want to make a name for themselves on campus."

Because UMass is a university vendor for the Coca-Cola Company, the Pepsi Cola company has never

Turn to CAREER, page 2

Shamapande faces resignation as Commonwealth College is pitched

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Staff

Student Government Association President Salwa Shamapande confirmed rumors about his possible resignation at last night's Senate meeting. Shamapande is in the middle of conversations with administration to see if there is a way to clear his problem up before he is administratively withdrawn.

"Right now I am in limbo, and if this is not straightened out in the next two weeks then I will have to resign," said Shamapande. Before Shamapande left the floor he promised to keep everyone posted on his status.

Norman D. Aitken, Deputy Provost and Javier Cevallos, Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs came to the meeting to discuss the creation of the Commonwealth College at the University of Massachusetts.

The Commonwealth College will replace the Honors Program for freshmen who enter the University in the Fall of 1999. Students who entered as freshmen in the Fall of 1998 will able to choose between staying in the Honors Program or entering Commonwealth College. All other students who are currently in the honors program will continue in that program until they graduate.

The Commonwealth College will have the most impact on students who reside in Orchard Hill because Orchard Hill will be the site of the "learning communities," and possibly the site of a new building. According to Aitken, the Commonwealth College will have an effect on Orchard Hill residents, but more importantly, it will have a positive effect on the UMass campus as a whole.

"The benefits will be open to everybody. The new building will provide study rooms for everyone. There will also be a national scholarship advisement center which will be available to every student. Students applying to law school, graduate school, and study abroad opportunities will be able to get help here," said Aitken.

Students expressed concern about the Commonwealth College, questioning whether it will be as good as Aitken described it. A major question among the students was about who would be teaching these classes and what effect it would have on students that will not participate in the Commonwealth College program. Another question was dealing with where this program would leave Asian, Latin American and Native American students.

Although Aitken did not have the exact answers, he did admit to being worried about the program diversity. "It's a problem and we are worried about it. We're going to look at every concievable way to improve the diversity of the Commonwealth College," said Aitken.

In a memo that circulated, common questions about the program were answered. Honors students will not be required to live in Orchard Hill, current residents of Orchard Hill will not be evicted, and Orchard Hill will never be comprised of only Honors students.

In other SGA business, a motion was passed for the university to install a least two university phones in the Fine Arts Center. The reasoning, according to Senator Cindy Gargano from Webster, is that "many students are at the Fine Arts Center late into the night finishing projects and then don't feel safe when they have to walk outside to call for a ride."

A motion was passed for AMS payment plan brochures to be sent home with tuition bills rather then in financial aid packages. Gargano spoke for this motion explaining that some students who do not receive financial aid would still like to pay for school by a payment plan.

A debate ensued as to whether PVTA should be picking up students who are coming from parties off campus. The motion was tabled until next week so more information could be gathered.

Norman D. Aitken discussed the Commonwealth college Wednesday evening at the SGA meeting.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Skateboarders cause harm to Union patio

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

While ollying and doing rail slides, skateboarders have caused more than $10,000 worth of damage to the newly renovated Student Union patio, University of Massachusetts officials say.

"We just spent over a quarter of a million dollars to build a new patio and within a month it's trashed," said Bruce Thomas, planning director of the project. UMass President William Bulger provided the money for the renovation as part of a campus beautification fund. "But it isn't beautiful anymore," Thomas said.

The new stairs and seats have been scratched and darkened by wax and, in some areas, the cement has chipped away. Right now, the area closest to the handicapped ramp is the most damaged and, according to Thomas, it will spread.

One handrail on the extreme eastern side (near the entrance to People's Market) was also destroyed.

"It was cut off by a hacksaw," Thomas said, "apparently because it interfered... and was bothering their ride."

Thomas said the railing will have to be replaced at a considerable expense; not only must a new railing be purchased, but the old railing must be taken out — a major demolition project with an approximate $1,000 price tag. The cost of replacing the cement seat "cap stones" is even more staggering — approximately $10,000 Thomas said.

According to Thomas, young skateboarders are "coming from all over" to skate at UMass. He said he spoke to two young skateboarders yesterday morning who came to campus by bus from Easthampton.

And it is not a new problem, according to UMass Police Chief John Luippold. "We seem to chase them from one area of campus to another."

One Amherst 14-year-old, Dan, was skating on the patio yesterday afternoon. He admitted that he has been coming to UMass every day specifically to skate on the new patio.

"It's good 'cause there's nice ledges and a smouth surface and there's a rail over there that's good to slide on," he said.

Although most of the skaters recently seem to be young high school students on February break, some UMass students say they have been looking forward to skating on the new patio as well, and are surprised at the University's reaction to the damage.

"What did they expect?" asked junior journalism major Todd Kennedy.

Junior art major Joe Hung agreed. "If they build something like that and it's skatable, it's going to be skated."

Thomas said the Physical Plant is investigating ways to prevent further damage. They are considering adding a new "undesirable texture" or notches to the cement seats, or raising every other seat an inch to create an uneven riding surface. They may also add more railings to interrupt the "ride line," Thomas said, but are concerned that additional railings may add to the "terrain park features" of the area.

Thomas said the University is also entertaining the possibility of imposing a no-skating policy on campus. The Town of Amherst enforces such a policy on all public streets, and according to Selectman Hill Boss it has been effective. If such a policy is implemented and enforced on campus, skateboarders could face court action, according to UMass Police Chief John Luippold.

But regardless of these measures, Dan says he will continue to come on campus to skate. "The Fine Arts Center has signs everywhere, but [we] still skate there."

Management for OASIS argues Board's decision

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Planning Board voted last night to deny an application for a private club to occupy the space currently occupied by Pruddy's bar and grill, but an attorney for Pruddy's and the private club said the Board does not have the authority to deny the application.

"I don't think they had any authority to vote on anything," said Joanne DeLong, attorney for Pruddy's and the One and All Society of International Souls (OASIS) private club in an interview last night.

DeLong wrote a letter to the Planning Board Feb. 11 withdrawing her application for a site plan review. The site plan review was a way for the Board to approve OASIS's use of Pruddy's space.

She charged she was mislead into believing the site plan review was required in order for OASIS to use Pruddy's space.

"I was led to believe that it was necessary for the club to go before the Planning Board in order to 'get permission' to operate on the site. In re-reading the zoning by-law, I have come to realize that I was led in this direction by the town merely for the purpose of officially denying the club permission to operate on the site," DeLong wrote.

The Planning Board said the letter came in one day after public comment about the club was closed, Feb. 10, and debated whether the letter withdrawing the site plan review should be considered.

"This came after the time of the deadline," said William O'Neil, board chairman. "This withdrawal is not at the 11th hour but the 13th."

The Board voted unanimously to deny the withdrawal DeLong spoke of in the letter and proceeded to vote on the application for a site plan review.

DeLong expressed dissatisfaction with the Board's actions.

"I don't think they had any legal [reason] to ignore it...They're a bunch of hypocrites and most of them don't know what they're doing," DeLong said. "And you can quote me on that."

Board members listed problems they had with the site plan review application.

"It's a bar and restaurant site and they are not in compliance with that," O'Neil said of the Amherst Redevelopment Authority's (ARA) requirement that the space be used for a bar and restaurant only. "[If] the ARA wants to allow them to have ping pong tournaments in there, that's another thing."

But DeLong said the ARA has already given their approval for the space to be used by a private club.

"The re-development authority already approved our application. It's just another example of how this town is trying to destroy the minority community," DeLong said. "Here we are establishing a multicultural club that has received the benediction of the secretary of state and they don't [approve it]."

Another issue raised by the Board, which was debated at their Feb. 3 meeting, was charges of racism in the club's by-laws. One by-law of the club states that a member must have at least one great-grandparent born outside the US.

"This is discriminatory. There [are] federal and state laws here," O'Neil said. "[There is] the issue of discrimination on the grounds of national origin... she said she

Turn to BOARD, page 2

Locals show mixed feelings on having Wal-Mart built in Pioneer Valley this year

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

HADLEY — A Wal-Mart coming to Hadley this year has some residents and businesses owners teetering in uncertainty while others are still hopping mad.

The impact of having Wal-Mart move into the area is not expected to hurt downtown Amherst but may have future consequences that worry Amherst Area Chamber of Commerce Executive Director John Coull.

"I don't think it's going to hurt Downtown Amherst directly. It does well for itself; restaurants, bars, bookstores," Coull said. "My larger concern is that Wal-Mart... will come in, build, employ a lot of people... and after a few years find out this is not the gold coast."

Demolition has already begun on the eastern third of the area, which Wal-Mart will occupy, and Keith Morris, director of community affairs for Wal-Mart, said if all goes according to plan, construction should begin in April. He said the store should open at the end of the year in time for holiday shopping.

Business owners in the Mountain Farms Mall where the 93,000 sq. ft. store will be located, are keeping an eye on the retail giant but say they carry hard-to-find or higher quality products that will keep their customers from defecting to the largest retailer in the country.

"We're staying. Wal-Mart has too small a pet supply [area] to bother us," said Stacey Paquette, cashier at Dave's Soda and pet supply city. "It might actually bring us more business."

While Bread and Circus is wary of the Bentonville, Arkansas based chain, Wal-Mart's cheaper products may draw a different clientele than the whole foods store targets.

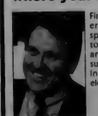
"We thought about this a great deal," said Dorothy Baumann, assistant manager of Bread and Circus. "We are finding the slant we have on value is kind of different... it could help us. It could hurt us."

Baumann said while Wal-Mart may carry some groceries like "bread, milk, Ritz crackers and Velveeta cheese", Bread and Circus carries different types of products.

"They're [Wal-Mart] kind of predatory in their pricing. They'll target a specific area like the garden stores. They [lower prices] until all of them are out of business then they can jack up the prices," said Pam Westgate an organizer of Hadley First and Hadley resident.

Turn to WALMART, page 2

BETH KIRKORIAN / COLLEGIAN

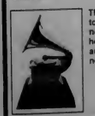


The site of a future Walmart in the Mount Farms mall on route nine.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 44 LOW: 29	HIGH: 42 LOW: 29	HIGH: 40 LOW: 24

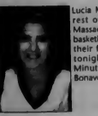
SOURCE: CNN.COM



Putting the money where your mouth is

Find out how labor leaders are working on spending their money to influence the House and presidential elects such as James Hoffa, Jr. in the upcoming 2000 elections.

NEWS PAGE 2



It's Grammy time

The music industry's top award is presented next week. To get a head start on the hype and check out the nominees, see inside.

ARTS PAGE 5

Last call

Lucia Madajova and the rest of seniors on the Massachusetts women's basketball team will play their final home game tonight when the Minutewomen host St. Bonaventure.

SPORTS PAGE 16

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 14
Comics 15
Crossword 15
Editorial 4
FYI 14
News 3
Sports 16

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Let there be music

A local DJ provides music for the campus wide career day.

■ career

continued from page 1

been able to recruit before on the UMass campus in such a formal gathering. Helen Roth-Bassell, an '89 graduate in the Food Science department said.

"I feel a lot of students are interested in knowing more about research and development of companies like Pepsi," Roth-Bassell said. "I hope in further years to increase it to expand on more grounds."

Pepsi Cola and many employer organizations like Athenium/LCC Newsvillage in Cambridge are focused on targeting campuses like UMass because of the students.

"They keep coming back because the attitude of the UMass student is upbeat and positive," Acker said. "It is exactly what they're looking for."

On an average day, Acker receives around two calls from prospective companies looking to come to UMass for the first time and recruit during the fair.

Students like senior finance and political science major Marie Dagrestro attended the career fair because she was interested in getting a head start on the field opportunities available.

"That's why I like going to career fairs," Dagresto said. "I don't know what I want to do when I get out of school."

Geographic locations are important in her decision on a future job. She feels her process has become more simplified by looking at companies that are recruiting at UMass.

The fair has helped some students, like senior communications major Kristina Saunders, in discovering the range that jobs employers are looking for.

"I think it's given me awareness of companies that are out there that I necessarily wouldn't know of on my own," Saunders said. "I'm very interested in getting the job-search started."

Saunders was particulary disappointed in the lack of representation of broadcasting at UMass career fairs, but feels the fair was helpful overall.

While some students are interested in getting a job started, others have come back to campus to represent their companies and to share the successes such job fairs have had on their lives.

Alum Caitlin Walters graduated from UMass with a chemical engineering major and feels if it weren't for the career fairs she attended, she wouldn't have gotten a job position as a Microelectronic Engineer for IBM.

"I met my employer for IBM at the Co-op Career Fair in the spring of '97," Walters said. "I talked to her and gave her my resume, and she called me later offering me an interview. Career fairs are the best way to get a job."

With career fairs occuring nationwide for college students, Ian Allsop, representative of Liberty Mutual, says students should take advantage of the opportunities job fairs offer.

Allsop feels they not only help the students greatly, but also help the organizations to discover what students are out there, and what they're interested in starting.

■ Walmart

continued from page 1

The opposition that has dogged Wal-Mart across the country has also surrounded its move to Hadley.

Morris believes opposition to the store was directed at Wal-Mart in particular, and not development in general.

"Right from the start, it was an anti-Wal-Mart issue," Morris said.

A group of citizens are opposed to sprawl and community development, Morris said, but they did not oppose a larger expansion in the competing mall.

"I'm against growth of large multi-national companies that are going to sucker money out of the valley," Westgate said. "We didn't have the funds to fight both... We didn't have the public interest to keep [fighting] both. [There is] some more anti-Wal-Mart sentiment by some members."

Coull is concerned if Wal-Mart leaves after a few years, Hadley will be stuck with the changes made because of it.

"Employees and the general area will be stuck with an empty shell of a building [and] other things we've done for them like traffic [changes]," Coull said.

"The developer brought a proposal to the planning board [to build Wal-Mart on a vacant lot] a while ago. They said, 'Why build on a vacant lot when we have this dead mall here... making it a win win situation for everyone'," Morris said.

However, commuters won't be winning, Westgate said.

"I'm concerned about the traffic," Westgate said. "[With Coolidge Bridge construction residents will] only have one lane of traffic going in either direction."

However, Hadley Select Board member Alan Jacque said the residents of Hadley support Wal-Mart entering the community.

"[There is] nothing legally the town will do. The voters of Hadley voted unanimously in Town Meeting to keep businesses on Route 9," Jacque said.

Bob Gottlieb, corporate marketing coordinator for S.R. Weiner, said the company will complete demolition and site work which includes fixing any existing problems from disrepair and "clean it up real nice," before Wal-Mart builds the actual building.

■ board

continued from page 1

was going to address that. We got nothing by Feb. 10."

"Being devil's advocate, If I wanted to join the club you have to be at least a third generation," said Board member, Fred Hartwell. "You could still go in [as a guest]."

DeLong refuted that charge at the Planning Board's Feb. 3 meeting.

"Our whole purpose is to be multicultural," DeLong said at the meeting. "We want to be inclusive but also have some limits on membership."

Pruddy's was given a "Cease and Desist" order Feb. 4 by Building Commissioner William Starr. Starr stood outside Pruddy's and counted 196 patrons going into Pruddy's Jan. 30 which is over the 115 person capacity.

DeLong said the order was "outrageous."

"Which is totally outrageous because the Building Inspector was chastised by the Zoning Board for doing it this way. He has no authority to that," DeLong said.

Labor leaders plan for 2000 with $40 million

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

MIAMI — Organized labor leaders, hoping to reclaim the House for Democrats and influence other political campaigns, agreed yesterday to pour more than $40 million into the 2000 elections and start spending the money earlier than ever.

A measure approval by the AFL-CIO executive council at its winter meeting here requests each affiliate union to donate $1 per member — about $13.5 million a year for two years — to mobilize union voters. Coupled with political money in regular budgets, the federation's spending for 2000 campaigns would total $40 million to $46 million, union officials said.

"No matter what we raise, we will be out-raised by the business community 10 to 1," said Gerald McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

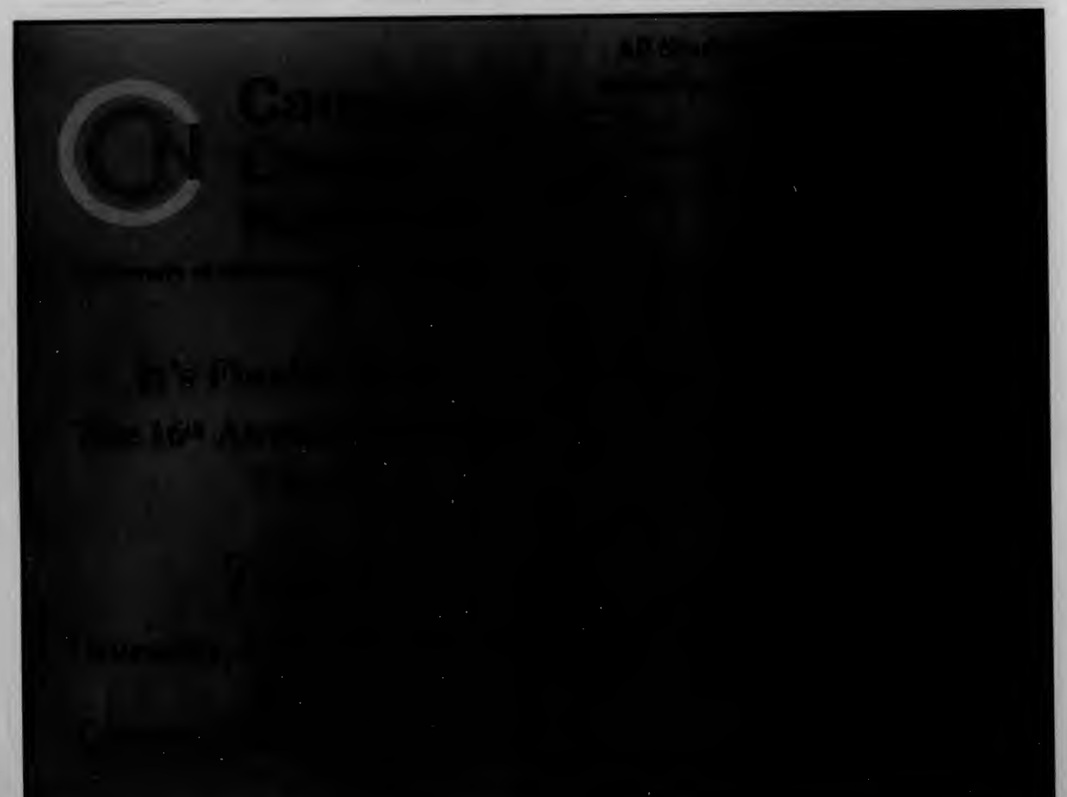
Scott Hatch, executive director of the GOP House campaign committee, said the labor federation's action "should be a wakeup call to every working American and every business owner."

"... If they don't participate in the 2000 election cycle, the liberal elite and unions will attempts to buy the next Congress to install their agenda of backroom politics," Hatch said.

McEntee told reporters after the private vote that none of the AFL-CIO money will go to candidates or political parties. Instead, he said, it will pay for telephone banks, flyers at workplaces, newsletters, mailings and television advertising to educate union and minority voters about key legislative issues in a drive that will start almost immediately.

Such grass-roots efforts almost always benefit Democrats over Republicans. "Winning back the House is a big goal," McEntee said.

Labor spent nearly as much money in the 1996 presidential election cycle. This time, however, the effort is starting a year earlier, creating a continuous campaign cycle for labor's political operations.



Even as they talked boldly about winning back the House for Democrats, some union leaders said they won't shy away from supporting moderate Republicans who support their issues.

Teamsters President-elect James P. Hoffa interrupted a hallway interview to shake the hand of GOP Rep. Peter King, a moderate from New York. Turning away, Hoffa called King the kind of Republican labor can't avoid supporting, saying, "We're certainly aware of who our friends are."

Hillary Rodham Clinton was a popular topic of discussion in the bars and hallways of the resort hotel that hosted the meeting. A longtime adviser, Harold Ickes, was quietly gauging support for a possible Senate bid in New York. New Jersey Sen. Robert Torricelli, head of the Democratic Senate campaign committee, was said to be urging labor leaders to encourage her to run.

"I think she has some pretty good credentials to be elected to the Senate," said AFL-CIO President John Sweeney.

Come write for Collegian News

Kurds killed by Israelis while protesting arrest

By Colleen Barry
Associated Press

BERLIN — Israeli security guards shot and killed three Kurds who forced their way into the Israeli consulate yesterday with dozens of protesters enraged by reports that Israel aided in the arrest of the foremost Kurdish rebel leader.

Turkish officials jubilantly released a videotape of their captive, Abdullah Ocalan, dramatic footage showing him handcuffed and sweating, his eyes taped shut. Officials said he was being interrogated in an island prison and promised a fair trial, but refused to allow three of his foreign attorneys into Turkey. In Berlin, as many as 100 demonstrators — some brandishing clubs and iron bars — pummeled their way past 30 German police officers sent to the Israeli consulate 30 minutes earlier after officials received reports that Kurds planned to take the building, police chief Hagen Saberschinsky said.

The Kurds climbed a fence surrounding the four-story white building and broke through the door. A man and a woman were shot to death in the consulate's foyer and another man was shot in a stairwell, Saberschinsky said.

Nine Kurds barricaded themselves inside one room, briefly taking a female consular employee hostage.

At least 45 people were injured: 16 demonstrators and 27 police officers. Police said they arrested 220 Kurds, 45 at the consulate and the remainder at demonstrations after the shootings.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu reiterated that Israel had no role in Ocalan's arrest and defended the shootings, saying the guards acted in self-defense.

Israel had put its diplomatic missions on alert earlier after a news report claimed that Israel's Mossad intelligence agency helped Turkey track Ocalan (pronounced OH'-jah-lahn).

The violence in Berlin — the worst in two days of protests over the 49-year-old rebel leader's arrest — brought stern warnings for Germany's half-million Kurds to curb their outrage.

Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder said Germany would "not tolerate having political conflicts from foreign countries carried over into German streets." And Interior Minister Otto Schily threatened to deport Kurds involved in violent protests.

Ocalan and his guerrillas have waged a 14-year war for Kurdish autonomy in southeastern Turkey. Almost 37,000 people have died in the conflict. He could face the death penalty if convicted. Kurds began seizing Greek diplomatic posts across Europe early Tuesday after learning of Ocalan's capture in Kenya, where he had been hiding at the Greek ambassador's residence in Nairobi. Many of the demonstrations ended Wednesday. But about 40 protesters held a clerk hostage in the Greek Embassy in London and announced they were beginning a hunger strike, police said. Occupations also continued at the offices of political parties in Sweden and Austria.

A standoff in Hamburg, Germany ended when the Kurds released a hostage and departed. Several were arrested.

A mural unveiled

MFA Fine Arts candidate Shanek Weddle discusses his new murals "Story, Legacy, Saga" in a ceremony at the WEB DuBois Library yesterday afternoon.

~National Briefs~

Three-decade legal battle ends for former Black Panther

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The three-decade legal battle of Elmer "Geronimo" Pratt ended yesterday with the district attorney's decision to drop further prosecution of the former Black Panther who spent 27 years in prison for a murder he said he didn't commit. "The murder at issue in this case occurred over 30 years ago," said Gil Garcetti, Los Angeles County's top prosecutor. "Most of the witnesses are deceased. It would be virtually impossible to retry this case."

San Francisco attorney Stuart Hanlon, who spent 25 years seeking Pratt's freedom, said after Garcetti's announcement, "I'm glad it's over."

"I wish I could say I felt uplifted," Hanlon said. "But all I feel is frustration and anger that it took this long. It's clear to everyone that Pratt was wrongly convicted."

There was no immediate comment from Pratt. He was at home in Morgan City, La., and had gotten word, a family member said by telephone.

Pratt was freed in 1997 after 27 years behind bars when a judge ruled that he was denied a fair trial because the star prosecution witness concealed the fact that he was a police informant. On Tuesday, a California appeals court upheld the ruling, granting a new trial.

Pratt had been convicted of being one of two men who robbed and fatally shot Caroline Olsen on a Santa Monica tennis court. He claimed that he was in Oakland for Black Panther meetings at the time and that FBI agents and police hid and possibly destroyed wiretap evidence that would prove it.

Pratt blamed the arrest on a campaign by J. Edgar Hoover's FBI against the Black Panthers and other alleged subversives.

Hanlon said he has filed a false conviction lawsuit in federal court on Pratt's behalf, seeking damages from the district attorney's office, the Los Angeles Police Department and the FBI. Although he will not seek further prosecution, Garcetti said he stands behind the prosecutors who tried the case and won a conviction in 1972.

USDA recalls specialty meat because of listeria concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Chicago company has recalled 2,600 pounds of headcheese, a type of seasoned meat sold by Asian specialty stores, because of concern that it might be contaminated with listeria, the Agriculture Department said yesterday.

The product distributed by Ba Le Meat Processing & Wholesale Inc. was produced between Jan. 7 and Feb. 5, officials said. Subject to recall are packages of "Ba Le Gio Thu (Headcheese)" between 1 and 8 pounds. Headcheese is a seasoned loaf made of the head meat of a calf or pig. The packages bear "Est 18442" in the U.S. Department of Agriculture inspection mark.

The product was distributed to Asian specialty stores in Philadelphia, New York; Chicago; Houston; Austin, Texas; Garland, Texas; Rochester, Minn.; Raleigh, N.C.; Oakland, Calif.; Tampa, Fla.; St. Petersburg, Fla.; Orlando, Fla., Coral Springs, Fla.; Silver Spring, Md.; Dorchester, Mass.; and Doraville, Ga.

Listeria bacteria can cause a flu-like illness called listeriosis, which is especially dangerous in newborns, pregnant women and people with serious illnesses such as cancer or AIDS who have suppressed immune systems.

Free Long Distance!

Chat live with all your family and friends at once.

CampusChat

mass LIVE

www.masslive.com

Your place to talk on the

PREREQUISITE: ADRENALINE

Drive. Intensity. Those aren't words you're likely to see in many course requirements. Then again Army ROTC is unlike any other elective. It's hands-on excitement. ROTC will challenge you mentally and physically through intense leadership training. Training that builds your character, confidence and decision-making skills. Again, words other courses seldom use. But they're the credits you need to succeed in life. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about five hours per week. Register this term for Army ROTC.

ARMY ROTC

THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

MS113 – Introduction to Military Science, 1 credit per semester
Contact Captain Patrick Maloney
545-2321

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Get over yourselves

"Angie O'Plasty?" "Here." "Pat Mycock?" "Here." "Anne Nisette?" "I'm present, sir!"

Ugh! Is that not the most aggravating thing to hear? And there's always at least one of those people in every class. You know, the kid that always sits right underneath the professor's nose and asks the most obscure questions or gives the most asinine comments.

"Pardon me, sir, but is there any chance that you could reiterate your last comment?"

Look, dorko, get over yourself and speak like the rest of us. You're probably not going to do very well in the course anyway, and the whole class — including the professor — is laughing at you. So take your well-to-do, Humanities-majoring ass and get lost.

Gary Mendese

Phew, I feel much better now. As I'm sure you have figured out by now, I hate pretentious people. I've always said that I don't hate anyone, but now that I think about it, "the pretentious" are on my list. And I'm not talking about strong dislike, either. I'm talking about psychotic hatred; the type of unholy emotion that causes wars. But I realize that having all of this anger is unhealthy (or "insalubrious" as my pretentious friends would say), so I have a solution.

I have a way to rid myself of this vile hostility. You see, I'm going to vent it all towards my pompous friends.

Since I'm sure that I am not the only human out there that could happily do without these people, many of you should enjoy my plan. But before we decide what we're going to do with these losers, we have to define what constitutes pretentiousness and then categorize it. After all, some types are worse than others, you know. Then, we have to decide what the punishments are going to be. Ready? Well, here I go. Warning: the following is not suitable for those with weak stomachs.

Let's start out with Pretentious Level I. This includes anyone who, when asking a question in class, raises a pen or pencil rather than a hand. Since this is only a first level offense, the punishment will not be very severe. If you are caught doing this, your arm should be cut off with a butter knife. Again, this is only a misdemeanor, so a shot of whiskey will be used as a painkiller. And you thought I was going to be rash, didn't you?

Let's move on to Level II. This level includes those annoying people that use any French word in an English sentence, like "you are so gauche," "that performance was tres awesome," or even "it was, shall I say, very interessante." For that borderline felony, your tongue should be cut off (with the spoon you wanted everyone to gag you with) and you should be forced to listen to the Backstreet Boys for two days straight while staring at a naked picture of your idol, Martha Stewart. You might think this is harsh, but remember... you're the one that broke the law, not me.

Level III involves people away from the college scene, and into the restaurant scene. As a waiter, I have run into a multitude (like that word?) of people that I can do without. And at this level, the people involved are the ones that describe their meal as "scrumptious," "magnificent," "fabulous," or "divine." These people should be burned at the stake.

> "I'd love to hear someone say "whittle" — that is a double violation and has double the cost."

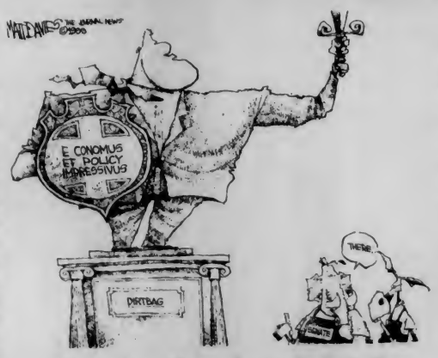
That's right, these people should be tied to a log of wood, doused in kerosene, and then ignited for all the world to see. OK, I know there are many old people that are accustomed to speaking like this, so I'll make an exception. If you're over 75, you can say these things, but other than that, it's barbecue time.



Also at the restaurant, lies the only strictly-male offense. This level IV felony involves those men under the age of 65 that ask for any type of hot tea with their meals. For these chumps, a unique punishment is in order. Although level III constituted death, the punishment for this crime is far worse. The guilty party shall be covered from head to toe with signs like "men rule," "hey... babe," and "remember... you're just a rib." Then you put the guy in the center of N.O.W. headquarters during an annual feminist rally, and let the ladies take care of him. I can guarantee that he won't be ordering any more Earl Grey in the near future.

For level V, we move away from the restaurant scene and look at a broader population. Here, the guilty include those people that pronounce their T's in the middle of words, like "waTer" or stress the H in words like "wHite". Unless the U.S. is not your native country, there will be no exceptions to this rule. The punishment for this crime will be a severe beating to the skull with an aluminum baseball bat. The length of the word will determine the number of swings. Since water has five letters, there will be five swings. I'd love to hear someone say "whittle" — that is a double violation and has double the cost.

As our final stage of pretentiousness, level VI includes a large number of words that people should always be forbidden from saying. These words include, but are not limited to: monstrosity, fornication, aegis, debonair, facade, drab, and antidisestablishmentarianism. If you use any of these words, then it's off to the firing squad with you. And you don't get a last request, either. I do apologize for the brutish behavior, but I can think of no other alternative.

OK, so I'm sure you're all thinking that I have issues, and maybe I do. But these were all exaggerations; I don't think anyone should be killed for the way they speak. I just don't understand why some people speak with such pompous language. Do they really think they sound intelligent? Well, they don't. They sound pretentious and that's it. I realize that we no longer live in America... we live in "Pretentia", but it still bothers me. I don't know, maybe I'm the one that needs to change. Oops! I mean, perhaps it is I that is in need of modification.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian columnist.

Rad jobs for 2000

After getting bumped back a semester for my graduation date, I have now entered into the class of 2000. I always thought of myself as the kind of guy who would graduate before the millennium arrived, but now that kind of thinking has changed.

Since I will be a member of the first graduating class to enter the job market of the new millennium, I got to thinking. What will be some jobs that will advent themselves in the next few decades that I might end up doing for a living?

I mean, there are new jobs creating themselves every day as a result of technology, politics, pop culture and the size of our economy. Since all of the good columns seem to have lists these days, I decided to make one myself. Here are some of the new jobs that we, as class of 2000ers, might be getting involved with in the coming millennium.

1.) Post-Apocalyptic Warlord — How could so many good cults be wrong? As we all know, the year 2000 is going to bring a great Apocalypse upon the world featuring tidal waves, evil Y2K-infested computers, and unstoppable armies of clones created from the DNA of the Backstreet Boys. These things, along with more unpredictable factors, are going to be reshaping the job market.

Josh Owens

Now, everybody knows that the huddled masses of humans who are unfortunate enough to survive Armageddon are naturally going to need leadership. Everybody who's ever seen Mad Max: Beyond Thunderdome knows that as the Post-Apocalyptic Warlord you would have to put together a staff of guys with face paint and mohawks, who like to wear spiked football shoulder pads, and possess marketable skills with crossbows and/or flamethrowers. It's key to surround yourself with good people.

You will have to do a lot of ruling with an iron fist, and for the first few years, all the killing and maiming is going to seem like bad pay for long, hard hours, but think about the payoffs: You get to give yourself a one word name, like "Rogthar". You also get cool all-terrain vehicles like armored dune-buggies mounted with appropriate weapons. You even get to create your own religion. Nothing can beat this sure winner in the economy of the "international community".

2.) '80s Fashion Guru — Sweater dresses, spiked belts, and parachute pants are going to come back in. Can you imagine how ludicrous the idea that bell bottoms would ever come back into style must have seemed back in 1985?

Standing there in my imitation red leather Michael Jackson jacket and spiked hair, humming the words to "Maneater" by Hall and Oates, I thought, "The '70s were like, so tacky." Gag me with a spoon, McFly.

Sure enough, it was but five years from that very moment that we saw a flash-back to the '60s, with tie-die and flowers becoming the hip thing. What was old became new again. You don't want to face it. You may even refuse to believe it, but it's coming. '80s fashion is the future.

How did David Hasselhoff get his hair so perfect on "Knight Rider"? Spandex and hot-pants will be totally massive. I know that I'll be psyched when I can wear my leg warmers over my pants, where they belong. I've already got stock in a leg warmer company.

It also helps that I can grow a mean mustache. Ever since Tom Selleck hung up his lip-pelt there really hasn't been a good role model for guys who are into a little mustachio action. Thick and badass like Burt Reynolds, or slim and chic like Prince; whatever your preference, let that beast inside of you free and become the man you know you are.

Whether you tight-rolled or cuffed your pants, sported Oakley "Blades" or listened to Menudo, had a cocaine problem or liked Kirk Cameron, it really doesn't matter as long as you were def when it was actually cool to be def. The fashion industry is a cut-throat business, but if you had it then, you'll have it forever.

3.) Internet Porn Baron — Internet pornography grossed one billion dollars last year. That's a whole lot of naked. Like all industries, Internet porn has started off with thousands of competing little companies offering highlights of unusual and distinctive forms of human sexual behavior.

But, as history has proven, large, efficient, multi-national firms will take over the industry in the coming years, and as a graduate of 2000, you should be prepared to capitalize on the ever-expanding pervert market. Say what you will about the sleaze factor; the only thing I know is that porn is one of the most consistently-growing industries of the last 20 years. Not to mention that it's just plain fun.

I'm not sure what kind of internships are going around these days, but I know that I've already begun collating my sheep in leather, separating them from sheep in negligees and sheep doused in baby oil. As with many cutting-edge industries, you can't expect the University to have come up any Internet porn-site design courses yet, but I've heard that's what all the best computer science majors are doing for their final projects this semester.

Those are the big three. But just like the fact that every basketball player can't be Bird, McHale or Parrish, not everyone can work the job market of the new millennium.

A few more options:

The Next David Hasselhoff: Knight Rider, producer (along with action-hero/babe magnet) of Baywatch, and double platinum albums in Germany — and all along he maintained his special dorky flavor!

Large Carnivore Trainer: It's not a new job, but you get to own a tiger! Or a great white shark. Or Linda Tripp (Ouch—that joke sucked).

Post Apocalyptic Warlord Apparel Distributor: It's not glorious, but Pamela Anderson Lee needs her plastic surgeon and a warlord needs his duds. Think Billy Idol on steroids.

Jason Owens is a UMass student.

Tinky winkied

There are plenty of extraordinary things that happen to people everyday. People get murdered, their cars get stolen, they win the lottery or get picked to be part of the halftime festivities at a basketball game. However, when people think about these things they usually have the "It won't happen to me" attitude. Not many people wake up in the morning and say, "Oh man, I feel like my tire is going to shred as I am going across the Calvin Coolidge Bridge and then my car is going to flip and plummet into the Connecticut river."

Maybe some people do, but certainly not many. Like most of you, I walk around with the attitude that nothing extraordinary will happen to me. All of that changed this past week.

It was bound to happen. The Rev. Jerry Falwell warned all of us. We all knew that Tinky Winky, the purple Teletubby, had the ability to change young children from straight to gay, but I just didn't think that it would happen to anyone in my life. That's when I got the call from my mother. She told me to get home ASAP. It turned out that my one-and-a- half year old brother Charlie had turned gay because of Tinky Winky's ultra-gay influence. I jumped in my twelve- year-old maroonish Honda Civic and sped home.

Dan Viens

Let me pause here for all of you who either don't watch the news or study pop culture at school. "The Teletubbies" is a children's show which is made in England, I think. The four main characters are these weird-looking alien things that have televisions on their stomachs (get it: "Tele" for TV and "tubbies" for stomachs; pretty clever — don't you think?!).

The cleverness doesn't end there if you are the Rev. Jerry Falwell. He is a prominent religious leader in the United States who believes that one of the Teletubbies is a gay role model for children. If you think that he may have been drinking too much of the blood of Christ then just listen to the overwhelming evidence he has to prove that Tinky Winky is gay.

Tinky Winky is purple. Purple coincidentally is the color which signifies gay pride. I guess that means that Grimace and the one-eyed, one-horned, flying purple people eater are homosexuals too. Also, the horn thing that Tinky Winky has on his head is an upside-down triangle. This triangle is the symbol for gay pride. Hmm, I always wondered what all those stickers on the cars in Northampton meant.

Now last, but not least, Tinky Winky's only accessory is a handbag. I don't even think I need to justify that one. So that's that. According to Falwell, Tinky Winky is gay and he is going to spread his gayness to the youth of America.

I was cynical, too, until I saw my little brother. After taking one look at little Charlie I realized that not only was Falwell right, but he was right on the money. The first thing I saw when I came into the house was my mother crying because little guy Charlie had ruined her brand new garbage disposal. He had rounded up all of the pens, pencils, crayons and markers in the entire house, and taken out all of the pink, purple and white ones.

After that, he took the rest of the heterosexual colors and shoved them down the disposal and turned It on. The blades were completely destroyed. However, it chopped up crayons and threw them through the air long enough for the bits to spell "GAY NOW" on the wall. When I arrived, my stepfather had only cleaned off the "W."

My mother told me that if I had it in me, I should go find little gay Charlie. I started looking around the house. It wouldn't take long to find him because I wouldn't have to look in any of the closets. While I was looking for him, I started thinking that since Charlie is so young he may not realize that we are brothers. He may not even realize what brothers are. I was getting scared that if he didn't know we were related, he might try to hit on me. I wasn't prepared for that, but I decided to find him anyway.

When I finally found him, he was sitting in the middle of my parents' bed wearing my sister's ballerina tutu. Ellen's coming out episode was on the television and Charlie was having a tea party with six Ken dolls and one Tinky Winky. When he saw me, he had a certain twinkle in his eye.

However, It wasn't the twinkle of fondness, it was just the twinkle of gayness. He seemed happy to see me. He allowed me to kiss his hand and then he jumped off the bed and ran into my parents' closet.

He can't talk very much, so I figured that he was doing some kind of symbolic charade. The next thing I knew he jumped out of the closet kind of saying, "Tah-dah." It was kind of weird, but also funny because when he landed, he fell right out of the high heels he was wearing. Obviously, he was trying to get the point across that he had come out of the closet. I told him as best I could that I would support any decisions that he made for the rest of his life. He seemed appreciative, but he may have just been going to the bathroom at the time.

In order to show him my undying love and support, I watched the Teletubbies marathon the next day. I thought that it was a pretty neat show, but I couldn't help thinking the whole time that by subjecting myself to Tinky Winky, I might be becoming gay. I don't think it did anything, but Johnny Depp has been looking pretty good to me lately.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Hillary — next stop: the U.S. Senate?
The death penalty: still a good idea?
Should parents be able to refuse medical treatment for their children for religious reasons?

Convince us.
Write for Ed/Op.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Fialkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Grammy's are predictably predictable

If you are eagerly anticipating the Grammy Awards next Wednesday, if you have cleared your schedule so you can watch the ceremony, if you have money riding on the winner of "Best New Artist," well... well you're just sad.

But if you have a passing interest in the end-all-be-all in music awards, you will see that the cheese factory known as the Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences has picked a predictable batch of winners and losers for this year. I'll avoid giving any predictions this year. The nominees speak for themselves. For example, in the Record of the Year category, the nominees are Brandy, "The Boy is Mine"; Celine Dion, "My Heart Will Go On"; Madonna, "Ray of Light"; and Shania Twain, "You're Still the One." Enough said.

Kevin Monahan

Although Madonna has a good chance of winning, if "Ray of Light" is actually the "best" single of 1998, I will gladly swallow molten lava.

Album of the Year also has a few given nominees: Sheryl Crow, Globe Sessions; Madonna, Ray of Light; and Shania Twain, Come On Over. Some more worthy nominees are Garbage for Version 2.0 and Lauryn Hill for The Miseducation Of Lauryn Hill.

Sorely overlooked was Massive Attack's Mezzanine, which is too "experimental" and too "British" for the Academy to consider.

The Best Rap album category consists of Big Punisher's Capital Punishment, Jay-Z's Vol 2—Hard Knock Life, Jd's Life in 1472, Mase's Harlem World, and A Tribe Called Quest's The Love Movement. Lauryn Hill's The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill is also nominated in Best R&B album.

Best performance from an Alternative

Turn to GRAMMY page 9

Check out the Grammys — online

By Matthew Nixon
Collegian Staff

The Grammy Awards come our way next week — specifically, February 24th, live on CBS from the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles. 1999 sees the 41st presentation of the awards by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences. There is only one official way to get prepared for the event prior to next Wednesday. Log on to www.grammy.com.

The site is well laid-out and easy to navigate. The graphics are eye-catching. The site is powered by IBM and uses the same technology that gave us the official Olympic website. The directions one can go in seem endless. A graphic of an all-access pass features clickable links to nominees, to the "backstage pass" area, to a "flashback" section, to the "Grammy arcade" and a photo gallery. As of February 17, the site is a little quiet. Things are scheduled to get moving on the 19th when live on-line chats are to begin featuring nominees and performers. The Grammy cam will be turned on and visitors to the site will be able to catch glimpses of rehearsals and backstage activity.

At the moment, there are interviews with Elvis Costello, Garth Brooks and Pat Metheny. A section features answers to questions submitted to R&B star Monica via the site. Trivia is sprinkled throughout the site. For instance, did you know that Aretha Franklin has 15 Grammys, more than any other female artist?

One of the best aspects of the site is the "flashback" feature. Choose a year and check out a summary of a specific ceremony, together with what went on that year in politics and so on. The first Grammy Awards in 1958 held these surprises: The Grammy for Album of the Year went to bandleader Henry Mancini for "Peter Gunn."

Remember 1984? It was the year of Tina Turner. She won awards for Record of the Year, Best Vocal Performance (Female), Best Rock Vocal Performance (Female) and Song of the Year for "What's Love Got To Do With It." Lionel Richie won Album of the Year with Can't Slow Down. Movie Soundtrack of the Year went to Prince for Purple Rain and the Best New Artist award went to Cyndi Lauper.

Fast forward to 1996. Eric Clapton won Record of the Year and Song of the Year for "Change The World." Best New Artist was Leanne Rimes.

Who will win this year? The website's goal is this: "We want you to feel like you're in the first row of the Shrine Auditorium". Although the television broadcast has a better chance of doing that, the website has the potential to reveal quite a bit about goings-on behind-the-scenes. The live pre- show chats in themselves are worth investigating. Bookmark this site and watch it come to life as the music awards approach.

Lay-out & Design by Brian D'Ingeccio

UMass band all about funk

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Colored lights darted through a thick fog as the 25-member Bruce Bass Funkestra took the stage in the Student Union Ballroom last Friday night. Yes, that's right— twenty- five members. There were four guitarists, one bassist, one drummer, one percussionist, two trumpet players, three saxophonists, one trombone player, one flutist, one clarinet player, one keyboard player, six vocalists and three dancers.

More than 300 people crowded the stage and cheered as Bruce Bass emerged, dressed in a white tuxedo, and took center stage. After a dramatic introduction, the band did a cover of the "Blues Brothers Theme," followed by "Pick up the Pieces" and "Blood on the Dance Floor," which flowed into two wonderful covers of Michael Jackson's "Thriller" and "Billie Jean."

"Billie Jean" provided the opportunity for the band to begin highlighting the talent of its five singers. University of Massachusetts student Chris Olds was a wonderful surprise. So was Torin Moore, who belted out a few choice covers, including the Fugees' hit "Killing Me Softly."

But the most rewarding songs were the funky soul numbers. Marvin Gaye's "Let's Get it On" and Barry White's "Can't Get Enough of Your Love Babe," which were well-suited to the seven-piece rhythm section. The all- ages audience reacted with glee, and people who looked like they hadn't danced in years started bopping their heads.

Beyond great music, the show was a spectacle in itself. Bass was a dazzling center-stage figure in his white tuxedo, and the rest of the black-and-white clad band was equally resplendent, as were the three beautiful dancers slinking across the stage.

Bass worked closely with the crowd, at one point engaging the audience in a dialogue about love In honor of Valentine's Day. He called his wife Alicia onto the stage as the three dancers, (UMass students Deb Liebman and Tara Farley, and Bass's own daughter Andrea) stood behind in long gowns and feather boas. Three members of the horn section mingled with the dancers offering them roses, then distributed white roses to several ladies in the crowd.

The show overall was appealing, and I was impressed. Even more inpressive was the fact that most of the band members were sick with the flu — imagine what they must be like in top form. Truthfully, I was half-expecting some sort of hippie Butterfield band. But although most of the members were from Butterfield (and the audience consisted in part of a mini-Butterfield reunion) the band was all funk.

Maybe I've been watching too many movies lately, but the Funkestra reminded me of the Replacements — a (large) bunch of home-grown talent putting on amazingly funky performances. They represented a distinctive UMass flavor with an underlying raw energy that was invigorating. I felt an odd sense of pride, which is rare considering the only time most people feel UMass band pride is when they find out Kim Deal and Frank Black went here, and that hardly counts.

Rumor has it the entire campus might get the chance to see this amazing band at Spring Concert. I hope so. They deserve it, and in a way so does UMass.

Hit me baby one more time

George Arsenault pounds the drums as part of the Graduate Jazz Composers concerts this coming Wednesday in Bezanson.

Five College News and Events

• fag/hag: play performed in Northampton

Feb. 18–20 — The relationships between gay men and straight women are explored in this comic-dramatic piece by Kate Nugent and Joe Salvatore. At the Thornes Market of Northampton, third floor, at 8 p.m., and 2 p.m. on Saturday.

• Winter Concert at Hampshire College

Feb. 18 — In its 20th year, the Hampshire College Winter Concert, a dance festival, takes place tonight in the Studio Theater. Choreography and performance by Hampshire College alumni. Admission is free.

• Big Night hosts Joint Custody, Hurricane Dave

Feb. 19 — The Big Night, a new nightclub on the 11th floor of the Campus Center, brings the band Joint Custody, with special guest Hurricane Dave, to UMass tomorrow night. Doors open at 7:30 p.m. for an 8:30 p.m. show.

• Theater Guild holds auditions

Feb. 19–20 — The UMass Theater Guild is holding auditions for their Spring play, SubUrbia. Callbacks are Feb. 21.

• Concert at Smith

Feb. 20 — Connecticut Originals: Charles Ives and Wallace Stevens is being performed at the Sweeney Concert Hall at 1:30 p.m.

This Blast never ignites

Romantic comedy wastes Fraser's talents

By Rob Roensch
Collegian Staff

BLAST FROM THE PAST
Directed by Hugh Wilson
with Brendan Fraser, Alicia Silverstone, Christopher Walken
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

A man born and raised in an isolated fallout shelter by parents stuck in the 50's ventures out into crazy, 90's California to find a wife. It's at once a ridiculous and interesting idea for a movie. Right at the beginning, it has a lot going for it: a good amount of suitably quirky detail in the script and set design (the father's favorite drink is hot Dr. Pepper) and a weird mix of actors that includes the always creepy Christopher Walken as the crackpot scientist father who built the shelter and "Newsradio"'s wonderfully deadpan Dave Foley as the gay friend.

Too bad the movie is not brave enough to use it's available strangeness to support much more than an ordinary boy–meets–girl–with–complications romantic comedy.

Turn to BLAST page 7

COURTESY ROB MCELHENNEY

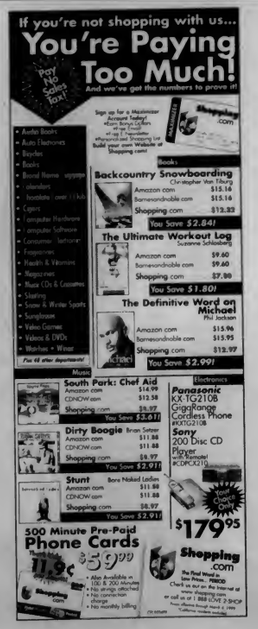
Coming off a couple of bombs, Alicia Silverstone returns with a spark in Blast from the Past.

Rebuilding history is a puzzling debate

By Robert Seely
Associated Press

ENGLAND — It could be the gift the Greeks have been waiting for: a chance to reassemble the Parthenon's 2,400-year-old marble statues and friezes, languishing in museums throughout Europe, and restore them to the famous temple atop Athens' Acropolis.

Sounds good so far. What's the catch?



Well, the marbles would be fakes — perfect fakes — scanned onto computer from the original pieces held at 11 sites in Britain, Italy, Germany, Austria and France, and cut by computer-controlled lathes. And the Greeks, who have long demanded the return of their treasures, might not settle for fakes.

"We could put the parts back together again. We can go back in history," says John Larsen, head of sculpture conservation at the National Museums and Galleries on Merseyside. "The replica is now so accurate nobody would notice."

Working out of a former Victorian railway warehouse in this northwest English city, Larsen and his team of conservators are pioneering computer-based techniques

Turn to GREEK page 7

MERCHANTS GRAND OPENING

The days of having your older brother's best friend's sister's boyfriend rent you a car are officially over.

We know there's more to life than what's happening on campus. So, whether you need a 4x4 for a ski weekend, or a mini-van for that road trip during Spring Break, Merchants Rent-A-Car can get you going, no matter where you're going. And best of all, as part of our Youthful Operator Policy, we'll rent to any driver 18 and over*!

2 NEW LOCATIONS
Northampton at Cahillane Auto Body 32 Damon Road Hadley at Howard Johnson's on Route 9.

MERCHANTS
RENT·A·CAR
413-584-8099
www.merchantsauto.com

Live B.B. King album invokes legend's past

The power of the blues and of the roots of American music are embodied in B.B. King. He is the most authentic of human beings, as he was virtually born into slavery In 1925 as a sharecropper in Itta Bena Mississippi, an area he has called "the most Southern place on earth." He has seen a long 73 years so far, most of which have been spent on the road, both In the United States and throughout the world as the "Ambassador of the Blues."

Since the 1950's, B.B. has averaged more than 300 performances per year, and only within the last five years has that number been cut to around 225 per year.

Over those decades, B.B.'s mastery of the guitar has been honed to the point were the transition from his vocal singing to his instrumental singing has been erased.

Even more astonishing is the fact that his playing sounds different today than it did in 1980, which was one of the plateaus of his instrumental abilities.

Not only does the power of his playing seem to have increased in the past twenty years, but also his band has become tighter and stronger since only four years ago. This past summer's tour saw the B.B. King Orchestra in such good form that it was frightening. The feeling they evoked rivalled that of great bands of the past including Count Basie's Big Bands and Miles Davis' late fifties quintet which featured both John Coltrane and Cannonball Adderley.

The summer of 1998 stood out in another respect, too, in that it was the first time in decades when B.B. King made a record with his touring band. Blues on the Bayou is an album of one-hundred percent live, unedited material which is cued directly from the tunes B.B. plays every night. The mixing, the tune selection, the arrangements, B.B.'s guitar work, and the atmosphere of this album create a feeling so close to the feeling one gets at a B.B. King concert, that it is really hard to believe. In fact, this record captures the live atmosphere just as well as live concert albums of the past, like Now Appearing at 'Ole Miss, and Live at the Regal.

B.B.'s spiritual connection with his guitar Lucille is showcased in the first track, "Blues Boys Tune." In this tune B.B.'s phrasing and placement of notes is so sparse that it's enough to make a person faint from rhythmic tension. When listening to this track you can almost visualize his huge hands drilling the guitar right in front of you. It is the mark of a great artist when after this many years his playing can still be completely unpredictable and emotional. The entire album is beautiful, with some standout pieces being "Darlin' What Happened," "Blues Man", and "I'll Survive."

This album is a must-have, and also an opportunity to see B.B. King live should not be passed up, as it is one of the few examples of American history still on full display for the world. The art of B.B. King is not just an example of beautiful music. It can also be looked at as a time capsule which reaches to the roots of modern music, and even further back, to the blues of a people which has been sung for generations here in the United States.

Charlie Apicella is a UMass student. Questions or comments about this column can be emailed to him at [illegible]

COURTESY MARTIN KOZLOWSKI

King of the goofballs Brendan Fraser lends his smile to Blast from the Past.

■ blast

continued from page 6

The movie opens way back during the Cuban missile crisis. The crackpot scientist and his high-strung, very pregnant wife (Sissy Spacek) lock themselves in their bomb shelter to escape an explosion, which they assume is the nuclear holocaust but is actually only an accidental plane crash. Conveniently, the authorities assume that the couple was killed when the plane crashed into their home.

For the couple, life continues underground In their shelter, that looks exactly like their real house: complete with fake grass in the fake back yard. Their son, Adam, is born and raised by the couple into a 1950's dream child; a polite, deferential gentleman. Thirty-five years later, the doors unlock and the slightly lonely Adam travels to the surface to bring back, in his mother's words, "a nice girl from Pasadena"

Instead he meets Eve (Alicia Silverstone) — a 90's version of the "pushy dame" type — and of course Adam falls hopelessly in love with her. Mild hijinks ensue.

There's nothing particularly wrong with the set-up. What's wrong is the way the movie brings up important subject matter but doesn't investigate it with any honesty. For example, much more could have been done with the mother's sense of repression in her traditional role as well as the implications of urban decay, but instead all we get is cliches: the mother making pot roast and drinking cooking sherry, and the bright, 50's soda fountain morphing into a dark, 90's heavy metal bar.

What we are left with is a gooey nostalgia for a time when kids listened to their parents, combined with weak gestures towards the emancipation of women from the kitchen. It's not enough.

In terms of plot, the underneath–the–ground stuff is inventive and interesting; it's like seeing what happens when you put a family in a giant hamster cage. But when the movie hits the surface, it becomes just another romantic comedy.

Brendan Fraser, as Adam, deserves credit for bringing so much enthusiasm to a role most actors would scoff at. He's the male Cameron Diaz, an actor who has made a career out of injecting naive characters with energy and gusto.

The problem with the love story isn't Silverstone, who's not bad, but rather the direction, which makes the story so lumpy and rhythmless that the gleeful anticipation for union that drives romantic comedies never fully materializes.

Worse than that, the movie resorts to loud, indistinct pop songs to express emotion. Bad idea.

What could have been a movie full of quirky ideas about family and life in the 1990's America turns out to have nothing new to say. And the love story only sort of works. It is, however, more fun than nuclear war. C–

CD Pick of the Week

R.E.M.'s Pageant gave us a Rich new band

LIFES RICH PAGEANT
R.E.M.
I.R.S.

Lifes Rich Pageant is not the best R.E.M. album. That would be 1992's Automatic for the People, hands down, no arguments. The beauty and emotion of Automatic is unparalleled, but the excitement contained in Pageant is amazing to listen to. Their fourth album marked a new direction for the band, just as their newest, Up, seems to present another new direction 12 years later.

Lifes Rich Pageant presented the world with a whole new R.E.M. in 1986. Before, their production had been thin and vocalist Michael Stipe's voice was indistinct and hard to hear at times. But here, vocals and music are given an urgent quality while the lyrics retain their often drunken live [illegible]

The album announces itself with a slinky Peter Buck guitar riff at the outset of "Begin the Begin," before the rest of the musicians kick in and the guitar sinks into a chunky rhythm with an undercurrent of feedback swimming beneath. The technique of using feedback to produce a feeling of unease would show up in later songs like "Sweetness Follows" and "Strange Currencies," but it's jarring here in light of R.E.M.'s earlier, friendlier work.

The new sound could be attributed to producer Don Gehman, who previously had been best associated with John Mellencamp. It was the only time the band worked with the producer, but it was an important union. While the beautiful pop of the band was evident on the previous three albums (and one EP), the madness and inspiration of their often drunken live shows was nowhere to be found. The [illegible] "Fall On Me," beneath a wave that sounds tight and cracks like a whip.

For the most part, the album Is a patchwork of ideas and music that never lacks cohesion. Stipe touches on subjects ranging from a banned children's book to Galileo's scientific principles, from the Chicken Little myth to Civil War balladry. In addition, the sound is varied, from the rage of album openers "Begin the Begin" and "These Days" to the gentle chimes of "Flowers of Guatemala" and the Latin tinge of "Underneath the Bunker." Incidental music catches the ear, too, from the sound of something being wound up before "Superman" to the banjo that begins "I Believe" and the piano melody of the lyrically sinister "Hyena."

And while R.E.M. has always been regarded as a political band, no album finds addressing political issues more than Pageant. While some bands can get swallowed up by the histrionics of politics (Rage Against the Machine, anyone?) Stipe wrote about politics obscurely, presenting each case with emotion, but little fact. He lulled people in, only to reveal true meanings because his observations were based more on confusion and shame than on outright vitriol. "Cuyahoga" laments a place long gone, with Stipe singing, "This is where we danced/ This is where we sang/ Take a picture here/ Take a souvenir." A line like "Underneath the riverbed, we burned the river down" loses it's obscurity and becomes poignant only with the knowledge that the Cuyahoga is a river in Ohio that was so polluted it once caught on fire.

Another example is the lovely, soft "Flowers of Guatemala," which references amanita, a flower that would grow on the graves of the people who had disappeared. "The flowers often bloom at night," Stipe sings like a lullaby, adding that the flowers seem to be everywhere. The scope of horror is presented behind the beauty of the ever-present flowers. In "Fall on Me," Stipe begs and pleads with the sky not to drop on him, as pollution has turned it into an angry mess. "Building towers/ Foresight isn't anything at all," he sings.

On the other hand, there are songs like "Just A Touch," a raging garage number left over from an earlier album which is deceptive in it's simplicity. While it could have been a simple, by-the-numbers rave-up, by the end the song it is a swirl of sounds welling up in the mix, with bass, drums, guitar, organ and piano competing with Michael Stipe's keening vocals to be heard. And at the end, there's Stipe giving a nod to his idol Patti Smith, singing "I'm so goddamn... young!"

While Automatic for the People contains the refined emotion and Murmur holds the rush of discovery, it's Lifes Rich Pageant that falls easily in between, balancing emotion and instinct precipitously against studio definition. It's the sound of a band caught in full glory.

COURTESY ANTON TUDISH

Over a decade ago, Michael Stipe and R.E.M. reinvented themselves on Lifes Rich Pageant.

UPC Presents
Brand Nubian WITH Das Efx
TOMORROW

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19TH AT 7:30 P.M.
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
UMASS AMHERST
$10 STUDENTS
$ 15 ALL OTHERS
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT:
• TIX UNLIMITED (413) 545 -0412
• GROW ROOM RECORDS (413) 256-9296
• NORTH HAMPTON BOX OFFICE (413) 586-8686
• MT. HOLYOKE COLLEGE (413) 583-2478
• FOR THE RECORD (413) 256-9296
FOR MORE INFO CONTACT: UNIVERSITY PRODUCTIONS AND CONCERTS (413) 545-2892

COMPLETE AUTO BODY REPAIRS ALL MAKES AND MODELS
DANA Chevrolet Volkswagen AUTOMOTIVE
COLLISION REPAIR · GLASS INSTALLATION
Authorized GM/VW Body Shop
Frame & Unibody Straightening
24 HR HOTLINE 586-7250 | FREE LOANERS! | 988 Bridge Road NORTHAMPTON

AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
NOT A TOUCH MSG
253-7835 or 253-2813
63 Main Street, Amherst

amc
Hampshire 6 · 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 · 584-9183
Mt. Farms Mall

There's a whole world out there!
Explore it with Contiki-
The #1 tour for 18-35 year olds
Cheap tickets Great advice Nice people

Boston/Sydney	$1407
Boston/Nairobi	$955
Newark/Quito	$290
New York/San Juan	$255
Boston/Paris	$344

Council Travel
Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone: 413-256-1261

COURTESY CHRISTINE LOSS

Die

Rain-soaked Nicolas Cage prepares his shot in Joel Shumacher's upcoming Eight Millimeter.

In Grammy–world, don't blink

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Wednesday's Grammy Awards will give the executives who run the music industry some rare moments of peace.

The business that decides what music people will hear is going through tumultuous times, with bottom line-enforced consolidation coming just when new technologies are opening up unimagined frontiers.

If things could only be as simple as sitting back for a few hours and listening to Lauryn Hill or Celine Dion.

At the very least, fewer executives will be looking for Grammy tickets this year. Instead, many are looking for jobs because of massive retrenchment being caused by Seagram Corp.'s purchase of Polygram. Many of the industry's well-known music companies — Motown, A&M, Geffen, Mercury, MCA, Island, Interscope — are being folded into the larger Universal Music Group.

The big-name musical acts under this umbrella, like U2, Sheryl Crow, Nine Inch Nails and Boyz II Men, are expected to survive. But there are reports that as many as 200 artists will be cut adrift, left without a company to manufacture, distribute and promote their music.

Increasingly, the industry is being dominated less by free– thinking executives who follow their instincts in signing and developing musical acts and more by companies ruled by Wall Street earnings reports.

The result is an almost dizzying parade of interchangeable musicians, careers that nosedive before age 30. Last year's Weezer is this year's Limp Bizkit. Arrested Development becomes Foxy Brown. The rock band Sugar Ray even named their most recent album 14:59 in a joking reference to the clock ticking on their 15 minutes of fame.

Will Hanson be forgotten before all the brothers finish puberty?

"You have more one-hit wonders in the 1990s than you've had since the 1950s," said John Scher, a former Polygram executive who is now president of the Metropolitan Entertainment Group.

Scher said that before he left Polygram, the company really didn't care about advancing the careers of any artists unless they were major stars who could quickly pay off an investment.

The major labels are quicker to cast aside musicians who don't break through with big hits, said Andy Allen, president of the Alternative Distribution Alliance. With radio consolidation leading to restricted playlists, fragmented station formats and fewer people deciding what gets played, it's harder to get music noticed.

It sounds depressing, but there's a much brighter side.

Many experts predict a boom for smaller, independent record labels - the ones more willing to take a chance on something new or stick with an established artist even when their best sales days are past.

That's how Berry Gordy got started at Motown in the 1960s, Clive Davis at Arista in the 1970s, Russell Simmons at Def Jam in the 1980s and now new moguls like Puff Daddy and Master P.

"Most of the independent labels are just licking their lips," said Allen, whose company distributes their music. "They have the idea that the bands that were taken from them by the major labels will now be available to them — the artists that sell anywhere from 30,000 to 150,000 records."

Independent labels lack the distribution and marketing muscle of the bigger companies, so it means fans may have to search harder to find the music. The smaller companies usually have more time to devote to a particular project, though, since they're not doing so many things at once.

■ Greek

continued from page6

to make copies of 3-D works of art flawless to the naked eye.

Their work could change the future of how classical art is enjoyed by future generations — both for good and ill. And it inevitably will spark debate between his team and traditional conservators, who have argued that works of art have meaning only in their original settings.

For most people involved in the restoration or care of antiquities, the future applications remain unclear.

"This is the thing with developing technology. It's still in the experimental stage," says Dyfri Williams, head of Greek and Roman antiquities department at the British Museum.

COURTESY DEANA NEWCOMB

Amy Smart (left) and Ali Larter (right) make a James Van der Beek sandwich in the recent hit Varsity Blues.

FILM CLIPS

A selection of films playing in the local area:

A CIVIL ACTION (dir Steven Zaillian, with John Travolta, Robert Duvall, playing at Mountain Farms) Based on Jonathan Harr's bestseller, the story of Boston personal-injury attorney Ian Schlichtmann taking on two large corporations translates well to film. Director Zaillian keeps the movie taut and tense, and elicits terrific performances from Travolta, Duvall, William H. Macy and Kathleen Quinlan. One of the most well crafted films to come out of Hollywood in a while. A– (Kevin Monahan)

MESSAGE IN A BOTTLE (dir Luis Mandoki, with Kevin Costner, Robin Wright Penn, playing at Mountain Farms) Mark Message in a Bottle "Return to sender." The Kevin Costner film has a chance to be a poetic and creative romance, but instead resorts to humdrum formulas and tired melodrama. Inept acting and hopelessly slow direction mar it further. Beautiful photography and the presence of Paul Newman are the only highlights. D (Adam Martignetti)

SHAKESPEARE IN LOVE (dir John Madden, with Joseph Fiennes, Gwyneth Paltrow, playing at Academy of Music). Art and life have had a chaotic history, alternatively frustrating and inspiring each other. In Shakespeare in Love, the Bard (Joseph Fiennes) is suffering writer's block at the dawn of the first performance of the yet-unwritten Romeo and Juliet, until he finds his muse in Paltrow. Wit, enchantment, high comedy and passion follows. A marvelous supporting cast, led by Judi Dench and Geoffrey Rush, and an impeccable script, co–written by noted playwright Tom Stoppard. A (Bryan McAllaser)

A SIMPLE PLAN (dir Sam Raimi, with Bill Paxton, Billy Bob Thornton, playing at Amherst). 1. Simple Plan can't help but ask the proverbial question, "What would you do if you found a bag of money?" What unfolds as an answer to this question is a tense, intriguing thriller, directed with taut control by Sam Raimi (Army of Darkness). Plan spins a homegrown yarn of surprise fortune, murder and cover-ups that ensue when things go horribly wrong. The answer, therefore, comes painfully. A (Laurence Lavallee)

THE THIN RED LINE (dir Terrence Malick, with Sean Penn, Ben Chaplin, playing at Mountain Farms) An hour into the film, it becomes painfully obvious that director Malick hasn't made a movie in 20 years. The filmmaking is archaic, obtuse and virtually inaccessible. The story is segmented and disjointed to the point of being non-existent. One of the most impressive casts ever assembled is wasted, as Malick focuses on images instead of people. Thin, formless, forgettable. D+ (A.M.)

VARSITY BLUES (dir Brian Robbins, with James Van Der Beek, Jon Voight, playing at Mountain Farms). Part inspirational-sports story, part crappy MTV sex comedy, Varsity Blues spreads itself in many directions, and gets a strong performance from Van Der Beek as Mox, a second string quarterback thrown into the spotlight. Mox does a slight rebellion off West Canaan, much to the frustration of his Bill Parcells–like coach, Bud Kilmer (Voight), and that's where the stupid antics clear and the inspirational stuff takes over, to great effect. B (Rob Ruenschi)

WAKING NED DIVINE (dir Kirk Jones, with Ian Bannen, David Kelly, playing at Pleasant St.). Writer/director Jones provides wonderfully bizarre characters in this little film about an unknown lottery winner in a small Irish town. A marvelous ensemble cast, particularly Ian Bannen and Michael O'Sullivan, lend this alluring and enchanting film about the little quirks of life, the twists of fate, and the ties of friendship. B (A.M.)

Arts will still love you in the morning.

STRANGELY COMPELLING ALTERNATIVES

MEDIA PLAY
Your Entertainment Superstore
For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-606-3342
Sale dates February 14 - 27, 1999

FANTASTIC SELECTION OF MICROBREW KEGS

Spirit Haus

500 BEERS & WINES FROM AROUND THE WORLD

MICROBREW SPECIALS

Catamount	6pk btls	$ 4.99 /ea
Black Dog	6pk btls	$ 4.99 /ea
Mc Neill's	6pk btls	$ 5.29 /ea
Hempen Ale/Gold	6pk btls	$ 5.29 /ea

BEER SPECIALS

Michelob/Light	12pk btls	$7.99 /ea
Boddingtons Pub Ale Draught	4pk cans	$4.99 /ea
BAVARIA	6pk btls	$4.99 /ea
Woodchuck Cider	6pk btls	$4.99 /ea

Prefull-Moon Inventory Reduction
Dozens of wines reduced 20% and more
Concha y Toro Merlot 750 ml 2/$ 8.00
King Estate Pinot Noir (Oregon) sale last of a great vintage $ 13.99
Grad Students 10% Discount off Regular "Fine" Wine Prices

LIQUOR SPECIALS

Captain Morgan Parrot Bay Rum	750 ml	$ 10.49
Jack Daniels	750 ml	$ 14.49
Black Haus B	750 ml	$ 15.99
Gordons Wildberry Vodka	1 lt	$ 9.99
Dr MCGILLICUDDY	750 ml	$ 9.99

338 COLLEGE ST, RTE 9 - 1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER
MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER - (413) 253-5384

IT'S 11:59 ON NEW YEARS EVE.
DO YOU KNOW WHERE YOUR DATE IS?

Ben Affleck Casey Affleck Dave Chappelle Guillermo Diaz
Angela Featherstone Janeane Garofalo Gaby Hoffmann Kate Hudson
Courtney Love Jay Mohr Martha Plimpton Christina Ricci Paul Rudd

200cigarettes

PARAMOUNT PICTURES and MACHINE ENTERTAINMENT present in association with NEW FILMS and BOSTON FILMS "200 CIGARETTES" STARRING CASEY AFFLECK JANE CHAPPELLE ANGELA FEATHERSTONE COURTNEY LOVE JAY MOHR MARTHA PLIMPTON CHRISTINA RICCI PAUL RUDD ... SCENIA CAST DRINK, MORE, HAVE, STORIES, INTERCOURSE ... EDITED BY MARK WITHINGTON-HIGH ... MUSIC JOSEPH VITARELLI COSTUMES DESIGNED BY LISA TOMS CHURCH ... PRODUCED BY MICHAEL TAMMI PHILIP ... WRITTEN BY TED DEMME, DAVID CALEF AND TED GRIFFIN ... DIRECTED BY ROCKY MORTON & ALLAN ARKUSH ... DEMME, TOM ROTHMAN, MARC WEINELL, ALAN GREENSPAN, TED GRIFFIN, ANNE SOMERS ... EXECUTIVE PRODUCERS ... DAVID LANDAU ... PRODUCED BY ROSA MORRISON-GARCIA ... SCREENPLAY BY ... Miramax.com

R RESTRICTED

IN THEATRES THIS FEBRUARY

Clooney set to leave "E.R."

Just as the world of television drama is recuperating from the death of Jimmy Smits' character on "NYPD Blue," another superstar is set to make his exit from a widely watched series. Tonight's episode of "ER" will mark a milestone as George Clooney says goodbye to the role of television doctor.

Clooney has recently become a very desired actor for Hollywood movie producers after his roles in two award– winning films. His starring role in Out of Sight, accompanied by a minor role in the Oscar–nominated The Thin Red Line, has finally proved that Clooney can establish himself as a quality big screen actor, and like many other TV stars, this means that his days on the small screen are over. Clooney's 1998 films were not the first time he left "ER" for major stardom. In 1996, Clooney starred alongside Quentin Tarantino in From Dusk Till Dawn, then he made a pair of bombs in 1997 with The Peacemaker and Batman and Robin, in which he played the caped crusader.

Unlike his "ER" co-star, Anthony Edwards, Clooney did not have prior film experience before starting the series. Edwards co-starred in 1986 films Top Gun and Revenge of the Nerds. Since beginning his work on "ER," Edwards has not been involved in any films at all. In fact, that may be the reason that he is by far the best character on the show. He devotes all of his time and energy into giving his best work every week, and as a result, he does a superior job.

The past few months, "ER"'s plot has been heating up. Clooney's character, Dr. Douglas Ross, has been getting himself in some serious trouble. Dr. Ross, who is a pediatrician, is a character who has gained a reputation for breaking the rules and creating his own. This season, he has been under heat for his responsibility in the death of a child that resulted from an unauthorized administration of a test narcotic.

This idea was developed last year, after Clooney made the announcement of his planned exit from the show one morning while being interviewed by Howard Stern. Writers also decided that if Dr. Ross was going to leave the show, then they had to resolve the situation involving his love life with co-star Julianna Margulies, who plays Nurse Carol Hathaway. In the past year, the characters have finally gotten together, and their relationship will most definitely hit a huge obstacle when Clooney leaves.

The writers of "ER" created many conflicts between Dr. Ross and the other characters on the show since learning of his departure. His friendship with Anthony Edwards' character, Dr. Mark Greene, has shrunk to non-existent, and there is hatred developing between Ross and his boss, Dr. Weaver. The cause of all of these conflicts all came to a head in the past few weeks when Dr. Ross was finally given his punishment for the death of the child. He was told that he no longer had the authority to prescribe any type of narcotics with out the written permission of either Dr. Greene or Dr. Weaver.

Immediately after his punishment was announced, Clooney was in trouble again. A sub-plot that has developed Involves a child who has entered the ER with severe multiple sclerosis. Dr. Ross needed to gain access to a rare machine that dispenses pain killers into the patient and neither of the two doctors that he was forced to ask would sign for it. To solve the problem, he forged a signature to get what he wanted. After connecting the machine to the child, the boys mother pleaded with Dr. Ross to allow her to euthanize her child, because he had suffered much too long. Since he figured that the child would be dead in a matter of hours, Dr.Ross showed the mother how to use the machine, which there are strict laws against. When the boy's father (who was divorced to the child's mother) found out about this, he became irate, and threatened to sue the hospital. This made everyone else's life miserable, and landed Dr. Ross into some serious trouble.

Right after all of this mess occurred, there was word of a horrible school bus accident, and Dr. Ross insisted that he go to the scene and help because he is a pediatrician. He was strictly forbidden to go by Dr. Greene, and since he is a rebel, he took off anyway in his own car. On the way to the scene of the accident, Dr. Ross gets in a car accident himself, and that was the final scene of last week's episode.

What's going to happen this week? Any guess will do. The fact that the writers decided to place Dr. Ross in a situation such as a horrible car crash is too cliched. It seems that they felt that in order to gain ratings and make sure that everyone watches his final episode, they needed to put him in some sort of physical danger.

Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris

Nothing could be further form the truth. "ER" is TV's top rated show, and has been for years. They don't need to resort to simple ploys to get people to watch, and it is disappointing that they have. In my opinion, there will be no death on tomorrow's episode. Or at least Dr. Ross will not be killed off because there's no need for him to be.

After Clooney's exit, the next questions that should be answered all involve how they are going to replace him. It seems that they will centralize the series mostly upon Drs. Greene, Weaver, and Carter.

A new addition to the show is former "Life Goes On" star Kellie Martin. Martin plays a new medical student, and the love interest of Dr. Carter. Martin took some time off from acting, while studying art history at Yale University, but is right back in the swing of things now, and should get even more playing time now that Clooney is gone.

Tonight at 10 p.m., there will be a landmark in TV history. One of the top stars of the small screen in the past decade, who can place his name among other icons such as Kelsey Grammar, Tim Allen, and Jerry Seinfeld, is moving on. The creators of the show should know enough to let someone who's been a major force in their success leave with his dignity. George Clooney should be able to leave "ER" while still being adored by millions. I don't think that the fans will be disappointed.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY MELISSA MOSELEY

Er, should we keep it?

Billy Bob Thornton, Bill Paxton, and Brent Biscoe consider the options in A Simple Plan, playing at Amherst Cinema.

■ grammy

continued from page 5

Rock Band, and Best Heavy Metal/Hard Rock performance, are easily predictable categories. A win in the Best New Artist category more often than not dooms the artist to fade into obscurity.

One of the most interesting surprises this year is the return to the 80's in the Best Dance Recording category. Boy George and Cyndi Lauper are competing along with the likes of Gloria Estafan, among others.

Of course, a troubling thing about the Grammy awards is that they (like the Oscars) present themselves as the ultimate authority on what is good music. People who do not listen to anything out of the mainstream tend to buy the albums the Grammys tell them to buy. Nominees and winners are not necessarily based on opinion, they are based on sales. Just because Vanilla Ice's first album sold well did not mean it was good. It just meant that there were a lot of idiots walking around with ten bucks less than they had before. Also, just a glance at past Grammy winners will tell you that these were hardly ever the "best" album of that year. You might also find out that just because you win a Grammy doesn't always mean that you're talented.

Kevin Monahan is a Collegian staff member.

COURTESY FRANK OCKENFELS

Dizzying results

The Goo Goo Dolls, far from their fresh–faced old days, have a huge success on their hands with their latest release, Dizzy Up the Girl.

CALVIN
THEATRE & PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

Fri. Feb. 19 • 8 pm
An evening with
Sir George Martin
The Making of Sgt. Pepper, a multi media keynote address

Wed. Feb. 24 • 7 pm
the Iron Horse's 20th Anniversary Concert
featuring
Maura O'Connell, The Bobs, Tuck & Patti, The Nields, Salamander Crossing, Dave Van Ronk

Sat. Mar. 6 • 2 & 7 pm
Calvin Kids Series
Cirque Eloize
Fun for the whole family!

James Galway
Legendary Irish flutist
Thu., Mar. 18
8 pm

2/19 An evening with Sir George Martin: The Making of Sgt. Pepper, a multi-media keynote address
2/20 Dollar Night: The Sound of Music
2/24 The Iron Horse 20th Anniversary Concert featuring Maura O'Connell, Tuck & Patti, the Bobs, the Nields, Salamander Crossing and Dave Van Ronk
3/6 Cirque Eloize

Coming Soon: 3/7 Arcadia Players, 3/18 James Galway, 3/27 Citizen Kane*, 3/28 The Wizard of Oz, 4/6 Bruce Hornsby, 4/10 Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Co., 4/11 The Adventures of Corduroy, 4/16 Cassandra Wilson, 4/23 Sonny Rollins, 4/24 Terry Gross, 4/25 Ravi Shankar, 5/2 Laura Ingalls Wilder: Growing Up on the Prarie, 5/15 Vertigo*, 5/23 Phantom of the Opera, 6/19 West Side Story*, 7/15 Gone With the Wind*, 10/15 Cesaria Evora
* Denotes Calvin Theatre Dollar Movie Night

CALVIN THEATRE - 19 KING STREET, NORTHAMPTON, MA 413-584-0610
Tickets for the Calvin Theatre are available at the Northampton Box Office, Thorne's Marketplace in Northampton.
To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TIXX. Visit www.ticketbox.com for more information.

all shows all ages!
Pearl Street Nightclub
THU. FEB. 18 • 8:30 PM • PEARL ST. BALLROOM
THE SAMPLES

TUE. MAR. 2 • 8:30 PM • PEARL ST. BALLROOM
featuring members of Bad Brains
SOUL BRAINS

THU. FEB. 18 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
THE SAMPLES
TUE. MAR. 2 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
SOUL BRAINS
SAT. MAR. 6 • 8:30 PM • CLUBROOM
MARY'S FIRST
SUN. MAR. 7 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
LEE "SCRATCH" PERRY WITH MAD PROFESSOR
The Dr. Lee PhD Tour
SUNDAY, MARCH 7 • 8:30 PM/CLUBROOM
INTERNATIONAL EXTREME MUSIC FESTIVAL
FEATURING VADER (POLAND), CRYPTOPSY (CANADA), DIVINE EMPIRE (U.S.A.), VITAL REMAINS (U.S.A.)
SAT. MAR. 13 • 8:30 PM • BALLROOM
SEBADOH
COMING SOON: Jurrin Hinds & the Dreamers, Israel Vibration, Roondful of Blues, Black 47, Screamin' Cheetah Wheelers, Better Than Ezra, Robin Trower

PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB, 10 PEARL ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA • THE IRON HORSE, 20 CENTER ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA
Tickets for all shows available at the Northampton Box Office, 2nd Floor, Thorne's Marketplace, Northampton 1-800-THE-TIXX or 413-586-8686. Tickets for the Iron Horse are available at For The Record in Amherst. Tickets for Pearl St. are available at For The Record, Ideart Music in Broadfield and Plantarpus Records in Westfield. 24-hour Concert Info: (413) 584-0610 or visit www.massive.com

all shows music alone shall live all ages!
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL

10,000 MANIACS
SAT. MAR. 6
7 & 10 PM
IRON HORSE

WEB. FEB. 17 • 7 PM
Jazz piano double bill
DANILO PEREZ AND PATRICIA BARBER
THU. FEB. 18 • 7 PM
Bootsy cajun up-and-comers
BALFA TOUJOURS
FRI. FEB. 19 • 7 PM
Compelling songwriter/great entertainer
SUSAN WERNER
Plus Connie Kaldor
SAT. FEB. 20 • 7 PM
Blues guitar master
MIKE WELCH
SAT. FEB. 20 • 10 PM
Groovy avant jazz trio
LIVING DAYLIGHTS
Plus Actual Size
SUN. FEB. 21 • 7 PM
Recent Prairie Home Companion stars
VIRTUAL CONSORT
MON. FEB. 22 • 7 PM
Celebrate Black History Month
BLACK REBELS
Plus Children of the Most High and Boys Full Tenn Music
TUE. FEB. 23 • 7 PM
20th-anniversary week begins
THE BOBS
THU. FEB. 25 • 7 PM
Amazing Irish vocalist
MAURA O'CONNELL
COMING SOON: Brooks Williams, Stacy Earle, Muddy Waters Tribute Band, Mistro Brennen, Big Bad Bullocks, The Seldom Scene, Great Big Sea

FRI. FEB. 26 • 7 PM
Trolley-Award songgrass heroes
SALAMANDER CROSSING
Plus Gypsy Wranglers
SAT. FEB. 27 • 7 & 10 PM
Addictive acoustic rockers
THE NIELDS
Plus Jen Klein
SUN. FEB. 28 • 7 PM
Gorgeous Celtic folk pop
ANAM
THU. MAR. 2 • 7 & 8:30 PM
Celtic traditional grooves
THE BOYS OF THE LOUGH
FRI. MAR. 5 • 7 PM
The lesbian Lenny Bruce
MARGA GOMEZ
FRI. MAR. 5 • 10 PM
Portsmouth, NH's finest groove export
PERCY HILL
SAT. MAR. 6 • 7 & 10 PM
Alterna-pop legends
10,000 MANIACS
Plus Veda Hille
SUN. MAR. 7 • 7 PM
Jazz guitar master explores groove
JOHN SCOFIELD: A-GO-GO
THU. MAR. 11 • 7 PM
Virtuoso jazz pianist
JOANNE BRACKEEN QUARTET
FRI. MAR. 12 • 10 PM
Get on the funk bus
GRANOLA FUNK EXPRESS
Plus Jess Klein

You Can't Buy Clothes Over The Internet. Who ever told you that? That's the most ridiculous thing I ever heard. Why you kids are a bunch of fools. Internet. Hogwash!

...Just in time for spring break!

NEXT WEAR

"Get Off at The Next Exit"

www.nextwear.com

FREE DELIVERY

OPEN 'TIL 3AM FRIDAY & SATURDAY

PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S

331 Russell Street, Hadley

5 8 6 - 7 2 7 2

PAPA JOHN'S is now accepting

DON'T FORGET Our Hot Bread Sticks & Mouth-Watering Cheese Sticks

OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan

HOURS OF OPERATION

Sunday - Thursday 11am - 2am

Friday & Saturday 11am - 3am

Accepting: MasterCard VISA

1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99

2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99

3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99

•Not Valid with any other offer •Valid only at participation locations •Customer pays all applicable sales tax •Additional toppings extra

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES

GREAT EXPECTATIONS. GREAT PERFORMERS. GREAT REWARDS.

A Breed Apart

AWADAGIN PRATT PIANIST

Awadagin Pratt's brilliant, unconventional approach to the classics makes every concert a transcendent experience. His program includes Passacaglia and Fugue by Bach, Variations and Fugue on a Theme of Handel by Brahms, and Pictures from an Exhibition by Mussorgsky. "Pratt's performance is sublime." – The Pittsburgh Tribune Review

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, BOWKER AUDITORIUM, 8PM

Bueno Tango

NEW ON THE SERIES

TANGO BUENOS AIRES

This sensuous, superbly theatrical 25-member company of dancers and musicians comes to Amherst as part of its first North American tour. Under the direction of Osvaldo Requena, the company traces the history of the tango in "The Song of Buenos Aires."

THURSDAY, MARCH 4, CONCERT HALL, 8PM

Sponsored by First Massachusetts Bank

A Snotable Night of Jazz

NEW ON THE SERIES

Nnenna Freelon & her Trio

Her voice is like silk and her presence is magnetic. She's Grammy-nominated Nnenna Freelon, one of today's most celebrated jazz singers, and her performance is part of the first-ever Billy Taylor Jazz Residency. Nnenna and company perform selections from her recent CD Maiden Voyager, with songs by Billy Holiday, Laura Nyro, Blossom Dearie, and other greats.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 10, BOWKER AUDITORIUM, 8PM

WE'RE LOBBYING FOR THE FUTURE! While our new lobby is under construction, please enter the Concert Hall via alternate entrances. On-site signage and guides will show you the way.

Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets

The Fine Arts Center University of Massachusetts Amherst

javaticker.com with bankinvestor.com

www.JavaTicker.com

	Last Trade
AMAZON.COM	2:41 p.m.	175 7/16 +16 9/1
AMERICA ONLINE	2:37 p.m.	147 1/4 -5/
AT HOME CP A	2:41 p.m.	111 3/16 +5 1/

Chat room, up-to-date financial news and information, customizable Java ticker and home page, searchable bank prospectus database.

Visit www.javaticker.com today!

Support Your Local Hooker

Informational Session

Student Union: Colonial Room

7:00 PM

Monday February 22nd

PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!

PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!

PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!

PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!

QUESTIONS? CALL BRIAN @ 587-9343

OR DAVE @ 587-3771

WWW.ECS.UMASS.EDU/RUGBY/UMASS

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS

Discount Discount

18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring "Busch & Busch Light" $11.99 30/PK

Blossom Hill White Zinfandel $2.99 750 ml

Absolut Vodka 80° $11.99 750 ml

'Micro' Brewery Hill Black &Tan, Pale Ale, Carmel Porter, Cent Larger, Amber Honey $3.99 6/PK

MILWAUKEE'S BEST $9.99 30 PK

Honey Brown & Michael Shea's $6.99 12 PK bots

Guinness "Pub Cans" 4/pk $4.99

Beck's Reg. or Dark $9.99 12/PK bots

Woodchuck Ciders $4.99 6/PK

Vodka 80° Everyday Price! $8.99 1.75 lt

Check Out Russell's Indoor Wine Specials!

• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 12:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

TRAVEL SMART!

BEST PRICES TO EUROPE, WITHIN THE U.S., AND DESTINATIONS AROUND THE WORLD

CALL 800-272-9676

E-MAIL sales@prismtours.com

VISIT US AT www.prismtours.com

Eurailpasses and Student ID cards available.

PRISM TRAVEL

345 Fifth Avenue New York, NY 10017 In NYC 212 986-8420

Ali greeted by a warm English following; More random news from the sports world

LONDON (AP) — Crying "Ali, Ali, Ali," fans mobbed former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali when he toured London's Brixton district yesterday to publicize appeals for western nations to write off Third World debts.

Thousands of people waved and cheered as Ali and his wife Lonnie arrived at the headquarters of Jubilee 2000, a group working to end developing countries' debt in time for the millennium.

Extra police were called in to keep the crowds back as Ali signed autographs before cruising the streets of Brixton in an open-top 1930 Bentley.

"The atmosphere in the center was electric. This is precisely what we needed to energize us," said Kofi Mawuli Klu, Jubilee 2000 coordinator.

Ann Pettifor, director of Jubilee 2000, said the boxer "is an icon for all people who have struggled against the inhumanity of racism and war."

Although he has Parkinson's disease, Ali, 57, still travels the world championing causes he believes in. He did not speak during the visit.

Other supporters of the Jubilee 2000 campaign include Archbishop Desmond Tutu, the Dalai Lama and Pope John Paul II.

Krone hits another milestone

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Julie Krone won five races on six mounts Tuesday at the Fair Grounds, pushing her career win total above the 3,500 mark.

Krone, the all-time leading winner among female riders, hit the milestone aboard May B A Walk in the third race. Afterwards, she did back flips on the track.

"When you win 3,500, you can do that," she said. "You get so much energy."

Krone won the feature race, the Mardi Gras Handicap, on longshot Letterhead. She finished the day with 3,503 winners.

Krone, 35, reached the milestone with a rush, winning three races Saturday, four Sunday and on her first two mounts Tuesday.

"After a couple of days of getting three winners and four winners, things get a little bit magical," Krone said. "Fair Grounds has been very good to me, the fans, the people. It's been a real pleasure."

Daehlie seeks another Nordic title

RAMSAU, Austria (AP) — Bjorn Daehlie is ready to make history in his sixth Nordic world championship.

With a total of 15 medals, he's only two behind history's most successful World Championship skier, Elena Vaelbe of Russia. Despite coming off a two-week bout with an inflammation of vocal chords, he hopes for a medal in every race.

"I hope I'll be on top of the podium at least once," Daehlie said yesterday.

The eight-time Olympic gold medalist confirmed he would start in each of the four individual races, including the opening 30K freestyle tomorrow, an event that hasn't always worked for him in the past.

Canada's 2,000 yard back won't migrate South

MONTREAL (AP) — Mike Pringle, the first player in CFL history to rush for more than 2,000 yards in a season, is staying put. Pringle, who rushed for a league record 2,065 yards last season, said Wednesday he will remain with the Montreal Alouettes for at least two more years. Pringle, the CFL's outstanding player last year, has been sought by several NFL clubs.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Alabama Slammer

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team will host No. 1 Alabama this weekend in non-conference action.

Camby manages to make his way back to the news

By Pat Eaton-Robb
Associated Press

WATERBURY, Conn. — Marcus Camby has admitted taking thousands of dollars in improper gifts from sports agents while playing for the University of Massachusetts. Now, one of those agents is suing the NBA star for breach of contract.

John Lounsbury of Wolcott claims he gave $40,000 in cash and gifts to Camby, members of Camby's family and the player's friends between October 1994 and April 1996. In exchange, Lounsbury claims, Camby promised to hire him as his agent when the time came to negotiate a professional contract.

"I believe too much emphasis has been placed on the wrongdoing of agents and not enough attention has been paid to the irresponsibility and greed of these professional athletes," Lounsbury's lawyer, John Williams, said yesterday.

Williams said it was Camby who demanded cash, rental cars, jewelry and more.

Damages will be determined by a jury if the lawsuit, filed last month, goes to trial.

Camby's agent, Alex Johnson, said Camby denies he ever agreed to be represented by Lounsbury. Camby has admitted taking only about $2,000 from Lounsbury.

"He's done everything in terms of owning up to the things he's done with John and the things he's done in the past," said Johnson, of the ProServ agency. "This is just a rehashing of everything all over again. It's frivolous."

In June 1996, UMass alerted the NCAA that Camby might have committed violations by accepting cash and expensive jewelry from agents, including Lounsbury.

Camby said he accepted money from Lounsbury in 1995 and two necklaces and a diamond pendant from Wesley Spears, a Hartford lawyer.

UMass was stripped of its 1996 NCAA regional championship and was forced to return the money it earned by making it to the Final Four of the NCAA tournament.

Camby was the No. 2 pick in the 1996 NBA draft. He was chosen by Toronto and traded to New York before this season.

In December 1997, Lounsbury agreed not to act as a sports agent for five years. That agreement with the state Department of Consumer Protection stemmed from his purchase of airline tickets for two University of Connecticut players, Ricky Moore and Kirk King.

More controversy about the Pats move to Conn.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — New England Patriots owner Robert Kraft may pocket some of the difference if construction costs for the team's Hartford stadium run below what the state has agreed to pay. Connecticut has pledged up to $280 million for the 68,000-seat stadium, scheduled to be built on the Adriaen's Landing development site by 2002.

The state will pay another $94 million in other costs associated with the stadium plan, including securing the construction site and cleaning up environmental contamination.

Team owner Robert Kraft will pick up the tab if construction costs run more than $280 million. But if he cuts costs while building the stadium, he may be able to rake in some of the savings.

Details of the stadium deal were made public in a 226-page development agreement released Friday.

"If the state felt it was in its best interest to provide some kind of incentive to save the state money, they could negotiate an agreement," said Scott Murphy, the state's chief lawyer who drew up the development agreement said yesterday.

Murphy said there is nothing unusual about offering Kraft incentives if they could save the state money, and noted that the development agreement does not obligate Connecticut to strike such a deal with the NFL team.

And if Kraft did get a bonus, it wouldn't amount to much, Murphy said.

"If there is something negotiated, it would be unspectacular in its particulars," Murphy said.

But critics of the stadium plan say anything that goes to Kraft is too much.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Back in the thick of things

Bryan Kennedy and the Massachusetts hockey team will look to keep a hold on eighth place in Hockey East when they face UMass-Lowell this Saturday night.

We Sell BEER & WINE on SUNDAYS

MONTAGUE MINI MART

Open 9 noon- 7pm

We accept Visa & Mastercard

367-9551

60 Main St. Montague Center

Route 47 63 North N. Pleasant St. UMass Campus

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY

We have over 30,000 pints of fresh ales & lagers. WE SHARE!!

Thurs- Johnny B Unplugged

Fri- Stockwell Brothers

Sat- Chess Kings

Sun- Sara Manning Jazz Trio

• Fully Stocked Bar • Late Night Menu Till Midnight

24-36 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-4400

Child Care Needed

Reliable, non-smoking, articulate person needed to care for our 4 year old boy in our Amherst home.

- 4 afternoons per week, 2:00 - 6:00 PM
- Must have own transportation
- Prefer someone who will be in area during summer
- $7.25 per hour to start; $8.25 per hour after 3 months

Call Kathy at 549-4246 to arrange interview

WMUA FM 91

The voice of UMass is looking for dependable & enthusiastic people to help in the following depts.

News Publicity Sports Visual Media Underwriting Fund Drive

If this strikes your interest come by and check us out! All are welcome to visit us at 105 campus center (next to the collegian) or call 545-2876

COLD OUTSIDE ... HOT SAVINGS INSIDE!

LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive

Everyday Pricing

1/2 KEGS NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $34.99 + BER

1/2 KEGS ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, ROLLING ROCK $36.99 + BER

1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE $40.99 + BER

COORS GOLD CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.49 + BER

MILWAUKEE'S BEST REGULAR & LIGHT CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS $9.49 + BER

GUINNESS STOUT 6 PK. BOTTLE $6.49 + BER

SAMUEL ADAMS ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.69 + BER

MOLSON GOLDEN ICE LAGER 12 PK. BOT. $7.99 + BER

ROLLING ROCK 18-12 OZ. CANS $9.99 + BER

O'DOUL'S NON ALCOHOLIC 12 PK. CANS $5.99 + BER

WINE OF THE MONTH

Hardy's Nottage Hill IMPORTED FROM AUSTRALIA CHARDONNAY SHIRAZ, MERLOT SHIRAZ CABERNET 750ML $5.99

GALLO LIVINGSTON CELLARS BLUSH, CHABLIS, WHITE GRENACHE, RED ROSE, BURGUNDER, PR. COLOMBARD, RHINE $6.99

CORBETT CANYON CHARDONNAY MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LT. $7.49

GEORGES DUBOEUF CHARDONNAY MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LT. $8.99

SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99

KAHLUA COMBOS ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. $4.49

JENKIN'S VODKA 175 LT. $8.99

JACK DANIELS 750 ML $13.99

Seagram's 7 BLENDED WHISKY 1.75 LT. $13.99

MALIBU CARIBBEAN RUM 750 ML $9.99

CLUNY SCOTCH 1.75 L $12.99

GILBEY'S GIN 1.75 L $12.99

Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA

HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 2.18.99 THRU WEDS. 2.24.99

Bring Your Buddies to BUBS BAR-B-Q

AMHERST RD.,SUNDERLAND - 548-9630 MON-TH 5-9:30 FRI-SAT 5-10 SUN 4-9:30

And PIG OUT IN STYLE!"

Collegian sports, we're here for you now you come to us!!! Interested in writing? come down and talk to Mike, Paul, Seth or Kathleen or call at 545-3500

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Alison MacFarland and the Minutewomen basketball team will look to secure a No. 2 seed in the A-10 tournament with a win over SBU tonight.

Gordon remains on top of NASCAR world

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Perhaps the only driver who can beat Jeff Gordon is The Kid himself.

There are NASCAR fans who dislike the 27-year-old superstar because, as far as they're concerned, he's already won too much. But they better get used to it.

His victory Sunday in the Daytona 500 is followed by a stop at North Carolina Speedway, another track Gordon dominates.

"There's plenty left to accomplish," said the two-time defending series champion. "To keep at this level is not easy to do. That's what drives me. What I've got in Winston Cup is not easy to come by in other sports."

His victory at Daytona International Speedway was certainly not easy to come by. Even his detractors must have been impressed. Gordon made a breathtaking pass for the lead 11 laps from the finish. Then he held off defending champion Dale Earnhardt for his 43rd career victory in what crew chief Ray Evernham says wasn't the best car in the field.

This happens often, and Dale Jarrett finds it disconcerting. He and Mark Martin are foremost among those hoping to keep Gordon from a record-tying third straight championship and fourth in five years, but Jarrett can read the numbers.

"I maybe only win somewhere like 8 to 10 percent of the time when I don't have the best car," Jarrett said. "Mark, maybe 20 percent, left, closer to 40 or 50 percent."

And it's not much different when they do have the "best" car.

"Maybe we win those races 40 to 50 percent of the time," Jarrett said. "When Mark has the best car, he might win maybe 60 to 70 percent of the time. When left has the best car, I think they win about 90 percent of the time."

If that's the case again this year, Gordon will have a chance to set another record. In 1998, he matched Richard Petty's mark of 13 victories in a season.

One of the main reasons is Evernham, considered by many the best organizer and strategist in the business. The anti-Gordon faction argues that Evernham is the main reason for all the success. But Evernham emphatically denies being responsible for the latest victory.

"We didn't give him the best car and we didn't give him very good pit stops," Evernham said. "Somehow, he did it without us giving him much help at all this time."

That's got to be unsettling to the rest of the Winston Cup competitors, and the Dura-Lube 400 on Sunday in Rockingham, N.C., might not do much to encourage them.

Gordon won both races last year on the 1.017-mile oval known as The Rock. He'll try to make it three in a row, but he never loses sight of the big picture.

"This team loves to win races, but we love to win championships the most," he said.

Based on the last two years and the Daytona 500, it's going to be hard for anyone to keep the Hendrick Motorsports team from doing just that in 1999.

Gordon, however, isn't getting carried away by all the hype.

"I think it's totally unpredictable right now," he said. "I love winning the Daytona 500, but that's over. We'll find out the next couple of weekends what our chances are at the championship."

He figures Martin and Jarrett will make things difficult in Rockingham after a multi-car crash ended the hopes of both at Daytona. And they might have company.

"Some names we may not be used to seeing up there will be around, too," Gordon said.

Those who believe Gordon is lucky can say the Daytona wreck could have involved him. He went by moments before Jarrett swerved to the bottom of the high-bank third turn and started the 13-car accident.

But Gordon's detractors must admit he won with virtually no drafting help, a growing scenario on the super-speedways where it's so important.

Some UMass sports notes

Things are starting to heat up on the UMass Intramural scene

A wrestling meet was held last week, with nine individual winners and a team champion named. The individual winners were Donovan Quimby, Bryan Bernard, Chris Clark, Matt Giordano, Jay Katz, Chris Durkin, Steve Montgomery, Dan Kasperowski and Rozbeh Torabi all emerging victorious.

The team champion was O.P.I, who edged out both Jay and Delta Chi for the title. Intramural basketball is also going on now in both the men's, women's and co-rec divisions.

In the men's undergraduate division For Free and Operation Lockdown are battling it out for their league crown. Oooohhhh! and Grape Smugglers, along with Freshmen Fury and Ivory Eightballs are also all undefeated.

ERF's, Ground Zero, Tall Boys and Short Men are the league leaders in the grad/faculty/staff division.

Pure Adrenalin is at the top of the heap in the women's division, but must watch out for Charlie's Angels II and Volcanoes.

–Michael Kobylanski

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Next please

Charlton Clarke and the Massachusetts men's basketball team played George Washington last night. For a full wrap- up of that game, check out page 16.

Whitaker set to return to Madison Square Garden for a bout with Trinidad

By Ed Schulyer Jr.
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pernell Whitaker turned pro in Madison Square Garden a little more than 14 years ago. On Saturday night, he will fight in the famed arena again, ready to show his career is not at an end.

"I'm more than delighted to be 35 years old, but I'm going to give a 21-year-old performance," Whitaker said Wednesday at the final news conference leading to his bout with unbeaten IBF champion Felix Trinidad. "I'm looking forward to getting into the middle of ring in the Garden and seeing those lights."

The first time Whitaker performed under the Garden lights was Nov. 15, 1984. He stopped Farrain Commeaux in the second round of a scheduled six-round lightweight bout on a card that featured several members of the 1984 U.S. Olympic boxing team.

The last time Whitaker fought in the Garden he won the WBC welterweight title by outpointing James "Buddy" McGirt on March 6, 1993. Whitaker also has held the WBC, WBA IBF lightweight, IBF junior welterweight and WBA junior middleweight titles. He has been a champion every year from 1984 until 1998, when he didn't fight.

Trinidad, a 26-year-old Puerto Rican, barely broke a sweat in his only Garden appearance. He stopped Troy Waters of Australia in the first round Aug. 27, 1997.

Trinidad fought only once since — knocking out Mahenge Zulu in the fourth round last April 3 in Puerto Rico — because of litigation with promoter Don King. Trinidad lost in court and signed a $42.9 million multifight contract with King.

Trinidad doesn't think the layoff will affect his performance. A bigger question concerns Whitaker's 16 months of inactivity. Whitaker, who lost the WBC 147-pound title on controversial decision to Oscar De La Hoya on April 12, 1997, last fought when he outpointed Andre Pestriaev in a 12-round welterweight bout Oct. 17, 1997.

Whitaker tested positive for cocaine after that fight. He underwent drug and alcohol rehabilitation in 1998 when he tested positive in a random drug test and also was convicted of reckless driving for which he received a suspended sentence. He will not discuss his out-of-ring problems.

Whitaker is Trinidad's most prominent opponent.

"He's a little bit slower, but he's strong and he has experience," Trinidad said through an interpreter.

Whitaker has beaten such fighters as McGirt, Jose Luis Ramirez, Roger Mayweather, Azumah Nelson and got a draw with Julio Cesar Chavez in fight he seemingly dominated.

"He's not fighting Ramirez or Chavez — he's fighting Felix "Tito" Trinidad," the champion said.

The fight will be carried on HBO following a tape of WBC welterweight champion Oscar De La Hoya's split-decision win over Ike Quartey last Saturday. The telecast will begin at 9:30 p.m. EST.

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
THE Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9.
2 miles East of Town Center
256-6446
Hurry, Our 15 Week Special Ends Sunday
(1169)
AND GET A FREE HFC T-SHIRT

Some BODY to Love Week
February 22 - 26
Come visit the Campus Center table Monday - Thursday 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Upcoming Event:
Enlightened Eating Workshop:
Breaking Free From Food Hang Ups
March 3
Call Health Education @ 577-5181 for location
4:00-5:30 p.m.
April 7
2nd Floor of Gorman Hall
4:00-5:30 p.m.
Monday 22 7:00 p.m. Washington Tower
Understanding Eating Disorders Workshop
Recovering Bodies 9:00 p.m.
Overcoming Eating Disorders Channel 17
Tuesday 23 9:00 p.m. Channel 17
Why Diets Don't Work
Wednesday 24 4:00 - 5:30 p.m. UMS Room 302
Informational Session on Eating Disorders
How to help roommates and friends
The Famine Within 9:00 p.m. Channel 17
Thursday 25 7:00 - 9:00 p.m.
Mt. Holyoke College, Morrison Rm., Willits
The Body Politic: Women, Eating Disorder and Culture. Catherine Steiner-Adair.
Recovering Bodies 9:00 p.m
Overcoming Eating Disorders Channel 17

Apartment Rentals
Location Location Location
Check them out:
www.amherstlincolnrealty.com
or call
Lincoln Real Estate
253 - 7879

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n pleasant st amherst 256-0733
145 main st northampton 586-0155

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 E

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 586-3324 • M-Wed 10-6, Th-Sat 10-9, Sun 12-5
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3334 • M-Sat 10-6, Thurs 'til 8, Sun 12-5

ORDER YOUR CLASS RING NOW
WRAP IT UP
ORDER NOW AND RECEIVE BY GRADUATION
University Store
TODAY 11-3
On the Campus Center Concourse across from Store.
JOSTENS

Celtics get ready for a fresh start

Jason Owens

Rick Pitino learned some things about his Boston Celtics in the first four games of the NBA season. He answered several pressing questions that needed to be answered, and then, like an act of God, he gets a week off to mold his team into one that he thinks can win the toughest division in pro ball. Now it's time to play again.

In a bizarre shortened season in which each team will have to play 50 games in 90 days, Pitino has been awarded the luxury of what amounts to a mini-training camp at a time when many teams are in the midst of back to back games. If the first four games were any indication, the break is badly needed.

The week off, a result of scheduling snafoos created by the cancellation of the all-star game, has been a time of healing and learning for a team that showed flashes — but only flashes — of potential playoff-caliber basketball in its first week of play. The C's have been banged up — Ron Mercer and Walter McCarty have been nursing knee and foot injuries respectively — and need to get in shape if they're going to play the run and gun style that Pitino has envisioned for his team of young upstarts.

In the season opener against Toronto, Boston was taught a valuable lesson in competitive fire and general toughness when they ran into a couple of big, mean old men in the persons of Kevin Willis and Charles Oakley. It was no contest as the C's, minus Andrew DeClerq and a healthy Mercer, were manhandled by the Raptors in a bruising 103- 92 loss.

The following game against Cleveland was a difficult game to watch that the Celtics won. Both squads were plagued by sloppy play, with the C's managing to win a battle between a couple of tired, ugly teams. The sloppiness carried over to game three, where the Orlando Magic's guard duo of Nick Anderson and Penny Hardaway ran rampant on an overmatched Celtic defense that was badly in need of Mercer.

The last game before the C's second training camp went well, as Boston beat up on a Miami squad that was even more injury–plagued than they were, as Antoine Walker poured in 31 points and impressive rookie Paul Pierce came up with 15 fourth–quarter points in a solid 108-101 win.

The Miami game also proved to be the first Celtics fans saw of "the old Kenny Anderson", who's dazzling offensive wizardry of last year had been, to that point, largely absent. Anderson's 24 points showed that when he's in shape, good things can be expected from the C's starting point guard. His 14–for–14 performance from the line won the game in Miami, demonstrating that for all of his moodiness and a slow start, he should provide the type of veteran leadership the Celtics are going to need in the forth quarter of close games.

Looking towards the "second" start to the season Tuesday night in Sacramento, Pitino's immediate concern must be with getting healthy. He needs Mercer and McCarty back; Mercer for the high percentage shooting and defense he brings to the half-court game, and McCarty for the frenetic energy he contributes to the vaunted, though so–far–rarely– seen, Pitino press. Resting Walker has also been a priority for the coach. He has averaged 36 minutes a game and led the team in scoring in all four games.

What did the Celtics learned about themselves in the abbreviated start of the 1999 season? They learned that Pierce is the real deal. His 17 point, six rebound a game averages are impressive, but pale in comparison to what Pierce showed Celtics fans by demanding the ball in the fourth quarter of both Boston wins and making the clutch plays when the team's back was against the wall.

The C's learned that DeClerq might just have a couple of offensive moves to compliment his defense. They also learned that Antoine has improved his shot selection, hitting 46-percent from the field, but that at 51-percent, his foul shooting still leaves plenty to be desired.

The Celtics are not in "Coach P shape" — that is, they aren't going to be able to run and gun 48 minutes a game, pressing like maniacs. Still, they ought to be one of the better conditioned teams in the league, and their young legs should help with the insanity of the lock–out shortened schedule.

Can the Celtics make the playoffs in the Atlantic, a division in which each team has the potential to reach the post–season? Of course. In this season in which any team can beat any other, the C's have as good a chance as anybody. With Mercer returning to the lineup, Boston now boasts a healthy starting five, which is no small thing in a league that has been watching its superstars drop like flies.

So get used to it, Celtics fans — you're going to be seeing a lot of this team in the coming months. It will seem like they play every night at times. The only prediction is unpredictability, but after years of low expectations and bad results, a little unpredictability may be exactly what the doctor ordered.

Jason Owens is a Collegian correspondent.

Red Sox prepare to embark on a new season of baseball

Jen Cormier

Two days until spring training.

Ah, the countdown. Every year in the dead of winter, Boston sports fans participate in this ritualistic preparation for the Boys of Summer.

"This will be the year," Red Sox fans insist knowingly every February. This year, on the heels of the obnoxious Rich vs. Richer NBA lockout, and during a particularly monotonous Bruins season, fans cling to visions of the Red Sox season to come with even more of a fervor than before.

Sure, the Sox lost Mo Vaughn. Sure, their only significant signing of the off–season was Jose Offerman. Sure, they only have one starting pitcher under the age of 31. That didn't stop the wave of fans from braving the wind chill to wait in line for Sox tickets last month.

The Red Sox have forever been stitched into the fabric of Bostonian culture, tradition, and history. As fans, we are loyal, intense, passionate, addicted, and obsessed. Starting pitchers become household names. Fans can rattle off batting averages from the last five years. Parents let kids play hooky to attend Opening Day.

The Red Sox are Boston and Boston is the Red Sox. Let's just hope they don't make like the Patriots and split. With the Pats packing their bags for Hartford, Conn., many are wondering if the Sox are next in line.

Fenway Park is on its last lap. It is painful to watch the historic park stagger to its inevitable end. Fenway is where Babe Ruth and Ted Williams played. It's where Carlton Fisk hit a home run in the sixth game of the 1975 World Series. It's where (sigh) Bucky Dent knocked the Sox out of the pennant race with a single swing of the bat in 1978.

Unfortunately, Fenway has succumbed to old age. It is the smallest park in major league baseball, seating only 33,871. Structure and size have made Fenway obsolete. Even the sentimental ones are starting to admit this. Williams himself has said that he would not regret seeing the Sox relocate. Within the next couple of years, the Sox will have to move.

The question is where?

Massachusetts Speaker of the House Tom Finneran made it clear to Pats owner Bob Kraft that state taxes would not pay for a new football stadium. The result? Kraft went running into the open arms of Connecticut where the legislature was more than happy to make a rich man richer.

That's not to say that Finneran was wrong. The Connecticut deal involves a ludicrous amount of state tax money. Unfortunately, Finneran's move may have sent bad signals to Red Sox management as they search for a new park site. It also puts Finneran in an awkward position. How, people ask, can he say no to the Pats and yes to the Sox?

Very easily. Comparing the Pats and Sox is like comparing apples and oranges. Sure, it will be tough to say goodbye to the Patriots, but then again, the Patties were never the heart and soul of Boston sports. The Sox are.

Every year, fans immerse themselves in the numerous rituals and customs of the Boston Red Sox. The annual baseball writers' awards banquet in January. The equipment truck preparing to head down to Florida. The countdown. Reports from Fort Myers. All have become intertwined in Boston's plethora of tradition. If the Sox leave, they take with them a century of memories, traditions, and history. The void would be irreplaceable.

Sentiment is not the only reason to keep the Sox in Boston. Will McDonough of the Boston Globe recently pointed out that after Sox owners Tom and Jean Yawkey passed away, control of a trust fund and two charitable foundations were handed over to Sox management. These foundations now benefit the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, Rosie's Place, the Boston Symphony, and Boston College, to name a few. Not to mention the long–standing support the Jimmy Fund has received from the Sox. The Red Sox have always been known as an organization that gives back to the community. The Hub has reaped huge benefits from the presence of the team.

The Red Sox transcend baseball. This is not merely a pro– sports team. It is a subculture. And its future in Boston lies in the hands of the Massachusetts State Legislature. As for Sox fans, there is nothing we can do but hope the hometown kids stay put and look forward to the season ahead.

Two days and counting.

Jen Cormier is a Collegian correspondent

■ swim

continued from page 16

The Individual Medley and UMass' relay teams have continued to be strong, and that really isn't an area that UMass is worrying about.

The Minutemen also don't have to worry about their diving team, which is led by NCAA qualifier Ed Hefferon. Last year, Hefferon topped all divers except one in every diving event. This year he will be helped by two other freshmen, Chris Bishop and Mike Borzillerl.

Overall, the key to UMass' success will lie on Brannan and second tier swimmers. If Brannan can swim like he did in last year's All–Conference performance and if the second tier swimmers are able to step up to score points, UMass could seriously challenge for the conference title this year.

■ men's gym

continued from page 16

my primary goal," LaVallee said. "Although it would have been nice, my main focus was on qualifying for the two big meets. They would have given me valuable experience for things like the World Championships and beyond."

After his last two events, high bar (8.1) and floor (8.05), LaVallee ended up 14th — a great finish, but not within the top six like he had anticipated.

"Going into my last two events, I still had a good chance," LaVallee said. "I had some trouble on the high bar, but a fall on floor cost me the finish I was looking for. It was still an exciting experience, though. There were some great performances and the crowd was really into the meet."

LaVallee was a member of the U.S. National team from 1994-1996 and was just a little short of the Olympic Trials in 1996. The UMass junior has earned Academic All-American Honors two times and holds UMass all-time high scores on high bar (9.85) and parallel bars (9.725). He holds the second highest all-around score of 57.6 and fourth place records on floor (9.75), rings (9.825), and vault (9.65). He continues to give record-breaking performances despite having elbow surgery last year.

"I'm basically pain free now," LaVallee said. "The time I had to take off because of the surgery actually helped in a lot of ways. It gave me some time to look at my life in gymnastics differently, and I even lost some bulk weight during that time, which has since improved my performance on events like the pommel horse."

Although he finished 14th, LaVallee cannot be disappointed. He came very close to defeating former international competitors and he can be confident that he has the ability to place among the top at later meets. The next big qualifying meet is during the summer, when LaVallee hopes to go to the USA Championships once again.

In the meantime, he will travel with his UMass team this weekend to Michigan with the hope of moving up in the collegiate rankings and securing a spot at NCAA Regionals.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior Jeff LaVallee has been one of the most consistent performers this season for the UMass men's gymnastics team.

Massachusetts women's ice hockey squad skates away with a weekend split against BU and UML

By Melissa Sherman
Collegian Staff

Saturday, the Massachusetts women's hockey team suffered a tough loss in a close game against Boston University, which ended in a final score of 2–1.

The Minutewomen went into Saturday's game knowing that BU would prove to be a tough match. The talent of the teams is seen in the score.

Both teams were unable to score in the first period, but UMass' Janine Denoncourt scored the first goal of the game with 2:52 left in the second period. BU then came back to tie the game on a goal with 1:01 remaining in the middle frame.

With a tie game moving into the third, either team could have stepped up and made their move. That is exactly what BU did, not enabling UMass to take advantage of their power play. BU's strong goalie and solid team, top to bottom, landed them a victory in the end.

UMass needed to be stronger. They were given opportunities and they just couldn't capitalize on them. A power play in the third period was the final shot for the Minutewomen at evening up the score, but they just couldn't get it together. UMass eventually pulled their goalie, allowing six skaters to try and gain control of the puck in the last minutes of the power play, hoping to beat the clock and BU, but they came up short.

"We missed a lot of chances and failed to execute valuable plays. Our power play needs some fine–tuning," said UMass head coach Scott Kemp after the loss. "We suffered a tough loss, not necessarily a bad one."

"We need to put this behind us and get ready for UMass–Lowell tomorrow night," continued Kemp. "We are usually a third period team and we were sluggish in the third, not coming out with the same intensity as we did in the first and second. We skated below them and that cost us."

Sunday the Minutewoman traveled to Tsongas Arena where they were able to put the BU game behind them and capture a 5–1 victory against the UMass–Lowell Riverhawks.

The Minutewomen have defeated Lowell twice before this season by scores of 4–0 and 3–2. Lowell has some strong players and has improved throughout the season.

To win the game, Minutewomen needed to step up their defense and play with the same intensity as they did in the first two periods of Saturday's game against Boston University.

Although UMass was missing four key players due to the flu, they managed to capture their biggest margin of victory against the Riverhawks.

Junior captain Molly Sherman scored the first goal for the Minutewomen with an assist by senior Kathy Mireault. The women came out strong and stayed strong, really putting Lowell away in the third period. Although the women were down three defensemen, they played a physical game and threw the competition off.

The Minutewomen split net time between goaltenders Mindy Corr and Erin Murphy. Both were able to hold off the Riverhawks.

In a weekend of victory and defeat the Minutewomen bring their record to 9-4. As the season nears the end the team will look to stay focused in the final weeks of the season. They will travel to Worcester this weekend to participate in the Regional Club Tournament at Holy Cross.

dailycollegian.com now ofor breakfast

EROTICA
Get it at
"Adult's Only"
Videos & Magazines
8 Russell Rd.
Hadley
585-0416

DUNKIN' DONUTS
MULLINS CENTER PRACTICE ICE RINK
For your Sweetie...
$1 OFF
50 Munchkins
Available at UMASS locations. One coupon per customer, per visit. Offers may not be combined. Shop retains coupon. Taxes not included.
LIMIT ONE OFFER
EXPIRES 2/24/99

DELI CLERKS
Immediate openings for weekday and weekend shifts at our Hadley Cumberland Farms/Summit Subs. We offer steady employment, competative wages, 90 day pay increase and benefits. Apply in person or call 1-800-828-0869 x-7922.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
✔ Complete Bartending Course
✔ On Campus
✔ For a Fraction of the Cost of other schools
✔ National Certification Available
✔ Hands on Pouring Lab
✔ Tips on how to get a fun, high paying job
Free Info Session
Wed, Feb. 24th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program With valid college Student I.D.
1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Stretch Poplin
ZAMM
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

UMass Rugby FEB 22 Student Union: Colonial Room 7:00 PLAY RUGBY!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Pufton Village partially furnished avaiible immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

Amherst center. 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas, heat, hardwood floors. April showing for June and September leases. Lincoln Real Estate. 253-7879

3 Bedroom Condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement. 1/2 mile to campus on bus route. April showing for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate 253-7879

AUTO FOR SALE

85 Jeep CJ7, 4-cyl, 4-spd, 73k miles, Hunter Green, soft top, New Alpine stero rims, 31" tires, Call Matt 253-9170

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag. black $3500 584-6090

'95 FORO ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer. 546-5366

COMPUTERS

AST 133 MHz pentium with 16GB, windows 95, Netscape, microsoft word, Lotus Applications, plus more. $700.00 or B/D. Call Noah 546-2147 Free delivery within UMass or nearby Amherst area!

Packard Bell 8kspeecdCD-RDM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

COMPUTERS

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

LEADERS NEEDED: Summer teenage bicycling trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, Ashfield Rd., CONWAY, MA 01341 (800) 343-6132

COUNSELORS, TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: All Competitive Team Sports, All Water Sports. PLUS: Camping/Hiking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Riflery, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top Salaries, Awesome Facilities, Rm/Bd/Lndry, Travel. CALL Steve Rubin at (800) 473-6104, or E-MAIL COB-BACHIEF@AOL.COM

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA, overnight Jewish Federation camp- 3 hours from NYC- General, Sports, Drama, H2O & Arts. 1-800-973-3866 poyntell@ix.netcom.com or www.poyntelle.com

Are you HIP, and in the scene? Give us a call at (212) 615-6773

Co-Managers Wanted Campus Design & Copy is seeking highly motivated students for Co-Manager positions in a student-run collective. Applications available at CD&C,2nd floor Student Union Application Deadline Feb 16

EMPLOYMENT

Work in the Music Business! Seeking college reps to work on grassroots marketing campaigns for emerging recording artists. Fax resume to Mike Nowicki at (212) 629-3605 or email miken@metroent.com

PRESTIGIOUS NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool Musical Director and General Counselors. INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd TRAIL'S END CAMP 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY—Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)—Sports oriented, Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or wayneboys@aol.com.

OJ Wanted For Mobile Parties For greater Springfield area experience helpfull DWN Transportation needed Call 413-525-8260

ACTION JOBS-Listings of America's Best Adventure Jobs: Alaska, Adventure Travel, Cruise Ships, Forest Fire Fighting, Sailing, White Water Rafting, Backpacking & more... www.actionjobs.com

EMPLOYMENT

FREE RADIO +$1250! Fundraiser open to student groups & organizations. Earn $3-$5 per Visa/MC app. We supply all material at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box 1-800-932-0528 x 65. www.ocmconcepts.com

Sbarro's Restaurant at Hampshire Mall needs closers. Flexible hours Good pay Apply in person

Housework good pay near by. Car needed. 548-9635

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Dur CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sounds: Rave to dorm party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413) 737-8561

OJ for Hire: Dj Fooz is now booking for Spring Semester Call Tim 549-9127

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Round-Trip air. Logan to Miami. During Spring-Break $100 Mike 6-3236

Full size mattress and boxspring great condition $150/bo 367-0095

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

GREEK AFFAIRS

Sigma Kappa Open Rush 19 Allen St. Behind Hillel 2/17 8-10 2/18 6-8

HEALTH & BEAUTY

AMAZING METABOLISM BREAKTHRDUGH Lose 10-200 lbs. Natural,safe,easy. Free samples.call 877-792-1234

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

LOST & FOUND

Found necklace Describe and receive 6-2611

PERSONALS

Make Love Easy. For the Valentine's Day impaired. Electronic cards, animated kisses, relationship advice, love in the news, discussion: www.studentadvantage.com/cupid

PERSONALS

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

Your Ad could fill this Space!!

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center 545-1995

Do you need to pay off your bills once and for all? Personal, Debt Consolidation. Credit Card Repair Call 1-888-780-8082

TICKETS

WWF Springfield 2/21 1-V11 Rows $45-85 each call 203-730-1182

TRAVEL

GET THE HELL OUT OF HERE! Mexico, The Carribean or Central America $199 round trip. Europe $169 one way. Dther worldwide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000

BOSTON SPRING BREAK '99 To Mazatian from $599 To Cancun from $369 7 nights, 5 to 14 FREE meals 10 to 32 hours of FREE drinks CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463 Visit our web site www.college-tours.com

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Specials!Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Panama City vacations! Free Parties - No Cover. Best beachfront hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $835. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplashtours.com

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 www.classtravel.com

SPRINGBREAK BEACHES Daytona, Panama City, Padre, Miami, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, etc. Best hotels, prices, parties. Browse www.icpt.com. Reps earn cash, free trips Call Inter- Campus 800-327-6013

TRAVEL

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

Are you Graduating? Or just moving out?

Do you know who you are going to turn over your lease to?

Would you like to figure that out?

Place an Ad in The Classifieds and You will find THOUSANDS of people!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, FEB. 18

Lecture — The GLBT Studies Lunch Lecture Series presents "Romeo and Juliet: Heterosexual Romance a Gay Icon?" at 12:30 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center.

Workshop — A multi-session workshop on communication and literacy skills relating to the Massachusetts Educator Certification Test will begin tonight from 7–9 p.m. in room 20 of Furcolo Hall. The remaining workshops will be Feb. 25, March 4, and March 11.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

FRIDAY, FEB. 19

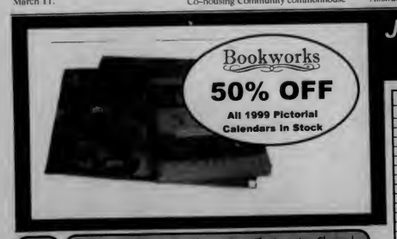
Film — The Western Mass. Simple Living Network presents a free video series beginning tonight at 7:30 p.m. with a film entitled "Advertising and the End of the World". The film is done by UMass professor Sut Jhally and will be shown at the Pioneer Valley Co-housing Community commonhouse on Pulpit Road in North Amherst.

Lecture — As part of the Geoscience Lecture Series, a lecture entitled "The Topography of Mars" will be given by Maria Zuber at 3:30 p.m. in room 136 of Morrill II South. A reception will follow.

Lecture — Sandra Richter will give a lecture entitled "Bible History: Fact or Folklore? What Really Happened to King Hezekiah?" at 7:15 p.m. in the Chapin Chapel.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1



Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.–5 p.m. Call 577–5181 for more details.

Services — Accounting services from the UMass Accounting Department will be working out of the Hampshire Mall. It is free and open to the public, and open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4–7 p.m. in the Hampshire Mall Community Room, and on Wednesdays from 6–9 p.m. on the Hampshire Mall Stage.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6–7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577–5316 if interested.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

University Store — Not like a mall... Better.

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 18, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Wishbone (R)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Africa's Champagne Trains		Mystery! "Heat of the Sun" (R)		Keeping Up	Wall to Wall	Is It Legal?	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3 News	3 News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Turks "Lend Me Your Ears" (R)		48 Hours (In Stereo) (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Turks "Lend Me Your Ears" (R)		48 Hours (In Stereo) (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	World's Deadliest Storms (R)		Storm of the Century (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3) (R)				Nightline (R)	Nanny (R)
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny (R)	Friends (R)	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx (R)	Brother Harvey	For Your Love	News (R)		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Friends (R)	Jesse (R)	Frasier (R)	Veronica's Cl.	ER "The Storm" (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Lane	"The Last Man on Planet Earth" (1999) Julie Bowen (R)						Newsradio (R)	Married...With
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	Friends (R)	Jesse (R)	Frasier (R)	Veronica's Cl.	ER "The Storm" (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	10	Simpsons (R)	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	World's Wildest Police Videos		Most Shocking Medical Videos		News		Friends (R)	Mad Abt. You
WWLP	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Friends (R)	Jesse (R)	Frasier (R)	Veronica's Cl.	ER "The Storm" (R)		News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		The Old Hse.	Dra. on Call	Mystery! "Heat of the Sun" (R)		Jonathan Creek (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB	40	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	World's Deadliest Storms (R)		Storm of the Century (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3) (R)				News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Seinfeld (R)		NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Ottawa Senators. (Live)					Mad Abt. You	Frasier (R)	Cheers (R)
WTBS	22	Family Matters	Family Matters	Hosewives (R)	Hosewives (R)	Roseanne (R)	WCW Thunder (R)	WCW Thunder (R)		a.k.a. "Striptease" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Demi Moore		Daily Show	Stein's Money
A&E	51	Northern Exposure (R)		Law & Order "Ritual" (R)		Biography: Dela Reese		Unexplained: "Sacred Societies"		Murder, She Wrote "Dead Eye"		Law & Order "Discord" (R)
CNN	29	Worldview (R)	Moneyline Newshour (R)		Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Gallagher: Melon Crazy (R)		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	30	Saturday Night Live (R)		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★½ "Mo' Money" (1992, Comedy) Damon Wayans.		Raging Planet "Earthquake" (R)		Into the Unknown (R)		Terror Technicians (R)
DISC	49	New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery: Deadly Nail		Terror Technicians (R)				College Basketball: DePaul at Southern Mississippi. (Live)			Sportscenter
ESPN	21	Up Close	Sportscenter			College Basketball: Michigan State at Michigan. (Live)				College Basketball: DePaul at Southern Mississippi. (Live)		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
LIFE	62	Ellen (R)	Ellen (R)	Party of Five "Ready or Not" (R)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) (R)		Out of Circle" (1998, Drama) Terri Polo, Corbin Bernsen				Blame Game	Loveline
MTV	53	(5:30) Jams Countdown		Beavis-Butt.	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Boardblast	Love Lucy (R)	Rewitched
NICK	55	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Thornberrys	Catdog	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons (R)	Laverne	Twilight Zone	Star Trek (R)
SCIFI	60	Quantum Leap (R)		Xmas Stories	Star Trek "I, Mudd"			Highlander: The Series (R)		Friday the 13th: The Series (R)		Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	You're So Vain (R)		Medical Detect	Without Warn.	Shadow of the Assassin
TNT	54	Dve South "Eclipse" (In Stereo)		ER "Welcome Back, Carter" (R)		★★★ "The Deliberate Stranger" (1986, Drama) Mark Harmon, Frederic Forrest.							Undercover
USA	59	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★★½ "The Cina Syndrome" (1979, Drama) Jack Lemmon, Jn Stereo) (R)				BAMM: First	Shock Video 3: Turn-On TV (R)
HBO	43	(5:30) "Major League III" (1994)		★★ "Grev" (1997, Fantasy) Shaquille O'Neal. PG-13 (R)				"Black and White" (1998) Gina Gershon. NR (R)
MAX	44	(5:30) ★★★ "Clear and Present Danger" (1994) Harrison Ford (R)				★★★ "Wild at Heart" (1990, Drama) Nicolas Cage, Jn Stereo) (R)				★★★ "The Rainmaker" (1997, Drama) Matt Damon. PG-13 (R)
SHOW	46	★★ "Cops and robbersons" (1994, Comedy) Chevy Chase. PG				★★★ "Narrow Margin" (1990) Gene Hackman, R. Movie News				Line's (R)		Rude Awaken.	★★★ "Heist Epic" (1996) R

HSCN Bulletin Board — Hartford
CBS/3 — Hartford
CBS/4 — Boston
ABC/3 — Boston
PBS/57 — Springfield
Sandance — Monte Ch.
UPN/20 — Hartford
Weather Channel
NBC/30 New Britain
Fox/61 — Hartford
PBS/24 — Hartford
WCCH & HSCN
International
UMass Academic TV
WB/New Haven
HSCN Programming
The Learning Channel
UVC-TV19
ABC/40 — Springfield
Gavel to Gavel
NBC/22 — Springfield
Bloomberg Financial
CTN
TBS
BET
TV Land
Univision
Comedy Central Cartoon
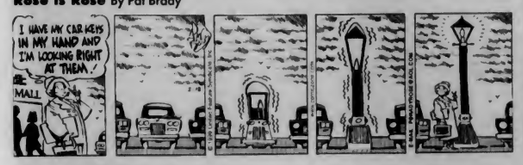
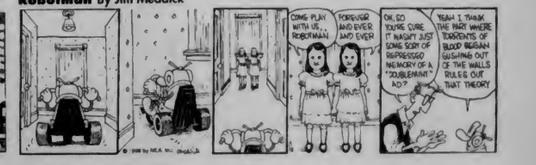
Much Music

VonHoss By Joseph Hession

Down by the Waterline By Charles L. Thayer



Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.



Co-op Hip-Hop Hooray! By Stacey and Jason

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Dilbert By Scott Adams

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Remain level–headed today, and you may find yourself in a long–sought position of greater authority tomorow. Surprises come in bundles at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Someone is likely to go out of his or her way for you today. Be willing ot express your gratitude and return the favor because what goes around, comes around.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You'll benefit from fresh air and a feeling of freedom and expansiveness today. Personal power is on the rise at this time, so don't waste it being idle.

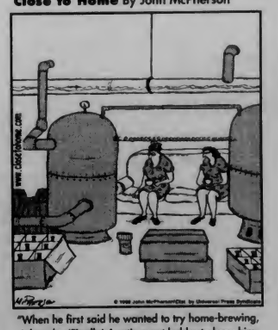
TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You're in no mood to let someone else tell you what to do today, and if anyone tries it's almost certain to result in fireworks. Try to control your temper.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may be quite restless today, but you can't be rooted and stabilized by a timely connection with someone from afar. The encounter may be brief, so don't take it for granted.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You're likely to find yourself at cross–purposes today not with anyone else, but with yourself. That dual nature is rearing its ugly head again.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — A good friend may hold the key to unknown passions today, and today may be the day to unlock the door and explore what lies over the threshold.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Keep things simple today, and don't let anyone talk you out of doing things in a straightforward, honest manner. You have to trust your own instincts.



LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Dispense information freely, but be sure that what you have to tell is accurate and up–to–date. Keeping secrets is certainly ill–advised.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You are not likely to be very tolerant of those who are not willing of give you your due today. Indeed, it may be time to "call it quits." Know when to get out before it's too late.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Trouble lurks around the next corner and is bound to strike should you cast your eyes away from your primary goal even for a moment today. Stay focused!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Take care that you are not brooding or holding a grudge today. Let anger or resentment run its course without fueling it unnecessarily.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Quote of the Day

"They're multipurpose. Not only do they put the clips on, but they take them off."

-Pratt &Witney spokesperson explaining why the company charged the Air Force nearly $1000 for an ordinary pair of pliers.

"When he first said he wanted to try home-brewing, I thought, 'Finally! A retirement hobby to keep him occupied and give me some peace and quiet.'"

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Pot Pie
VegetableCroissant Sandwich*

DINNER
Roast Tom Turkey
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole*
Hot & Spicy Pasta

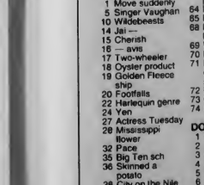
Worcester

LUNCH
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Pot Pie
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich*

DINNER
Roast Tom Turkey
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole*
Hot & Spicy Pasta

Hampshire

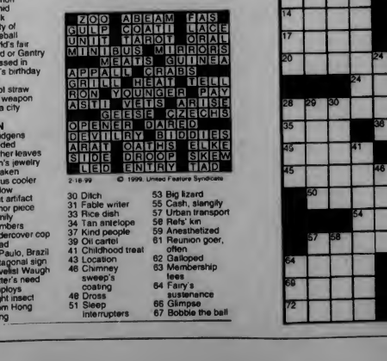
LUNCH
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Pot Pie
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich*



DINNER
Roast Tom Turkey
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole*
Hot & Spicy Pasta

Berkshire

LUNCH
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Pot Pie
Berkshire Breakfast Sandwich
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich*



DINNER
Roast Tom Turkey
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole*
Hot & Spicy Pasta

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

ACROSS
1 Move suddenly
5 Singer Vaughan
10 Wildebeests
14 Jai —
15 Cherish
16 — avis
17 Two-wheeler
18 Oyster product
19 Golden Fleece ship
20 Footfalls
22 Harlequin genre
24 Yen
27 Actress Tuesday
28 Mississippi flower
32 Pace
35 Big Ten sch
36 Skinned a potato
38 City on the Nile
40 Cultivate
42 Votes in favor
44 Lose one's balance
45 Rings around the moon
47 Cleaning agents
49 Lincoln, informally
50 Drip-dry material
52 Fruitful
54 Cloth-making apparatus
56 Male animal
57 Fee for students
60 Basketball position
64 Hurried
65 Dunk
68 Martly of baseball
69 World's fair
70 Fudd or Gentry
71 Dressed in one's birthday suit
72 Bit ol straw
73 Old weapon
74 Iowa city

DOWN
1 Smidgens
2 Landed
3 Gather leaves
4 Man's jewelry
5 Weaken
6 Citrus cooler
7 Bellow
8 Flint artifact
9 Armor piece
10 Family members
11 Undercover cop
12 Goad
13 — Paulo, Brazil
21 Octagonal sign
23 Novelist Waugh
25 Potter's need
26 Employs
28 Night insect
29 From Hong Kong
30 Ditch
31 Fable writer
33 Rice dish
34 Tan antelope
37 Kind people
39 Oil cartel
41 Childhood treat
43 Location
46 Chimney sweep's coating
48 Dross
51 Sleep interrupters
53 Big lizard
55 Cash, slangily
57 Urban transport
58 Rets' kin
59 Anesthetized
61 Reunion goer, often
62 Galloped
63 Membership fees
64 Fairy's sustenance
66 Glimpse
67 Bobble the ball

Night Editor — Mike Perry
Photo Technician — Kara Stokes
Copy Editor — Seth Koenig
Production Supervisor — Joseph D. Servitch
Production Staff — Lisa Metcalf, Jeanette Santora

Colonials, King crown UM, 78–72

Seniors sit as Kirkland and Cruz cement futures

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

This game was as much about the future of UMass basketball as it was the present.

While seniors Charlton Clarke and Lari Ketner watched from the bench nearly the entire second half, the underclassmen provided the leadership which the older players lacked. The Minutemen may have fallen to host George Washington 78–72 last night, but they managed to leave their mark for next season.

After falling behind 24–5 to begin the game, UMass (11– 14, 7–6 Atlantic 10) coach Bruiser Flint could no longer stomach the ineffective and lethargic play of Clarke and Ketner, and quickly looked to his younger reserves to mount the comeback. Despite the early deficit, the Minutemen rallied throughout the remainder of the contest, eventually cutting the lead to five points, 48–43 in the second half.

Perhaps the most unheralded of all the main ingredients in the UMass recipe for success was sophomore guard Rafael Cruz, who replaced a hobbled Clarke and a careless Jonathan Depina for his most significant contribution of the season. In seventeen minutes on the floor, Cruz sparked the Minuteman comeback with five assists, five points, three rebounds, one steal, and only one turnover.

Among the other unlikely game–breakers for UMass were forwards Winston Smith and Kitwana Rhymer.

"I just went with the guys who wanted to play hard tonight... [Rafael Cruz] came out and he was ready for his opportunity." Flint said. "He played well. Tonight he handled the ball and did some good things for us. I was really happy for him."

In addition to quality minutes on the offensive end, Smith picked up the slack defensively for the Minutemen. After Mack was whistled for his fourth foul early in the second half, Smith was given the assignment of guarding GW (17– 6, 11–2 A–10) phenom and Atlantic 10 leading scorer Shawnta Rogers. He and Monty Mack held the Colonial guard to 17 points, only four of which came while Smith covered him during the final frame.

"He did a great job on Rogers," Flint said of Smith. "In the second half, they actually scored most of their points on foul shots. We did a great job of shutting him down in the second half."

GW sophomore guard Mike King paced the Colonials with 22 points but did not overshadow the two other bright spots for the future of UMass — juniors Chris Kirkland and Mack. Mack scored 24 points, 22 in the second half, and Kirkland exploded for a career–high 26 points along with 12 rebounds.

"I hate to say this because the kid had a great game, but he should have had 40 [points]," Flint said of Kirkland, who also missed some shots beneath the basket. "He had a great game. He carried us."

As far as Clarke and Ketner are concerned, Flint would not speculate on whether or not they would lose playing time from their lack of effort. He did not, however, hesitate to criticize them after the game.

"I've got no words for my seniors. They didn't deserve to be on the floor tonight, so I didn't play them. That's the bottom line."

Excerpts from WHMP contributed to this report.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

With last night's game against George Washington behind them, Rafael Cruz and the Massachusetts men's basketball team will begin to focus on Saturday's game with Xavier.

Minutewomen swimmers off to compete in A–10 championship

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

It's sink or swim time for the swimmers and divers of the Atlantic 10 as they prepare for the conference championships beginning today and running through Saturday.

The Massachusetts women's swim team arrived in Buffalo, NY on Tuesday and have had time to orientate themselves to the Flickinger Aquatic Center.

Last year, the Minutewomen finished in the middle of a pack of nine schools, placing fourth with 278 points. Virginia Tech claimed first place with 534.50 points followed by St. Bonaventure (527.50) and George Washington (351.50).

Looking to upstart the competition is junior Elizabeth Risotto, who has a lock on the best time in the conference this year in the 100 yard–backstroke (58.43). The Setauket, NY native currently has the second–best time in the 200 y–back (2:04.87) as well. Freshman Andrea Kazanjian swam the second–best time in the 100 y–butterfly, finishing in 58.35.

This week's A–10 Rookie of the Week, Anne Dettloff, holds the top team times in the 100 y–freestyle, 200 y–free, 500 y–free and the 1000 y–free, and looks to make her mark in her first collegiate conference championships.

A menagerie of all–around swimmers, including senior captains Shana Strothers, Amy Mullen and Julie Alexander; Sarah Newell, Becky Hunnewell, Lia Lansky, Julie Dragon, Marci Hupp and Kazanjian are all versatile swimmers who could place in many events.

The diving squad will be represented by senior Kim Schadt, sophomore Robin Velona and freshman Signe Dahlquist.

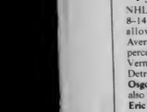
UMass has had almost two weeks of tapered workouts and no competition since Feb. 6 when they downed Fordham, 131–97. The Minutewomen closed out the regular season with a 9–2 record in dual–meets, one win shy of the 10–3 record the 1996–97 team set.

The 1998 A–10 meet was highlighted by new individual and team relay records. Andrea Spencer had a terrific performance last year when the junior took second in the 200 y–Individual Medley, setting a new UMass record of 2:07.50. The Wilmington, Del. native also placed fifth in the 100 y–butterfly with a time of 58.59.

The 800 y–free relay team of Alexander, Hupp, senior captain Amy Mullen and former UMass swimmer Barbara Hickey set a new school record with a time of 7:46.57, good for fourth place in the meet.

Also, the relay team of Shannon Rowell, Newell, Dragon and Spencer finished in second place in the 200 y–medley in a time of 1:49.60.

Next Thursday marks the beginning another three–day meet, the ECAC Championships, scheduled to be held at the Gloucester County Aquatic Center in Gloucester, NJ.



News and notes from the NHL

The Chicago Blackhawks finished things off the same way they started in November of 1931, by defeating the Toronto Maple Leafs 6–2 in the final game at Toronto's famed Maple Leaf Gardens — ending a seventy–two–year streak for the Hawks. The Blackhawks were also the first opposing team to play at the famed Gardens and won that first contest 2–1.

Maple Leaf Gardens closed on Saturday night, making it the last of the original six buildings to close. The Hawks' Bob Probert holds the priviledge of scoring the last goal at the Maple Leaf Gardens. The Leafs will soon begin action at the new Air Canada Centre.

Other news in the NHL:

• San Jose Sharks goalie Mike Vernon was named NHL Player of the Week for Feb. 8–14. Vernon went 3–0 for the week, allowing a 1.00 Goals Against Average (GAA). He also had a save percentage of .961 and one shutout. Vernon edged former teammate and Detroit Red Wings netminder Chris Osgood, who was 4–0 this week with a 1.75 GAA. He also beat out Ron Francis of the Carolina Hurricanes and Eric Lindros of the Philadelphia Flyers, who each collected three goals and four assists in three games this weekend.

Paul Teves
CID

• The Florida Panthers have fallen on hard times. After being a devastating force upon arrival in Florida, Pavel Bure has been on the shelf for the past two weeks. Bure has been injured since Feb. 5, when he injured a muscle above his calf and behind his knee.

Besides Bure, the Panthers will be without the services of defenseman Bret Hedican, who has been placed on injured reserve after suffering an eye injury on Feb. 11 against Ottawa. He will be out for another five to seven days.

The Panthers are also dealing with a rib injury to Sean Burke, who is listed as day–to–day. To fill the void, the Panthers have called up goalie Todd MacDonald from the AHL's Beast of New Haven.

• Also on the major injury front is the injury to Dave Andreychuk of the New Jersey Devils. Andreychuk was expected to return soon, and had been skating recently. But the surgery that Andreychuk underwent for his broken foot gave him an infection for which he was hospitalized recently. Andreychuck, who has been out since Jan. 5, is looking to return to the lineup by March, but will need doctors' approval before he can resume skating with the team. The Devils will need Andreychuck's contribution in order to make a solid run at the No. 1 seed in the Eastern Conference.

• The Calgary Flames, who have been extremely hot lately, going 4–1–4 in their last nine games, have put all rumors of a fire sale to rest by signing defenseman Phil Housley. Nine games ago, playoff teams were looking at the Flames as a club that might be looking to trade key players like Housley and Theo Fleury, but with their recent upswing and the inking of Housley to a three–year–deal, it looks like the Flames will fight for that last playoff spot, which is only four points away. The Flames will also have Housley for the next three seasons. The veteran has tallied four goals and 50 assists in 55 games for Calgary.

• In other trade news, it looks like another veteran defenseman Chris Chelios will be staying in the "Windy City," as he denounced rumors of being traded to the Philadelphia Flyers. Chelios further denounced Flyers GM Bobby Clarke, telling him to "shut up," for the rumors of his trade are not true.

The Washington Capitals might be looking to deal another veteran from the D.C. area. The Capitals might be looking to add center Adam Oates to the already stacked lineup of the Phoenix Coyotes. The Coyotes are looking to add the now–healthy Oates to a potent lineup which includes Jeremy Roenick, Keith Tkachuk, Oleg Tverdovsky, Teppo Numminen and netminder Nikolai Khabibulin.

Khabibulin has a 1.84 GAA to go along with 23 wins. The team is looking strong and the possible addition of Oates would make them a serious challenge for the Dallas Stars.

• In other random trade news, the Detroit Red Wings are looking for a veteran defenseman to lead them into the playoffs. With Housley now signed, the Wings are looking at Capitals defenseman Mark Tinordi or Senator Igor Kravchuk. Neither team has made a commitment to the Red Wings, but if one of them had to go my guess would be Tinordi, seeing as how Ottawa is atop the Northeast Division.

Paul Teves is a Collegian columnist.

Minutewomen ready for Senior Night

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

Emotions will run wild tonight at the William D. Mullins Center as the Massachusetts women's basketball team will host St. Bonaventure for "Senior Night" at 7 P.M. (WMUA 91.1 FM).

Before the contest, UMass will honor the contributions of forwards Tez Kraft and Lucia Madajova and center Yolanda Rayside.

"These are three kids that have given us everything they possibly could," Massachusetts Coach Joanie O'Brien said. "I could not be more proud of what they have done for us and what they have accomplished for themselves."

Kraft, a fifth year senior, is currently leading the Minutewomen in scoring and rebounding with 13.5 and 7.5 per game respectively.

The 5–foot–11 forward has exhibited tremendous ability to play the game from both the inside and outside, leading O'Brien to proclaim her the most versatile player she has coached.

Madajova, perhaps the most improved player on the squad, has started 21 of 24 games this season after only compiling 281 minutes in the first three years of her UMass career.

After battling through injuries over the past few seasons, "Lutes" has more than risen to the occasion this year, by averaging 6 points and 7.4 rebounds a contest.

Rayside, who led UMass in rebounding the past two seasons, is currently sidelined with a separated shoulder, but may indeed make a miraculous comeback this season.

"The little tiny hope we had that Yolanda would play again for us may come true," O'Brien said. "She may not be ready for Thursday night, but hopefully we can get her in the game against Fordham on Sunday."

The Fordham game will be the final homecoming for Rayside, a Bronx, NY native.

After acknowledging their graduating contingent, the Minutewomen will turn their attention to the task at hand, which is a gritty Bonnies team in dire need of an upset.

The Bonnies are currently 10–14 overall and 4–10 in the Atlantic 10, but with the bottom of the A–10 East jumbled up together, they will be hungry to close out their season with two wins.

Temple was an unsuspecting victim for the Bonnies last Sunday as they were trounced 84–50.

"They have not had a tremendous amount of success this year, but they can flat–out score," O'Brien said of St. Bonaventure.

UMass will be particularly aware of forward Hilary Waltman's presence, as she averaged just over 2[illegible] game.

Waltman notched 19 points and five assists against the Minutewomen in a 70–63 UMass win on Jan. 28 in Olean, NY.

UMass was paced by a solid all–around effort in that game, as six players reached double–figures in scoring, led by Nekole Smith with 17 points.

On a night when the seniors will clearly be the focus of attention, O'Brien stresses that the play of her two freshman centers could be pivotal.

"Nekole and Caroline's (Nehls) play is vital for us down the stretch," O'Brien said. "Neither of them, as freshmen, are used to playing this much basketball, so it is very important that they are physically ready to help us the rest of the way."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Senior Tez Kraft will play her final home game for the Massachusetts women's basketball team tonight against St. Bonaventure.

UMass' LaVallee places among the nation's best

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

While the rest of the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team had no major competition last weekend, junior Jeff LaVallee flew to Las Vegas where he competed in the 1999 Winter Cup Challenge. The Connecticut native went head–to–head against some of the toughest competitors in the nation, such as former Olympians Blaine Wilson and John Macready, and walked away with an impressive 14th place finish.

The meet was divided into two days, the preliminaries and the finals. Out of 68 gymnasts, LaVallee placed fifth overall on the first day of competition, passing Macready and many other 2000 Olympic hopefuls. He had an all–around score of 53.1 after preliminaries, with a comfortable lead of about 0.5 ahead of his next competitor.

"I was really happy with my performance," LaVallee said. "Being fifth after the first day gave me a lot of confidence. I knew that my scores wouldn't carry over to the next day, but I was sure that I could have a repeat performance."

And perform well he did with an 8.8 on the pommel horse, an 8.95 on vault, and seventh place finishes on the still rings (8.55) and parallel bars (9.1). Going into high bar, LaVallee was in sixth place — a rank that would secure him a spot at the VISA American Cup as well as an International meet against China and Romania.

"Making the National team wasn't

Turn to MEN'S GYM, page 13

Minutemen are looking for 4th straight title

By Jimmy Chen
Collegian Staff

After coming off a good meet against Fordham in the regular season finale, the Massachusetts men's swim team (7–4) will travel to Buffalo, NY today to compete in the Atlantic 10 championships.

The Minutemen will face strong competition from Xavier, URI, and George Washington, last year's runner–up. However, UMass coach Russ Yarworth remained optimistic.

"We are three–time Atlantic 10 Champions," Yarworth said. "No one messes with us."

Despite injuries and drop outs, the Minutemen were still able to pull out a winning regular season. Thanks to Yarworth, who somehow dug deep into his swimmers' hearts and brought the best out of them. However, it was the swimmers themselves who never gave up. Looking into their eyes, one sees a wounded yet focused and confident tiger.

Talking about experiences, UMass had seen all the pressures being presented. Being home only three times in their 11 meets, UMass understood what it was like to swim in a hostile atmosphere. Besides that, five key members of the team, seniors B.J. Brannan and Brian Wisniewski, junior Ed Hefferon and sophomores Chris Arsenault and Billy Brown, had 13 years of championship experiences between them.

Together, they also recorded nine top–three performances in last year's A–10 tournament, in which UMass edged second place George Washington by 3.5 points.

Moreover, as history has shown, UMass has always peaked at the tournament. Thus, with heart and experience, UMass has all the ingredients to win the tournament. Yet, at the same time, there are holes in the UMass lineup.

In the past, sprint freestyle had always been the strongest part of the UMass swimming program due to last year's dynamic duo of Sean Anderson and Matt Davey. This year, freshman Carlos Ramos and Josh Kimball, along with sophomore Mike Sabina and freshman sensation Ryan Rose, have helped rebuild UMass' sprint freestyle lineup. However, as of now, only Rose came close to Anderson's time, and Rose's top time was nearly a second behind Anderson's.

While the sprint freestyle team is on a rebound, distance freestyle has also had a big hole to fill. Last year's departing senior Simon Flynn was greatly missed, and Brannan, who had been bothered by injuries, had yet to top his top mark from last year. And to make matters even worse, Brannan's top times this year are nearly 20 seconds behind what he had last year in 1,000 free and 1,650 free. The only backup for Brannan is junior Bryan Grimes, and he has yet to show the potential to come in one of the top–three spots in the Atlantic 10.

In the breaststroke, Brown has been phenomenal, but others have not. Sabina and freshman Greg Wood's top times are way behind Brown's. That may hurt UMass especially in team scoring, despite how fast Brown may swim.

In the butterfly, last year's All–A–10 conference selection Matt Andrews' departure was perhaps the most devastating loss for UMass. Leading solely in the fly last year, Andrews left a big shoe for Arsenault and senior Geoff Gear to fill. However, a few freshmen have also been stepping up. Kimball and Ramos will be looking to score some points for UMass this weekend.

In the backstroke, Wisniewski, a potential MVP of the season, has led a strong group of veterans. Senior tri–captain Dave Koritkoski, who just came back from an injury, will add much needed help for the Minutemen.

Turn to SWIM, page 13

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 18 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Friday, February 19, 1999

UMass admissions procedures must change; Supreme Court rules against race preference

By George A. Chidi Jr.
Collegian Correspondent

Not long ago, California's state school system ended affirmative action in their admissions process, beginning the spread of legal debate on the merit of diversity versus quotas in public education.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, Javier Cevallos, called it "the evil wind blowing from the west."

The "evil wind" caught the University of Massachusetts last week.

UMass can no longer use racial preferences to admit students of color, because of a recent court ruling.

The policy change will affect the numbers of Asian, Latino, African and Native American (ALANA) students in future first–year admissions.

"We're going to take a decrease next semester. There's no question about it. We're going to have less ALANA students next semester," Cevallos said.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled Nov. 18 against public high school Boston Latin, in a civil court case regarding race–based admissions. Boston Latin can't continue racial preferences in admissions, a ruling which applies to all public schools in the state.

Last week, Boston Latin decided not to appeal.

"It was advised by both the NAACP and the ACLU [American Civil Liberties Union] not to appeal the decision," said Cevallos, noting, "it's very possible we would go the Supreme Court and we would lose."

In the wake of the Boston Latin decision, "We're scrambling to find everything within the law to make sure that we attract as many ALANA students to the campus as possible," he said.

Before the ruling, UMass tried to meet its diversity goals by accepting more minority students among applicants with less academic achievement. Changes will most directly affect minority students with lower grade–point averages and Scholastic Aptitude Test scores.

UMass faces fierce competition for minority students with strong academic credentials. "Highly qualified ALANA students are recruited actively and aggressively by private schools," said Cevallos.

The "yield rate," or percentage of students accepted which enroll at UMass, is around 24%, said Cevallos — lower than the 29.3% of the student body as a whole.

Cevallos also explained that private schools can offer ALANA students attractive financial aid packages to promote diversity, a luxury UMass cannot afford.

"As far as meeting un–met need, we're not on the top of our game right now," said Resa Singleton, student coordinator for the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA). "This may be a safety school for many people. They get into their first choice and decide not to come."

"It is not immediately clear exactly how many less ALANA students we'll have next year," said Cevallos. Of the 3,425 first–year students enrolled in Fall 1998, 665, or about 19%, were minorities. "The numbers are going to be smaller but not significantly smaller. We're talking about a population that was small anyway."

Boston Latin's decision not to appeal has left administrators scrambling for solutions to the admissions problem. UMass must send letters of admission, or rejection, to high–school students in the next few weeks.

"It's very hard to plan for such a thing in such a short period of time," said Cevallos. Administrators have formed an action committee, and are looking at phone–a–thons, open houses and more school visitations, targeting the low–yield rate as the answer. Cevallos concedes that the outlook, for the next year at least, may be poor.

"We have to look to the future," he said, noting that the building process could take five years or more.

It's small comfort for UMass's ALANA students. The freshman classes at the University of Massachusetts have been more ethnically diverse than ever in recent years. And now it looks like they'll be more diverse than those to come.

"It's not going to be a morale booster for minority students on campus," said Singleton. "I think it's going to have a profound impact. It's what students of color have been arguing about for 30 or 40 years."

Many minority students have expressed concern about the future without affirmative action programs in higher education.

"I believe it creates less opportunity for viable minority students to get a good education," said Jean Birjour, a junior biology major. "High school and college are two different things. You can't compare a 2.5 GPA from some private high school with one from a bad school. Everyone should get a chance."

Cevallos said it's not the end, though.

"I wouldn't say its an end of affirmative action," he said. "It makes us aware of the need to continue to present our arguments to the public. We have made a moral argument for a long time that ALANA students have a need for access to higher education."

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Glass

A UMass student walks through the "pond" in front of the library.

Many senate seats vacant, SGA seeks to fill positions

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Staff

In terms of Student Government Association (SGA) representation, Orchard Hill Residential Area currently has more say than any other living area.

According to Associate Speaker Jodi Bailey, there are only 45 senator positions filled out of a possible 75.

Any dorm which has more than 250 residents is entitled to have one or more senators representing it, and buildings with less than 250 still get a vote through senator–at–large positions.

In response to the low numbers of student leaders, SGA President Salwa Shamaponde said, "People just don't know about it."

Senate Speaker Lisa Cook blames it on numerous things.

"Students on campus don't really know how much power SGA actually has and that SGA could actually help them," she said. "We're in charge of $1.4 million. We have primary responsibility outside of the classrooms at UMass."

Cook also commented on how things are expected to pick up. "People will want to become senators this semester; fall is the slow semester, but we never fill up to a max, which is 75 in total."

In the Southwest living area there are nine spots open. John Adam, John Quincy Adams, Kennedy, Washington, and Patterson all need representatives. The Southwest at–large position is missing two senators.

Central has three spots vacant, and Baker is without any representation. Northeast is missing two senators and Sylvan only has one senator for the entire area, leaving a total of four spots open. Orchard Hill is the only living area that has every position filled.

There are also positions open on the Student Judiciary, and students can apply regardless of where they live. According to Shamapande, stu–

Turn to SGA, page 2

Bulger's salary increased by Trustees' OK

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees has voted to increase the salary of UMass President William Bulger by 49 percent.

According to the UMass News Office, President Bulger was given a starting salary of $189,000 a year when he was appointed as president in 1996.

As a result of the board's decision, his salary was increased to $238,000 as of last October, and will rise to $256,000 on July 1, 1999. On July 1, 2000, his salary will reach $282,000 a year.

The increase puts Bulger in the 75th percentile among salaries at comparable institutions.

It also marks the first salary increase for the position of President since 1994, two years before Bulger took office.

Board of Trustees Chairman Robert Karam defended the raise, stating that it was done to bring Bulger's salary to the level of presidents at comparable institutions, and to reward him for his accomplishments as president.

Among the accomplishments cited by Karam were the recent increase in private support for UMass (which has risen 70 percent in the past two years), the increased rate of valedictorians and salutatorians attending UMass and the recent toughening of admissions standards.

Bulger has also increased economic development efforts and has implemented a $700 million facility improvement plan.

UMass Chancellor David K. Scott also defended the pay raise, claiming that Bulger's salary is kept in line with the rate of inflation.

However, he also expressed disagreement with the timing of the increases.

"For some reason, president salaries tend to be adjusted, then kept constant for many years, and then a steep adjustment is made," he said.

"My opinion is that it would be better to make regular adjustments to the president's salary every year."

By the end of Bulger's contract, his salary will have increased by an average of five percent per year. He has been hired through the year 2002.

The News Office states that Bulger's raise "fits the Board of Trustee's goal to achieve long–term financial and management stability for the University."

Several UMass students disagreed with the pay raise.

"I think it's ridiculous that the students are paying so much tuition so that we can make the President even richer," said freshman Jason McNulty.

"I couldn't get into any of the courses I wanted to this semester," he added. "Shouldn't the University be spending our money on things like new professors and classes, instead of pay raises?"

"I don't know what he's done to deserve a raise, but 49 percent sounds like an awful lot," said Marisa Freeman, a junior Biology major.

"I'll keep that in mind the next time I pay my tuition," she went on to say.

Student–run night club will open tonight in CC

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

According to a recent survey conducted by Student Affairs Research, Information and Systems (SARIS), an alarming 40 percent of the students who responded stated they were either very dissatisfied or somewhat dissatisfied with the lack of social activities that occur on campus.

In response to this dissatisfaction, a new night club and bar, Big Night, is opening tonight on the 11th floor of the Campus Center.

Big Night was designed by students who have been working for almost half a year in collaboration with Auxiliary Services and Top Of Campus Inc. (TOC) to help organize more student–based entertainment programming on campus. One of these students is senior marketing major Pete Scahill.

"The idea is to see if a night club or entertainment venue would be sustainable on a university campus again like the Bluewall and Hatch before it," Scahill said. "If it proves to be a successful venture, we will have many options for future programming."

The need for more programming events like Campus Activities' "Something Every Friday" (SEF) is something Scahill and others working on the Big Night would like to see.

Programming efforts decreased four years ago when the Hatch ceased to provide daily programming events. Since then, events such as SEF and those sponsored by Registered Student Organizations have been the main source of programming on campus.

Scahill feels the purpose of the Big Night club is to provide students with entertainment meeting their interests, and he hopes this will prove to be the start of future programming.

According to Scahill, the closing of the Hampshire 6 Theaters has decreased the area's screen capacity by more than 60 percent. Also, the upcoming Coolidge Bridge construction this spring will confine students to localized activities.

Sophomore communications major Shaun St. Clair is also involved in the Big Night and feels students should go no further than campus to look for events.

"The whole thing with the Big Night is we want students to stay on campus

Turn to Club, page 2

Town discusses off–campus drinking

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The addition of a box to the current alcohol policy chart is aimed at subtracting the number of alcohol problems off–campus and multiplying the number of students receiving education, not punishments, for violations.

Meetings between the University of Massachusetts and the Town of Amherst are continuing, addressing the possibility of extending the Alcohol Policy to include sanctions for off– campus alcohol violations.

The committee is made up of 10–15 individuals including the Amherst Town Manager, the UMass Chief of Police, several UMass students, and representatives of the Dean of Students Office, the UMass Office of Community Relations and the Amherst Police Department. It is deciding whether certain alcohol violations can be considered serious enough to be included in activities sanctioned by the Student Code of Conduct.

The Student Code of Conduct, which includes the alcohol policy, is applied to students living off–campus only when they commit a serious act of misconduct or break the law. Assistant Dean of Students Paul Vasconcellos said the meetings are being held to decide if there are any alcohol violations that would fit that definition.

Vasconcellos provided as an example of what would be considered when looking at the issue.

"Is there an alcohol issue that would rise to the level of being a serious act?" he said. "Would it fit if there were kegs, a large number of people, destruction of property and physical assault?"

There have been two meetings between members of the University community and the town since August to address the issue. But any action is a long way off.

"No decisions are being made about anything," Vasconcellos said.

"What we're trying to do is develop a policy...for serious violations; that's the important thing, serious violations, repeat violations," said committee member David Hammer, a graduate student representing Commuter Services.

Amherst Police Chief Donald Maia emphasized that the meetings were "preliminary."

"The town really doesn't have an ability to [sanction] students except bringing them into court," Maia said.

Town representatives on the committee say any policy is better than no policy.

"[There] is the possibility of having a policy for off– campus violations that is at least parallel to the on–campus [policy]. The main thing is there would be a policy," said Town Manager Barry Del Castilho.

Finding a way for the University to sanction students without tieing up Hampshire District and Superior Courts in Northampton is also a goal.

"So the community deals with the problem and takes it away from Northampton," Hammer said.

Vasconcellos said a policy would be along the lines of a "one–two–three violation system," like the one currently in place on–campus.

"We're not developing sanctions to punish people. The sanctions are being added to educate people," Hammer said.

As to when an additional policy would be in effect, Vasconcellos said an exact date cannot be determined yet.

"It's a complex issue. We need to [have] discussions with everyone involved," he said.

While stricter alcohol policy sanctions implemented last fall didn't apply to off–campus students, they may have affected off–campus drinking.

"We think the on–campus policy had a halo effect," Del Castilho said of the quieter–than–usual Fall 1998 semester.

While admitting there isn't just one reason for the lull in alcohol problems, Del Castilho believes the stricter policy had a hand in it.

Associate Chancellor Susan Pearson, who is chairing the Turn to TOWN, page 2

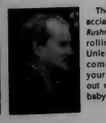
EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 46 LOW: 29	HIGH: 35 LOW: 28	HIGH: 30 LOW: 22

SOURCE: CNN.COM



When you get right down to it...

Find out what students prefer to wear underthere in this week's Campus Perspectives.

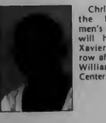
NEWS PAGE 2



Mount Rushmore

The critically–acclaimed new movie Rushmore will have you rolling in the aisles. Unless you don't like comedy. But that's your problem. Check out our review inside, baby.

ARTS PAGE 5

Playing for Pride

Chris Kirkland and the Massachusetts men's basketball team will host a tough Xavier squad tomorrow afternoon at the William D. Mullins Center.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Classifieds 8
Comics 9
Crossword 8
Editorial 4
FYI 8
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Issues raised by photo ID databank

By Karen Gullo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — State officials and civil liberties groups are fearful that privacy violations could arise from a planned national databank of driver's license photos. Those fears were heightened yesterday when they learned that the Secret Service helped finance the undertaking by a private company.

The company developing the databank says there's nothing to worry about — the photos would only be used to combat check fraud and other crimes involving the misuse of personal identification. And the Secret Service wouldn't have access to the photos or the system, officials said.

But lawmakers who arranged the Secret Service funds for Image Data LLC of Nashua, N.H., suggested that the databank could potentially be used to fight terrorism and immigration abuses. That has set off alarms among privacy advocates and state officials who worry that what was billed as a system to protect consumers from fraud could be used as a tool to track the activities of private citizens.

"This is a high-tech wolf in sheep's clothing," said Marc Rotenberg, director of the Electronic Privacy Information Center in Washington. "There's a lot more going on here than check verification."

The three states that agreed to sell their driver's license photos to Image Data — South Carolina, Florida and Colorado — were already trying to get out of agreements after consumers voiced concerns about how the photos would be used. The disclosure yesterday by The Washington Post that the company received $1.46 million from the Secret Service for the project gave new ammunition to state officials, who said they weren't informed of the federal funding.

"We were never told of their conspiracy with the federal government and their efforts to use this information to track the activities of South Carolina citizens," said Jim Klauber, a member of the state legislature.

South Carolina's attorney general has called for an investigation.

In Washington, the American Civil Liberties Union and other groups called for hearings and tighter drivers' privacy laws. Image Data denied that it misled states about its TrueID system, which — when fully operational — would send photo images from its databank to merchants so they can check the identification of customers paying with checks. The system is being tested at 10 stores in South Carolina.

Several lawmakers pushing for federal funds for the project cited other possible uses.

TrueID "has widespread potential to reduce crime in the credit and checking fields, in airports to reduce the chances of terrorism, and in immigration and naturalization to verify proper identity," according to two 1997 letters to Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, R-Colo., chairman of an appropriations committee panel that oversees the Secret Service.

A Night Out

A story about Senate Bill 'Big Night' appears in a panel [illegible] in the Campus Center.

Minimum wage increase debated in Mass. Senate

By Jean McMillan
Associated Press

BOSTON — Low-wage workers in Massachusetts are like "hamsters on a wheel" running a futile race and they should be helped out with a hike in the minimum wage, Senate President Thomas Birmingham said yesterday.

Birmingham, D-Chelsea, testified in favor of his proposal to do that before the Senate Ways and Means Committee. Republican Gov. Paul Cellucci chimed in, pushing his own proposal to raise the minimum wage by a smaller amount.

But the two face opposition from businesses. And they will have to convince a skeptical House Speaker Thomas Finneran, D-Boston, to allow the vote to come up for a vote in that chamber.

Birmingham's bill would raise the minimum wage from $5.25 to $6.75 by the year 2001.

"If you work for a living, you ought to be able to earn a living," Birmingham said.

He said society was becoming split between the top 20 percent of wage earners who live in comfort and riches and the remaining 80 percent who struggle.

"At the very bottom of this group are the minimum wage earners, who are the wage-earning equivalent, I'm sorry to say, of hamsters on a wheel, running frantically just so they won't lose ground," he said.

Peter Christie, executive vice president for the 1,800-member Massachusetts Restaurant Association, argued that a hike could hurt some of the very workers it was meant to help.

He said restaurants might have to reduce worker hours or pressure workers for more productivity.

"I don't think minimum wage is the answer," he said.

Cellucci also spoke in favor of boosting the minimum wage, but his proposal would hike it 90 cents, to $6.15, over the next two years. He opposed Birmingham's idea of raising the minimum wage and then tying it to the Consumer Price Index.

Cellucci's proposal would bring the state minimum wage to the same level advocated on the national level by U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. Currently, the national minimum wage is $5.15, 10 cents lower than the state's.

A minimum wage increase bill was passed by the state Senate last year, but never made it to a vote in the House.

■ CLUB

continued from page 1

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Scenario

Students walk past the Curry Hicks Cage late yesterday afternoon.

instead of driving off to find activities elsewhere," St. Clair said. "It's going to be a fun, cool atmosphere."

Lisa Giddens, organizational specialist for student development in the University, believes the Big Night is a good way to integrate students into the campus community.

"It would be great to have student-programmed events here on campus that ...encourage them to come here instead of filtering back into the community," Giddens said. "I think it [Big Night] is an excellent student-initiated program. There is clearly a need for this type of programming."

Tonight the Big Night will feature local pop group Joint Custody and special guest Hurricane Dave. Joint Custody has been performing around western Massachusetts for nearly two years and is currently recording its second release in Boston. Hurricane Dave, relatively new to the music scene, will be appearing in their first major concert.

As St. Clair explained, the planning for the Big Night has been difficult, but there's been a lot of support from the campus community.

"Basically, we're hoping for the Big Night to be a big success," St. Clair said.

Doors open at 7:30 p.m., with a $3 admission fee. Tickets can be purchased at the door.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

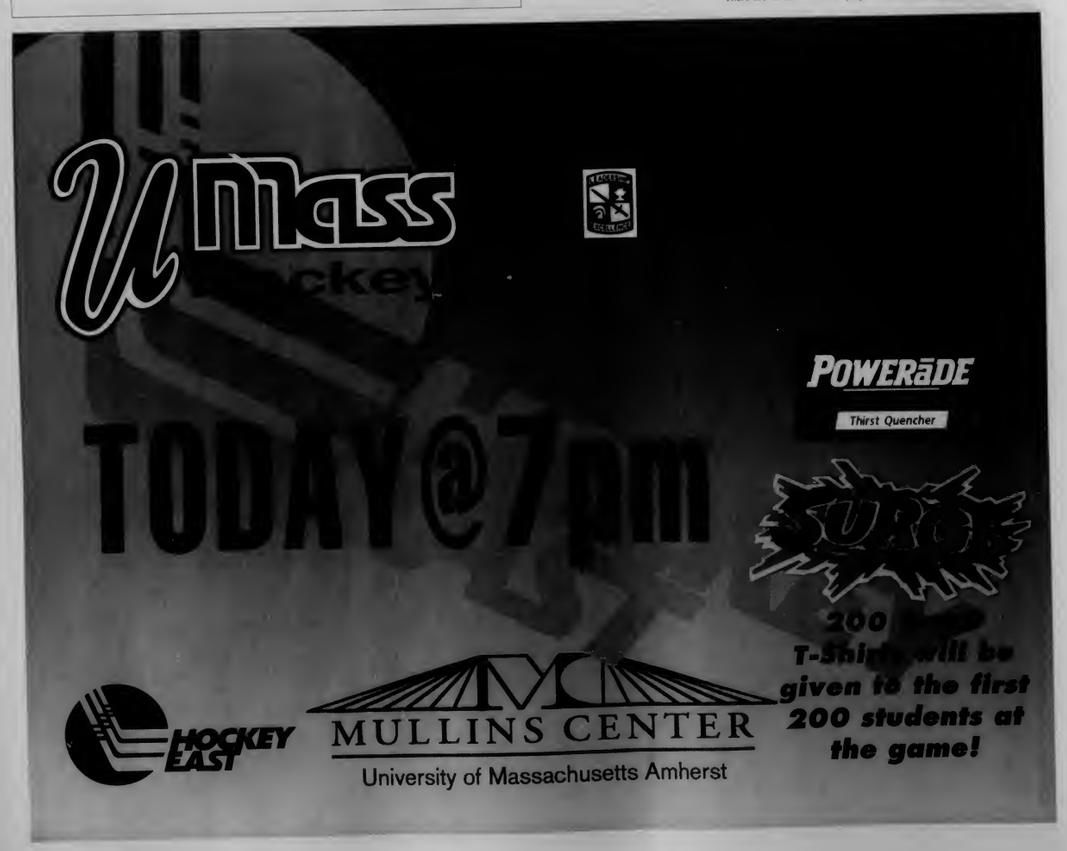
dents interested in becoming representatives and senators may apply at the SGA office.

According to Bailey, the SGA has tried to get more students involved.

"We tried to talk with area senators and others, and we've had freshmen open houses," she said. "We lost senators due to schedule changes; people couldn't meet on Wednesday nights for whatever reason. We'll try to fill the seats but after the third or fourth week of April we'll leave it alone."

Off-campus government also lacks student representation; the Town of Amherst has vacancies for Town Meeting members.

Town precincts include every UMass residence hall, and there are currently vacancies in each precinct. Students who are interested in becoming Town Meeting members must be registered Amherst voters, and need to submit only one nomination by March 9.



As a town meeting member, students represent their precinct for the town and vote on local issues that directly affect students. Town elections are March 30.

■ TOWN

continued from page 1

meetings, was out of town until Monday and could not be reached for comment.

"There are issues of double jeopardy for students, student rights and protection. It's a slow process because we're trying to keep these things in mind," Hammer said.

Campus Perspectives

Do you prefer boxers or briefs and why?

Compiled by Danielle Fugazi• Photos by Roberto Delgado

"Boxers because there is more room to breathe."

Matt Wiffin
Freshman
Communications

"Neither. I wear mesh shorts and when my laundry is dirty I don't wear anything."

Jesse Bachman
Freshman
Undecided

"Boxers, because they let it all hang out."

Clayton Shih
Senior
Graphics Design

"Boxers, because I sleep in them."

Daria Dillard
Junior
Journalism

"Boxers, they're better. There is more room to maneuver."

Jose Brea
Senior
Accounting

"Boxers, they look better briefs look funny."

Vanessa Williams
Senior
Women's Health

Clinton revisits New Hampshire in first appearance since impeachment

By Walter R. Mears
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As the White House said, there is something special about New Hampshire for President Clinton — and not just the comeback he claimed in defeat seven years ago. It is where he put on national display the traits that led to his impeachment and the survival talents that got him through it.

So it was a fitting coincidence that Clinton's first political outing since the Senate acquitted him was to New Hampshire yesterday. First to Dover, where the 1992 candidate had conceded that he was on the ropes over his personal, not his public life, and then to Manchester to raise funds for the Democrats who helped him withstand that crisis.

"They took a chance on him and I think he's repaid that trust with his performance in office," said Paul Begala, then a campaign strategist, now a White House adviser.

News Analysis

There were reminders that Clinton's personal behavior had once again threatened his undoing — the "disgrace" editorial on the front page of the conservative The Union Leader, the protesters with their "shame" placards in Dover.

But only on the sidelines.

"There's a popular myth that he survived in New Hampshire, or indeed survived today, because of his political talents, which is manifest," Begala said. "My view is that he's surviving, then and today, because of his ideas. It's not about if he can deliver a speech, it's if he can deliver a program."

But speeches, skilled television performances, sometimes contrition, sometimes confrontation, and artfully dodging denials, all were part of the campaign course that saved Clinton's presidential campaign in 1992.

And the setting was New Hampshire, where the governor of Arkansas moved onto a national stage, and faced scandalous accusations.

Clinton warns of air strikes, NATO reviews Serb targets

By Laura Myers
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With time running out for a political settlement, NATO reviewed possible Serb targets in and around Kosovo, and the Clinton administration warned President Slobodan Milosevic yesterday to choose peace with ethnic Albanians or face a devastating military strike.

"He will be hit hard, and he will be deprived of the things that he values," warned Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, who planned to return today to the peace talks in Rambouillet, France. If an attack were ordered, scores of sea-launched Tomahawk missiles would hit Serb air-defense sites and radar facilities first, then vital command centers and barracks in what likely would be a limited NATO strike, Pentagon planners said. They cautioned, however, that a more aggressive attack plan is being considered.

In their second week of peace talks, the Serbs and ethnic Albanians have until noon tomorrow to reach agreement on a self-rule plan for Kosovo, a Serbian province. Mediators at Rambouillet presented the two sides a final version yesterday of a proposed political settlement.

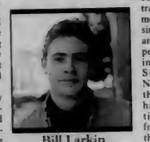
Albright and Norwegian Foreign Minister Knut Vollebaek, chairman of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, pointedly reminded Milosevic that if he doesn't accept NATO peacekeeping ground troops as part of any Kosovo agreement, he will face military consequences. So far, Milosevic has rejected the NATO idea of sending 28,000 NATO ground troops to the province.

Demonstrating the seriousness of NATO threats, the United States has started planning to evacuate the U.S.

University of Massachusetts
SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
Present
Kevin Downey Jr.

February 19, 1999
Bluewall Cafe
8pm, Free

The movie "Water Boy", starring Adam Sandler will be shown following the performance. "Water Boy" will also be shown on Sunday February 21 at 8:00pm in the Campus Center Auditorium.
For more info, please call 545-3600 or visit our website:
http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm
This series is made possible through a grant from Auxiliary Services and the office of the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs



--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Mission impossible

Digital Camera? Check. Laser Printer? Check. Tangerine iMac? Always.

As I slip my hands into my warm gloves, a precarious question enters my mind. What am I about to do? Have I completely lost my mind? Grand larceny? I think the most reprehensible crime I have ever committed was buying the second Hootie and the Blowfish album. But that dark moment is in the past, my "rebellious days" are long since gone. I'm no criminal.

I can't do hard time. It's bad enough that I have to eat at the Worcester Dining Hall. But prison? My feathers are too bright to be caged; I can't...No.

Bill Larkin

Where has my courage fled? I'm furious at the world, and sometimes contemplation clouds anger's logic. So, to hell with my conscience. I know it's quite fallible anyhow. Besides, I can always plead insanity. I do go to UMass– Amherst, after all.

This being said, I find myself standing in the jalopy-ridden Crabtree parking lot. A fabulously fragile 1992 Caprice Classic lies vulnerable before me. My friend "slender Jim" has no problem opening the door; and removing the freshly pressed parking sticker from the window is even less of a task. I stand triumphant, the crimson seal clutched tightly in my hand. What have I done? Perhaps I should have studied criminal law. Perhaps I...ah, to hell with it. I remind myself of my plight, the frostbite still lingers in my memory. My confidence renewed, I return to my room and continue on my treacherous path.

Two scan and three print sessions later, I find myself standing in that same parking lot. My dark forgery complete, I return the (template) sticker, to its rightful home in the Caprice. I then prepare for the long sojourn to the Mullins Center where my own chariot awaits. After miles of unending travail, I finally approach the Textbook Annex and the perch of the Mullins Center begins to come into focus.

"Yellow lot no more," I vow with threatening vigor. Arriving at my less than luxurious automobile, I celebrate wildly. Seized with fury, the minuscule detail on the back window of my two door 1977 Mustang undergoes a bit of a color change. What was once yellow is now red! Merry Christmas, Bill.

Okay, so the preceding epic is pure rot. Me commit theft and forgery? Somehow I don't think so. The Hootie part is true, but that is irrelevant and I curse myself for including the rancid detail in my marvelously constructed work of fiction. Whatever. The key issue here is the fraud of the parking system.

As a Northeast driver living in Crabtree, I find the nightly journey from the Mullins Center absolutely unacceptable. And before you start bombarding me with cries like, "If you didn't procrastinate, you would have gotten a purple lot sticker," let me remind you that the purple lot is almost as isolated as the wicked yellow lot. And the path home from the lot is even worse. I don't know about you, but the name "rape trail" makes me a bit uneasy.

Upset about being ill for the past week? The past month? Concerned with the bubonic plague that currently infests UMass? Perhaps I contracted malaria or anthrax on one of my many ascensions from the yellow hell. Perhaps I infested you with it by coughing on the Baked Chicken Mamou last Wednesday. What is the easiest way to contract the flu or pneumonia, I ask you? It's simple — move from an area of frigid temperature to an area of intolerable warmth. Students living in Northeast experience this nightmare firsthand. How many times have I gone from a mild sweat to the chilling winds of Northeast? How many times have I been sick this semester? You figure it out.

Campus safety. Everyone is so concerned over the safety of our sacred UMass student body. Every day I have to tolerate this absurd 24-hour lock-down. I think last weekend my roommate was beaten senseless while attempting to flee some pursuer only to be stopped by the stubbornness of the card-swipe. (Actually, I think he just looks that way naturally, but don't tell him that.) Either way, I have also been locked downstairs countless times in the mail room, having forgotten my key upstairs. Unacceptable.

Despite all the security, students are still forced to walk — most often in the dead of night — a mile and a half unattended from the parking lot. Real secure. I'd rather take my chances in a women's studies class wearing a wife- beater with a pasta stain on the collar.

You know what I think? I think we should restructure the whole parking system. I understand the need for faculty parking spaces. I admit the teacher is the most important component in the classroom and needs to be there on time. However, graduate students have absolutely no right whatsoever to premium parking spots. I know some second-semester freshmen who have done more work than some of our dignified grads. Absolutely unacceptable.

So, I suggest a new category for those entitled to "red lot residency." I propose that red lot parking should be for UMass faculty first, and UMass honors students second. Obviously, our esteemed president Mr. Bulger and our esteemed chancellor Mr. Scott think that our school needs an emphasis upon erudition and knowledge and the forthcoming Commonwealth College will certainly attest to that.

Having said this, what greater incentive for knowledge is the right to park in the red lot? Hell, I would have a solid 4.0 if red lot privileges were based upon GPA. But such perfect sense is the stuff of lore and dreams. By the way, can you give me a ride? My car's parked in the yellow lot and it's cold out tonight.

Bill Larkin is a UMass student.

Separated at birth

Political writers everywhere have worn the keys off their lap-tops. Gary Trudeau has probably made about a zillion and a half dollars writing about it, and a whole nation has examined itself once again. Wait a second! I may be in the minority here but I haven't examined myself, and after asking my roommate, I found out he hasn't either. Come to think of it, no one has examined their own consciences over this whole mess. In fact, most people have sat in front of a D.C. menu longer than they have thought about Bill and Monica.

If you have not figured out what I am talking about, it is of course the recently–ended (cringe) impeachment scandal. Even here in the frozen confines of UMass, we have felt a few, albeit small, ripples from the Washington blow–out.

Here at school you are probably aware of the fact that we have several political groups that are active on campus. The two big ones are the (echo) Republican Club and (scary music) R.A.I.L. Although these two groups are often at odds about political issues, in reality, they are the same thing. What we have are two fringe–type groups pandering to an indifferent audience about issues people couldn't care less about.

My fondest memory of the Republican Club would have to be their rousing "Impeach Clinton" rallies. To see about fifteen stuffed–shirt members of "the club" rattling on into a karaoke speaker almost brought a tear to my eye. I would say that of the several thousand people who walked by during the day, maybe a few hundred stopped for a quick laugh.

I know that the Republican Club has the best of intentions but they are making fools of themselves. Our campus cares about Clinton's scandals about as much as they care about the new drinking sanctions. It strikes me as funny to think that the Republicans really believe that they are doing us a service by telling us of the evils housed in the pants of Bill Clinton.

Brian Lohnes

The main problem that the Republicans have is a basic lack of any kind of vision. They can't see past the end of their wing–tips, let alone look into the political future of our country. If they had any clue about how to run their organization, they would speak and act on issues that effect...us! We are the people they should be speaking to about issues that directly effect us. If the Republicans were talking about lowering tuition and increasing financial aid, they would definitely gain a lot of support.

On the other end of the spectrum is R.A.I.L., which is the "Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League." Now people, the wheel was revolutionary, a leftist group isn't. I am a registered Democrat and I have some serious departures from the views of the R.A.I.L.'ers. I, unlike R.A.I.L., believe that some people belong in jail. I also believe that our country needs a military because It would be quite embarrassing to be invaded by Quebec. The loving folks at R.A.I.L. really need some work in the PR department.

I have been bull–rushed by R.A.I.L. members flaunting some petition about government conspiracies several times, and frankly, those people frighten me. It seems to me that R.A.I.L. has built itself a pretty nasty public image over the years and it may be playing a big factor in their membership numbers. People say things like, "I would like to be able to join you but first your agenda needs to change."

The support base for your group could be hugely broadened if you tried to shoot for a less of few issues that have any bearing on our lives. Even though you are really good at alienating people, you need to cut that out. R.A.I.L. and the Republican Club could be groups that hold a lot of power, but it seems that they lack the leadership.

For an action group to be successful, it must appeal to a broad population and neither of the aforementioned groups have that kind of vision. It seems that the groups may be locked in some kind of internal power struggle, or maybe their leaders are just too narrow–sighted and agenda–based to look ahead and see what is good for their respective groups.

The message of politics and the delivery of important social issues is difficult and challenging, but it must be done with respect for both your audience and your foes. Also, some important things to address are the issues that affect the area where you are. Clinton's sexual triumphs do not affect me enough to warrant rallying for them. And the abolition of prison scares me because there will be a lot of bad people running around, and with my luck, they will be stealing my stuff.

I have a lot of hope for the future of our country mainly because we have people who are willing to step up and try to lead these organizations. The only thing is, they need some help. If you are interested in trying to make a difference, show up to a group election with 20 of your friends. Since these groups have a relatively small core of followers, you stand an excellent chance of being elected to an office inside the group you want to change. I say this because at last count, the Republican Club only had about 40 members total, and frankly that gives me hope for the future.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

Mating, Part I

Najib said, "The Hajji is asking why you have no sons." I had just shown the two Kurdish elders photographs of my daughters, and they smiled with approval. They said, "Sor bakh. Mershallah." Which means, "Very good. Thanks be to God." But they were disappointed when I had no sons to show them.

"My wife died. We only had two children, both of whom were daughters," I said. An animated discussion in Kurdish ensued between the men. Of the 26,000 Kurds I was living with in northern Iraq, Najib, a young man of about 20, was the only English–speaker. The old men were genuinely perplexed.

Martin Reddy

"But you need sons," they told me through Najib. "Why didn't you get another wife?" Explaining American courtship rituals can be a real challenge. One of the old Hajjis explained how they would do things.

After a dignified period of mourning for his wife's death, he would send his brother to his neighbor to ask for the hand of a daughter or sister. A dozen or so goats would seal the engagement. He realized that most of my people were no longer farmers, but surely we could make some kind of sensible arrangement for me. Of course, their law permits a man to have four wives...

...It was clear from the way she picked at her lunch that something was weighing heavily on my young friend Joanie's mind. She pushed her plate away and said it felt like everybody was pushing and pulling her all over the place.

After a second glass of wine, she unloaded. She's going to school and working 24 hours per week as a cashier in a supermarket. She called in sick the other day and took her best friend to an abortion clinic in Boston so the friend's family wouldn't know about it. Last week, her "ex" called, crying and sniveling for a chance "to make it work." Saturday morning, her car wouldn't start. She called the old boyfriend and asked for a lift. He wanted a little favor from her while he drove her to work and he got "like, totally mad" when she refused.

Her unmarried sister is always bugging her to babysit, and lays a guilt trip on her if she doesn't. She has big doubts about wanting to be a teacher, but her mother says, "You'll be kicking yourself for the rest of your life if you don't get your MAT." So, mom, how was your day?

Observing my sister's and daughters' trials and tribulations gave me some small appreciation for the female's quandary in the pairing process. With a lot of luck, a young woman may hook up with her Mr. Right, although I'm inclined to believe she will encounter a lot of ineptitude and ignorance beforehand.

She's tied up with Stevie Studd for a year and realizes she's not much more than his steady source of sex. She is his "proof" that he's a man. (Yeah, right.) He's more interested in his drinking buddies.

Johnny Badd treats her like trash and tries to get into bed with her best friend. She keeps going back for more. She loves him for his potential. Her friends breathe a sigh of relief when she proudly announces that she has broken up with this yahoo for good. Then he gets drunk and calls her at two in the morning, crying and promising that he'll change. Then, she happily rushes off to reward him for becoming the man she's always wanted.

Among the less aggressive types of men is Kevin Caring, the sensitive, nice young man. He's so understanding (you ladies know what that means) and wants to get married right away. She can control and dominate the hell out of this fool, but she gets bored. If she wants, she can lie and use him all the time. But, if he smartens up and decides to bail, look out! She'll go after him with all she's got.

My side of the fence isn't so wonderful, either. After raising a family and spending four years as a student, prospective mates come in two basic varieties: a) too young, and b) 38–year–old ball–busters.

The divorced career woman can't stand being single. I'm expected to have relationships with her children and ex– husband(s). On the way to dinner, she's screaming into her cellular phone about child support and weekend visitations. She's bitter and resents men, but she wants another husband as soon as possible. She wants to know my plans for remarriage before the salad arrives!

Then there's the old girl. Irresponsibility Is her defining characteristic. She's in her mid–thirties and lives with her parents. She thinks it's too soon for her to grow up. She spent half of her divorce settlement on new clothes and the rest on a trip to Las Vegas.

...The old Kurds were dumbfounded to hear that I bought cars for my daughters...

To be continued...

Martin Reddy is a Collegian columnist.

Black gold threatens wildlife

The Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWF) is one of the last true wilderness areas on earth. It is home to 150,000 Porcupine Caribou, as well as polar bears, musk oxen, and 180 species of migratory birds. It is also the home of the Gwich'in people, one of the last subsistence cultures in North America.

This pristine land is being threatened by oil drilling. Major multi–national corporations are working to open this land for oil exploration, even though surveys indicate that the land contains only six months worth of oil! This short–sighted action does not do justice to the beauty and value of the ANWR.

As members of the community, we should support responsible business practices. We expect local businesses to be responsible for their actions and to demonstrate concern for the future of our world. We urge our local British Petroleum (BP) gas stations and their owners to call for the cancellation of BP's plans to drill for oil in the ANWR. To show our concern, the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) is conducting a rally at the BP station on Route 9 in Hadley this Sunday, Feb. 21, at noon. We encourage people to volunteer and help send a message to British Petroleum that the refuge is important to the community and we don't want to see it destroyed.

Jenna Feldberg
Dickinson Hall

WRITE FOR ED-OP

Letters to the editor are always welcome. Since our E–mail account is down, bring a typed copy to the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement. Your name, phone number and address should be included. If you have any questions, talk to Tanya, Alexis, or Gary.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Flatkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Murray shines as worn–out business man in Rushmore

When we first see 15–year–old Max Fischer in Rushmore, the 1998 comedy finally making its rounds this February, he's solving an impossible math problem in class, a la Matt Damon in Good Will Hunting. He takes a sip of tea, puts down his newspaper, and slowly makes his way to the blackboard. The class waits patiently as Max conquers the problem with ease. The crowd cheers and carries him on their shoulders.

Then Max wakes up. Do all dorks dream like this?

Maybe, but Max Fischer is not your average dork, and Rushmore is not your average movie.

Bryan McAllister

Max's dreams are real goals — he's president of every club at Rushmore Academy, a stuffy private school in Anytown, U.S.A. If the school doesn't have a club, he makes one. He's president of the beekeeping club, the dodgeball society, the fencing club, and the Max Fischer players, a dramatic club. He's a 15–year–old CEO and director; a boy who defines raw, reckless ambition at a school which prohibits anything but the norm. You don't want to mess with him.

All of these activities, of course, means he has no time for academics. Max is Rushmore's biggest nerd and its worst student.

This is the kind of quirkiness, irony and innocence that fills Wes Anderson's sophomore movie effort, a film that has been noted around the country for giving Bill Murray one of his finest roles, and a film that should also be noted for being amazingly hard to find. It isn't playing around Amherst, or anywhere outside of major cities for that matter.

But if you do venture out to Boston or Hartford, prepare for one of the weirdest and wittiest movies to be released this year. Forget There's Something About Mary — this is real humor, and real heart.

The weirdness in Rushmore goes way beyond Max, decked out in a blazer and black horn–rimmed glasses, and played with huge amounts of confidence by Jason Schwartzman. Max has a side–kick and best friend named Dirk, who Max casts in all his plays and enlists in all his adventures. But Dirk is nothing more than a sandy–haired second–grader, who writes threatening letters in Crayola crayons.

One gets the sense that there could be a series of movies made around Max's adventures and the characters at Rushmore; this one concerns his crush on a first–grade teacher, Miss Cross (Olivia Williams). Max will do anything for her. She likes pet fish, so he gets the idea to build a giant aquarium on the baseball diamond.

"Don't you realize that you're far too young for me?" Miss Cross asks Max.

Max, of course, doesn't. His arrogance and ego are warped into a certain state of hilarious obliviousness; in his mind, he can do anything — stage an adaption of Al Pacino's Serpico, or, in the film's final act, recreate the Vietnam War with a bunch of elementary school kids. He's applying early to Oxford and the Sorbonne. Harvard is his safety.

But when Max's academics go really downhill, he's put on "sudden death probation," and Miss Cross rejects him, he finds new friendship in a steel tycoon, Herman Blume (Murray). Blume is depressed and worn–out; he hates his wife and his aggressive, dumb kids. In one brilliant scene, Blume, wearing only Budweiser boxers, sluggishly dives into his pool and hides under the water, only to have a little kid swim annoyingly around him.

Murray is pure perfection as Blume. He uses his masterful deadpan and dry wit without going overboard, and without being too self–conscious, as often happens in a Murray film. Blume is a grown–up kid himself, and has his

Turn to MURRAY, page 6

COURTESY VAN BEEK

Rushmore, now playing in selected cities, is probably the true comedic film of the year.

Brand Nubian to perform in SUB

COURTESY SUE WAXON

Brand Nubian will shake things up tonight in the Student Union Ballroom.

Tonight, the University Production and Concerts (UPC) team will present UMass with Brand Nubian and Das Efx, performing live at the Student Union Ballroom at 7:30 pm. D.J. Wal–Gee, Isotope and Tembleos from Busted Fro will be opening the show, complementing the talent with selected tracks from their upcoming album.

The brothas from New Rochelle have blessed hip–hop– heads with a tasteful selection of conscious lyrics and raw beats. With producers like D.J. Premier, Lord Finesse and Brand Nubian themselves, it's no wonder this album is one of their best.

From the production team to the artists, the album is a compilation of different musical talents and styles. Redman and Das cut up the mic in "Rap Scholar" and enjoy the soft voice of Miss Jones as they lay it down on "What Goes Around." M.O.P and Teflon make it hot on "No Doubt" with tight lyrical flows. The original "diggity–tongue–twistin" style of GENERATION EFX still remains, but is improved with strong performances, heavy beats and classic samples.

Get your tickets now and prepare yourself for a performance that's sure to please, 'cause it's gonna be tight. Stay tuned for future engagements as the UPC crew brings you Black Eyed Peas on March 4.

Exploring some unique friendships fag/hag

A.P.E. Performance Space
3rd Floor Thorne's Market
Feb. 17–20

By Imogen Lillywhite
Collegian Correspondent

NORTHAMPTON — Disco tunes for a soundtrack, arguments over who gets to wear the tiara, and of course repeated use of the word "fabulous," is what you might expect from a play about friendships between gay men and straight women.

This is what Joe Salvatore and Kate Nugent were only too happy to give on the opening night of their original play fag/hag on Wednesday at Thorne's Market Performance Space.

Nugent, a guest artist at UMass Theater Department, and Salvatore, a guest lecturer, opened with definitions of their pseudonyms of "fag" and "hag" — "fag" as a cigarette and "hag" as a shrivelled old woman — which were delivered with the right amount of practiced innocent irony to set the tone of the play. The two actors proceeded to play themselves, various men and women that they had interviewed, and each other in a sometimes moving but more often comical and occasionally downright hilarious exploration of the "mystery" behind these unique friendships. The short sketches included the characters "professor of English, Amherst College" who talked at length about the theory of "fag–haggedness," the 27–year–old homosexual man whose "fag hag" transformed herself into a "fabulous lesbian," and the 26–year–old UMass alum who made the fatal mistake of assuming that if her homosexual friend never found anyone else then they would "end up together."

Salvatore is as flamboyant and gregarious as Nugent is subtle and understated. Both actors exploit their stereotypes to the max. I whole–heartedly agree when they say "Will and Grace'... step aside. The Object of My Affection... please." Representations such as these, which portray insecure women whose homosexual friends have to take a back seat to the female vanity, are disproved and even reversed in this delightful comic play.

Turn to PLAY, page 6

FIDDLE IS FUN!
Adam R.Sweet
All Styles
All Ages!
(413)253-8829

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO–KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0080

Best Thai Food at Thai Corner
31 Boltwood Walk
Amherst, MA
Featuring
• appetizers • flavorful entrees
• rice and noodles • real Thai food
• Best Pad Thai in town.
for..
Dine in or Take-Out
call
Phone: 253-1639
or check menu at http://members.aol.com/thaicorner/thaicorner.html

THE NEXT LOGICAL STEP IN ON-LINE SHOPPING FOR CLOTHES.
...Just in time for spring break!
NEXT WEAR
"Get Off at The Next Exit"
www.nextwear.com

MULLINS CENTER
UNIV. of MASSACHUSETTS, AMHERST
★ WEDS. FEB. 24th • 8:00PM ! ★
BOB DYLAN AND HIS BAND!
PLUS
NATALIE MERCHANT
Advance tickets available at the Mullins Center box office and all TicketMaster locations. To charge by phone call TicketMaster at (413) 733-2500. For additional information call the Mullins Center at (413) 545-2801.
★ DON'T YOU DARE MISS IT! ★
Presented by MassConcerts

Capturing the essence of Harlem

By Yemisi Mokuolu
Collegian Correspondent

On Sunday afternoon, Feb. 21, the Mead Gallery at Amherst College will introduce Aaron Siskind: Harlem Document with a day of rousing entertainment. This reception will feature a Gospel choir, African-American food and speaker Emma Radin.

Siskind reveals to the viewer the essence of Harlem. He represents in black-and-white photography the run-down interior and exterior spaces, coupled with scenes of positive community activities, such as church and theater.

The main part of the Harlem Document was created between 1932-1940, in conjunction with the WPA (Works Progress Administration) project. African-American writers were commissioned to educate white America on the effects of the Depression on black Harlem.

Through the eyes of a white man, Siskind creates a sensitive and honest look at African-American life in 1930s Harlem. The subjects seem to be comfortable and very willing participants. Some of the people in the photographs act out storyboard tableaus and others fully interact with Siskind to create portrait images.

In the church scene a woman peers defensively at Siskind. She has foiled Siskind's attempts to be the unseen fly-on- the-wall documentary photographer.

As a documentary photographer, Siskind uses many different artistic devices to add meaning to his images. The exhibition explains that, by cropping the profile head of an African-American boy, Siskind has managed to create a link with the boy's African past. The image now appears to be that of an ethnological study.

Siskind's strong artistic temperament is evident in this collection. In "Man in the Mirror," 1940, he creates poetic illusion. Siskind's manufactured compositions hold a poetic element that reminds us of the poetry within old African- American speech.

The exhibition also contains more artistic photographs of Harlem that Siskind took later on in his career. One of the images is a close-up of a torn billboard poster. It is unrecognizable and can now be appreciated on a formally aesthetic level. This image files Siskind amongst the Abstract Expressionists.

Various other artists feature in this exhibition: Arnold Eagle and David Robbins, who also portray lower-class society in the 1930s. Contemporary photographers are included to give us an artistic perspective of society in the 1990s.

Aaron Siskind: Harlem Document will be on view until March 14. The photographs of Aaron Siskind were donated by Leonard A. Fink.

Through his photography, Siskind demonstrated the effects of the Depression on Harlem in the 1930s.

In Rushmore, Bill Murray's portrayal of a steel tycoon has been called one of his best.

■ murray

continued from page 5

own crush on the wistful, intelligent Miss Cross.

Before Max and Mr. Blume can start competing for Miss Cross, Anderson, with his Bottle Rocket partner Owen Wilson, has already given us a couple moments of absolute hilarity. One involves Max, Miss Cross, Mr. Blume and Miss Cross' surprise date at a restaurant — and since Max is in love with the teacher, you can only imagine the results when a little alcohol is added to the ingredients.

The second half of the movie, which involves the sometimes-violent ways Max and Mr. Blume get back at each other, loses a little steam. It's less cohesive, less sure of itself, and less comic. Like Max, Anderson sometimes gets too clever and outlandish for his own good.

And a question arises, too — is Rushmore really about anything? Is there a method behind the madness? Sure, the obvious message is that you can do anything you want if you put your mind to it. But what Anderson was going for, it seems, is a little treatise on love, or more specifically, the loss and re-gaining of it.

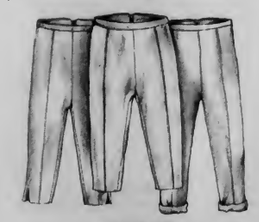
All of the characters in Rushmore are searching for love. Miss Cross has lost it. Mr. Blume never had it. Rushmore and Miss Cross are Max's loves, but he loses them both. All of this reminds me a bit of the work of J.D. Salinger, who 40 years ago hid his search-for-love theme in Holden Caulfield's slight rebellion.

But Wes Anderson is no Salinger, and Rushmore is no Catcher in the Rye — while the film has bleak overtones and moments of desperation, it never fully succumbs to the darkness. This is all in good fun, and at the end of the movie, Max is back at work again, forming yet another club. This one's for kite-flying. Cue symbolism.

Bryan McAllister is a Collegian staff member.

■ play

continued from page 5



Above all, Salvatore and Nugent seem to wish to dispel a few of the fag/hag myths and show their relationship for what it is: it is not a marriage or a sexual relationship, or even some kind of decadent or perverse fetish, but a friendship. As Nugent says at the close of the play, "It's a myth that you can get everything from one person." This production is a must for anyone of the theater (particularly of the interview variety) persuasion and anyone who is fighting to make the transition from fabulous fag-hag to fabulous fairy princess. Fag/hag will be performed at Thorne's until Saturday, Feb. 20. Shows begin nightly at 8 p.m., with a 2 p.m. matinee on Feb. 20. There will be a talk-back session with Nugent and Salvatore immediately following the performance on Friday 19th.

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139
4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0060

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Thanks to all our Loyal Patrons for 20 Great Years!
We'll be changing the way you see movies with....
16 NEW SCREENS
Fall '99
$2.50 (Twi-Lites) Show Daily

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Held Over 7th WEEK!
On Screen DAILY 7:00 & 9:20
"THE RICHEST AND MOST SATISFYING ROMANTIC MOVIE OF THE YEAR!"
13 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
BEST PICTURE
Shakespeare In Love
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

We go to all lengths.

ZANA
downtown Amherst

Stretch Poplin

ZANA
downtown Amherst

CARDIO KICK BOXING
STRENGTH • FLEXIBILITY • COORDINATION
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB • 256-0090
Mon. @ 5:30
Thurs. @ 4:45
Fri. @ 4:15
Sat. @ 2:00
www.smhersteathletic.com

SEND A BOUQUET OF WORDS
TO SOMEONE SPECIAL
Select Your Favorite Poem by Bruce D. Wilmer for Phone Delivery at a Specified Time
LOVE • FRIENDSHIP • INSPIRATION
FAMILY • COMMUNICATION
1-900-9-POETRY
(1-900-976-3879)
Poet on Call
www.poet-on-call.com

Child Care Needed
Reliable, non-smoking, articulate person needed to care for our 4 year old boy in our Amherst home.
- 4 afternoons per week, 2:00 - 6:00 PM
- Must have own transportation
- Prefer someone who will be in area during summer
- $7.25 per hour to start; $8.25 per hour after 3 months
Call Kathy at 549-4246 to arrange interview

Ski teams head off to Regionals

By Adam White
Collegian Correspondent

For a sport in which the margin of error is measured in one-hundredths of a second, skiing is relatively uncomplicated. An athlete stands atop a mountain, succumbs to natural forces, and ultimately reaches the bottom. The equation is pretty simple — Slope + Gravity – Resistance = Victory.

Going into the United States Collegiate Skiing Association Regionals at Waterville Valley, N.H., this weekend, the Massachusetts ski teams appear to have this equation solved.

"I think both teams have gotten stronger as the season has gone on," said captain Katie Keane, the only senior among the five racers representing the Minutewomen. "This is where all the training pays off."

The payoff for which both teams strive is a top-four finish, as only the four fastest squads qualify for the USCSA Nationals at Mammoth Mountain, Calif. And despite the unprecedented success enjoyed by both teams this season, neither group is likely to overlook the importance of this meet.

"We're in a good fight, even at Regionals," All-American captain Thomas Holden said. "When it comes down to one race to qualify for Nationals, you can't get caught looking ahead."

The slope in this weekend's equation may prove to be one of the more crucial variables. At the Plymouth State Tournament earlier this season, foul weather decimated the course at Waterville Valley so much that the giant slalom had to be cut in half. This robbed a number of UMass skiers of their edge, so to speak.

"The Waterville GS is so long, it truly rewards those who work hard in the preseason," said Rich Granger, one of three underclassmen among the men's qualifiers. "You can literally win or lose the course on certain turns."

Ironically, the abundance of ice that has covered the slopes this season has been a twofold blessing for the UMass racers. Not only have the courses glazed-up harder and faster, but the turns have retained their shape even after both fields have competed. Less ruts have equalled smoother runs for the Maroon and White.

"The ice has pretty much leveled the playing field," said Ken Thoman, the other rookie among the Minutemen's fastest five. "Everyone's been up against the same course."

Gravity would seem to be the easiest part of the equation. After all, isn't it harder to slow down than speed up when you're plummeting down the side of a mountain? But, as Keane points out, other factors can influence a racer's need for speed.

"Being successful in skiing comes down to who has the audacity to go fast and who doesn't," says Keane, who missed all of last season recovering from knee surgery. "But once you've been injured, you can become nervous about going too fast."

Fortunately for the Minutewomen, going too fast is precisely what Keane and her teammates have excelled at this season.

The resistance factor can take many forms in college skiing. Fatigue has a tendency to strike late in the season, especially when many of the top performers are underclassmen. The additional burden of academic responsibility also tends to weigh the heaviest on younger racers. Luckily, the budding stars of UMass skiing have already grappled with, and risen above, these challenges.

"The key word is balance," notes Granger, who lost 15 pounds and countless training hours in a preseason bout with mononucleosis. "Without the right amount of studying, training, lifting, and even sleeping, you're not going to be at your peak."

Thoman agrees, having already felt the pressure to prioritize academics within his rigorous training schedule.

"It was a little rough at first, because all I cared about was getting faster," says the Ohio native, who attended the Killington Mountain School in Vermont. "But what's the point of training if you can't ski?

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

He's going the distance

Jan Stevens and the Massachusetts men's indoor track and field team will head to Kingston, R.I. this weekend for the Atlantic 10 championship.

Men's gym team to face Michigan

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

After a week of preparation and hard work, the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team will return to the competition scene tomorrow to face off with the No. 2 team, Michigan. The Minutemen have put forth some great routines and have easily dominated the opposition at most of their meets so far, but Michigan will be another story altogether.

The Wolverines just missed a spot at NCAA Nationals last year and continue to crush their competition at every meet this season. Although UMass defeated schools like Navy and Springfield with scores like 217 and 220, the Minutemen know that they have to put forward near-flawless routines in order to give the Wolverines a run for the money.

"I think we'll be okay," Massachusetts men's gymnastics coach Roy Johnson said. "There has been a lot of improvement over the last week, and if we hit about 90 percent of our routines, we can certainly walk away with a big score and even beat Michigan."

Most of the meets so far have been relatively close to home. This meet, however, is the farthest competition from Amherst for the men during the regular season. It is also the first time that UMass has ever traveled to Michigan, and nerves may be a contributing factor to the squad's performance.

"The guys are a little nervous at most of the meets," Johnson said. "The keys to this meet will be consistency on each of the events and a great performance on the first event. If we start the meet with nailed routines, then we might intimidate Michigan, which could give us an advantage. They do have the home court advantage, though, so we'll just have to do our best."

UMass does have luck on its side, as sophomore Andy Leis is ready to compete again after a broken hand earlier this winter. Leis holds the all-time record on pommel horse (9.85) and has consistently been a key player for the Minutemen.

"I'm ready to compete again," Leis said. "I'll be competing on pommel horse, and maybe on high bar or floor. Today we hit five-for-five sets on pommel horse and if that's a sign of how we're going to do this weekend, we should definitely get a big score."

Johnson and his No. 9 ranked UMass team are ready to strut their stuff this weekend and are hoping for the high scores needed to boost their national ranking. UMass will put their skills to the test tomorrow at 7 p.m. at Cliff Keen Arena in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

■ Women's Gym.

continued from page 10

Michigan. That loss was one of only two defeats that they have suffered so far this season.

This Sunday's meet also marks another chapter to the Massachusetts-Alabama rivalry that has developed in recent years. Unfortunately for the Minutewomen, Alabama has had the upper hand in the series, taking both meets in Tuscaloosa.

In 1996 Alabama, carrying the No. 1 rank for the only other time in school history, defeated UMass 196.675 to 191.400. Then, last season, No. 3 Alabama again topped the Minutewomen by a score of 195.775 to 191.800.

Hoping that the home floor will be friendlier than the Crimson Tide's, UMass will look to reverse the trend of lopsided Alabama victories. The team's upperclassmen know that they have never been able to beat Alabama and they would like nothing better than to pull off the biggest win of their season at the Curry Hicks Cage against the No. 1 team in the nation.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Mandy Mosby and the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team will host No. 1 ranked Alabama at the Curry Hicks Cage.

UM to play Army and SUNY

By James Piehl and Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Correspondents

Tomorrow the Massachusetts men's tennis is looking to put the heart-breaking loss to Brown behind them and set their sights on their new opponents of Army and SUNY-Stonybrook.

Army is currently ranked No. 8 and will be an even bigger test for the team then Brown, which is the best school they have faced this season.

"They have no huge stars," said Massachusetts men's tennis coach Judy Dixon of the Cadets. "But they're very deep and very strong."

Army's strength lies in their fitness and mental outlook, so the Minutemen do not expect to wear them down.

"We're looking for improvement from last week," said Dixon of her team's inability to convert in key situations. "The real key is individual wins, not just the match."

Steve Prisco will remain the No. 1 ranking in singles, Bo Navarro will be No. 2, and Rob Manchester will stay at No. 3. Individual wins for these three will be crucial to boosting their poise.

"We need to prove we can play at this echelon," Dixon said. "We're just not playing with confidence."

After the Army match, the Minutemen will have a 30- minute break before facing the Stonybrook Seawolves. They are currently a Division II school, but will move to Division I as of next September.

UM expects to be in for a dogfight against a very tough Seawolves squad. Dixon hopes that some of the singles players will step up for the Minutemen. The doubles teams must also contribute for the team to be successful.

Emerging from the weekend 2-0 would be the ultimate goal for the Minutemen tennis program. However, 1-1 would satisfy Dixon, depending on the effort and play of her team.

"As long as they show improvement, I will be pleased," Dixon said. "But going into George Washington 0-2 would really put us in the doldrums."

spend more time online than in class?
Come put your web knowledge to good use. Stop by the Collegian Graphics Department in the Campus Center Basement and fill out an application to work on our Web Team. Knowledge of the Internet and web design (obviously) a plus. Put completed applications in David Vaidan's mailbox.

Support Your Local Hooker
Informational Session
Student Union: Colonial Room
7:00 PM
Monday February 22nd
PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!
PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!
PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!
PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!
QUESTIONS? CALL BRIAN @ 587-9343
OR DAVE @ 587-3771
WWW.ECS.UMASS.EDU/RUGBY/UMASS

GRAND OPENING!

club kaos
GRAND OPENING!
SATURDAY
K-Klass
Carl Thomas & Andy Williams
Slacker
Johnny Cowan
DJ Sandy
THE ONE THE ONLY
Steve Porter
3 Rooms 18,000 sq. ft. of Dance Music Mayhem
The Largest Nightclub in New England!
resident DJs:
EVERY SATURDAY NIGHT
10:00pm - 6:00am
18+ for entry 21+ to drink
$10.00
club kaos
Underground Dance Mayhem
1592 Main Street
413 739-7900
directions/info 413-750-0970
in the kosmic lounge:

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

UMass Rugby FEB 22 Student Union: Colonial Room 7:00 PLAY RUGBY!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FUNK CLUB AUDITIONS! Hip hop dancers wanted. Sat Feb. 20, 12 to 5 pm. Boyden 237. Callbacks Sun. Feb 21 Questions? Call Charlene 6-5590 jor Amelia 665-8649

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Feb-July '99 1 bdr apt in Pufton Village partially furnished availible immediately. Please call Michael 587-0181

Amherst center. 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas, heat, hardwood floors. April showing for June and September leases. Lincoln Real Estate. 253-7879.

3 Bedroom Condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement. 1/2 mile to campus on bus route. April showing for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate 253-7879

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag. black $3500 584-6090

95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer. 546-5366

COMPUTERS

Packard Bell 8kspeecdCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

AUTO FOR SALE

AST 133 MHz pentium with 16GB, windows 95, Netscape, microsoft word, Lotus Applications, plus more. $700.00 or B/O. Call Noah 546-2147 Free delivery within UMass or nearby Amherst area!

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Wayne for Girls- Sister half of brother/sister private camp in Northeastern Pennsylvania (3 hrs from New York City) 6/22-8/20/99. If you love children and want a caring, fun environment we are looking to hire staff for: Tennis, Golf, Gymnastics, Swimming (W.S.I preferred), Sailing, Waterskiing, Piano, Basketball, Softball, Volleyball, Soccer, Self-Defense, Low ropes, Drama Director, Drawing and Painting, Ceramics, Photography, Jewelry, Linoleum Cuts, Batik, Calligraphy, Sculpture, Guitar, Silk-Screening, Cheerleading, Aerobics, Video, Group Leaders, Drivers, Housekeeping, Night Watchperson, Kitchen/Salad On Campus Interviews March 5th. Call 1-800-279-3019 or e-mail: campwayneg@aol.com

FREE RADIO +$1250! Fundraiser open to student groups & organizations. Earn $3-$5 per Visa/MC app. We supply all material at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box. 1-800-932-0528 x 65. www.ocmconcepts.com

Sbarro's Restaurant at Hampshire Mall needs closers. Flexible hours Good pay Apply in person

EMPLOYMENT

Housework good pay near by. Car needed. 548-9635

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net at 770-937-6764

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach gymnastics, athletics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, riflery, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, newspaper, yearbook, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/20/99-8/17/99. Call (800)832-8228 or E-mail: camp4you@aol.com for an application. Visit us: WWW.CANADENSIS.COM

ACTION JOBS-Listings of America's Best Adventure Jobs: Alaska, Adventure Travel, Cruise Ships, Forest Fire Fighting, Sailing, White Water Rafting, Backpacking,& more... www.actionjobs.com

Work in the Music Business! Seeking college reps to work on grassroots marketing campaigns for emerging recording artists. Fax resume to Mike Nowicki at (212) 629-3605 or email miken@metroent.com

DJ Wanted For Mobile Parties For greater Springfield area experience helpfull OWN Transportation needed Call 413-525-8260

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sounds: Rave to Dorm party Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413) 737-8561

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Round-Trip air. Logan to Miami. During Spring-Break $100 Mike 6-3236

Full size mattress and boxspring great condition $150/bo 367-0095

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

LOST & FOUND

Found Necklace. Describe and receive 6-2611

Found CD case: Describe and receive Call 6-2341

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Do you need to pay off your bills once and for all? Personal, Debt Consolidation. Credit Card Repair Call 1-888-780-8082

TICKETS

WWF Springfield 2/21 I-V17 Rows $45-85 each Call 203-730-1182

TRAVEL

BE FLEXIBLE... Europe $288 r/t plus taxes TRAVEL ANYTIME IN 1999! Mexico/Caribbean $159 r/t plus taxes CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!!! CALL: 800-326-2009 www.airhitch.org

GET THE HELL OUT OF HERE! Mexico, The Carribean or Central America $199 round trip. Europe $169 one way. Other worldwide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $635. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

TRAVEL

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplashtours.com

CANCUN*NASSAU* JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 ww.classtravel.com

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

Are you thinking of the Sun and Fun?

Keep on Dreaming, it is only Feburary!

Or you could make plans for Spring Break!!

Look for the numerouis opportunities in The Classifieds!!

What are your plans for the Summer?

Do you want a job?

Check out The Classifieds and find the job of your Dreams!!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, FEB. 19

Film — The Western Mass. Simple Living Network presents a free video series beginning tonight at 7:30 p.m. with a film entitled Advertising and the End of the World. The film is done by UMass professor Sut Jhally and will be shown at the Pioneer Valley Cohousing Community Commonhouse on Pulpit Road in North Amherst.

Lecture — As part of the Geoscience Lecture Series, a lecture entitled "The Topography of Mars" will be given by Maria Zuber at 3:30 p.m. in room 136 of Morrill II South. A reception will follow.

Lecture — Sandra Richter will give a lecture entitled "Bible History: Fact or Folklore? What Really Happened to King Hezekiah?" at 7:15 p.m. in the Chapin Chapel.

SATURDAY, FEB. 20

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable, the UMass improvisational troupe, will perform in room 163 of the Campus Center at 8 p.m.

MONDAY, FEB. 22

Lecture — A works-in-progress entitled "You Don't Look It: Stories from the Latina Community (a performance work)" will take place at 4:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Meeting — There will be a meeting of SHARE (Students Helping Area Reach-Out Efforts) at 6:30 p.m. in room 504 of Goodell.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex in room 302 of University Health Services at 3 p.m.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22 Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — Accounting services from the UMass Accounting Department will be working out of the Hampshire Mall. It is free and open to the public, on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4-7 p.m. in the Hampshire Mall Community Room and Wednesdays from 6-8 p.m. on the Hampshire Mall Stage.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-7:30 p.m. for eight weeks. Call 577-5316 if interested.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs — University Store "Not like a mall... Better."

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	15	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	16	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	30	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	31	Govel to Govel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	32	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	33	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	34	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	35	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	37	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	38	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	39	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	40	Univision
14	International	41	Comedy Central
16	UMass Academic TV	42	Cartoon
18	WB/New Haven	43	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 19, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Antiques Roadshow		American Experience
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Magnificent Seven		Nash Bridges "Resurrection"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Magnificent Seven		Nash Bridges "Resurrection"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two of a Kind	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr			News	Nightline
WLVI		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Providence "If Memory Serves"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "If Memory Serves"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Married... With
WTXX		Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lane	Legacy "The Rivals" (In Stereo)		Love Boat: The Next Wave		News		Homicide: Life on the Street	Tonight Show
WVIT		News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Providence "If Memory Serves"		Dateline (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Mad Abt. You
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	X-Files "Triangle" (In Stereo)		Millennium "Matryoshka"		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "If Memory Serves"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Monty Python	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Time Goes By	Monty Python	Red Dwarf	News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two of a Kind	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20		Frasier	Cheers
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Legacy "The Rivals" (In Stereo)		Love Boat: The Next Wave		Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier	"Olly Slickers R Curly's Gold"
WTBS	49	Family Matters	Family Matters	Rossanna	Rossanna	★★★ "Coal Miner's Daughter" (1980, Biography)		Sissy Spacek, Tommy Lee Jones				Law & Order "Deceit"
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "We Like Mike"		Biography: Andy Griffith		L.A. Detectives		Murder, She Wrote		Sports	Moneyline
CNN	29	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Cold War (R)		Sports	Moneyline
COM	60	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★½ "Patriot" (1984, Comedy)		Goldie Hawn, Chris Sarandon		Comedy Showcase		Dwight	Kids in Hall
DISC	52	New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery	Ruins	Bomb Detectives (R)		News		Inferno	Storm Warning!	Bomb Detectives (R)
ESPN	51	Up Close	Sportscenter			NHL Hockey	Pittsburgh Penguins at New York Rangers. (Live)					Sportsacentury	Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Ellen	Ellen	Oh Baby (R)	Maggie	Chicago Hope "A Couple Sliff"		★★ "Don't Touch My Daughter" (1991, Drama) Victoria Principal.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Countdown	Fanatic (R)	Beavis-Butt.	News	Sliff & Olly	Video Dichos	Total Request Live (In Stereo)		Loveline (R)		Blame Game	Loveline
NICK	55	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Keloikm!	Catdog	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Laverne	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	59	Quantum Leap		Amaz. Stories	Stet Trek "Metamorphosis"			Highlander: The Series		Friday the 13th: The Series		Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC	63	Home Again	Moms Again	Dangerous Food (R)		Paramedics (R)		Super Racers (R)				Paramedics (R)
TNT	50	Due South (R) (In Stereo)		ER "Summer Run" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball: Detroit Pistons at Phoenix Suns. (In Stereo Live)						NBA Basketball: Spurs at Lakers
USA	56	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		★ Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★½ "Basic Instinct" (1992, Suspense) Michael Douglas, Sh Stone		★ "The Patriot" (1998, Action) Steven Seagal.		"Twins" (1988)
HBO	45	(4:00) ★ "Space Works" (1997)		Melanie Brown		Replacement		★½ "Der Fyrst Seven" (1997, Drama) Samuel L. Jackson, Ri		★ "The Game" (1997, Suspense) Morgan Freeman, Ri		Erotic
MAX	46	★★★ "Blind Date" (1987, Comedy)		Bruce Willis. (In Stereo) PG-13				"The Base" (1998, Action) Mark Dacascos. NR		★★ "Kiss the Girls" (1997, Suspense) Morgan Freeman, Ri		Outer Limits
SHOW	44	(5:00)		★★ "Napoleon" (1996) Voice of Jamie Croh				★½ "Hard Rain" (1997) Morgan Freeman. R		Total Recall	Stargate SG1	Dead Man's Gun "The Oath"

For Those About To Rock By James Shaker

408 Ville By Louis and Allan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Spunk By Mike LaRicci

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — A lively, enthusiastic approach today will be appreciated by all. It's about time you put that negative attitude behind you and turn over a new leaf!

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Don't be too playful or flirtatious with a member of the opposite sex today. It's likely that your intentions will be misinterpreted and result in unnecessary conflict.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — What begins too fast or by accident today may actually become dangerous before you know it. Be fully prepared at all times and guard against any attack.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may not want to share your opinions openly today, but the fact is that others can benefit greatly from hearing what you have to say. Be generous with your knowledge.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You are not likely to stand much of a chance today when you come up against a Leo native who has "plans" for you. You'll give in for sure!

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Someone may think that you have to change, but the truth is that you're on the right track and have no real reason to alter yourself in any way right now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You are likely to become involved in the affairs of someone else who has an ulterior motive for welcoming your input. Be cautious during the evening hours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Your first instincts must not be allowed to lead you down the "primrose path." Make sure you get your intellect engaged as well as your heart!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You're in no mood to reveal yourself to others today, for you want to be on the road, freely moving here and there according to your own desires.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Your independence is being threatened at this time, whether you know it or not. Assert yourself in the right ways and at the right times.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You have always believed that love can conquer all, and very much to your delight, you will have a chance today to prove that it is true.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You'll be better at making plans than implementing them today. Leave the legwork to others, but be sure that they're following your instructions.

Quote of the Day

"You're the kind of girl a guy can bring home to mom. You don't wear halter tops." —Overheard

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Why pay $289 to have cruise control installed? You wanna go 65? Grab the rock marked 65 and set it on the gas pedal! You wanna go 55, you grab..."

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-3626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Pizza Casserole
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple-Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Pizza Casserole
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple-Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Hampshire

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Pizza Casserole

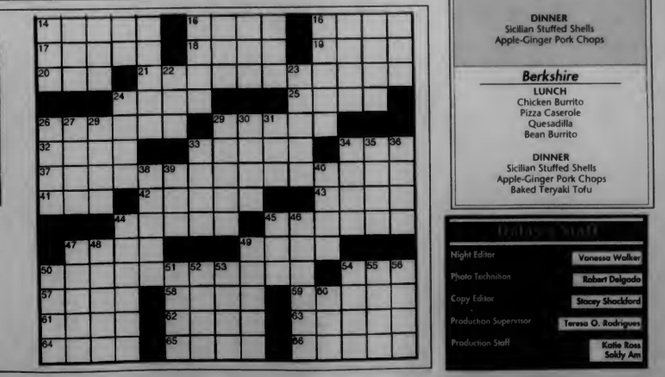
DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple-Ginger Pork Chops

Berkshire

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Pizza Caserole
Quesadilla
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple-Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

ACROSS



1 Garret
6 Glom — (get hold of)
10 Overwhelmed
14 Traveler Polo
15 Enjoy a novel
16 Sturdy cart
17 Act the peacock
18 Strong wind
19 Use the pool
20 Secret agent
21 Unlucky
24 President Perón of Argentina
25 Sets (down)
26 Volcanic rock
29 Wool givers
32 Tel —
33 Bake eggs
34 Airport info (abbr.)
37 Kind of park
41 One of 29 Across
42 Pass into law
43 Length of cloth
44 Elegant
45 Unpleasantly damp
47 Deal with
49 Sabyr
50 Difficult
54 Kitten's cry
57 Be fond of 58 Spiral
59 Florida city
61 "Garfield" pooch
62 Ship's frame
63 Menu option
64 High-schooler
65 Nothing but
66 Singer Cara

DOWN

1 Elec. units
2 Canvas cover
3 Deuce topper
4 Sorbet, essentially
5 Government emissary
6 Keyboard instrument
7 Close at hand
8 Bath powder
9 River to the Baltic
10 Totals
11 Sleeve part
12 Roof overhangs
13 Changed the color of 22 Make lace
23 Rosa's work
24 Jakarta's island
26 Pig of fandom
27 Declare openly
28 Place
29 Hut
30 Sword handle
31 Unit of work
33 Glance over
34 Dutch cheese
35 Semester
36 Rooney of '50 Minutes"
38 Staircase post
39 — nutshell (briefly)
40 Actor O'Neal
44 Ill humor
45 Knows how
46 Horror film actor
47 Regrmand
48 Double-take actor Jack
49 Young mare
50 Sour, as cream
51 Mountain sound
52 Name of a thing
53 Four fluid ounces
54 Gander or drake
55 Verve
56 Cross a creek
60 Vehicle

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

DART SARAH SNUB
ALAI ADORE RIATA
BIRD PERL ARGO
STEPS ROMANCE
ITCH WELD
MAGNOLIA TEMPO
OSU PARED CAIRO
TILL YESSES SLIP
HALOS SOAPS ABE
NYLON PROLIFIC
ROOM STAG
TUITION GUANO
DAMP SOUSE ALOU
EXPO ELMER NUDE
WISP SABER AIMS

Daily Staff

Night Editor — Vanessa Walker
Photo Technician — Robert Delgado
Copy Editor — Stacey Shackford
Production Supervisor — Teresa O. Rodrigues
Production Staff — Katie Ross, Sakky Am

UM shuts down Bonnies 59–39

Smith achieves double–double with 17 points

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

Last night Hilary Waltman made an early exit in her last chance to oust the Massachusetts women's basketball team on their home court, the William D. Mullins Center. The St. Bonaventure senior, ranked 14th in the nation in scoring with 21 points per game, had to settle for just 10 points as the Minutewomen, led by freshman Nekole Smith's 17 points, overcame a dismal first half to win, 59–39.

Before the start of the game, seniors Lucia Madajova, Yolanda Rayside, and a tearful Tez Kraft were given a warm send–off from fans, family and teammates, marking their last–ever home game.

Madajova scored the first bucket at the 19:42 mark before Waltman nailed a three–pointer 17 seconds later. In the next 12 minutes the Minutewomen scored just six points as the Bonnies capitalized with 18 more points to bring the game to 21–8.

Waltman and sophomore Melissa Fazio, who finished with eighteen points, took turns shooting as UMass fumbled with the offense and could not convert for a basket. A timeout was called at 7:42 and the regrouped Minutewomen starting lineup returned.

Junior Tonia Thomas turned out to be the spark UMass needed, feeding Kathy Coyner for a two–point jumper at 7:23. Smith would tack on two more points to tighten the gap and bring the score to 21–12.

But Thomas was not done, connecting for two three– pointers sandwiched around a Fazio trey to come within six points of the Bonnies, 24–18. Coyner also had success from behind the arc as she hit a three–pointer at 1:31. St. Bonaventure's Christen Cole would make a jumper to close out the half with a score of 27–21.

UMass struggled from the floor, shooting 9–for–37 with no trips to the free throw line. Thomas's six points were tops for the team who had blown numerous second–chance opportunities under the basket. Kraft, who entered the game averaging 13.5 ppg, only mustered two points as she shot 1–for–8 from the floor. The Bonnies experienced a far more successful half, averaging .458 from the floor with Fazio leading the way with 12 points.

The second half told a different tale as Smith erupted for 8 straight points from within the paint to tie the game at 29–29 at 16:48.

"I just step on the court and give 100 percent," Smith said.

Kraft would make good on a bullet, half–court pass from Coyner for an open layup at 16:12. St. Bonaventure failed to score for 5:21 and the Minutewomen took advantage, tallying eight points to break open a lead which they would never look back on. 37–29. A timeout was ordered from the Bonnie bench at 14:07.

Fazio responded with a quick open–jumper, but UMass recovered as Kraft displayed her athleticism with a reverse layup in traffic at 14:10. St. Bonaventure was held scoreless for 5:25 and UMass expanded its lead to 48–31.

Carolin Nehls got in the action, taking care of business from the line with two points as Coyner and Jaywana Bradley added two more points apiece. Waltman, who scored her 2,000 career point on Sunday, made a layup at 8:03 to close out her scoring. Smith scored two more baskets and Alison MacFarland, who struggled offensively but was a hound on defense throughout the contest, tacked on two more points with a 12–foot jumper.

Rayside, who sat out with a separated shoulder, made an appearance at 1:57 before Madajova and Kraft exited the court for good with 0:49 seconds left.

"We didn't make too many changes in the second half," coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We opened with sheer intensity."

UMass will close out its regular season on Sunday when the Minutewomen travel to Fordham for a 2 p.m. tip–off.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

With last night's game against St. Bonaventure now behind them, Kathy Coyner and the Massachusetts women's basketball team will set their sights on a matchup with Fordham.

Women's basketball bids adieu to seniors

Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

There were tears, there was laughter, and in the end there was victory, as UMass overcame overwhelming emotions and a six–point halftime deficit in pummeling St. Bonaventure 59–39 on Senior Night at the William D. Mullins Center.

But the scoreboard didn't begin to tell the story on this evening. The tears streaming down the face of fifth senior Tez Kraft's face painted a much more vivid portrait in the grand scheme of things.

Yolanda Rayside entered the contest with 1:57 remaining, returning from a season threatening shoulder injury — it was another moment Minutewomen faithfuls will not soon forget, if they ever do.

"I was just counting on my teammates to make it possible for me to play," Rayside said, referring to the large lead they accumulated. "It just felt good to be able to run up and down the court one more time."

To round off the achievements of the Minutewomen seniors, Lucia Madajova completed the most memorable season of her collegiate career by matching her season averages of 6 points and 8 rebounds.

"This was a very special group of seniors," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "They got every ounce out of what God gave them. The improvement has been remarkable for all three of them since when they first got here."

No one has made more rapid improvement than Madajova, a forward out of Slovakia who has battled through injuries ever since she arrived in Amherst.

Entering this season, "Lutes" averaged 1.1 in both points and rebounds per game, but after finally remaining healthy, she became a vital member of the squad since entering the starting lineup.

Madajova was particularly emotional in the days leading up last night's home finale.

"It got to the point where I was paying attention to everything in terms of being the last time," Madajova said. "The last pre–game warmup, the last shower before the last home game, it just got very emotional."

Kraft concluded the evening by grabbing the house microphone and proclaiming her appreciation to the fans that have supported the team throughout her five years, and then urging them to continue to support the Minutewomen in the coming seasons.

After Kraft's heart–felt words, Kool and the Gang brought the crowd home with "Celebration," and indeed there was plenty to rejoice over.

There was Kraft's all–around excellence, Rayside's determination and perseverance in returning for one last hurrah, and Madajova's made–for–television story about success in the shadow of adversity.

All of these factors help provide an explanation for how this Minutewomen team has been able to compile a 15–13 record with one regular season game remaining, despite having as little as seven players at its service.

For those who attended last night's game, it was evident that the sky is indeed the limit for the Minutewomen as they look to pen one last happy ending in the City of Brotherly Love at the Atlantic 10 tournament.

But regardless of what transpires next week, the seniors, led by tri–captain Kraft, will have a tremendous amount of experience to reflect upon and embrace for the rest of their lives.

UMass hockey squad to play a pair; Army and Lowell ahead this weekend

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts hockey team (8–18–2, 5–13–2 in Hockey East) is preparing for what is to be one the biggest weekends of the season. Despite only having one Hockey East match with the UMass–Lowell River Hawks at Tsongas Arena in Lowell on Saturday night, the magnitude of the game is what's really important.

The Minutemen begin the weekend with a non–conference match–up with a 7 p.m. faceoff with Army (15–16–1) tonight at the William D. Mullins Center [91.1 FM, WMUA].

"It's interesting schedule–wise, playing a non–conference game. It's a nice change of pace over the last couple of seasons playing a non–conference game," Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "Army is a team you can't take lightly. They are well–conditioned and well–disciplined, and they can definitely surprise teams."

The Cadets have been lackluster away from home, going 4–7 on the road. They will also be stepping into one of the toughest buildings to play in this season. The Mullins Center is where Hockey East powerhouses like Maine and Boston University have fallen victim to the Minutemen. It has also been the site of close games with Boston College and New Hampshire.

The biggest game of the weekend for the Minutemen will certainly be the game at Tsongas, when the Minutemen face off against UMass–Lowell (16–13, 8–11 in Hockey East) for the third time this season. The Minutemen are 0–2 against the River Hawks, but have lost both games by only one goal. The Maroon and White lost 4–3 in overtime at the Mullins back in November and dropped a 2–1 decision last Friday night at Tsongas.

"Playing at Tsongas Arena was a new experience for the players and the coaches. For the most part we are creatures of habit," Mallen said. "Our first period at Lowell was one of our worst periods all season, but hopefully having played there last Friday will allow us to play with a little more confidence and more feeling. We know the building and the team and I think are odds are good."

Tomorrow's game with the River Hawks will be crucial in the battle for a playoff spot in Hockey East. The Minutemen, who mathematically still have a shot at finishing fifth place in the conference, will just be looking to solidify a spot in the post–season tournament by beating Lowell on the road.

The game is made more crucial by the fact that the Minutemen have a game in hand against everyone in the conference. Those games will be played tonight while UMass tackles Army. The key games on tap tonight in Hockey East, which the Minutemen will be monitoring, include The New Hampshire/Northeastern game and the Merrimack/Providence game.

The Minutemen are now in the driver's seat after beating Northeastern last Saturday at the Mullins, 6–3. It put them up on the Huskies by two points, and for all intents and purposes the win allows the Minutemen to control their own destiny.

"I think we are playing better as a team right now. Our wins against Merrimack and Northeastern and our close games against Boston College and UMass–Lowell are making people take notice. Whether we have a lead or not [in the conference standings] we have to make things happen by following up with a strong performance over the next three weekends," Mallen said. "This is the time of year when you need to pick it up. We are looking to sweep both these teams."

The Lowell scorers who UMass will need to monitor include forwards John Campbell and Chris Bell, who have 30 and 29 points respectively. They will also need to watch sniper defensemen Anthony Cappelletti, who has 12 goals to go along with his 17 assists (second on the team).

In net, the Minutemen will probably need to figure out Scott Fankhouser, who has been inconsistent this season, but his moments of brilliance have come at the hands of Minutemen. Fankhouser is 15–10 on the year with a 2.71 goals against average (GAA) and a .899 save percentage. All of Fankhouser's numbers are less impressive in conference play.

The Minutemen are looking to counter with Markus Helanen on Saturday night against Lowell, while also letting freshman Mike Johnson acquire some more experience on home ice against Army.

"From my end, we might play Mike on Friday, and reward him with a home game for the way he has been playing," Mallen said, "and save Markus for Saturday night's game, which is a conference game and it's more important."

Struggling Minutemen ready to host Musketeers tomorrow; stakes are high

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

That point in the season that a coach dreads is finally here for the Massachusetts men's basketball team. With an 11–14 overall record and a 7–6 Atlantic 10 mark, the Minutemen will be playing for little more than pride tomorrow at noon when they take on Xavier at the William D. Mullins Center.

After matching a two–game win streak, UMass has dropped two consecutive matchups to leave themselves in a position where they have very little opportunity to improve their situation.

At two separate instances in the last two weeks, Massachusetts was tied with Rhode Island for second place in the A–10 Eastern Division. Each time, the two teams faced–off for a temporary edge in the standings, and each time, the Rams walked away victorious.

Had the Minutemen pulled out one of the pair, they would still be in control of their post–season destiny with three regular season games remaining. In their current situation, though, UMass can all but wait for the conference tournament to begin.

If Massachusetts can steal their final three games, and then take at least one contest in the A–10 tournament, they will be able to make a serious bid for an NIT berth. UMass' only current opportunity to return to the NCAA tournament for the eighth straight year will be to upset frontrunners Temple and George Washington and snag the conference title.

Adding somewhat detrimental turmoil to an already uncertain situation is the role of the UMass seniors. Starting point guard Charlton Clarke and center Lari Ketner were benched for the final 14 minutes of a 78–72 loss at GW on Wednesday because Minuteman skipper Bruiser Flint was unsatisfied by their effort. In their place, Rafael Cruz and Winston Smith offered solid performances, respectively.

Flint is expected to return Clarke and Ketner to their starting positions Saturday, but Massachusetts fans shouldn't be surprised to see them ousted if they aren't producing early. Former top–reserve point guard Jonathan DePina struggled on Wednesday, and has possibly played himself out of a significant role on the team.

Leading the squad will be forward Chris Kirkland, who has been arguably the strongest performer since he replaced the now–dismissed Ajmal Basit in the starting lineup. Kirkland poured in 26 points and 12 rebounds in their last matchup, statistics that although above his averages, are indicative of the effort he exhibits in each game.

Junior guard Monty Mack will also be looked upon to contribute heavily, as his team–leading scoring average earned him recent A–10 Player of the Week honors.

These players will be facing a tough Xavier team that has a very concrete reason to play. The Musketeers are 11–2 in the conference and are tied for the top spot in the Western Division. The Minutemen, who rely on forward Mike Babul and Mack to silence their opponents' top offensive threats, will need to deal with a potent Xavier trio who each average double digits. Lenny Brown dumps in 17.2 points an outing, James Posey contributes with 15.9 points and 9.5 rebounds a game to go along with 74 total steals, while Gary Lumpkin averages 11.7 points.

MEN'S BASKETBALL
UMASS VS. XAVIER
SATURDAY, 12:00 P.M.
91.1 FM WMUA
BRET MAUSER–PLAY
SETH KOENIG–COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW

Women's gym to host No. 1 Alabama

By Matt Frascella
Collegian Staff

Riding a wave of three consecutive road victories, the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team is returning home this Sunday at 1 p.m. when the University of Alabama–Crimson Tide rolls into town carrying the No. 1 national ranking in collegiate women's gymnastics.

This Sunday's meet at Curry Hicks Cage will mark the first time that a No. 1 ranked gymnastics team has come to compete in Amherst. For the returning members of the UMass team who have never beaten Alabama, their arrival could not come at a better time in the season.

After returning home from a four–meet road trip that has encompassed almost a month of the season, the Minutewomen have gained considerable momentum by posting three straight victories. In the most recent win over Yale last weekend, UMass posted a team score of 191.550, its highest team score of the season.

"Our focus is to win the meet," Massachusetts women's gymnastics coach Dave Kuzara said. "I feel if we do our job, we can, if not upset them, certainly put a big scare into them. This is a great opportunity to put UMass back on the map. It would really make people sit up and notice if we beat a team the caliber of the University of Alabama."

The Maroon and White must be on top of their game to do so, and unseat a very powerful Alabama team that has not scored lower than 195 points in team competition all season.

"Alabama is the No. 1 ranked team in the country, and that says a lot in our sport because it is so competitive," Kuzara said. "It's a battle to be No. 1 all the time with the teams that are up there. Right now Alabama is proving they are the toughest."

Having secured the ranking on Jan. 27, the Crimson Tide are also showing the nation that they can survive atop the rankings, despite the fact that their schedule takes them up against the premier programs in women's gymnastics.

If Alabama is vulnerable though, it is during this portion of the season. After a recent home loss to Georgia, the Crimson Tide have taken to the road, where they will travel to Penn State today to face a ranked Nittany Lions squad, and then stop in Amherst on Sunday afternoon to conclude the long road trip.

For UMass to top Alabama they will need a key performance by Michelle LoPresti. LoPresti's senior leadership and consistency on the road has led her to wins in the last two all–arounds she has competed in, anchoring the team and playing a major role in their success. However, nothing less than a wholehearted team effort will be needed to stop the Tide.

Going head to head with talented ranked teams is nothing new to this Minutewomen team. Earlier in the season UMass hosted No. 12

Turn to Women's Gym, page 7

Women's track to A–10's

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team prepares to head to Kingston, R.I. for the Atlantic 10 Conference Championships.

The Minutewomen will enter the meet as the defending conference champions and will look to repeat that feat this weekend.

UMass coach Julie LaFreniere will be looking at athletes like Rosey Bryan to help lead the Minutewomen to a repeat performance of their championship victory last season in Kingston. Bryan owns the teams top times in the 55–meter hurdles (8.02), which she collected at the New England Championships. That time qualifies her for the ECAC Indoor Track Championships.

Bryan also owns the best distance in the triple jump.

The Minutewomen will also be counting on the likes of Nicole Way, who was named this week's WHMP/UMass Athlete of the Week.

The Mastern Mills native was recognized for her efforts in last weekend's New England Championships. Way helped lead the Minutewomen to a second–place finish overall by winning the 1,000 meters in a time of 2:56.95. She also ran the first leg on the winning distance medley relay team (12:03.64). Both times qualify her for the ECAC's.

Way is also the Minutewomen's top long distance threat. She owns the team's best times in the 800 meters (2:17.74), the 1,000 meters and the mile (5:01.65). Her time in the 800 meters also qualified her for the ECAC's.

The Minutewomen will also be looking for strong efforts from Shelanda Irish and Andrea Comeau.

Irish owns four of the Minutewomen's best times this season. The Randolph native owns the best times in the 55– meter dash (7.25), 200 meters (25.77), the 400 meters (59.42) and the 4 x 400 meter relay (3:58.74), which is good enough to qualify the relay team at that distance for ECAC's.

Comeau is also a member of the 4 x 400 meter relay team and owns the best mark in the 500 meters with a time of 1:17.55.

She has the best jump in the high jump with a leap of 5– feet–10 and one–half inches. The top pentathlon mark is also owned by Comeau, who scored 3,658 points. That score is not only good enough to qualify her for ECAC's, but is also a school record.

The Minutewomen will also need strong efforts from their role players, such as Sally Hirsch, who owns the team's best time in the 3,000 meters (10:04.63).

Johanna Lelke and Carole LaPlante will also be looked upon to contribute in the field events. Lelke will need to equalize her pole vault mark from last weekend, when she vaulted a shade over 10 feet. LaPlante will be looked upon to match her early–season throwing in order to score points in the A–10's for the Minutewomen.

The A–10 Championships begin tomorrow at the University of Rhode Island at 10 a.m.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 19 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Monday, February 22, 1999

Black Panther Seale speaks at Amherst

By Bryant Pheanious
Collegian Correspondent

Founding father of the revolutionary Black Panther Party, Bobby Seale, spoke to a crowded Johnson Chapel Thursday night at Amherst College in order to dispel the many stereotypes surrounding what his party is really about.

Pointing out Melvin Van Peebles's movie Panther, Seale described it as "crap" and a false portrayal of what the party is really about.

The son of a carpenter and builder from Jasper, Texas, Seale told the history of the Black Panther Party. A history that included police brutality in the 60s as an institutionalized political structure centered around civil rights.

Dressed in casual attire with a gray–colored beret, Seale recognized the assassination and commitments of Malcolm X and Dr. Martin Luther King as the primary factors that influenced him to act vigorously against oppression in order to achieve equality for people of color.

In addition, Nelson Mandela and his struggle against apartheid and reading "Wretched Of The Earth" by Frantz Fanon were key elements of his revolution against racism.

In a high point in the evening, Seale read a poem by poet Robert Stone entitled "Uncle Sammy Call Me For Lucifer," which lifted students out of their seats in applause. Seale used the poem as a defining statement in his address.

Seale explained the Black Panther Party is an organization whose members were disciplined, educated and organized. The group was adamant about exposing what Seale called "white racist capitalism."

The Black Panther Party's objectives included the Ten Point Program which Seale said was constructed to erase police brutality, create fair and equal housing, and create equal justice in the courts against people of color.

In their fight, Seale said the party struggled against false advertisements, myths and stereotypes by former FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, whom Seale referred to as a "propagandist."

Seale explained that while on their journey to achieve civil rights for people of color they constantly struggled against the FBI's involvement in the infiltration of the Panther Party and murders of Malcolm X and Dr. Martin Luther King.

After speaking, Seales mingled with students after signing posters and his latest book, Seize The Time, a history of the Black Panther Party.

UMass employee's art finds its way onto TV

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Painting is a form of expression for artist and University of Massachusetts Food Services' employee "Ralfie," who said his art has elevated him to levels he never thought of reaching and has served as an inspiration in many people's lives.

Known for his paintings that have appeared on television series' such as "Corby," "General Hospital," and "The Fresh Prince of Bel–Air," Ralfie enjoys people's appreciation of his work that has become nationally noticed and featured on television.

"It's a great honor to be admired by Hollywood," Ralfie said. "It's made me feel good to know there's something I can create that they really appreciate."

Growing up in Detroit, Mich., he attended the Waldorf School for the Arts and focused on music studies. His post– secondary education at Indiana University placed him in a top graduate orchestra as a freshman, and he said if it hadn't been for his music talent, he wouldn't have been accepted into the university.

"I went to college for only three years and didn't graduate," Ralfie said. "I just couldn't keep up because I couldn't read."

Once he dropped out, he travelled to Europe and from his visits to the Van Gogh Museum of Art in England, he began to develop an interest in self–expression through art.

"It was there that I realized I could do the primitive style of painting that Van Gogh does very easily," Ralfie said. "I basically tell my life story through the paintings I paint."

With no formal training in painting, Ralfie developed a form of landscape art focused on the interactions of people's lives within their neighborhoods. Suffering with dyslexia, Ralfie paints by looking at his subject through a mirror which helps him see the images in their natural setting.

His artwork collection was praised by Things, Graphics, and Fine Arts, a company from Washington, D.C., which saw Ralfie's art as an excellent display of people interacting within their environment.

Almost all of his paintings consist of neighborhoods and houses from his past experiences.

"Everybody can relate to a neighborhood," Ralfie said.

LISA GOROVSKY/ COLLEGIAN

Ralfie, a UMass employee and artist, has his artwork hanging on the walls of some of your favorite television shows.

Turn to RALFIE, page 2

BP endangering arctic wilderness, MassPIRG says

By Jake Lifsen
Collegian Staff

MassPIRG staged a protest yesterday at the British Petroleum station in Hadley.

The protest was held in response to recent attempts by British Petroleum, as well as several other major oil companies, to receive permission from Congress to drill for oil in the National Arctic Wildlife Refuge in Alaska.

Six simultaneous protests were held at British Petroleum stations throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"We're trying to protect the refuge," said Jenna Feldberg, a MassPIRG media intern. "We've done geological surveys on the area, and we've found that there's only 4–6 months of oil available in the refuge."

According to Feldberg, there are numerous reasons why the area should be preserved.

She said the region is home to the Gwich'in People, one of the last remaining subsistence cultures in North America. By drilling, the oil companies would devastate a local herd of 150,000 porcupine caribou, on which the Gwich'in People thrive.

Turn to DRILLING, page 2

Edut talks about her book, images of women in media

Ophira Edut, author of Adios Barbie, spoke Thursday in the Campus Center and Food for Thought bookstore about eating disorders and issues.

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Ophira Edut, author of the newly released collection of essays entitled, Adios Barbie, spoke Thursday at the University of Massachusetts Campus Center and at Food For Thought Bookstore in Amherst.

Joining her, was Jean Ann Pannasch, managing editor of Ms. magazine, and Carolyn Mackler, a contributor to the novel.

Edut said she wanted to represent a slightly different angle on body image than what the traditional media portrays.

"In Seventeen there were articles like 'I was 6'7 and weighed 57 pounds,'" and while that's an important issue, she said, she wanted to articulate a much deeper issue than eating disorders.

"We have the Spice Girls telling us we can kick ass and rule the world, but the world isn't always so friendly to us," she said.

"We have the tools to get a flat stomach, and calculate body fat, but were not given the tools we need — like how to love ourselves."

Edut read the audience the introduction she wrote to Adios Barbie.

"Instead of putting all your resistance into the leg press machine, focus some on the culture that directs our best energies into body–hating pursuits. Life is an opportunity for joy and celebration," she wrote.

"How can our lives be full if our stomachs aren't? How can we understand life's gifts when we're too blinded by our own perceived inadequacies to appreciate them," she said.

Mackler, who recently completed writing a young adult novel, read her essay from the book "Memoirs of a (sorta) Ex–Shaver."

"I tremble to think of what would have happened if I, a vaguely insecure, overly tall 16–year–old, had paraded into homeroom one morning sporting furry legs and an ample bush under each arm," she read.

"In a town of conformity (where the gossip of the school was that Marta dared to have 'flat hair' — meaning no perm, no hairspray, no poofed bangs), this would have meant instant death by humiliation. I would have rather stuck my head in an oven," Mackler said.

Mackler also talked about the obsession we have with shaving our bodies and our discomfort with "hairiness," although it is completely natural.

The evening ended in a discussion about the restructuring of Ms. magazine. Pannasch, the managing editor, sought suggestions from the audience on improvements.

Pannasch said the magazine is under new ownership and wants to talk more about women's lives and appeal to a wider readership.

"People have said a lot of the articles in the past have been too academic and dense," she said.

Some suggestions coming from the audiences were including more articles about sex, decreasing subscription costs (the magazine has no advertisements), and including articles about transgendered people.

The group also talked about young girls and their media influences.

Edut said a lot of girls are getting the message, "in order to be listened to, you need to be looked at first."

"If the mainstream [media] can sell it," she said, "they'll try to own it."

Pentagon wants first look at new book

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Defense Department agency, coming full circle, is telling former U.N. weapons inspector Scott Ritter once again that he may need to submit for pre–publication review a book expected to criticize the Clinton administration.

Ritter's lawyer calls the latest Pentagon position an attempt at intimidation.

David J. Rigby, spokesman for the Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DRTA), said yesterday that a letter was sent Feb. 18 to Ritter's attorneys, telling the former Marine intelligence officer that, under the contracts he signed with the agency, any publication discussing the work he did hunting for illegal weapons in Iraq must first be submitted for governmental review.

That reverses last month's Pentagon position in which the agency stepped back from an initial request to review the book, saying that because Ritter no longer was under contract to the Defense Department he was not legally obligated to submit it for review. "Back in January, there was not as thorough a legal review of what the requirements of the contract were," Rigby said when asked about the new letter.

The latest letter states, "No prior statements or actions by D.T.R.A. should be construed in any way as waiving its rights under the contract or to permitting Mr. Ritner to ignore his responsibilities under his contract." Ritter said publication review clauses are standard in military contracts.

Ritter was technically under contract with the agency — the Pentagon office that deals with threats from weapons of mass destruction — during the time he was working for the United Nations Special Commission on Iraq. He resigned last fall and accused the Clinton administration of undermining the commission's job of rooting out Saddam Hussein's attempts to produce chemical and biological weapons.

Ritter's lawyer, Matthew L. Lifflander, told The New York Times that "You could easily conclude that this is a last–minute effort to delay publication."

"Mr. Ritter continues to believe that nothing in the manuscript could possibly be contested on a national–security basis by government censors, although some of what he has to say may be distasteful to some significant policymakers," Lifflander said in a letter to the agency, according to the Times.

Calls to Lifflander's office yesterday were not returned.

Rigby said the book — titled The Iraq Solution and due out in April — requires a review if it contains material — classified or unclassified — from Ritter's work for the agency.

KARA STORELY/ COLLEGIAN

The happiest dog in Amherst

A smiling dog waits for his owner outside the Amherst Newsroom.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 0	HIGH: 26 LOW: 6	HIGH: 31 LOW: 14

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Radio free Washington

Find out how Vice President Al Gore is working with the Federal Communications Commission to stop advertisers from discriminating against minority radio stations.

NEWS PAGE 3

Art imitates life, life imitates art

The connected worlds of art and culture are united and explored in Repurpose, a collection of art work on display at the Student Union. See inside.

ARTS PAGE 6

Mack Attack

Monty Mack scored 21 points and collected 10 rebounds to help lead UMass to a huge Atlantic 10 win over 19–7 Xavier.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Black Affairs 5
Classifieds 8
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
FYI 8
News 3

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

■ Ralfie

continued from page 1

said. "It tells of people's lives and how my life intertwines with theirs. I'm almost always in my paintings."

Before he knew it, actor Bill Cosby had agreed to buy Ralfie's prints, some of which appeared on the "Cosby Show" and on "Cosby." Out of gratitude, Cosby asked to meet the aspiring artist.

Since "Cosby," he has been receiving requests to have his paintings appear on the soap series "General Hospital," "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air," and "The Martin Lawrence Show."

A totem pole he gave to Oprah Winfrey now rests in her house, Ralfie said. He feels anything is possible as long as one believes in themself.

"The biggest success in painting is to believe in yourself, hold on to your dreams, never give up, and sooner or later you will get to where you want," Ralfie said.

A renowned artist and professor from Indiana University claimed the 21st century would be Ralfie's period in which the world would come to recognize him and appreciate his art, Ralfie said.

In keeping with the age, Ralfie refers to himself as the "artist of the 21st century." He feels he owes his success to his ambition and most of all, believing in himself.

COURTESY OF MEDIA RELATIONS

Ralfie's work, shown here, has graced the sets of many TV shows, including the "Cosby Show" and "General Hospital."

Gore lobbies for fairness in advertising practices

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government is urging advertisers and broadcasters to adopt a system to prevent advertisers from discriminating against radio stations owned by or geared to minority listeners.

Vice President Al Gore and Federal Communications Commission (FCC) Chairman Bill Kennard are making the pitch today at an advertising conference in New York.

Their challenge responds to a report, issued by the last month, that said advertisers often bypass or pay less money to minority-owned radio stations or stations targeting black or Hispanic listeners.

At the conference, Kennard plans to suggest that the industries develop a voluntary code guided by, among other things, the principal of "fair competition," said FCC and administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"Diversity of voices and views is a pillar of our democracy," Gore said in remarks prepared for delivery to the conference via satellite. "That is why we must ensure that our airwaves provide opportunities for all Americans."

The challenge is intended to be a "starting point" for the industry to consider, the officials said.

Thus far, the advertising and broadcasting industries have been open to but noncommittal about developing such a code. The American Advertising Federation is assembling a panel to examine its feasibility.

Gore, who supports Kennard's approach, will call on advertisers and advertising agencies "to make voluntary commitments demonstrating that they understand the value of diversity and the economic logic of serving minority consumers," according to his prepared remarks.

A copy was made available to The Associated Press.

The FCC report, written by the Civil Rights Forum on Communications Policy, an advocacy group based here, recommended that industry adopt a code of conduct that requires decisions about buying ads to be based on market research.

It's unclear what specifically Gore and Kennard would like to see included in such a voluntary code.

In the Feb. 17 issue of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, a news brief incorrectly stated the date of the Amherst town election. It is March 30. The Collegian regrets the error.

Survey says: market to remain healthy

By Donna Murphy Weston
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The U.S. job market should remain strong through the second quarter of the year, despite a softening in the manufacturing sector, according to results of a survey.

In its quarterly survey of 16,000 U.S. businesses, Manpower Inc. reported that 29 percent of the companies responding plan to add workers in the April-June quarter. The survey was released yesterday.

Only 6 percent of the businesses surveyed said they plan to cut jobs, while 61 percent anticipate no change. The remaining 4 percent weren't sure, the survey said.

The results indicate low unemployment should continue.

In January, the nation's jobless rate held at a 28-year low of 4.3 percent, with unemployment rates for blacks and Hispanics falling to the lowest levels since the government began tracking them in the early 1970s.

"We see no deterioration of hiring strength in terms of plans to reduce work forces even in the manufacturing sectors, where weakness is centered more on new hires than on downsizing activity," said Mitchell S. Fromstein, chief executive officer of the Milwaukee-based Manpower, the nation's largest temporary staffing firm.

That weakness was offset by stronger demand for workers in the services and construction industries, Manpower said.

The quarterly survey's results are comparable to year-ago figures, but markedly higher than first-quarter projections, reflecting typical seasonal hiring patters, Manpower said.

In the first quarter, 23 percent of the companies expected to add jobs, 10 percent expected job cuts and 63 percent anticipated no change.

Write for News.

KARA STOKES/ COLLEGIAN

Home away from home

UMass graduate Ryan Harris and Jeff Blancato, members of the Sinclair Jennings Band, quietly read in Atticus/Albion Bookstore yesterday morning, preserving their energy for an upcoming show this Friday in Van Meter.

■ drilling

continued from page 1

"They live off of the caribou just like Native Americans lived off of the buffalo," she said. "The Gwich'in won't be able to survive if the caribou don't survive. The word Gwich'in means, 'People of the Caribou.'"

Feldberg claims, in addition to harming the Gwich'in, the drilling would pose a threat to a nearby polar bear breeding ground.

"Polar bears are very sensitive to human activity," she said. She claims that disrupting the breeding process could potentially decimate the polar bear population.

She also claims that there are over a hundred different species of migratory birds that live in the area.

"Almost every single state in the US is visited by at least one species of birds from the refuge," Feldberg said.

"There are also other animals in the region — wolves, black bears, brown bears. It's quite a variety of life up there."

As part of the protest, MassPIRG volunteers presented British Petroleum employees with approximately 150 signatures urging the corporation to stay out of the refuge. They instructed the employees to send the signatures to Seth Roberts, who Feldberg said is the owner of most of the British Petroleum stations in New England.

"Our main goal is to get Seth Roberts to write a letter to Sir John Browne, the President of British Petroleum in London," she said. "He is the owner of all of the BP stations, and he's basically the one making the decision."

She added, "We'd like to see Seth Roberts write a letter to John Browne saying, 'It's not a wise economic decision to go into the Arctic because the community has made it clear that having the refuge protected is important to them.'"

MassPIRG plans to hold another protest in two weeks at the same station.

As part of the protest, MassPIRG

Graduation is three months away.
(Get a job yet?)

Students from all majors and colleges are welcome

TOMORROW
10AM-3PM
Campus Center Auditorium

Career Fair '99
SPONSORED BY THE APPAREL MARKETING PROGRAM, DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER STUDIES
Professional Dress Preferred • Please call 545-5014 for additional information

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
presents

WEDNESDAY
FEBRUARY 24th:
"The Balloon Artist Known as Phil" in the Student Union Building from 3pm to 7pm.
Sneak showing of the movie "Enemy of the State," 7pm, Student Union Ballroom. Part of Student Union Showcase.

TUESDAY
FEBRUARY 23rd:
A Night of Acapella Music...
"The Amherst Regional High School Chorale;"
4 UMass women known as "Premium,"
"The Bear Necessities" from Brown University.
Bezanson Recital Hall, 8pm

FRIDAY
FEBRUARY 26th:
Richie Havens in concert,
UMass Bowker Auditorium, 8pm.
Free to UMass undergrads.
$5 General Public
Tickets: 545-2511

SUNDAY
FEBRUARY 28th:
Sunday Night Movie...
"Enemy of the State,"
Campus Center Auditorium,
7 & 9pm.

545-3600
http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm

International News Briefs

Ruling party tries to keep office in impoverished Mexican state.

CHETUMAL, Mexico (AP) — Mexico's ruling party battled to keep two governorships in yesterday's elections, with the toughest battle by far in Quintana Roo, where palm trees and turquoise waters serve as a backdrop for grinding poverty and a booming drug trade.

The Caribbean coast state, where wealthy tourist resorts like Cancun are located near dirt-poor Maya Indian communities, will test the Institutional Revolutionary Party's ability to convince voters it can narrow the income gap and overcome the image of corruption and authoritarianism that dogs current Gov. Mario Villanueva.

"We need a change. The worst thing that could happen is for things to go on the same way," said Manuel Peraza, a businessman in Chetumal, the state capital.

Voters formed short lines at polling places in Chetumal. Turnout also appeared to be light in yesterday's other race, the gubernatorial contest in Hidalgo state, on Mexico's central plains.

The ruling party, known as the PRI, was expected to win easily in Hidalgo. The Quintana Roo race between Gaston Alegre of the leftist Democratic Revolution Party and PRI candidate Joaquin Hendricks, a former army officer, was much closer.

Alegre has pledged more protection for workers and the state's fragile environment, while Hendricks wants to develop agribusiness to keep poor farmers from flocking to slums surrounding the resorts.

The PRI has governed Quintana Roo since it was admitted as a state in 1974. At the federal level, the party has held the presidency without interruption since 1929 and would like to maintain its strength for the 2000 presidential vote. Earlier this month, it won the governorship of Guerrero state but lost in Baja California Sur.

The party faces serious problems in Quintana Roo.

Two days before yesterday's vote, federal prosecutors announced 38 arrest warrants for former Quintana Roo state officials and businessmen linked to the cocaine-trafficking Juarez cartel. Many believe the U.S. government would like to see Villanueva prosecuted for alleged links to drug traffickers. Villanueva, who maintains his innocence, has won a court order allowing him to see evidence in a Mexican investigation against him.

Still, the PRI's big challenge comes in places like the largely Indian town of Felipe Carrillo Puerto, where farmworkers earn about $1.70 per day, well below the national minimum wage of $5.45 a day. Hermino Cab said he supports Democratic Revolution "because the PRI never does anything for us. We don't have irrigation, we don't have tractors... the hospital won't take care of us, and sometimes our children die."

Russian premier concerned about high welfare payments

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's cash-hungry government should trim its welfare rolls, Russia's prime minister suggested yesterday.

Yevgeny Primakov singled out benefits for people in Russia's north, who are entitled to subsidies because of the brutal weather and high cost of bringing in food and consumer goods.

"The Russian government is concerned by a large number of people enjoying benefits which the federal government cannot ensure," Primakov was quoted by the ITAR-Tass news agency as saying in St. Petersburg. He did not give specific figures or say the benefits would definitely be stopped.

Russia, facing an economic crisis on top of years of protracted economic decline, has already effectively cut off millions of people from welfare by delaying payments to pensioners, disabled people, the unemployed and veterans. The government owes billions of rubles in overdue pensions and wages to state workers.

The benefits themselves have not kept up with inflation that has jumped since Russia devalued the ruble last August. Most Russian retirees get about $17 a month.

The Soviet government developed oil, mineral and other resources in the North — a region that covers half Russia's territory — according to the official "discomfort index," by using prison labor and luring other workers with well-padded salaries and generous subsidies.

Russia's government can no longer afford to colonize the North at any cost, or afford the bloated welfare system it inherited from the Soviet Union.

You must remember this: woman named U.S. memory champion

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Give Tatiana Cooley 15 minutes to memorize 100 faces and names and she'll remember 70 of them in a snap.

Give the reigning and only USA National Memory Champion strings of 4,000 numbers, "709935185558899..." or 500 words: "liquid, dairy, digit, district, garden, hair..." and she'll repeat them better than most. Same with a 54-line poem or a deck of cards. So why does Tatiana Cooley need Post-its?

"I'm incredibly absent-minded," said the tall 27-year-old with a Julia Roberts grin who recently defeated 16 challengers to keep the title she won in 1997. Her feats of recall also won her a second trip to London for a spot in a world contest of brainsnot-brawn.

But asked how many brothers and sisters she has, she replied "six, er seven, er six." When did she win the Los Angeles regional spelling bee? Grade school — but she doesn't remember which grade. The year she graduated high school in New Orleans, seventh in her class? A pause. "1990."

Fearful of forgetting, she keeps a daily "to-do" list. Her days hang on sticky little notes. "I live by Post-its," Cooley said.

"I think the ability to memorize things is a different realm," Cooley explained. "It's not at the same level as remembering to call people."

Modest as well as candid, she insists she's not unique. "Anybody can train their mind to memorize," she said.

Cooley said she has two techniques: visualization and association. The first entails looking at material and mentally photographing it. The other involves making up a story that links random numbers and words.

She came to be champ by chance.

It was 1997, the Saturday before Thanksgiving. Cooley and her boyfriend of a month, Dominick DeMillo, were looking for fun and found a competition called Memoriad '97 at a Manhattan hotel. Eight hours later, she was America's National Memory Champion.

She had defeated 17 other contestants in the first U.S. trials of a similar competition started in England in the early 1990s. With the two runners-up, she went to London last August to compete in the first international Mind Sports Olympiad. There she took second place in the memory events, losing to Sue Whiting, an astrophysicist from Radlett, England. This year's U.S. Memoriad took place on the 19th floor of a Manhattan office building on a bitterly cold Saturday, watched by several dozen spectators and Cooley's personal cheering squad consisting of Dominick, her aunt and a sister.

The other contestants included nine high school students from New Jersey, a real estate broker from Pennsylvania and a computer programmer.

The competitive events proceeded in silence, interspersed with lectures by memory experts about the brain and using it.

Contestants, each seated at a small table, were handed a page bearing colored photographs and names, then pages of hundreds of words, then pages with thousands of numbers, then a poem which organizers said was written for the event by Britain's late poet laureate, Ted Hughes. It began: "A Knight in armour falls pushed off his star/By the crow of a cock. A wedding ring/Bounced off a coffin by a finger caught it."

ARE YOU
STAYING IN AMHERST THIS SUMMER?
LOOKING FOR A JOB?

Application Packets are Available at the Conference Services Offices Room 918 Campus Center Ninth Floor

Work with SCH in Providing Residence Hall Accommodations to over 70 Conference Groups Meeting at Umass this Summer

SMART CHOICES FOR Summer
Summer Conference Housing

GRAND OPENING!

club kaos
GRAND OPENING!
SATURDAY
K-Klass
Carl Thomas & Andy Williams
Slacker
XL Records Loaded Records -U.K.
Johnny Cowan
Bliss Productions -Miami FL
DJ Sandy
THE ONE THE ONLY
Steve Porter
3 Rooms 18,000 sq. ft. of Dance Music Mayhem
The Largest Nightclub in New England!
resident DJs:
EVERY SATURDAY NIGHT
10:00pm - 6:00am
18+ for entry 21+ to drink
$10.00
club kaos
Underground Dance Mayhem
1592 Main Street
(corner of main & worthington downtown springfield)
413-739-7900
directions/info 413-750-0970
in the kosmic lounge:

THE 1999
STUDENT UNION
Come to celebrate our student involvement and to thank our patrons. The festivities will feature the services and programs offered by the student groups, agencies, businesses and governing bodies.

SHOWCASE
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24
OPEN HOUSE NOON TO 6 P.M.

STUDENT PERFORMANCES!
Poetry! Dance! Music! Art!
Special Reception 3-6 All Invited
LIGHT FARE & BEVERAGES
• BALLOON ARTIST • RAFFLE
• CRAFT DEMOS • T-SHIRTS
Free Sneak Screening of "Enemy of the State" - Ballroom 7:00

Call for Information:
Krista Wilson @ 545.1282
Paula Hodecker @ 545.2096

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

The Race is on

The race is on as the University of Massachusetts Amherst suddenly removes race as a factor considered in its admissions procedures. UMass is scrambling to find ways to admit a freshman class that vaguely resembles the state the school serves.

UMass actually started the race itself. I hope we are ready to run it. Following a federal court ruling against racial preference in a different school, the University decided, as a pre-emptive strike against expected lawsuits challenging race preference, to eliminate it. In doing so, we joined the current nationwide attack on "affirmative action." (The term "affirmative action" itself conveys no real meaning. However, unlike other meaningless phrases – such as "family values" – it has acquired an agreed upon working definition and I will use the phrase freely.) Giving preference on the basis of race is of course wrong. Affirmative action should be eliminated as soon as possible at the university level. Specifically, it should end 14 years after we overhaul our entire public education system from pre-school or kindergarten to 12th grade.

Ben Melançon

For a start, we need equal money per student: a national (or at least state) system for funding education instead of a local one. (Funding for schools is based on local real estate taxes. Result: if you live in a poor area your school doesn't have much money.) Actually, schools that serve poor neighborhoods need much more money to provide access to things that students from families below the poverty line may not have, such as computers and encyclopedias or a quiet room to work in. But I think educators in the inner city would be thrilled to have just the funding for education- related purposes that suburban schools operate with.

Try taking the SATs with an eighth grade education. That's what some school systems are equipping their high school graduates with. A friend of mine from New York City took the highest level courses his school offered, did well in them, and even skipped a grade. He is going to a community college now to get the education he needs to apply to a "real" university. In my school system, no one ever skipped a grade; our town had challenging enough classes for anyone by the high school level. A friend from home took the highest level courses offered, did well in them, and is at Harvard now. Opportunities are not equal.

But how can affirmative action be legal if the fight against segregation was based on discrimination being illegal? I will answer by taking race out of the question. There is a difference between saying "No tuba players allowed in our school" and saying "We have very few tuba players. Let us get more tuba players even at the expense of the trombone players." Only now can I see that the first is categorically wrong while the second, though one may question the virtues of a legion of tuba players, is arguably within a school's area of discretion.

Schools use quotas and preference in admission all the time; these are not unique to affirmative action. A school decides they need a tuba player. A good hockey goalie. A football offensive line. The children of wealthy alumni had better get in, too. The government can either eliminate all preferences in admitting students and let the one unbiased person in America — a man from Idaho named Fred — decide who gets into school based solely on "merit" or allow schools to pursue diversity and large numbers of tuba players as they choose.

The current social and legal atmosphere essentially forces a school to err to the advantage of white people. The line between not ever showing preference to either side is so fine as to be impossible to walk on. This puts scrutiny on every admitted minority student by white parents who wanted their child to get into a particular school and are willing and able to sue to get what they want.

Giving preferences to minorities is, however, purely arbitrary except as an assurance against racism and a way to achieve a student society that isn't all the same. It is not the best system. But right now it is better than nothing. Fortunately, our choices are hardly "affirmative action" or "nothing."

UMass can use an income–based preference system for admission (that is backed up by good financial aid). Logically assume that the poor have had fewer advantages and cut a little slack for impoverished students. (The average annual income for families of students at this University is $75,000.) News Flash: Blacks are on average poorer than whites. Fairness and diversity achieved!

The University can admit students by area. Set a goal to get an appropriate (population based) number of students from the city and small rural towns. Better yet, go out to places with low college application rates (which are invariably poor schools as well) and let students know that college really is an option. Offer some "UMass" courses at such schools and let students know that if they do well enough in that class they are guaranteed entry into the University. This will greatly increase UMass's ability to recruit students and also have a beneficial effect on every high school it forms a partnership with.

There is no reason for the percentage of black or Latino students to drop. The race is on and the University of Massachusetts must use this self–induced shake–up as an opportunity to establish, on an unassailable legal basis, a more real proportion of cultural backgrounds than it has now, creating a better school for all and opportunities for those that need them most.

Ben Melançon is a UMass student.

For whom the phone calls

I hate the telephone. If I could be Amish while still being allowed to use automobiles and microwaves, I would. Alexander Graham Bell was touted as a genius of this generation, but I disagree. The man created the most annoying appliance in history, and I don't think that's much of an accomplishment. We should spend more time looking back on other, more useful inventors — like the person who created the football, or maybe the comma–spliced run–on.

Seth Koenig

Bell's grand discovery helps me about as much as inventions like the hoola–hoop and slinky (which, for those of you out there who are thinking impaired, is very little).

I can just see Bell showing the telephone off on Dave Letterman.

Dave: Well, Alex, what do you have for us?

Alex: I've made this thing that will keep college kids from getting any productive work done, Dave. Would you like to see it do its thing?

Dave: Sure! (big–toothed grin)

Telephone: RING! RING!

Dave: Wow! That's amazing! We'll be back with the Top 10 reasons historians never give George Washington Carver any credit! Stay tuned!

And so the phone became all the rage. Unfortunately, unlike bell–bottoms and Cabbage Patch Kids, the phone endured. Forever.

Why do I hate the telephone so? The reason is simple: it wastes my time (of which I have little to begin with).

My phone conversations usually go something like this:

Telephone: RING! RING!

Me: Hello.

Random other person: Hi, is somebody other than you there?

Me: No.

Random other person: Anybody?

Me: No.

Random other person: Well, in that case, I guess I'll ask you a series of absolutely inane questions that nobody in their right mind knows or would care to know the answer to.

Me: No.

Dave: Wow! That's really something! Look at the college kid not get any work done!

Thus, I, being the incredibly nice but disgruntled person I am, try and find the answers to this nit–wit's questions. Homework? No time. Writing columns? Tough. Sleeping and eating? I would, but this random person feels as though the solution to their query is the only thing that will keep the world from crashing into Jupiter, so I'll try and figure the answer out.

If the fool isn't annoying in the aforementioned respect, they find other ways to irritate me — like be a telemarketer.

I can't imagine how someone becomes a telemarketer. Actually, I take that back. I can imagine how someone becomes a telemarketer.

Their parents make a deal with Satan while the child is young, promising that the offspring will be Hell's Messenger of Darkness in exchange for gobs of money and fame.

Voila! A telemarketer!

These people are trained (most likely by some omnipotent evil force) to speak for 38 straight minutes without stopping to breathe, thus preventing you from butting in with any pesky questions you might need to ask, like "Why don't you crawl in a hole and die?" and "Isn't there an office you could be ramming that receiver in?"

Then, as a finishing touch to whatever it is they just said in "high–speed dub" mode, the telemarketer will offer to sign you up for their spectacular service for an astronomically low price of $79.99 a day. Some even like to use the Sally Struthers technique of telling you that for the cost of just 90 some–odd cups of coffee, you could join this ingenious program.

If you hang up on one of these phone–demons, they'll just call back later, getting their just revenge by brutally mispronouncing your name upon your answer.

Telemarketer: Hello, Mr. Jon–ess?

You: That's Jones.

Telemarketer: Okay, Mr. Jawns. You. Jones.

Telemarketer: Whatever. Are you currently with AT&T? No? Well, let me tell you about our brand spanking new deal which involves evening rates of 40 cents a second and gets you a free swimsuit video. . .add three hours!

Sometimes you can pretend to be your own answering machine, but that gets tiring after a while. How do you continually blow somebody off?

Me: You have reached Seth Koenig's house. If you don't have anything intelligent to say, please hang up now. This means you! BEEP! (click. dial tone...)

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Write for edop!

Hats on

If you see me walking around campus, you may notice that (much like the picture next to this column), I am wearing a hat. Any ideas about why that may be?

If you said that perhaps I have a good many bad hair days, than you are obviously a master of comedic irony and need to write for this department immediately if not sooner. (See Tanya, Alexis, or Gary.) For the truth is that the hair showing around my hat is basically all the hair I have. I number among the legions of the bald.

I'm 18 years old.

Now, I'm not saying that this is all bad. As long as I leave my hat in the car I never get carded for anything. I could buy nuclear weapons without an ID. It takes me less effort to run, since I'm that much more aerodynamic. People on the street constantly mistake me for Hulk Hogan and request that I rip off my shirt. Of course, these advantages must be weighed against the disadvantages of being bald, such as deciding what to do with my remaining hair strands.

My initial strategy during junior year of high school was the "comb–over." That's right — while all of you were at the junior prom dreaming of underage drinking and losing your virginity, I was worried about my bald spot showing up in the picture. Combine that with two facts: I had a beautiful date and I was rapidly discovering that I dance like a Republican with Parkinson's. It was a fairly stressful evening.

The problem with the comb–over is that It is totally obvious to everyone who sees it that you have one. Comb– overs are as good at convincing people that you really aren't bald as my plastic kindergarten costume (Rich's department store: $7.50) was good at convincing people that I was He–Man.

So during my senior year of high school, I decided that I needed something better. I figured, hey, if I just shave my head then everything would be okay because people wouldn't know why I had done it. The fact that the only people I knew were my friends for multiple years and obviously did know, I conveniently shut out of my mind. I was going to be bad. I was going to be Steve Austin and Phil Anselmo rolled into one. I was going to make a (drumroll) fashion statement.

Of course, I had no way of knowing at the time that the statement I was actually making ("Please don't notice that I'm bald") could easily be mistaken for another statement, namely "I hate you." I had never before been stopped in the street by an extremely muscular ethnic man and told where I could take my socio–Nazi ass, and it was not exactly a positive experience. After a couple of those pants–loading encounters and losing roughly a million gallons of blood from razor cuts on my scalp, I realized that this wasn't going to work either.

So now we arrive at my present hairstyle, namely "the hat." It's a good hat. I wanted a Sox hat but could never find one that really fit my head right. This one says "Megadeath" though, and that's just as cool with me (gotta have some pride). The hat is easy, low–maintenance, and allows for total peace of mind, provided the wind isn't blowing hard. Best of all, the hat is a pretty common hairstyle among men, so it doesn't stand out as a Bald Coverup Method until someone asks me to take it off and I am forced to dive through the nearest window.

Rob Schulze

Of course, all this wouldn't be necessary if I had some other deformity, like maybe leprosy or something. Now, I'm not saying that leprosy is a good thing, but I am saying that even lepers laugh at bald men, at least until their tongues fall out, in which case they still gurgle mirthfully. And some guys try to cover their baldness by being flagrant about it, but this is definitely the worst possible course of action. I myself was scarred for life when my father wore an "I'm Not Bald — This Is A Solar Panel For A Sex Machine" t– shirt during one of my elementary school birthday parties.

So, what is my advice to people who are just coming into their hair loss? Deal with it gracefully, do not expect people to be tactful about it, and be aware that you are now fully qualified for a career in print journalism. And make sure that your hat doesn't itch.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the editor are always welcome. Since our e–mail account is down, I am [illegible]

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Julis Sears Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Mannes Editorial/Opinion Editor
Mary Miles Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Fialkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

In–depth look at the Boston Latin debacle

By Edgar A. Barros
Collegian Staff

The city of Boston runs three renowned public schools which require students to take an exam in order to gain entrance. Of the three, which are Boston Latin Academy, Boston Latin School, and John D. O'Bryant high school, Boston Latin School holds the most prestige.

In 1974, a federal district court ruled that the city of Boston was guilty of de jure segregation. An extremely low number of African Americans gained entrance to the school. The solution from the courts was a mandate that required Boston Latin to reserve 35 percent of its seats for African American and Latino students.

In 1987, the courts removed the mandate because of what it called, "the good faith demonstrated by school administrators in conforming with the demands of meaningful change." Although not under court orders any longer, Boston Latin School continued to maintain the 35 percent quota system.

This policy continued until 1995 when a disappointed white student was not admitted and filed suit in court. The case "McLaughlin vs. Boston School Committee," although dismissed last year after the school agreed to change its admission policy, forced the school to end its policy of 35 percent reserved places.

Worried that the number of African American and Latino students would drop tremendously, Thomas Payzant, superintendent of the Boston Public Schools, began to explore other options. He hired a consulting firm, Bain & Co. to head the project in mid–1996. After the exploration of many options, Bain & Co. ultimately decided that "Option N50" was ideal. The school committee then approved this option and it became effective for the 1997–98 school year.

"Option N50" requires that a student, through test scores and grades, achieve a composite score within the top 50 percent of the overall applicant pool — the qualified applicant pool (QAP). The first half of the available seats would be assigned strictly upon composite scores. The second half of the available seats would be allocated on the basis of "flexible racial/ethnic guidelines." To apply this method, officials would first determine the proportion of the five ethnic groups — white, black, Latino, Asian, and Native American — in the remaining quality applicants pool (RQAP).

The other 50 percent of students admitted would also be based on composite score rank, but the admitted number from each racial/ethnic group must be identical to that particular group's number in the RQAP. For example, if there are 10 applications in the RQAP, and 50 percent are black, 30 percent are Latino, and 40 percent are white, then the number of black students admitted would have to be three blacks, three Latinos, and four whites. The problem arises when a student of a particular racial/ethnic group is passed over in favor of a lower ranking member of another ethnic group because that particular racial/ethnic group's seats have been exhausted.

This is the scenario that Sarah Wessman in 1997 encountered. Had the whole admission process been based strictly on a raw composite score, Wessman would have been admitted. But her score placed her in the RQAP, where there were 18 seats for whites, 13 for blacks, nine for Asians, and five for Latinos. The 18 seats for whites were taken by higher ranking white students, but Wessman's score was higher than some of the other students from other racial/ethnic groups.

Wessman's father then filed suit, claiming that "Option N50" violated the Constitution. The district court ruled in favor of the School Committee, stating that "the School Committee's interests in promoting a diverse student body and remedying vestiges of past discrimination were compelling and that the means crafted by the School Committee to further these interests were not so expansive as to raise constitutional concerns." Wessman's attorney, Michael McLaughlin, whose daughter who filed a claim against the 35 percent quota system in 1995, appealed the verdict. In November of 1998, the 1st U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeal overruled the decision and ruled in favor of Wessman.

The Boston Latin debacle is now affecting the University of Massachusetts. No public school in the state of Massachusetts can use a race–sensitive admissions process — including UMass.

ALANA to suffer loss

By George A. Chidi Jr.
Collegian Correspondent

How the Boston Latin decision specifically affects minority enrollment numbers remains to be seen.

However, early indications show that there would have likely been fewer minority students in the University of Massachusetts' freshman class next semester, even before policy changes in admission, according to Resa Singleton, student coordinator for the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

"I don't see how they're going to maintain the same level of ALANA [Asian Latino African Native American] students next year when they've read more applications and accepted fewer [ALANA] students than they had last year," she said.

Undergraduate admissions for ALANA students went down to 29.9 percent of ALANA applicants as of Feb. 10, from 40.7 percent of ALANA applications read at the same time last year, according to figures released from the Undergraduate Admissions Office.

The critical figures to look at, said Singleton, are the number of applications accepted with a "very good" or "good" rating. "Very good" is the third tier of admissions rating, below "outstanding" and "excellent" and above "good," "acceptable," and "academic risk." Virtually all students rated in the top two tiers are accepted, while students in the remaining tiers usually need other attractive elements in their profile to gain admittance. Of the 482 ALANA applications in the "very good" category looked at by Feb. 10, 312 were accepted. This is seven fewer acceptances than given at about the same time last year, out of 130 more ALANA applications.

Before the Boston Latin decision, UMass admitted greater percentages of ALANA students from the lower tiers to try to meet the school's diversity goals. Now, UMass cannot do so without breaking the law, according to Javier Cevallos, vice–chancellor for Student Affairs.

About 19 percent of the 3,425 freshman in 1998 were ALANA, of which 161 (4.7 percent) were black.

With greater weight now placed on grade point average and scholastic aptitude tests, black students could fare poorer than other minorities in the admissions decision. Black high school seniors taking the SAT I before March 1998 scored an average combined score of 855, according to College Board figures. White students averaged 1047, Asian students averaged 1017, Native American students averaged 937 and Latino students averaged 874.

Under higher standards adopted in 1995, UMass will not accept students with lower than an 890 combined SAT under standard admissions policy. the cut–off climbing to 940 in 2000 and 950 in 2001. Students below a 2.0 high school GPA will not be admitted under any category after this year.

The new black agenda

Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

30–years–ago, the agenda was clear.

Freedom, by any means necessary.

In the days of King and Malcolm, black people in America had a unified vision and purpose. Against the most extreme racism and oppression, they stood firm and made sacrifices for a better tomorrow.

Today is that tomorrow, and the sons and daughters of those who marched for civil rights are ushering in a new era.

No longer does any black man or woman have to worry about gaining access to those things that, only three decades ago, were exclusive to whites. Higher education is accessible. Employment is accessible. Economic prosperity is attainable, though not always achieved, yet the opportunity exists like never before.

Now with a steadily increasing black middle class and segregation being a thing of the past, the next generation of blacks ask the question:

What is the new black agenda?

"The new black agenda is to get paid," said Lyle Henry, Undergraduate Program Director and Chief Undergraduate Advisor in the UMass Sports Management Program. "What our generation is trying to do is make up for 6–7 years of economic deprivation, and as much as it can be a good agenda, it can equally be a bad one," Henry said.

Black people in America today are consuming more now than they ever have, particularly in the 18– to 35–year–old age group. What are we buying? That's part of the problem, according to Henry.

"It's shatonry. We can save a $1,000 to put a down payment on a BMW, but we can't put a $1,000 on a child's education," Henry said.

Danielle Wheeler, a junior African American studies and education major, echoes similar beliefs.

"Basically, we live in a materialistic society and have no real agenda," Wheeler said.

There is a feeling among many that blacks have become far too consumed with image. While working so hard at gaining mainstream success and acceptance, we've lost focus.

"The problem was that we ran away from black owned businesses and unions," said Renon Jourdan, a junior education and sociology major. "We ran away from all of that for what we thought was the prize. I'm for an integrated society, meaning everyone's represented, but not where everyone conforms to one idea."

"I think there is an agenda. We need to come together and put our focus inward again. That's how we were 40 years ago," Jourdan said.

Khemchrist Lacoste, a junior African American studies major, agreed that unity is the missing link among today's generation.

"We went from a commitment to cohesion to a commitment of conformity," Lacoste said. "Basically, we went from black pride and black nationalism to being systematically pacified and focusing on materialism."

"Black pride and nationalism are phrases that don't ring familiar for many of today's young brothas and sistas."

Black pride and nationalism are phrases that don't ring familiar for many of today's young brothas and sistas. Unfortunately, the move towards those ends doesn't seem to be happening any time soon. Despite the efforts of our current black political leaders, there still is the underlying belief that the current method of getting things done just isn't working.

"I believe our leaders are too conservative," Lacoste said. "People are scared of the system they want to change. People aren't risking jail time. People aren't risking death like they did in the 60s."

Without question, there hasn't been the kind of leadership that existed in the 60s. And yet, while having the dedication of a nation is powerful, without a clear agenda it's practically useless.

"The problem is that we have to state what the agenda is," Henry said. "Until we find that one overriding focus, we're lost."

Police pull out red carpet for African immigrant

On Feb. 4, 1999 Amadou Diallo, unarmed, was shot 41 times by New York police outside his Bronx home at 12:45 a.m. The four New York City policemen are currently under investigation by the FBI.

He is the latest victim in a long list of deplorable crimes at the hands of the police. The only thing Diallo had done wrong was make the mistake of W.W.B. — Walking While Black in the city of New York.

Diallo was an immigrant from Guinea who came to the U.S. for a better life. Instead, he had his 20–year–old life snuffed out in a hail of bullets by four of New York's finest.

It is Giuliani time and no black or Latino is safe. The Mayor Rudolph Giuliani has been cleaning up the toughest streets of New York. Although the murder rate has dropped drastically, it has been at the cost of the lives of blacks and Latinos. The mayor has adopted a "zero tolerance" on crime and some of his special unit of undercover cops have taken that as license to terrorize civilians. It seems that the Mayor is willing to tolerate the criminal activity as long as the doer is the police. One does not need to go far to find proof.

Ask Russell Jones, better known as Ol' Dirty Bastard, who was shot–at eight times by the police.

Ask Abner Louima who was beaten then sodomized with a plunger, while in police custody.

Ask the 22,414 innocent civilians who were stopped and frisked by police in 1998 alone!

However there are a lot more victims like Diallo who do not live to tell their story. Take for example Kevin Cedeno, a teenager, who was shot in the back by the police while riding his bike. Cedeno is just one of over a 100 civilians that have been killed at the hands of the police in the last five years.

And it is no wonder why the people are weary of the police who are there to protect them. Innocent people are afraid for their lives. Too many times the police have been charged with using excessive violence without any reprimand to the officers involved. The mayor is too reluctant to speak out against the holy men in blue.

"Too many times the police have been charged with using excessive violence without any reprimand to the officers involved."

Rosaline Valcimond

Being a police officer is a dangerous job. But a trigger– happy cop is even more dangerous. Part of the problem are cops who are afraid of the neighborhoods they are patrolling. They are too quick to overact, resulting in the lost of another black or Latino. The other part of the problem is the racist vigilante cops who have no respect for the people they are there to protect. There seems to be no distinction made between the criminal and law abiding citizens who live in these neighborhoods.

The first step towards a solution would be for the mayor to take a "zero tolerance" stance against dirty cops. The next step would be to place more black and Latino officers who are from these neighborhoods to help patrol the area. At least then there would be officers out there who are familiar with the neighborhood and its residents.

Diallo's murder has sparked an outrage in New York City that will hopefully force the mayor to address the issues. The people are tired of unwarranted police abuse. It is time to implement a "zero tolerance" policy of the criminal behavior done by his law enforcers. Since when has it become a crime to be black? That is what many including Diallo's family are now left to wonder.

Rosaline Valcimond is a UMass student.

What is the true State of the Union?

On Jan. 19, 1999 President Clinton gave his seventh State of the Union Address before a joint session of Congress. On the table were two very significant topics — education and race relations.

"Once again, our government is a progressive instrument of the common good, rooted in our oldest values: opportunity, responsibility, community," said the president.

When I first listened to the State of the Union Address, I was compelled to believe President Clinton. I felt relieved, comforted, and somewhat optimistic about the future of America in the year 2000. I felt that the Union was strong and that we as a people could head into the future full of confidence. However, taking a second look, some of the proposals that Clinton put forth, casted a shadow of doubt in my ability to believe wholeheartedly in his platform. More specifically, I wondered how people of color would be able to benefit from Clinton's future plans.

Also, in the back of my mind rang the issue of enforcement. Some of Clinton's objectives sounded sweet, but this nation must realize that the written word only goes so far in certain arenas.

To start, in the section titled, "21st Century Schools," President Clinton said, "with more affordable student loans, more Pell grants, and work–study jobs, we have opened the doors of college to all."

Financially speaking this statement may be sound, but it is doubtful that the doors of education have been opened for all. Since California's Proposition 209, the fire has been lit and the anti–affirmative action backlash has ensued. This debate has blocked people of color, reversed decisions, and caused many to adopt the idea that while diversity in higher education is important, it is better to rid campuses of certain forms of diversity through the elimination of race sensitive admissions, i.e. Bonson Latin.

"'We must do more to close the opportunity gaps that remain.' said the president."

Lanell James

The number of first year ALANA students on this campus will decrease. Proposition 209 has effected schools such as University of California–Berkeley, UCLA, and now Texas is following in their footsteps. Not only that, but to all of you who are getting ready to graduate and think that this does not apply to you—wait a minute! Graduate schools are following suit and adopting the same admissions policy.

Now, an obvious concern is what will take the place of affirmative action. There needs to be moves made that will ensure that low–income families are able to have access to higher education.

Secondly, the State of the Union Address raised the issue of the 1997 Initiative on Race, that has sought to bring people together across racial lines.

"We must do more to close the opportunity gaps that remain. Discrimination or violence because of race, or religion, ancestry, or gender, disability or sexual orientation, is wrong," said the president.

To combat these evils, President Clinton urges Congress to pass the Employment Non–Discrimination Act and the Hate Crimes Prevention Act. However, Clinton does not mention how this Employment Non–Discrimination Act will be enforced. To want to bring people together across racial lines is good, but with the tremendous backlash of affirmative action, how effective will this act be? Employers may or may not take it upon themselves to actively recruit or hire people of color, even though they do not overtly discriminate. Is this, and should this, be a replacement for affirmative action in the work place?

It has long been painfully obvious for many minorities that the Idea of education and racial equality is a continuous struggle. Racism, economic discrimination, and access to resources have always plagued this country, and continue to manifest themselves in different ways and places like schools, jobs, agendas, and worst of all — in the hearts and minds of people who govern this country.

And now I ask you, what is the true state of the Union?

Lanell James is a UMass student.

NASA' s QuestChat hosts online chat series

Hyden Vales
Collegian Correspondent

QuestChat Series Is enabling students from around the globe to chat online with African American scientists and engineers from NASA during February — Black History Month. The chat series is organized by NASA's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field in California by Oran Cox, an aerospace engineer and an operations specialist from mission control at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, TX. Anyone with access to the World Wide Web can observe or participate in this high–tech communication forum.

"NASA's African Americans serve as role models for students. These chats will enable students to meet mentors via the Internet in a very personal way," Cox said.

The chat series began on Tuesday, Feb. 2, at 2:30 p.m. with Dr. Aprille Ericsson–Jackson, an aerospace engineer at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbely, Md. During the chats, Ericsson–Jackson, along with other African American professionals described their contributions to the national space program.

Ericsson–Jackson, who in 1998 received the prestigious "Women in Science and Engineering," award given to the best female engineer In the federal government deems it a priority to spur the interest of people of color and females in the field. The need for professionals of color in the fields of science and math are very important to the NASA scientists.

"I feel obligated to help spur the interest of minorities and females In the math, science and engineering disciplines."

Pre–registration via the Internet is required for those who want to participate. Non–participates can observe the chats without pre–registration.

Although five chat sessions have already taken place since early February, there are three left in the series of eight.

Next Wednesday, Feb. 24, from 1–2 p.m., Ruth Simmons, president of Smith College in Northampton, Mass. will be taking part in the series.

Thursday, Feb. 25, from 12–1 p.m., Oran Cox, QuestChat Project Manager will be online.

Dionne Jackson, Materials Science Engineer from NASA's Kennedy Space Center in Florida will be participating in the chats. A date and time has yet to be determined.

More information is available at QuestChat's website at http://quest.arc.nasa.gov/ltc/special/mlk99/ or call the Ames Research Center in California at (650) 604–5026.

Black Quote of the Day

"The 1990's are different from the 50's and 60's. The new segregation of the 90's is between the educated haves and the uneducated have–nots."

–Dr. Manning Marble

~Art Gallery Review~

Gallery exhibit redefines culture

By Jason Springer
Collegian Correspondent

REPURPOSE
Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space
On display through March 10

COLIN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Repurpose, a collection of images and materials, is now on display in the Student Union.

Our culture has a seemingly endless array of images and materials which both reflect the culture and define it. The artist selects, interprets, arranges, combines and changes these images according to a personal vision and thus continues the interplay of art and culture.

The exhibition now on display in the Student Union, appropriately titled Repurpose, is precisely such a merger of images, materials, and culture. The exhibit features such artists as Timothy Murdoch, Cornelia van den Broeke, Alyson Shotz and Geraldine Erman; all of whom live and work in New York, Brooklyn or Boston.

Co-curator Francis Merrigan explained the meaning behind the title.

"Repurpose is a web term for the reuse of content from existing materials (in this case — magazines, books, films) and their revision for use on the internet. Repurpose is an exhibition of art works utilizing existing materials/images to deal with hybrids and contradictions between corporeal/mechanical ideas and processes," Merrigan said.

Upon entering the gallery a viewer is forced to reevaluate common conceptions. For example, Timothy Murdoch, in one of his series, has used industrial tubing and has removed all the aspects of its known function. But then with the simple words, "this is a pipe," he creates a contradiction to his changes. His works seem to bulge from the gallery wall, mysterious and intriguing.

Cornelia van den Broeke's paintings and sculptures play off cultural and artistic references which now rest uneasily in a viewer's mind by her combination of forms and choice word associations.

Ghost Hive, the work of Alyson Shotz, constructed with common arts and crafts materials, is a strikingly beautiful, shimmering vision. Its suspended dream-like image is a lasting one.

Lastly, Geraldine Erman's untitled sculpture is bound to stir a reaction. Her piece combines sci-fi mutations of human beings, apparel, and consumer goods. Cast rubber and other materials present a nexus of form, texture and color which strangely eludes to a futuristic merger of the animate and the inanimate.

The artists of Repurpose have explored new combinations of existing images and materials, and by doing so have created individual expressions of a much larger culture.

The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is holding an Artists Reception today from 4 p.m.–6 p.m. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday, 10 a.m.–5 p.m.; Friday, 10 a.m.–3 p.m.; Saturday–Sunday, 1 p.m.–4 p.m.

Gene Siskel dead at 53

"Siskel & Ebert" film critic loved his work

By Tracy Boutelle
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Gene Siskel fell in love with movies as a child. Every Saturday the schoolboy Siskel would walk eight blocks to his neighborhood theater on Chicago's North Side to catch the newest films with his friends.

But it would be many years before Siskel would make movies his life's work, giving the world the thumbs-up and thumbs-down film reviews he and colleague Roger Ebert created.

"I can't even imagine what it will be like [without Siskel]," Ebert said Saturday from his Michigan home as news of Siskel's death at age 53 spread.

Siskel's death ended a quiet but strenuous battle against complications that arose after a growth was removed from his brain in May.

Ebert said: "There was a history there, a respect that I'm never really going to replace in my life. It's going to be tough."

Writing for rival newspapers, the young Siskel and Ebert were fierce competitors, always trying to out-scoop the other one.

The icy relationship warmed when they reluctantly teamed up to co-host the public television program "Sneak Previews" in 1975.

"For the first five years that we knew each other, Gene Siskel and I hardly spoke. Then it seemed like we never stopped," Ebert wrote in a column titled "Farewell, my friend" on the front page of yesterday's Chicago Sun-Times.

"Siskel & Ebert," as their show later was known in syndication, became a household name.

Ebert said Saturday that the show would continue with revolving guest critics.

"In the future, we will see," he said.

"The two thumbs up has become an icon in the film industry," said Paul Dergarabedian, a spokesman for Exhibitor Relations Co. which compiles box office receipts. "The average person would look toward them about whether to take their hard-earned dollars to the box office."

Despite his fame, Siskel stayed in the Midwest, resisting the lure of either coasts.

"The boys always wanted to stay in Chicago — they felt that was neutral territory," said Mary Kellogg of Buena Vista Television, who developed a close friendship with Siskel in the 14 years they worked together on the show.

Orphaned by age 10, Siskel threw himself into his family life with a passion close friends were quick to remark on. He met and fell in love with Marlene Iglitzen while working at WBBM-TV in Chicago. They married in 1980 and had three children, a boy and two girls.

His passions drove him — from the movies he had loved since a boy, the words he grew to love as a newspaper man, the enjoyment he got as a Chicago Bulls fan and for his family.

At the time of his death, Siskel had taken a leave of absence from his work not only with the "Siskel & Ebert" television show and the Chicago Tribune, but also as a film critic for "CBS This Morning" and WBBM-TV, and as a columnist for TV Guide.

Thousands of letters and e-mails from his fans poured into Buena Vista, which distributes his show, in support of Siskel's leave of absence.

In yesterday's column, Ebert recalled how Siskel strove to deflect attention away from his illness and toward his film criticism after his surgery.

"Although it was obvious sometimes that he walked slowly and was in pain, I never once heard him complain. He carried on with a bravery that is hard to imagine," Ebert wrote.

"Write for Arts"

Come on down to the Collegian, Campus Center Room 113, for more information!!!

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

5 Barbers
Proprietors Jim Reed and Terri Lonergan
Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
Hours:
Mon-Fri. 8-5:15 Sat 8-3:45
9$ and up
Appointments Not Necessary

WMUA FM 91
The voice of UMass is looking for dependable & enthusiastic people to help in the following depts.
News
Publicity
Sports
Visual Media
Underwriting
Fund Drive
If this strikes your interest come by and check us out! All are welcome to visit us at 105 campus center (next to the collegian) or call 545-2876

amc Hampshire 8 • 584-7550 Hampshire Mall
Thanks to all our Loyal Patrons for 20 Great Years!
We'll be changing the way you see movies with....
16 NEW SCREENS
Fall '99
Message In A Bottle (PG-13) Today-Thursday 15:20 @ 52.50 | 8:00
A Civil Action (PG-13) Today-Thursday 8:10
Payback (R) Today-Thursday (5:40 @ 52.50) 8:20
Blast From The Past(PG-13) Monday-Thursday 15:30 @ 52.50 | 8:10
Varsity Blues (R) Monday-Thursday 15:30 @ 52.50
Hours a bit different! Starting in April the ticket center & 10 will stay up 15 or 9 raised film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153 Mt. Farms Mall
Some movie screens every Thursday at 10:00 pm. This week: feature is "Message in a Bottle" Call theatre for further details
Special Engagement, no Passes or Discounts
$2.50 (Twi-Lite) Show Daily

Golden Key National Honor Society
General Membership Meeting
Tuesday, February 23, 1999
7:00 pm
Herter Hall Rm. 201

Some BODY to Love Week
February 22 - 26
Come visit the Campus Center table Monday - Thursday 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Upcoming Event:
Enlightened Eating Workshop: Breaking Free From Food Hang Ups
March 3
Call Health Education @ 577-5181 for location
4:00-5:30 p.m.
April 7
2nd Floor of Gorman Hall
4:00-5:30 p.m.
Monday 22 7:00 p.m. Washington Tower
Understanding Eating Disorders Workshop
Recovering Bodies: Overcoming Eating Disorders 9:00 p.m. Channel 17
Tuesday 23 9:00 p.m. Why Diets Don't Work Channel 17
Wednesday 24 4:00 - 5:30 p.m. UHS Room 302
Informational Session on Eating Disorders: How to help roommates and friends.
The Famine Within 9:00 p.m. Channel 17
Thursday 25 7:00 - 9:00 p.m. Mt. Holyoke College, Morrison Rm., Willits
The Body Politic: Women, Eating Disorder and Culture Catherine Steiner-Adair
Recovering Bodies: Overcoming Eating Disorders 9:00 p.m. Channel 17

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-4110
La Cucina di PINOCCHIO of Amherst 30 Boltwood
#1 Delivery in Town
COLLEGE BASKETBALL SPECIALS!!!
(Monday-Thursday Special)
Get 10 Free Wings With The Purchase Of A Large Cheese Pizza
ONLY $8.00/Tax Included
Any 2 Calzones $8.00/Plus Tax
Monday - Thursday 11:00am - 2:00 am
Friday + Saturday 11:00 am - 3:00am
Sunday 11:00 am - 1:00 am
Also Available:
Diet Veryfine Juices
Apple-Cran
Pink Lemonade
Kiwi Strawberry
Must Mention Ad When Ordering
Offer Expires 3/31/99
Delivery Only Not Valid in Restaurant

UMass hockey downs Cadets 2–0

UM's Johnson & defense shut down Army attack

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

After watching third-period leads evaporate and turn into losses twice this season, the Massachusetts hockey team made sure that it was going to come out with a victory in a non-conference game with Army on Friday night at the William D. Mullins Center.

For the second game in a row the Minutemen tacked on an insurance goal late in the final frame to ensure a win. While it was captain Dean Stork who sealed the deal against Northeastern last Saturday, freshman winger Martin Miljko tallied his second collegiate goal with 1:39 to play to help lead UMass to a 2-0 victory over the Cadets.

"The thing that I'm happy about is that we got a clutch goal late in the game from Martin Miljko. That's two weeks in a row now that we got a goal late in the game," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "Those are the type of things that we need to win hockey games."

Said Miljko in reference to the goal that put the game away: "Kris Wallis came over the line and gave me a great drop pass. At first I thought pass, but then I saw the top shelf and let it go."

One individual who was not to be overshadowed on this night, however, was freshman goaltender Mike Johnson. The Excelsior, Minn. product stopped 16 shots in recording his second shutout of the season.

"The team played great defense tonight in front of me, and that's all you can ask for," Johnson said. "They did a great job of boxing out in front of the net and kept them [Army] from getting second and third chances."

Stork opened up the scoring at the 18:42 mark of the first period on a wrist shot from the high slot. The junior defensemen corralled a pass from Jay Shaw and put one past Army netminder Corey Winer. Toni Söderholm also assisted on the goal, setting the play up with a nice block of a Cadets clearing attempt.

The Minutemen could have had even more goals if not for Winer. The southpaw made 36 saves on the night, many of the sparkling variety.

"You have to give them [Army] credit. They got great goaltending tonight, but we threw everything that we had at them," Mallen said.

Another positive sign for the Minutemen was the fact that UMass outshot the Cadets 38–16. The Maroon and White kept the pressure in the Army zone for most of the night, including a flurry in the first period in which the puck didn't leave the Cadets end for nearly two minutes.

Once again, however, the bottom line was that a solid outing by Johnson allowed sophomore goalie Markus Helanen to rest up for a game against UMass–Lowell the next night and now also gives Mallen the luxury of having two netminders who are capable of leading the Minutemen to victory on any given night.

"Two of Mike's five starts have been shutouts, so that's a pretty good start," Mallen said. "I'll take that any time."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

R. J. Gates collected two assists en route to helping UMass earn its first Hockey East road win of the season in a 3–2 decision in Lowell.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Nick Stephens had the first goal in the huge conference win over Lowell at Tsongas Arena Saturday night.

■ hoop

continued from page 10

from Smith while advancing the ball upcourt. Posey then picked up two of his eventual 19 points from the line to send the game into extra sessions.

With another opportunity to ice the game, Kirkland, one of three Minutemen with over 20 points in the contest, was again fouled with 37 seconds left in the first overtime. The forward could only manage one of two, and the lead was pushed to 70–68, allowing Xavier to shoot from within the arc on their final shot. Brown pushed his scoring total up to 22 with a lay-in. Double overtime.

As the second overtime wound down, though, the UMass heroes would step up. With 1:26 on the clock in what would be the final period, Kirkland, who ended the game with 25 points and 13 rebounds to lead all players in both, stepped to the free throw line for the last time. This time, he hit both and Massachusetts slid into a 76–75 advantage.

"Tonight I thought we made plays when we needed to, and we made foul shots when we needed to," said UMass Coach Bruiser Flint.

Down 77–76 with 39 ticks on the clock, Minuteman guard Monty Mack, who would finish with 21 points and 10 boards, launched an open three–point shot from the right baseline. His attempt ricocheted off of the far end of the rim. Center Lari Ketner, the third UMass man with a double–double — 20 points and 12 rebounds — went high for the long rebound and banked in an eight–footer before returning to the ground.

The referees, who had called a somewhat inconsistent game to that point, then swallowed their whistles as the Musketeers played for the game. Jason Colaprico got his last chance for vindication as he drove to the hole for a layup. The shot rattled out and the buzzer sounded just as Posey slammed the ball home.

"I was hoping it wouldn't go in; that [a teammate] on the other side [of the basket] would get [the rebound]," Ketner said. "Then they got another shot at it. Then I heard the horn as Posey dunked it, and I was looking at the refs to make sure they didn't give it to him."

The dunk was a half a second too late, insuring that for at least four days Xavier will have to spend their time reconsidering their view of UMass.

■ conference

continued from page 10

Kevin Poulin's stick. Poulin, instead of taking the shot, made a pass across the crease to Nick Stephens who just tapped the puck into the open net with 14:10 remaining in the first period.

UMass added to it's lead when Gates found freshman defensemen Randy Drohan at the point with 18 seconds left in the first. Drohan ripped a shot which found it's way through Fankhouser's five hole to give UMass a 2–0 advantage heading into the first intermission.

At the beginning of the second the official lost control of the game. It all started with 17:38 remaining when Helanen was run by a UMass–Lowell offender and cleared out of the net with the hit. Jeff Boulenger then shot the puck at the empty net, but the goal was disallowed. R.J. Gates retaliated for Markus and earned himself a five minute major.

"Markus was hit in a privileged area. You need to protect the goalies in this league. Gates responded. It was a bad penalty to take. It shifted the momentum from us to UMass–Lowell," Mallen said.

"The referees were not letting us play hockey tonight. Refs really weren't on our side," Stork said of the officiating in the second period. "But we received some big goals from Drohan stepping up, and Blanchard, that's why he wears an A [alternate captain patch]."

"Gates was just sticking up for Markus. Officials can't let the game get out of control, and he actually did a nice job of getting the game back under control by calling all the penalties in the period," Blanchard said.

The Minutemen killed off the major but also lost the momentum they had from the first period. During the major the River Hawks hit two cross bars. Kevin Bertram and Anthony Cappelletti hitting the pipe only a minute apart.

Although the River Hawks didn't score on the power play, they would find the back on the net with 9:50 remaining when Yurick Treille scored on a wrap around goal to cut the lead to one.

The remainder of the second period was spent with players sitting in the penalty box, while Helanen made 21 saves in that period alone.

"We played really well in the first period, they only had seven shots on and then all hell broke loose," Helanen said. "We were really great in the first, in the third we got back to playing simple hockey. It's time for me to step it up."

"Markus has been there all year. He's had a great season. To compete in Hockey East we are going to need him to play like that night–in, night–out," Blanchard said.

The River Hawks found the back of the mesh one more time with 10:29 remaining in the third, when Treille found Dan Fontas at the face–off circle and Fontas just fired the puck and it trickled past Helanen. Just crossing over the line to tie the game at two.

With the win, the Minutemen have now won their last three games and four of their last five. They are now four points up on Northeastern for the final playoff spot and one point up on Merrimack. For at least the meantime the Minutemen stand alone in seventh place in Hockey East.

"It's our first road win in Hockey East. We now have a three game winning streak. We knew at some point we would have to win Hockey East road games and I think that's a big confidence boost for our team," Mallen said.

"This was a good sweep for us. We now have a three– game win streak, just got to keep it going," captain Dean Stork said.

The Minutemen next take to the ice this weekend when they get set to face Providence in a home–and–home. The pair of Hockey East games will be crucial in terms of deciphering the playoff picture in the conference. In their only other meeting the Friars drubbed the Minutemen 8–1.

Support UMass Hockey, last home game
William D Mullin's Center
Feb. 27 7p.m. vs Providence

Go Sports teams!

HOT
Get it at
"Adult's Only"
Videos & Magazines
8 Russell Rd.
Hadley
585-0416

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
NOT DO FOUR MSG
BUFFET & SZECHUAN CUISINE
HOME STYLE COOKING
FRESH ORGANIC SPORTS VEGETABLES FROM OUR OWN FARM
EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
ALL LIQUOR LICENSE
OPEN 7 DAYS
253-7835 or 253-2813
63 Main Street, Amherst

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHAMPTON / HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Support Your Local Hooker
Informational Session
Student Union: Colonial Room
7:00 PM
Monday February 22nd
PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!
PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!
PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!
PLAY UMASS RUGBY! PLAY UMASS RUGBY!
QUESTIONS? CALL BRIAN @ 587-9343
OR DAVE @ 587-3771
WWW.ECS.UMASS.EDU/RUGBY/UMASS

Cushman General Store & VILLAGE Delicatessen
491 Pine St. Amherst, MA 01002
• NEAR JUNCTION OF E. PLEASANT ST.
• 1 MILE FROM UMASS
open 7 days
Fresh Deli Foods
Kitchen Positions **
• Must be available weekends and summers
• Experience in kitchen and customer service preferred.
• Please apply in person. We look forward to meeting you!
Buy a traditional deli sandwich and get a small coffee

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
✔ Complete Bartending Course
✔ On Campus
✔ For a Fraction of the Cost of other schools
✔ National Certification Available
✔ Hands on Pouring Lab
✔ Tips on how to get a fun, high paying job
Free Info Session
Wed, Feb. 24th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program With valid college Student I.D.
Act Now! Space is Limited!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX

SHAB
STUDENT HEALTH ADVISORY BOARD
• Learn about various professional roles in health care at UHS.
• Voice your opinion and play a part in how your health care dollars are spent.
• Participate on search committees and have a direct influence on hiring staff for UHS.
SECOND SPRING MEETING
February 24th
5:30 p.m., Room 304
University Health Services
For more information call the HED office
577-5181

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413) 545-3500 Fax: (413) 545-1592

ACTIVITIES

UMass Rugby FEB 22 Student Union: Colonial Room 7:00 PLAY RUGBY!

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Corolla 1981 5 spd, 2Dr. 151k, good tires. Asking $750.00 582-1849

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag, black. $3500 584-6090

'95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback. ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer. 546-5366

COMPUTERS

Packard Bell 8xspeedCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

$20/HR PT/FT!!! Process Our CompanyMail or Email From Home or School For Details: Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

ACTION JOBS-Listings of America's Best Adventure Jobs: Alaska, Adventure Travel, Cruise Ships, Forest Fire Fighting, Sailing, White Water Rafting, Backpacking,& more... www.actionjobs.com

EMPLOYMENT

FREE RADIO +$1250! Fundraiser open to student groups & organizations. Earn $3-$5 per Visa/MC app. We supply all material at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box. 1-800-932-0528 x 65. www.ocmconcepts.com

Camp Wayne for Girls- Sister half of brother/sister private camp in Northeastern Pennsylvania (3 hrs from New York City) 6/22-8/20/99. If you love children and want a caring, fun environment we are looking to hire staff for: Tennis, Golf, Gymnastics, Swimming (W.S.I preferred), Sailing, Waterskiing, Piano, Basketball, Softball, Volleyball, Soccer, Self-Defense, Low ropes, Drama Director, Drawing and Painting, Ceramics, Photography, Jewelry, Linoleum Cuts, Batik, Calligraphy, Sculpture, Guitar, Silk-Screening, Cheerleading, Aerobics, Video, Group Leaders, Drivers, Housekeeping, Night Watchperson, Kitchen/Salad. On Campus Interviews March 5th. Call 1-800-279-3019 or e-mail: campwayneg@aol.com

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Caring counselors to teach gymnastics, athletics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, riflery, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, newspaper, yearbook, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/20/99-8/17/99. Call (800)832-8228 or E-mail: camp4you@aol.com for an application. Visit us: WWW.CANAOENSIS.COM

EMPLOYMENT

COUNSELORS: TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: All Competitive Team Sports, All Water Sports. PLUS: Camping/Hiking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Riflery, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top Salaries, Awesome Facilities, Rm/Bd/Lndry, Travel. CALL Steve Rubin at (800) 473-6104, or E-MAIL COB-BACHIEF@AOL.COM

SUMMER JOBS for the environment $2500-4000/summer campaign to save Wilderness, Endangered Species and to reduce Toxic Pollution. Make a difference. Offices in over 35 states Campaign To Save the environment 1-800-75-EARTH

PRESTIGIOUS NORTH-EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool Musical Director and General Counselors. INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd TRAIL'S END CAMP 800-408-1404 www.trailsendcamp.com

DJ Wanted For Mobile Parties For greater Springfield area experience helpfull DWN Transportation needed Call 413-525-8260

Sbarro's Restaurant at Hampshire Mall needs closers. Flexible hours Good pay Apply in person

EMPLOYMENT

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)—Sports oriented, Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or wayneboys@aol.com.

COUNSELORS: TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: All Competitive Team Sports, All Water Sports. PLUS: Camping/Hiking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Riflery, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top Salaries, Awesome Facilities, Rm/Bd/Lndry, Travel. CALL Steve Rubin at (800) 473-6104, or E-MAIL COB-BACHIEF@AOL.COM

HELP WANTED
EARN EXTRA CASH!!! MAKE YOUR OWN HOURS!! RESPONSIBLE STUDENTS TO MARKET/MANAGE CITIBANK PROMOTIONS ON CAMPUS. FREE GIVEAWAYS! EARN $400+/WEEK. CALL JOANN AT 1-800-950-8472 EXT. 117

Housework good pay near by. Car needed. 548-9635

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sounds: Rave to Oorm party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413) 737-8561

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of you new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday Kerry Best wishes for the New Year Drink on! Love All you buds at Orchard Hill

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space is limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Do you need to pay off your bills once and for all? Personal, Debt Consolidation. Credit Card Repair Call 1-888-780-8082

TICKETS

Bruins vs NJ Devils on 2/25 $160.00 546-3219

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Specials!Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!! 1-800-234-7007 www.endless summertours.com

#1 Panama City vacations! Free Parties - No Cover. Best beachfront hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Ski the wild west during Spring Break at Breckenridge, Co from $835. Airfare, condo and 5 day lift ticket included. Call the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for info 545-3437

Spend Spring Break in Sunny Jamaica from $559. Includes airfare, transfers, and hotel. Go with who you trust. Call the Umass Ski 'n' Board Club for more info 545-3437

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA
150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEE0
Blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411
ww.classtravel.com

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplashtours.com

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

WANTED

Women Volunteers needed for Graduate research study in zinc supplementaion. Must be non-smoking, between 18-40, excercising at least 4 times per week. Please call Christy at 532-2733

Are you trying to sell your car?

Make your life easy!

Place an Ad in The Classifieds and advertise to THOUSANDS!

Are you tired of living on Campus?

Want to move off next semester?

Place an Ad in The Classifieds and find the home of your DREAMS!!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, FEB. 22

Lecture — A work-in-progress entitled "You Don't Look It: Stories from the Latina Community (a performance work)" at 4:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Meeting — There will be a meeting of Students Helping Area Reach-Out Efforts (SHARE)) at 6:30 p.m. in room 504 of Goodell.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex in room 302 of University Health Services at 3 p.m.

TUESDAY, FEB. 23

Colloquium — A colloquium entitled "The Poetics of Compromise: How Does the Creative Process Survive the Literary Marketplace?" at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Center of Mount Holyoke College.

Film — The Black History Film Series sponsored by the UMass Black Student Union is featuring "Cry Freedom" at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Meeting — There will be a general meeting of the Jewish Student Union at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House.

Meeting — There will be a Golden Key membership meeting at 7 p.m. in room 201 of Herter Hall.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study, or study abroad at the state-wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Community — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 22. Commencement housing applications are available at the University Conference Services Offices, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 7. There will be no on-site registrations.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.–5 p.m. Call 577-5181 for more details.

Services — Accounting services from the UMass Accounting Department will be working out of the Hampshire Mall. It is free and open to the public, and open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4–7 p.m. in the Hampshire Mall Community Room, and on Wednesdays from 6–9 p.m. on the Hampshire Mall Stage.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6–7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577-5316 if interested.

P/Ts are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an P/T, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

SALON SELECTIVES Shampoo, Conditioner, and Styling Products. Selected Styles, see store for details. SALE ENDS FEB. 27! Minitement $2.29

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs — University Store "No like a mall. Better."

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 22, 1999

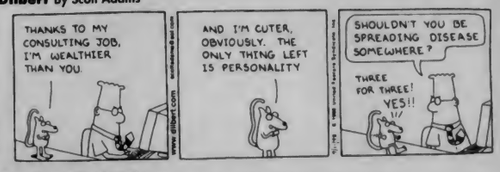
C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Antiques Roadshow		American Experience		Challenge for America's Economic Future		Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Coeby	King	Raymond	Becker	48 Hours (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Coeby	King	Raymond	Becker	48 Hours (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		"And the Best Goes On: The Sonny and Cher Story" (1995)			News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Th Heaven "Paranoia"	Hyperion Bay (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Med Abt. You	"Border Line" (1998, Mystery) Sherry Stringfield,			News	Tonight Show
WTXX	14	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lane	Dilbert	DiResta	Sentinel (In Stereo)	News	Newsradio	Newsradio	Hartford... With
WVIT	30	News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Sudden-Susan	Med Abt. You	"Border Line" (1998, Mystery) Sherry Stringfield,				News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Fraser	Melrose Place (In Stereo)	Ally McBeal "Sideshow"		News		Friends	Med Abt. You
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Med Abt. You	"Border Line" (1998, Mystery) Sherry Stringfield,			News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Antiques Roadshow		American Experience		Pat Hor-Flying Tigers		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fraser	20/20		"And the Best Goes On: The Sonny and Cher Story" (1998)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Fraser	Dilbert	DiResta	Sentinel (In Stereo)	Med Abt. You		Fraser	Cheers
WTBS	17	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at Denver Nuggets. (Live)					Inside NBA	Inside "The Dirty Dozen" (1967)
ABE	64	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "American Dream"		Biography: Doris Duke-Heiress		Investigative Reports (R)	Cracker "Pilot" (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order "Atonement"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live	Newsstand: Time (R)		Sports	Moneyline
COM	26	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	(4:51) "Starry Rivalry" (1990, Comedy) Kirstie Alley, Bill Pullman.			Kath-Thurnauer	Bob-Margaret	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	69	New House	First-Line (R)	Why Discovery	Mating Game	High Roller's Vegas (R)		Joined at Birth (R)	First Dogs (R)		High Roller's Vegas (R)
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Connecticut at Providence. (Live)			College Basketball: Oklahoma State at Kansas. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	63	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		"Lovely Deadly" (1992) Jennifer Jason Leigh,		"The Sweet Creature" (1997, Drama)		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	67	Countdown	Jawbreaker	Beavis-Butt.	Silt & Olly's	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Tom Green	Blame Game	Loveline
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Allen Strange	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Jeffersons	Lovers	Rerotched
SCIFI	66	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)	Amaz. Stories	Star Trek "Journey to Babel"		Sliders "Asylum" (In Stereo)		Welcome to Paradox (R)			Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC	25	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Tornado (R)	Deadly Forces	White House Press Corps	Young Kennedys: Sin		Tornado (R)	Deadly Forces
TNT	65	Due South (R) (In Stereo)	ER (In Stereo)			WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)					Mortal Kombat: Conquest
USA	62	Nercules: Legendary Jrnys.	Xena: Warrior Princess (R)			Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw			New York Undercover
HBO	8	(4:15) "Rocky" (1976, Comedy) Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire. (PG)				(4:15) "The Devil's Advocate" (1997, Horror) Keanu Reeves, Al Pacino. (R)			Real Sports (In Stereo)		Dennis Miller
MAX	60	(4:45) "Stuart Saves His Family" (1995) Al Franken. (PG-13)				(4:15) "Bulworth" (1998, Comedy) Warren Beatty, Halle Berry. (R)					Dream On	Dream On
SHOW	9	(4:45) "Congo" (1995, Adventure) Laura Linney, Dylan Walsh. (PG)		(4:45) "Book of Love" (1991) Chris Young. (PG-13)		(4:30) "It Could Happen to You" (1994) Nicolas Cage. (PG)					Inside the NFL

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia



Kampus Kid By Adam Souliere

408 Ville By Louis and Allan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — What you hear about someone near and dear to you today may send you reeling for a while, until you realize that there's always a method to the madness.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You must take care that you don't stoop to tactics today that others might consider questionable or "unworthy of you." Maintain your self- respect.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Spend more time on "real" issues today and less on those matters which are of immediate concern to you and you alone. Personal problems should not take precedence at this time.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may be looking for something inspirational or uplifting today, and you may find it within yourself! Focus on your own inner strengths.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Share your opinions with others and you're sure to get an earful when the time comes. You may be on the "wrong side" for a while but you'll soon make amends.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — It's time to conclude the "preliminaries" today and get to the meat of a planned endeavor. You're ready- whether you know it or not!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Take care you're not so eager to please today that you subject yourself to any treatment that would otherwise be considered unfair.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — What you read today may be quite different from what you're recently heard, and it's time once again to begin reassessing certain issues.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You'll be in a position to receive the "inside scoop" today, but what you do with the information will make all the difference in the end.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Any overreaction on your part may endanger a current project by turning supporters against you today, even if only on a temporary basis.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — This is a good time to keep in touch with those who have been important to you in the past. Old relationships can be revived and may flourish at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You said you'd "be back" some time ago, and today you'll be able to make good on that promise. Your competitors will have reason to take notice.

Quote of the Day

"It is necessary for me to establish a winner image. Therefore, I have to beat somebody."
–Richard M. Nixon

Close to Home By John McPherson

Twenty-seven percent of all Americans suffer from Compulsive Checkout Lingering Syndrome.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-3626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Chicken a la King/Puff Pastry
Caponata Pocket Sandwich

DINNER
Rotisserie Style Chicken
Veal Parmesan
Algerian Stew

Worcester
LUNCH
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Chicken a la King/Puff Pastry
Caponata Pocket Sandwich

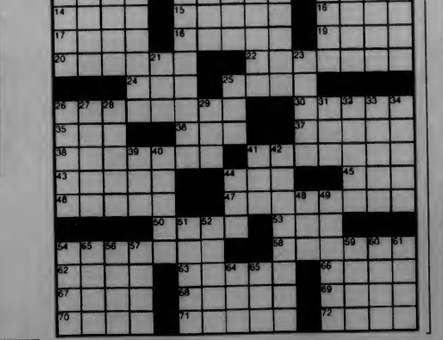
DINNER
Rotisserie Style Chicken
Veal Parmesan
Algerian Stew

Hampshire
LUNCH
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Chicken a la King/Puff Pastry

DINNER
Rotisserie Style Chicken
Veal Parmesan
Algerian Stew

Berkshire
LUNCH
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Chicken a la King/Puff Pastry
Caponata Pocket Sandwich
Julia Child's Grilled Cheese Sandwich

DINNER
Rotisserie Style Chicken
Veal Parmesan
Algerian Stew



ACROSS
1 File
5 Shore playthings
10 Baby garments
14 It comes back at you
15 Poetic
16 Western state
17 Tackle
18 Wrist's counterpart
19 McEntire of country music
20 Station, as troops
22 Reshuffled word
24 Likely
25 Made a hole in one
26 Preventing
30 Sweetheart
35 Gun a motor
36 Barnyard sound
37 Blazing
38 More caked with dirt
41 Blue-penciler
43 Gawks at
44 Actress Gardner
45 Genesis name
46 Unprepared students' banes
47 Turndowns
50 Unexplained sightings, maybe
53 Monk's title
54 Ask earnestly
58 Natural occasions
59 Recite poetically
62 Foal's ma
63 — Island
66 Cleveland's lake
67 Persia, today
68 Grants
69 Indianapolis 500, for one
70 Write a letter, perhaps
71 Straights
72 Plosebud, a g

DOWN
1 Actor Foxx
2 Land measure
3 Ocean vessel
4 Willow relative
5 Recess
6 Writer Rand
7 Yex
8 Fragrant flower
9 Landscape
10 Dinky village
11 Caesar's route
12 "As — and the Forty Thieves"
13 Fake
21 Choose
23 Ike's two-time opponent
25 In the past
26 Jargon
27 Rim
28 Vices
29 Word in the Postal Creed
31 On many weapons
32 Sinnged instrument
33 Actor Flynn
34 Takes a nap
39 Bumped into
40 Edison
41 First lady?
42 Most off-the-wall
44 Horace's "— Poetica"
48 Coffee holder
49 Antique
51 Silly comedy
52 Different
54 Radiate
55 — a one (not any!)
56 Catch a mouse
57 Descartes or Magritte
59 Spoken
60 Paddy crop
61 Necessity
64 Hymn or praise
65 Winter mo

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

7 22 99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Night Editor: Mike Messaros
Photo Technician: Kara Stokes
Copy Editor: Jill Carroll
Layout Designer: Lisa Metcalf
Assistant Layout Designer: Stephen Mackey, Allen Mackey

SPORTS weekend

Monday, February 22, 1999

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

UMass men's hoop stuns Xavier in A–10 action, 78–77

Team narrowly escapes with a win

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

More than any other statistic, the Xavier men's basketball team's total of only six assists in a double overtime loss to Massachusetts told the story.

The visiting Musketeers, boasting a 19–7 mark heading in, perhaps saw UMass' unimposing 11–14 record entering the game and looked ahead to their home matchup with Dayton four days down the road. Perhaps Xavier seniors James Posey, Lenny Brown and Gary Lumpkin considered the Minutemen an easy 20th win of the season, and as a result, decided to put on personal shows for the William D. Mullins Center faithful. Why pass the ball?

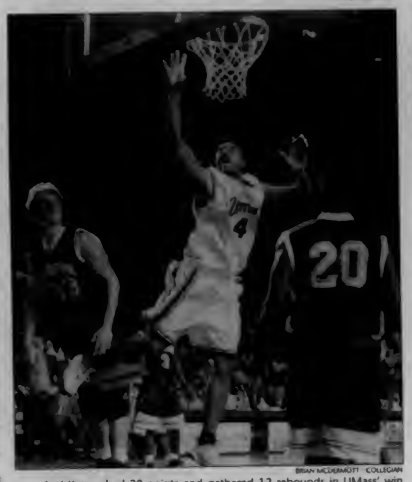
Perhaps not, but the final score of 78–77 in favor of Massachusetts was not what many would have expected.

At three separate times in the opening period of play, Lumpkin, a guard, opted somewhat overconfidently to choose the highlight reel over efficiency.

With Xavier slowly making ground on what was, at one point, a 17–7 UMass lead early, Lumpkin dribbled into the paint and, instead of stopping to reset the offense in the face of three Minutemen, tried to fire a rocket to Lloyd Price, who was making a baseline cut. The ball could not accomplish the impossible feat of passing through the trio of defenders, and thus, squirted out of bounds.

Later in the first half, after stealing the ball near mid– court, the Musketeer guard found himself heading towards the basket with one Minuteman in his path. Lumpkin left the hardwood in stride and rolled the ball around his back before laying the ball up. The shot missed.

Finally, with time expiring before halftime, Lumpkin forced a sliding, off–balance shot at the hoop from 15 feet out, perhaps feeling as though he could afford to head into the locker room down by only four to such a poor second– half team as UMass.



Why not take those spectacular shots? It's just Massachusetts, right?

The Maroon and White battled with their guests throughout another half and two overtimes before making the Xavier star pay for his risks. And Lumpkin, who only scored five points on the afternoon, almost left the building justified.

With time running out in regulation and the score favoring UMass 63–61, both Winston Smith and Chris Kirkland stepped to the charity stripe for Massachusetts with opportunities to put the game out of reach. Neither could tally a point.

Posey, who was perfect from the free throw line on the game, would then draw UMass' seventh team foul

Turn to 7, page HOOP

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner had 20 points and gathered 12 rebounds in UMass' win over the Musketeers at the William D. Mullins Center Saturday afternoon.

T.G.F.L.K. Thank God for Lari Ketner. T.G.F.C.K. Thank God for Chris Kirkland. T.G.F.M.M. Thank God for Monty Mack.

Massachusetts forward Winston Smith will be thanking the Almighty for many things over the next few days — but mostly for the fact that his inopportune foul with two seconds remaining in regulation did not cost his team the game on Saturday. It helped Xavier force two overtimes frames, but Smith's teammates didn't hang their heads, and rallied around him.

The real story inside of this contest, though, shows that the Minutemen played like a close unit, whose members were constantly bailing one another out of trouble. Mistakes were made. Mistakes were made quite often. But for the first time perhaps all season, the psychological effects did not linger. Instead, they helped in a strange sort of way.

"The guys did a great job of not putting their heads down," Flint said of his team's morale. "I think a couple weeks ago we would have [hung our heads] after missing [important] fouls shots [and making mistakes]... this is how I thought we would play all year. If we played like that all season we wouldn't be in the position we are in right now. We're playing better, though. We've been playing harder and more together and that's why we've been able to stay in games."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Chris Kirkland

To his credit, Smith has played extremely well since his minutes were extended after Ajmal Basit's dismissal 11 days ago. He has become a consummate role player for the Minutemen. He has become a very solid defender. He's even beginning to come up with loose balls like Mike Babul.

But for some reason, with his team holding a two–point advantage, he reached in and fouled Musketeer forward James Posey at half–court with two seconds left in regulation. Posey calmly sank both free throws, bringing the game into overtime before his team fell, 78–77 in double OT.

"[After the foul], I just said 'Winston, what are you doing?'" Flint said of Smith. "He didn't know how much time was on the clock. He though the game was over. The kid was getting ready to shoot a half court shot. But the way things are going this year, we might have lost [from Posey hitting the half–court shot]."

But the Minutemen were not about to let the foul ruin their day.

Three players scoring 20 points in one game is unusual but not unheard of in the NBA. In the ACC, it may happen once in a blue moon. But at UMass, it's a sure sign of divine intervention, or at least the mark of a team playing like a beast — one which was determined not to be branded by its failures but renown for its resilience.

That was the case on Saturday for the Minutemen, who watched Ketner, Kirkland, and Mack notch 20, 25, and 21 points respectively. Although infamous for its poor free– throw shooting, UMass also has had another soft spot in the area of balanced–scoring. But after watching three of his players erupt, Flint watched some of his team's vulnerability disappear.

"Our achilles heel all season has been that we go stretches without scoring," he said. "But tonight I thought we made plays when we needed to."

This game may have been crazy. It may have been hectic, and it could have had players at each other's throats. But instead, it had them rallying around one another. It didn't seem as though any Minuteman was really mad at Winston Smith. He played too hard and too well for that to happen. It didn't seem to bother any Minuteman that Kirkland had missed some clutch fouls shots. It didn't even matter that UMass had almost handed the game to Xavier.

What mattered was that, since Basit has left the team, its members are beginning to pull for one another. The open bickering has stopped. Even though UMass had found 50 ways to run for cover and leave with a loss against the Musketeers, the players were thankful for the victory because they had fought through those setbacks.

"[Games like this one] make you earn your paycheck," Flint said.

But he forgot to say one important thing — T.G.F.W.S., Thank God For Winston Smith, the player who helped Flint prove that his Minutemen do care about their season.

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian columnist

UMass earns first conference road win

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Randy Drohan buried a goal while also collecting an assist in UMass hockey's sweep of Army and UMass–Lowell this weekend.

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

LOWELL — The Massachusetts hockey team (10–18–2) used a 35–save performance from sophomore netminder Markus Helanen, and a late goal from alternate captain Jeff Blanchard to down UMass–Lowell, 3–2 at Tsongas Arena Saturday night.

"It was a real chippy game. We played a good first period, but we were drastically outplayed in the other two. We were fortunate to get that late goal by Blanchard," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "This game was that exact opposite of last weeks game. Last week [UMass–Lowell goaltender Scott] Fankhouser outdueled Mike Johnson, tonight Markus outdueled Lowell."

Blanchard's goal with only 3:03 remaining in regulation broke the 2–2 tie, and gave UMass it first Hockey East road win, and a crucial two points towards the playoff race.

"It was a nice play by Gatezy, and he was able to get me on the break fortunately the defender lost his footing, the goalie gave me a lot of net and I just tucked it over list shoulder," Blanchard said of his game–winning–goal.

The Minutemen were outshot in the third period by the River Hawks by a margin of 10–1, but the Minutemen used their one shot to their advantage when R.J. Gates sprung Blanchard by sliding him a pass from the Minutemen zone into the neutral zone right on to Blanchard's stick. The Minutemen caught a break when the only defender between Blanchard and River Hawk goalie Scott Fankhouser fell down. Blanchard walked in alone and faked Fankhouser to the right and shot into the wide open portion of the net which he created, to put the Minutemen up for good.

"The problem was we played to much tonight in our own zone, but Blanchard finishes in crunch time. We have been getting a lot of goals like those from Martin Miljko late last night against Army. One from Dean Stork the other night against Northeastern," Mallen said.

The Minutemen were able to jump out early in the game when Joey Culgin unleashed a shot from just outside the blue–line, and Fankhouser gave a rebound which ended up on

Turn to 7, page CONFERENCE

Women's b-ball beats the Rams

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

BRONX, N.Y. — After enduring recurring setbacks, the Massachusetts women's basketball team concluded its 1998– 99 regular season with a bang, pounding Fordham 76–51 yesterday at Rose Hill Gym.

Despite compiling a large injury list, the Minutewomen will head into next week's Atlantic 10 tournament at 16–13 overall, 11–5 in the A–10.

The conference mark matches last year's finish, although they fell short in their bid to repeat as A–10 East champions.

In defeating the Rams (9–17, 5–11) for their third straight victory, UMass was paced by an all–around effort, as all nine Minutewomen got on the scoreboard.

Senior Tez Kraft led the way with 16 points and seven rebounds, followed by freshman standout Nekole Smith with 15 and seven respectively.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Kathy Coyner

Lucia Madajova was a terror on the boards, as she pulled down 12 rebounds in leading UMass to an overpowering 44–24 overall edge.

The game was closely contested in the first half, as there were 13 lead changes despite the Minutewomen claiming an early 11–4 advantage.

The Rams were able to remain competitive largely in part to the precise outside shooting of reserve guard Beth Michuda.

Michuda (game–high 18 points) drained 4–of–7 three–point shots in the first frame, for 12 points. Three of the made attempts were wide open looks, as Minutewomen defenders failed to rotate on time.

"We went to help on [Kathryn] McCabe, and that led to Michuda getting open several times," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We made the adjustment in the second half, which was for the most part successful."

After falling behind 30–29, UMass ended the first half with six unanswered points, including four from Kraft.

Kraft put the Minutewomen ahead 33–30 after following Kathy Coyner's missed lay–up on a 2–on–1 fast break. Coyner started the play by stealing the ball at mid–court before racing to the hoop with Kraft on her left.

"Fordham looked better in that first half than the last time we had played them," O'Brien said. "It was their senior day, so obviously we had to meet their intensity. The bottom line was we had to take care of ourselves and we were able to come together at the end."

After basically trading baskets with the Rams ior much of the previous half, the Minutewomen brought the hammer down quickly after intermission, opening up a 43–33 lead with 17:30 to play.

Fordham would close their deficit to eight, before UMass opened the floodgates.

Madajova scored four straight points on two free throws and an open lay–up on transition courtesy of a Tonia Thomas steal.

Madajova's mini–outburst put the Minutewomen ahead 57– 40 and in the driver's seat with the game on cruise control.

After an emotional senior night at the William D. Mullins Center last Thursday, Kraft was glad to finish her last regular season on such a high note.

"I can't believe it's really over, but it was great to finish with a victory," Kraft said. "This was a good way to go out especially after losing here last season."

Kraft and her fellow cagers will now move on to the post–season as the Atlantic 10 tournament will open up on Friday at the Apollo of Temple.

UMass tandem key to hockey success

LOWELL — There is a reason why Maine and New Hampshire are at the top of the Hockey East standings, and it has nothing to do with Hobey Baker Award candidates like Jason Krog and Steve Kariya.

The Black Bears and Wildcats have both been reaping the benefits of being able to choose between two legitimate starting goaltenders every time they take the ice. While Maine relies on Alfie Michaud and Mike Morrison to stop opponents, New Hampshire can bank on either Ty Conklin or Sean Matile.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Markus Helanen

Now it seems like you can add the Massachusetts hockey team to that list.

Although UMass is currently stationed in the seventh slot in the conference standings and will possibly face either one of those teams should they hold down that position for the conference tournament, the Minutemen have a pleasant dilemma of sorts thanks to the emergence of freshman Mike Johnson to complement an already proven Markus Helanen between the pipes.

For the third weekend in a row UMass got a solid outing from both goalies. Once again Johnson got the nod on Friday night against Army, while Helanen took to the cage for Saturday night's affair with UMass–Lowell. The end result — a pair of victories that marked the first weekend sweep for the Minutemen this season.

"I think that both of our goalies are really good. I feel that Markus can become one of the best goalies in this league," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "Markus came in fresh tonight and gave us a good 60 minutes. [Having two solid goaltenders] is a good dilemma to have."

Johnson started off the weekend on the right foot with 16 saves in a 2–0 win over the Cadets on Friday. Although he benefitted from a more cohesive defensive effort than Helanen did the following night, the freshman was up to the challenge when called upon and earned his second shutout of the season.

"Things have been great so far [individually] and the team is doing really well," Johnson said. "You really can't ask for anything more. [With Markus already being here] I think that to be able to squeak out five starts is an accomplishment in itself."

Helanen then capped off the weekend in Lowell by helping UMass to its first Hockey East road win of the season. The Vantaa, Finland native really came through in the final two periods, making 21 saves in the middle frame and another seven in third with a hungry River Hawks squad breathing right down his neck.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Mike Johnson

"I knew that we didn't have a lot of road wins this year, so I knew that it was time for me to step up tonight and make something happen," Helanen said.

So as the Minutemen head into the final two weekends of the season, the equation is pretty simple. UMass has a game in hand over eighth place Merrimack and ninth place Northeastern. The Minutemen have already won the season series with the Warriors but will close out the regular season against MC at the Volpe Complex on March 5. UMass and the Huskies split their three games, but the Minutemen are currently four points up on the boys from Beantown.

Next weekend the Minutemen will play a home–and–home series with Providence. UMass lost to Friars 8–1 on Jan. 15 at Schneider Arena, but have been playing their best hockey of the season since that contest.

Mallen will now be faced with another important decision come the weekend. With Johnson and Helanen both riding hot streaks, who will get the call against PC?

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian columnist.

Grads Get $400 Off From GM!

If you are about to graduate, have recently graduated from a two- or four-year college or nursing school, or are a graduate student, you may qualify!

You can receive a $400 certificate good toward any new Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile or GMC vehicle purchased or leased from a participating dealer, when you qualify and finance through your Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile or GMC dealer and GMAC. Best of all, this special discount is available in addition to most other rebates and incentives.

The Choice is Yours!

Choose from any new Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile or GMC car or truck ... with more than 40 eligible vehicles you can choose the one that's right for you.

Financing Benefits That Are Right For You!

Once you've selected the vehicle that's right for you, GMAC helps make it affordable with these important financial benefits:

- No downpayment when you purchase
- Special easy financing for grads
- Choice of financing options ... from traditional purchase to SmartLease® by GMAC to GMAC SmartBuy®

Participate Today!

To receive your $400 certificate and other program information, simply return the postage-paid reply card below, or call:

1.800.964.GRAD

Visit our web site: www.gmgrad.com

CHEVROLET PONTIAC OLDSMOBILE GMC GMAC

See your participating Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile or GMC dealer for details. ©1998 GM Corp. All rights reserved. Litho in USA. September 1998.

NO POSTAGE NECESSARY IF MAILED IN THE UNITED STATES

BUSINESS REPLY MAIL
FIRST-CLASS MAIL PERMIT NO. 68 ROCHESTER, MI

POSTAGE WILL BE PAID BY ADDRESSEE

GM COLLEGE GRAD PROGRAM
PO BOX 80487
ROCHESTER MI 48308-9977

Graduates get $400 off from GM! If you are about to graduate, have recently graduated from a two- or four-year college or nursing school, or are a graduate student, simply return this card for a $400 certificate good toward the purchase or lease of any new Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile or GMC vehicle, when you qualify and finance through your participating dealer and GMAC. See your participating Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile or GMC dealer for details. GM reserves the right to change or withdraw this offer. ©1998 GM Corp. All rights reserved.

Mr. ☐ Ms. ☐ LAST NAME FIRST NAME M.I.

PERMANENT ADDRESS

CITY STATE ZIP

PHONE

Do you presently own a car or truck? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If so, what year, make, and model is your vehicle?

Year Make Model

When do you plan to be in the market for a new car or truck?

☐ Now ☐ 3-5 mos. ☐ 6-6 mos. ☐ 7-12 mos. ☐ 1 year or more

Which of the following makes are you interested in? Check all that apply.

☐ Chevrolet ☐ Pontiac ☐ Oldsmobile ☐ GMC ☐ Undecided

What college or university do/did you attend?

College City State

When will/did you graduate? Month Year

Return this card today, or Call 1.800.964.GRAD

Visit our web site: www.gmgrad.com CN

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 20 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, February 23, 1999

University sees applications, acceptances drop among minorities

By George A. Chidi Jr.
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Admissions Office is holding off from accepting most applications in the bottom half of the applicant pool until a concrete policy concerning minority applications can be formed.

UMass has accepted 71 of the 2,069 applications rated "good" it has received so far this year, compared to 302 of the 2,679 applications received at the same time last year.

Of the 272 applications sent in by Asian, Latino, African or Native American (ALANA) students, only 12 have been accepted so far this year. At this time last year, 239 of the 377 ALANA applications had been accepted.

Administrators attribute this to some confusion about how race and ethnicity can be weighed, now that UMass is legally required not to give special consideration to students of color in the admissions process.

"We're learning more about what we can't do than what we can do," said Joe Marshall, dean for Enrollment Services.

Applicants in the "good" category — fourth of six tiers on the admissions rating scale — tend to enroll at higher rates when accepted, but are competing for few classroom spaces after students from higher admissions categories are accounted for, said Marshall.

ALANA students accepted in higher tiers tend to enroll at other schools more often, which led the administration to accept more students in the "good" tier to meet diversity goals.

Town faces budget trouble

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

AMHERST —The year 2000 is already looking grim for Amherst, according to the Select Board, which addressed ever bleaker budget projections and the town's Y2K compliance during last night's meeting.

Town Manager Barry Del Castilho said he has no more tricks up his sleeve to make a $977,493 budget deficit projection disappear for Fiscal Year 2000.

"I don't know of any rabbit we can pull out of a hat," Del Castilho said of any funds that may appear unexpectedly to lessen the deficit. "We have sort of hit the worst of our fears for [fiscal year] 2001 instead we hit it a year earlier."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Barry Del Castilho discussed issues ranging from the Y2K bug to budget constraints at last night's Select Board meeting.

The projected deficit is largely due to funding cuts from the state. Amherst has been receiving approximately $330,000 a year from a lottery payback system which will be phased out next year. The town also received $150 per student in state funding which will also be phased out next year. The school funding problem is exacerbated by students who leave for charter schools and schools of choice.

"We will not be in a deficit at the end of the day. We will balance out, but the question is how we do it," said Board Chairperson Brian Harvey. "We are probably in a very serious situation... something is going to have to be done."

After being reminded by Harvey of the budget problems, three groups came before the Select Board to request more funding than is currently projected in the 2000 budget.

"If they wish, they can start and see how hopeless [their requests are]," Harvey said of allowing the groups to speak before discussing the budget generally.

Linda Chalfaut, director of the Amherst Leisure Services Department, came to request money to continue a summer camp and increase the hours a special needs program director. Grants funding both items will run out this year.

Department of Health Director Epi Bodhi requested a health educator position be funded and John Clobridge, director of community services, was looking for a few extra dollars to help senior citizens. Clobridge wanted to fund more hours for a free nurse for the elderly and to pay for expenses volunteers incur when running elderly programs.

Turning from the budget debacle to the Y2K predicament Del Castilho issued a report of Amherst compliance so far.

"The news is really good at this stage," Del Castilho said. "There are still a lot of compliance scheduled for the middle of the year. [At] that time it will be clearer if there will be problems."

He said problems from the interdependence of electricity and telecommunications is an issue to be examined.

"The interdependence of these two vital utilities makes me worry and will cause me to urge that the town be ready for either or both to be interuppted for days or even weeks," Del Castilho wrote in his report.

Musician traces blues development

By Mary Grein
Collegian Corespondent

Steve Tracy, blues musician and professor of Afro-American studies, brought the story and song of the blues to a diverse audience yesterday afternoon.

The performance, which is just one of the events being held by the W.E.B. Du Bois Library in honor of Black History month was a combination of Tracy talking about blues and playing the harmonica.

Tracy, who has been referred to as "the No. 1 harmonica player," gave the audience a taste of that talent beginning with "Amazing Grace." This was a song he first played at his father's funeral. On a different note, Tracy played a piece he described as his interpretation of a train.

During the performance, Tracy chose to speak about the emotions involved with playing the harmonica because he believes that, "not enough time is spent on talking about playing, therefore I don't mind talking about it as some musicians do."

In addition to his live performance, Tracy played some of his pre-recorded work he did with his band and gave the audience a sense of what he had meant to portray during the pieces.

"I always tie my playing to emotions. I push my voice through the reeds and metal of the harmonica," said Tracy.

Tracy has played with many great blues musicians, one of them being B.B. King.

Many of those present felt that both his insights into the field and his actual playing were excellent.

"I was very impressed and honored we have Tracy on our campus. He played beautifully and I

Turn to BLUES, page 3

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Professor Steve Tracy performs blues harmonica yesterday afternoon in the W.E.B. Du Bois library.

Marijuana question won't be on March ballot

The University of Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC) has failed to gather enough signatures to place a marijuana-related question on the ballot for the March 30 Amherst elections.

The Amherst Town Clerk announced yesterday that the petition presented by the CRC, as well as several other local marijuana-rights groups, contained the signatures of only 1,647 registered Amherst voters. A full 10 percent of all registered Amherst voters, 1,746 signatures, was needed to put the question on the ballot.

The question would have asked voters to urge our political representatives to repeal the prohibition of marijuana. It would also have requested that the Amherst Police Department "deprioritize the enforcement of laws covering the prohibition of marijuana."

"It was still a very good showing," said Terry Franklin, spokesperson for the campaign. "It was our first time out, and we gained a lot of experience.

"It would have been easy to get the total number of signatures we needed, but literally hundreds of people were afraid to attatch their name to the petition," he said.

He added that the CRC would continue its fight for marijuana legalization.

"Barry [del Castillo, the Town Manager] and Hill [Bose, an Amherst Select Board member] are going to keep putting people in their jail," he said. "Why should we give up if that hasn't been resolved yet?"

— Jake Lilien

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

All bundled up...

Senior communication major Cliff Bolden braves the frigid temperatures yesterday afternoon.

Tennis player suffers injury in car crash

University of Massachusetts men's tennis team member Fabien Rabanal has been released from the hospital and is recuperating at home after suffering season-ending injuries in a car crash Friday morning.

Rabanal, and other members of the men's and women's teams, was travelling in a UMass athletic van to a morning practice session on the campus of Hampshire College when the van hit a patch of black ice and skidded off the road, where it slammed into a tree.

According to Justin Lynn, the UMass men's assistant tennis coach, Rabanal suffered a fractured sacrum and a fractured pelvis. The sacrum is a triangular shaped bone at the lower end of the vertebral column.

The injury has sidelined Rabanal for the remainder of the men's tennis season. He has returned home to Lexington to rest and rehabilitate.

Rabanal is a sophomore who transferred to University after starting his collegiate career at Providence College.

A member of the UMass women's tennis team broke her hand in the accident.

— Casey Kane

Select Board elections open to town, students

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

Now that Congress and the Governor have finished their hand-shaking and baby-kissing, it's Amherst's turn for some election furvor and students are eligible to have a say at the voting booth.

The annual town election on March 30 will decide who will fill two Select Board positions, among other town positions up for vote, including in the Housing Authority, school committee, moderator and elector.

Whether students live in the residence halls or off-campus in Amherst, many are eligible to cast votes in these races.

Assistant Town Clerk Sandra Burgess said anyone, whether living on or off-campus in Amherst, who is at least 18-years-old, a U.S. citizen and isn't registered to vote elsewhere, can register and vote.

There are two polling places located on-campus in Southwest. The polling places are available to anyone registered to vote in Amherst and living in Southwest.

There are five candidates vying for the two open Select Board seats after a discrepency between town by-laws and a form used to collect nomination signatures was cleared up.

Select Board candidate Prudencio Gomez-Cepero Sr. had come up two signatures short of the 50 required, after some of the signatures he had collected could not be certified because the signers had a different address then when they registered to vote.

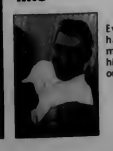
A town election law requires individuals signing nomination papers to list the address where they are registered. But the nomi-

Turn to ELECT, page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 26 LOW: 6	HIGH: 31 LOW: 14	HIGH: 39 LOW: 20

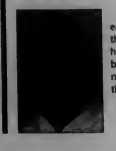
SOURCE: CNN.COM



They once called UMass home

Find out how University of Massachusetts alumni are putting their education to use for in our first-ever Alumni Page.

NEWS PAGE 5



What it's like

White rappers like Everlast and Eminem have recently been making waves in the hip-hop world. Check out our analysis inside.

ARTS PAGE 6

UMoving on up!

Junior Chris Kirkland earned A-10 Player of the Week accolades for his outstanding double-double performance against Xavier this weekend.

SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Classifieds 8
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
FYI 8
News 3
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Pathologist testifies in trial of accused white supremacist

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

JASPER, Texas — Dragged along a bumpy road by a chain around his ankles, James Byrd Jr. desperately shifted from side to side to ease the excruciating pain and was alive until his head was torn off by a concrete drainage duct, a pathologist testified yesterday.

Dr. Tommy Brown took the stand at the trial of John William King, one of the three white men accused of killing Byrd last June because he was black.

Prosecutors, who wrapped up their case against King after 43 witnesses, need to prove Byrd was alive when he was dragged in order to prove kidnapping and murder, which together would expose the white supremacist to the death penalty.

"It's my opinion, while being dragged, Mr. Byrd was conscious and was attempting to relieve the pain and injuries he was receiving," said Brown, who explained how Byrd's heels were ground to the bone.

"I think we all know how much brush burn abrasions, like if you fall and slide on a surface with your hands — that's very painful — and this would have been very painful to him. He would probably swap one portion of his body for the other, trying to get relief as he was being dragged."

Brown said Byrd's fatal wound occurred about two miles into the grisly journey in the early morning hours of June 7 when his head slammed into a concrete slab covering the gutter at the foot of a driveway.

The pathologist said there was no way to determine whether Byrd was still conscious when his head hit the culvert.

King's father and a female relative left the courtroom even before the pathologist testified. Some family members who stayed cried.

Hours later, the defense rested after calling three witnesses who testified for less than a hour. King did not take the stand. Closing arguments are scheduled for today.

The defense witnesses included a convicted burglar and sexual offender, John Mosley, who made some of the tattoos on King's body that prosecutors say are evidence of his seething racial hatred. Mosley said the tattoos "looked cool, that's all."

Another defense witness, Dennis Symmack, who hired King for construction work, said King was well-educated about the Klan and didn't like blacks.

Before defense attorneys began their side of the case, the jury watched an 11-minute video authorities made the day after Byrd's body was found. The video retraced the nearly three-mile dragging route.

The jury of 11 whites and one black studied most intently 14 crime-scene photographs, delivered to them individually in black folders.

Some were tight-lipped. One tried to suppress a facial twitch, glancing back and forth between the photos and King, who sat emotionless, his elbow on the table, his chin in his hand. Also yesterday, a Jasper County jail administrator, Mo Johnson, said authorities intercepted a letter written by King and intended to be smuggled to one of his alleged accomplices. Lawrence Brewer, in which he expressed pride in the crime and said he realizes he might have to die for it.

"Regardless of the outcome of this, we have made history," King said in the note, which he signed with a Ku Klux Klan symbol and Nazi salute.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Winter practice makes spring perfect

UMass baseball coach Mike Stone hits fly balls to his team yesterday afternoon at Richard F. Garber Field.

Police Log

Accident — Leaving the Scene
Feb. 18
Carla B. Centeio, 19, of 76 Draper St., Dorchester, was arrested on Fearing Street and charged with driving under the influence, leaving the scene of property damage, and a marked lane violation.

Alarm — Fire
Feb. 16
A pull station was activated in Butterfield Residence Hall. Environmental Health and Safety reset it.

Cooking smoke activated a smoke detector in Leach Residence Hall.

B&E/Burglary
Feb. 19
A window was smashed in Hampden Munchies and entry was made into the building. The incident is under investigation.
Feb. 16
An Individual in Patterson Residence Hall reported illegal entry to room. Nothing was reported stolen.

Disturbance
Feb. 19
A large group was involved in a verbal argument at John Adams Residence Hall.
Feb. 16
Two individuals were involved in an argument at Hamlin Residence Hall.

Fraud
Feb. 18
Illegal use of a credit card was reported at Dwight Residence Hall.
Illegal use of a credit card was reported at Kennedy Residence Hall.
Feb. 17
Illegal use of a credit card was reported in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Health/Safety Hazard
Feb. 18
Environmental Health and Safety was dispatched to check on a gas odor in Tobin Hall.

Larceny
Feb. 18
A ring, valued at $300, was stolen from a bag at the Mullins Center ice rink.
A counterfeit $100 bill was used at the University Store.
Feb. 17
An individual in James Residence Hall reported a room key stolen.
A VCR, valued at more than $100, was reported stolen from Herter Hall.
An individual in Leach Residence Hall reported that cash was stolen from a wallet in a room.
Two individuals reported their secured lockers in Boyden Gymnasium had been entered. Cash and personal property was stolen.
An individual in Lewis Residence Hall reported that mail had been tampered with and possible cash was stolen from an envelope.
An older TV, valued at $25, was reported stolen from the lounge area of McNamara Residence Hall.
Feb. 16
An individual reported two video tapes were stolen from a room in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
An individual reported the front wheel and hub was stolen from a bicycle at Brett Residence Hall.
A parking decal was reported stolen from a vehicle in Lot 32 E, south of Massachusetts Avenue.
An individual in John Adams Residence Hall reported a U-card stolen.
An individual reported the past theft of a water filter and humidifier from a room in Dickinson Residence Hall.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 16
Scott W. Spicer, 20, of 3 Hampshire Dr., Nashua, N.H., was arrested on a warrant in Lot 34 E, south of Massachusetts Avenue.

Vandalism
Feb. 18
Homophobic graffiti and swastikas were drawn on a bathroom stall in the School of Management.
A swastika was drawn on the wall in Brett Residence Hall. It was removed by Housing staff.

■ elect

continued from page 1

nation papers given to Gomez-Cepero said the current address was acceptable. So signatures from individuals who had moved since registering to vote were not valid.

The Town Clerk sent the issue to the Elections Division of the Secretary of State in Boston. The Elections Division responded saying the Town Clerk could certify him.

According to a press release from the Town Clerk, the Elections Division said the wording will be changed on town election papers to instruct Individuals to list their address they are "now registered at." This wording will then match that on other forms given by the state.

In addition to Gomez-Cepero, Marjorie R. Crossman, Paul DiBenedetto, Eva Schiffer and Carl Seppala will be running for Select Board positions.

The Select Board members, according to current member Hill Boss, are responsible for making recommendations to the Board-appointed Town Manager and the legislative branch of Amherst government, Town Meeting, issuing licenses and appointing individuals to other boards.

"You can [understand] about what kind of authority, what kind of things we can do, [by looking at what members are paid]," Boss said of the $300 members are paid per year for serving on the Select Board.

One thing students won't be voting on in March is a referendum question concerning legalizing marijuana. The question was short of approval by 99 signatures.

The Collegian is your source for the latest news!!!

STUDENT HEALTH ADVISORY BOARD

SHAB

- Learn about various professional roles in health care at UHS.
- Voice your opinion and play a part in how your health care dollars are spent.
- Participate on search committees and have a direct influence on hiring staff for UHS.

SECOND SPRING MEETING
February 24th
5:30 p.m., Room 304

University Health Services
For more information call the HED office
577-5181

Some BODY to Love Week
February 22 - 26
Come visit the Campus Center table Monday - Thursday 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.

Upcoming Event:
Enlightened Eating Workshop:
Breaking Free From Food Hang Ups
March 3
Call Health Education @ 577-5181 for location
4:00-5:30 p.m.
April 7
2nd Floor of Gorman Hall
4:00-5:30 p.m.

Monday 22 7:00 p.m. Washington Tower
Understanding Eating Disorders Workshop
Recovering Bodies: Overcoming Eating Disorders 9:00 p.m. Channel 17
Tuesday 23 9:00 p.m. Channel 17
Why Diets Don't Work
Wednesday 24 4:00 - 5:30 p.m. UHS Room 302
Informational Session on Eating Disorders: How to help roommates and friends.
The Famine Within 9:00 p.m. Channel 17
Thursday 25 7:00 - 9:00 p.m. Mt. Holyoke College, Mariposa Rm., Willits
The Body Politic: Women, Eating Disorder and Culture. Catherine Steiner-Adair
Recovering Bodies: Overcoming Eating Disorders 9:00 p.m. Channel 17

BEFORE YOU GO PLACES, GO HERE.

ARTCARVED

University Store Wed. - Fri. 2/24 - 2/26 10am to 5:30pm Campus Center Concourse near Stores.

What are you doing today?
(what are you doing after graduation?)

Accepting Resumes for Career Positions, Co-Op and Intership Opportunities

SEARS Arnes Eddie Bauer bkstn.com/sales Palo GAP T.J.maxx Hallmark K-B TOYS Jewelry TOYS R US STAPLES And Many More...

TODAY
10AM-3PM
Campus Center Auditorium

Students from all majors and colleges are welcome

Career Fair '99
SPONSORED BY THE APPAREL MARKETING PROGRAM, DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER STUDIES
Professional Dress Preferred • Please call 545-0013 for additional information

Engineering
sometimes includes flying planes, getting rich,
& eating pancakes
Come celebrate National Engineers Week

Tuesday, 4 p.m. Paper airplane contest. Prizes of $100, $50, & $25 gift certificates. Gunness Engineering Student Center, followed by a reception sponsored by the Society of Women Engineers.
Wednesday, 4 p.m. Learn about earthquakes and building design with Professor Jim LaFave, Marston 132.
Thursday, 4 p.m. Learn the inside scoop on "How to Retire Young and Rich" with engineering alum and Fidelity Investment consultant Donald St. Peter, Gunness Engineering Student Center, Marcus Hall.
Friday, 9:30 a.m. Breakfast on us! Cooked by our faculty. For engineering students only. Call 5-6390 for more information.

Deadline looms for Kosovo

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

RAMBOUILLET, France — With a new deadline imminent and the Serbs refusing to budge, ethnic Albanians met last night to decide whether to accept a self-rule plan for Kosovo designed to end their yearlong long conflict.

They were told beforehand by Gen. Wesley Clark, the NATO commander, that a NATO peacekeeping force would ensure their security in event an agreement is reached.

New fighting, meanwhile, broke out between Serb forces and ethnic Albanians.

The threat of NATO airstrikes against Serbian targets hung over the talks, although Secretary of State Madeleine Albright has said that NATO would not carry out the threatened bombing strikes against Serbs if the ethnic Albanians continued to object to provisions of the agreement.

Albright shuttled between the two sides yesterday, and Clark flew in unannounced from NATO headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, for a meeting with Hashim Thaci, the political director of the Kosovo Liberation Army, which has fought a bloody war for independence with Serb troops.

Some 2,000 people have died and about 300,000 more have been left homeless in the conflict.

Diplomatic sources in Europe, declining to be identified, disclosed the meeting without providing any details.

U.S. and European mediators have pushed the ethnic Albanians to give their final approval to a Kosovo settlement. "We have tried very hard to explain the benefits of the agreement," said a senior U.S. official. "These are wrenching decisions."

The official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Albright hopes to get "a true sense" of the ethnic Albanians' stance when she meets with them again on today.

Albright met separately with Serbian leader Milan Milutinovic, but without making any apparent headway in breaking down Serb resistance to the use of NATO peacekeepers to enforce a settlement. French Foreign Minister Hubert Vedrine also met with the Serbian president.

All sides are working against a deadline of 3 p.m. (9 a.m. EST) today.

Negotiators for the ethnic Albanians, who make up 90 percent of Kosovo's population, were holding out for a referendum at the end of the three years that could pull them out of Serbia, while the Kosovo Liberation Army was bargaining for a future role in Kosovo. The peace plan calls for autonomy but not self-rule for the ethnic Albanians.

In Tirana, Albania, Prime Minister Pandeli Majko said any Kosovo peace deal must allow ethnic Albanians to express "their free will" for independence. He said the Albanian government would stand by any decision they make.

The Serbs have refused to accede to U.S. demands that a 28,000-member NATO peacekeeping force, including up to 4,000 Americans, be part of any peace agreement. Germany pledged 5,500 troops to such a force yesterday.

"There is nothing new," Milutinovic said. "We are in the same position."

Strolling around central Rambouillet, he said, "We are for the political agreement. After that we can discuss implementation." In Yugoslavia, about 10 Serb military vehicles came under fire near Vucitrn, according to Walter Ebenberger, a spokesman for the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. He said the Serbs called in reinforcements — including two tanks and an armored personnel carrier — which returned fire.

The Kosovo Information Center, run by the ethnic Albanians, said the fighting began when government troops attacked three villages. "It is hard to be optimistic," Albright's spokesman James P. Rubin said earlier yesterday. "We are working as hard as we can." In the same vein, Vedrine told reporters separately that "while everything is possible, nothing is settled."

"We are going to work very hard to the very end," he said outside a 14th century chateau where Albright shuttled between the two sides trying to win agreement before Tuesday's deadline, the second set by the United States and its negotiating partners, France, Britain, Germany, Italy and Russia.

Albright, reaching out for help, called Albanian officials in Tirana, hoping they would urge the Kosovar Albanians to agree to the peace plan.

Milutinovic, obviously aware of Albright's predicament with the Kosovar Albanians, said the Serbs would willingly accept a political settlement for Kosovo, but until then could not take up the six-nation demand that a NATO peacekeeping force replace Serb troops in Kosovo to help European monitors enforce the agreement.de Gaulle had refused for years to participate in NATO operations.

ASSOCIATED PRESS
United States Secretary of State Madeline Albright

■ blues

continued from page 3

hope to hear him again," said Isabel Espinal, the outreach librarian and organizer of the event.

Tracy is also the author of Langston Hughes and the Blues, Going to Cincinnati: A History of the Blues in the Queen City, A Brush with the Blues. Also, he published Write Me a Few of Your Lines: A Blues Reader shortly.

He ended his performance with a question and answer period, during which time the audience was able to further learn how Tracy feels about his relationship with the blues.

The performance itself was one in a series of events celebrating Black History Month on campus. As Espinal stated, "This is a new event and we are very happy people from all different backgrounds came. It is just the beginning, there will be more events to come."

As the last event of the month, Ernest Allen, Jr., professor of Afro-American studies at the University, will speak on African American cultural issues. The talk begins at 4 p.m. today and is being held in the special collections and archives reading room in the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

Campus Career Network
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Campus Career Network would like to thank the following companies who donated raffle prizes for this year's Campus-Wide Career Fair. Please find to the right of them this years winners.

Congratulations!!!

Lucent Black Bag...Leah and Kondis William
Sikorsky Shirt and Hat...Jen Elysse
Sikorsky Briefcase...Cindy Poon
IBM Fleece Jacket...Mere Lutz
IBM Via Voice Executive...Garvin Tran
PictureTel Briefcase...Shari Matesowicz
Lockheed Martin Umbrella and Jacket...Hau Li

Spring On-Campus Recruiting Opportunities Available Now!!!

View hundreds of employment opportunities on the web at:

www-ccn.acad.umass.edu

By using your on-line registration service, you'll be on your way to accessing the latest employment information!!!

Paid advertisement

THE JOB INTERVIEW: 5 shocking truths that can help you nail your dream job

Let's face it. Nobody looks forward to job interviews. A total stranger stares you down for an hour while you sit there uncomfortably in your pantyhose, trying to sound super-intelligent while also remembering to keep your legs crossed correctly. While you'd prefer to avoid thinking about the whole thing, and just get through it when the time comes - Don't! Here are a few "insider" insights about the whole process that may shock you, but can help you better connect with your interviewer and distinguish yourself from the competition.

1. RESUMES ARE OBSOLETE

Well, they're not really obsolete..but they are only one piece of the job puzzle. "Most people spend much more time on their resume than they do preparing for each interview. That's a huge mistake," says Bruce Tulgan, the author of Work this Way, a book about how to thrive in your first few jobs. "People can easily lie on resumes. The interview is much more important, which is why recruiters spend so much time doing them - and why you should spend time getting ready."

What to do:

- Think about all the time you will spend on your job search; then, carve out a chunk of those hours to prep for your interviews.

2. WORK EXPERIENCE NOT REQUIRED

Okay, so you may not have a ton of real work experience. But that's not what recruiters are really looking for when they are hiring new college grads. Believe it or not, the very fact that you are young can be worth a lot to many companies. They're in search of a 22-year-old's energy and fresh perspective. You may have a whole new way of looking at things, and that's invaluable to most companies. "Frankly, experience is not very important to us," says Tom Scott, co-founder of Nantucket Nectars, a booming small beverage company with current annual sales over $50 million. "We can teach you to do the things you need to do here. What we're looking for is hunger." As Scott suggests, entry-level job interviews are not designed to weigh your experience, they're supposed to measure your smarts, enthusiasm, personality and passion.

What to do:

- Instead of just describing your past summer jobs, focus on stories that showcase your energy and passion for the activities you really care about. Or, talk about how your leadership has made a difference. While your examples may be summer jobs, they may also be a concert you organized, a paper or project for a favorite class, or a team sport that you play. Make it clear that you will be just as hungry and passionate about the job for which you are interviewing.

3. GOOD QUESTIONS, NOT GOOD ANSWERS CAN CLOSE THE DEAL

Most people spend time preparing answers that will showcase their intelligence, savvy and interest in a company. This is important. But preparing some thoughtful, well-researched questions can accomplish the same thing - and often with greater impact! When the interviewer gets around to "Any questions?" (and he or she will), that's your chance to strut any stuff that you haven't been asked about during the course of the interview. What you reveal in a well-thought-out question might even nail you the job. Jodi Kantor, a New York City college grad, used this strategy to beat out heavy competition for a job as political aide to the Mayor. When she interviewed for the position she wanted to highlight her passion for and understanding of the job. She called on her own experience with New York's parking ticket and birth certificate bureaucracy to make her point. "I made sure to ask specific questions about whether I could work on customer service projects that would fix problems similar to the ones I had faced as a city resident," she says. Turns out that the Mayor was launching some big service initiatives in that area. Kantor's interviewer was so impressed with her genuine interest in the city's problems that he hired her and put her on the team to help solve them.

What to Do:

- Stay away from obvious questions (i.e.; the ones answered in the company literature). Instead, find out what your interviewer thinks about a relevant company or industry issue. Or, ask about a specific part of the job that is of particular interest to you.

4. YOU CAN KNOW EVERYTHING ABOUT A COMPANY

Many people look at prepping for an interview like studying for an exam. They read all the obvious material to make sure they know "who, what and where". This is a great start, but it's just the tip of the iceberg. Reading a company's recruiting brochure and spitting it back in the interview won't impress anyone. To really stand out you need to arm yourself with current and substantive information about the company and industry. Thanks to today's technology, this does not have to be a daunting or time consuming proposition. You can learn a lot with minimal effort and make a great impact because most other undergrad candidates won't take the extra step.

What to Do:

- Read the newspaper! See what's happening in the world that might be relevant to the respective company or industry.
- Call and ask for a company's sales materials to see how they talk to their customers.
- Use on-line info like company or news web sites. Sites like www.wetfeetpress.com and www.vaultreports.com carry great company and industry profiles for sale.
- Utilize free news information resources at your school library like Lexis/Nexis or the Bloomberg News Service.

5. FUN, NOT FACTS MAY MAKE THE DIFFERENCE

Probably the most important piece of information a recruiter will want to know but will never ask directly is "What is this person like to be around?" A good recruiter knows you will be working some long hours in a closed room with other people. You better believe that a key question on his or her checklist is "Do I want to work with this person? Would my colleagues want to work with this person." Let's face it, many people will have the same skills as you, but not everyone can package those skills with your personality. You want the recruiter to walk away wanting to work with you!

What to Do:

- Make sure pieces of YOU come out in the interview! Be confident about yourself, and communicate with energy and enthusiasm. Don't be afraid to laugh when appropriate or talk about a personal issue to make a relevant point.

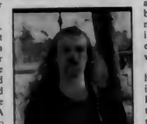
The Secret Success Series
brings you information designed to help you achieve your personal and career goals. Watch for the rest of this series in future issues of your school newspaper.



Secret
"Strong Enough for a Man, But Made for a Woman."

EDITORIAL / OPINION

-- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian --

Private property, public good

Driving home from Vermont, and ignoring the stress and obsessions of the daily commute, you smile to yourself at the scenery ahead. But as your eyes gaze across the area, you swear to yourself that the mountain you see in the distance never looked like that before. You cannot remember the gouge that is near its base, and now you can never ignore it.

Jason Weisenbach

Nearby Mt. Tom, the mountain that once served the area for skiing and other activities, has become the subject of angered environmentalists and area residents in the past few months. A private owner, who owns one-eighth of the mountain, wants to turn 90 acres of her property into a quarry for future area roadways, among other possibilities.

Currently, owner Mary Rose O'Connell operates a small portion — just over seven acres — of her property as a quarry. While this little area may not threaten anything now, many worries have surfaced at the thought of expansion. Primarily, the destruction of animal habitats and the defacement of an irreplaceable mountain highlight the concerns of environmentalists and residents.

The piece of property has been owned by the O'Connell family for generations, and the quarry's operations have taken place since the 1940s. O'Connell argues that no one has the right to tell her how to manage her property, for it has always been privately owned.

Until 1995 the current quarry and its profits were used to offset the unprofitable business of skiing that the O'Connell's controlled. Many area residents considered the O'Connell family in high regard because they thought of the people and their interests before the chance to make a greater profit, as likely an expanded quarry will do.

However, some have questioned the intentions of Mary Rose, who has only taken control of the property through a series of family deaths. Other members of the family and the community claim she is acting against the wishes of the former family owners. O'Connell, however, argues that property owners should be able to do as they please upon land they legally own without government influence.

Yes, the government should not have complete control over your property because then the freedom of individual ownership becomes irrelevant. Furthermore, the right to create your own source of income, and thus invigorate the economy, is threatened if the government refuses to allow people to live off the land that they own.

However, if government in theory is representative of the people as a whole, then its interests cannot be ignored simply because one person wants to make a profit. Environmentally, the number of protected animals and plants across the mountain and on O'Connell's property, could in itself prevent the quarry's expansion.

The director of the Massachusetts Audubon Society tells us that 10 of the 12 species of salamander and 13 of the 15 species of snakes can be found on the mountain. However, as O'Connell points out, the likelihood that her 90 acres would destroy their habitats on the 3,500-acre mountain seems a little questionable. Regardless, though, expansion of the quarry will produce a state review, which could cost O'Connell thousands in legal bills.

The state's interest may not end here either. Many hope that O'Connell will sell her property, which may be valued nearly $3 million, to the state. The state could then incorporate it into the already existing reservation area while O'Connell could make a large deal of profit quickly.

O'Connell, though, denies that any offer has been made to her and that her first concern is the expansion of the quarry.

Selling the property to the state would also solve what I feel is the most problematic impact of the quarry expansion, that of defacement of the mountain. While there is no undeniable proof that O'Connell would put a crater in the mountain's base by her excavation, the mere possibility of destroying a unique part of nature should greatly concern area residents.

Like laws against creating a public eyesore in a town or city, the same line of reasoning should apply to any private property that could bother residents visually. Assuming that eventually an eyesore would be created by the quarry expansion, the state and citizens should have the right to vote on whether her plan should be allowed.

Moreover, destruction of a mountain goes one step further than such eyesores as vacant lots or houses. At least those eyesores can be removed, and the ambience of the town is restored after a few months of work. However, defacement of a mountain is not only a public eyesore, but a permanent one. No matter how much work is done, the natural elegance of a mountain cannot be repaired if later we want it back.

The state and the residents of this area need to ask themselves if what O'Connell proposes is worth the price of possible defacement. I feel, though, that profit and the roads that will be created or repaired from this quarry do not warrant the negative impacts it may have on the mountain.

I feel that private owners should have the right to beautify or mutilate their property if they so choose. However, the legacy that a private owner can leave behind after death will always be with us. Therefore, the public should have an interest in any activity that could permanently desecrate the natural landscape of an area and realize that once damage is done with nature, it cannot be restored.

Jason Wiesenbach is a Collegian columnist.

Next stop, Sunderland

It's been 20 minutes and still no sign of a bus. You shuffle left and shuffle right, give a sigh and decide to check out the poor souls that are waiting with you. The guy to your right has just finished reading the bus schedule for the second time (probably to make sure that the PVTA actually exists) and is now engrossed in a flyer advertising a lime- green couch set.

Okay. The guy to your left is busy alternating between scuffing the pavement with a worn out Nike and clipping the straps of his backpack around his waist. A rhythm is set.

Scuff scuff, clip
unclip. scuff
scuff, clip unclip. You're just about to grab the straps and strangle him with them
when a flash of blue on the road catches your eye. Is it? I think... oh wait! Gasp. It is! There's a bus coming towards you. You rush to the curb.

> "The buses don't arrive regularly. Why post a schedule if it isn't followed?"
>
> Marlee Kikoyne

The reading guy turns around at the speed of light and is at your side, ready to do battle with anything that would get in his way. The scuffer stumbles forward with a cry because his foot cramps. He pathetically throws himself towards the bus. All three of you drool in anticipation, waiting for the deciding moment. Where is the bus going? You squint to see better and — no! The bus says Sunderland.

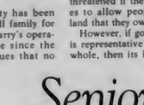
You deflate and baby-step backward away from the departing bus. The reader swears and stomps back to the wall in disgust. The scuffer whimpers with disappointment and limps away from the curb. Oh the humanity! The injustice of it all!

Has this happened to you? I feel like I go through this same routine every day. Sure, the faces and annoying habits change, but the late buses always stay the same. It's not so much that the buses are late but that they don't seem to be following the schedule at all. There probably isn't even a schedule. You know that flyer that the PVTA puts out with all the times and destinations? Well, some guy came up with those at random. It only exists to convince us that the bus is coming eventually.

It's a conspiracy, people! I ask you this: Why are there no buses to Sylvan but three in a row to Sunderland? Like there are so many people that have to go to Sunderland in the middle of the day that there must be three buses in 20 minutes to take them all. There is no rush of Sunderlanders at noon, and people do need to get to Sylvan after 7:30 p.m. At times there just doesn't seem to be any pattern followed by the buses at all.

This is not to say that the PVTA doesn't provide an invaluable service to UMASS students, only that the buses don't arrive regularly. Why post a schedule if it isn't followed? Many of you might not have experienced this because you live in a central location, but to my colleagues who live off-campus or on the edge of campus, I know you understand my distress. It gets annoying having to wait over 20 minutes every time I need to take a bus.

It's such a horrible feeling to look at the schedule and see that the bus was supposed to have already arrived and it hasn't. You wait and wait until your class has already started, and it's too late to walk. You know everyone will look at you when you finally stumble in, and that's just embarrassing.



Next time you find yourself stranded at a PVTA stop, remember that I've been there and that the bus will eventually come, though it may be awhile.

Marlee Kikoyne is a UMass student.

Senior blues

You know, I went to the Career Fair last week and I could not find the Rock Star table.

I got all dressed up and it's like, "Uh, where can I put in my application to be a rock star?" But I couldn't find the table. The guy from the Marines said something about me being "stupider than a gunnery sergeant." Rumor is, the Rock Star table wasn't even there.

Mike Messaros

Which is just one of the thing that is killing my whole senior year. I thought it would be a cake walk. So far, it's just been a whole bunch of disappointment.

I fully expected to go in and find a table manned by Slash or Billy Idol, or at least a guy from Night Ranger. "What's up guy?" Slash would sneer supportively.

"I was just looking over your literature here. Hmm, do I really want to be a rock 'n' roll star?"

"Yeh, it's the life, man. Parties, hot and cold running chicks. You get to see America. You have someone else clean up your vomit. It's the life."

"Huh. Well, I have to admit, it does sound enticing. Especially the part about someone else cleaning up my vomit."

"It's... yeah, it's cool. It's..." At this point Slash would nod off.

"Slash... uh, Mr. Slash?" I'd say, shaking his shoulder.

"Anyway," he says, popping back into consciousness, "you think about it. And here's a little something for stopping by." At this he pulls out a little nip bottle of Wild Turkey.

"Geez, thanks Slash. I'm going to drink this before my test and... Wait a second, has this been opened?"

"Well, I had to wash down the pills with something."

But this scene never played out. All I saw were people clamoring all over tables manned by representatives from companies with "tech" and too many capital letters in their title. "I want to work in a cubicle for you! I want to make your coffee."

"And you will, my little pets," they'd laugh. At this point I'd take one of the free bi-liters they were giving out and run away. (P.S. If you've ever seen me run, you know I don't do this often. It's only when absolutely necessary. My toes point in, my legs kick back too far, it's an awful sight. I hope my kids never have to see me run, because that will be the day they stop respecting me.)

Before that, a few weeks ago, I had to get my senior portraits taken. Now, I didn't want to, but my mom gently urged me. (Actually, she said in one breath that I didn't have to, but she'd appreciate it and that "Boy, we just paid for the phone bill from when you were home over break. I didn't know you had so many friends in the 1-900 area code." Let's call us even steven.)

So I get in there, and of course the photographer has to talk. Whatever.

"So where are you from?"

"Around Philadelphia?"

"Oh, we're based around there. What high school did you go to?"

"LaSalle."

"Wow. We take their pictures. Who knows," he mused, looking through the eyepiece of his camera, "maybe I took yours."

At that my face fell. My senior pictures look like I'm suffering from gigantism and kidney stones all at once. It's like the "before" picture in a Metamucil commercial.

"Why don't you smile? Make mom and dad proud."

Mom and dad would be a lot prouder if their little son got a job that didn't involve fencing oar stereos than if I smiled in my senior portrait. Although fencing car stereos has a bitchin' 401k plan. And it's a lot cooler than taking pictures.

When I tried to smile, the photographer looked up, with this indescribable look on his face and said "you don't have to smile."

And that hurt worse than sitting on my keys (which I do at least three times a day). Because I thought I could light the world up with my smile. Then the guy keeps telling me to turn my head just a little bit more. Combined with the inexplicable look of surprise on my face, and the angle of my head, the caption for that picture could be "Do you hear what I hear?" ("A child, a child, something in the night..." Something like that.)

Add this to the ignominy of not finding the Rock Star table at the Career Fair, and you can see how my dreams are coming crashing to the ground like a plane piloted by Sporty Spice ("I saw this doon in ah Kuhk Douglas moov-ay. Now, which way do I push if I wanna go oop?" — I'm sorry that sounds more like Ewan MacGregor than Sporty Spice. Whatever, I'm not Mark Twain). Senior year is not cool, kids. It's about as cool as seeing your parents naked. Together. Again.

Mike Messaros is a Collegian columnist.

Write for ed/op! Come down to 113 Campus Center and find out how!

Letters to the editor are always welcome. Since our e-mail account is down, bring a typed copy down to the Collegian in the Campus Center basement. Your name, phone number and where you live should be included. If you have any questions, talk to Tanya, Alexis or Gary.

THANKS FOR READING THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN, NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Mike Messaros Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
John Bajoras Advertising Manager Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Julia Sears Developing Nations Editor
Tanya Maines Editorial/Opinion Editor
Mary Miles Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Laura Forster News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Co-Sports Editor
Paul Teves Co-Sports Editor
Julie Fialkow Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Presnes Distribution Manager
Laura Keller Promotions Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager

Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Mejerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

UMass alumni making impact after college

School boasts big newsmakers

By Casey Kane and Mike Messaros
Collegian Staff

According to Time magazine, John Smith, CEO and president of General Motors, and Jack Welch, CEO and chairman of General Electric, were named two of the "Top 10 Outstanding U.S. Leaders."

"Now what does this have to do with me?" you ask, as a University of Massachusetts student whose only top 10 achievement can be found on the Baywatch pinball machine down by The Hatch.

Well, because just like you, Smith and Welch both graced this campus at one time. They are both proud alums who can claim Amherst as their home — not Amherst College, but UMass, 01003.

It would seem to the casual observer that one of our more esteemed Five College neighbors could lay claim to the distinction of having as alumni not one, but two, of the top 10 outstanding U.S. leaders. But doesn't this say something, that not only are General Electric and General Motors run by UMass graduates, but also Hasbro/Milton Bradley, Citizens Bank Boston and Baskin-Robbins?

Nobel Prize winner? Russell Hulse shared the award for physics for the discovery of the binary pulsar. Ambassadors? Absolutely. Astronaut? Ch-ching! Hey, we've even got a Oprah book club selection author.

John F. Smith Jr. was born on April 6, 1938 in Worcester, and 22 years later he left UMass with a degree in business administration. The next year he got his start at GM, at the Fisher Body plant in Framingham. In 1966, he began his ascent up the corporate ladder, going to New York to join GM's financial staff.

Smith became GM's CEO and president on Nov. 2, 1992. He later became chairman of General Motor's board of directors on the first day of 1996. He now serves as a member of the Chancellor's Executive Committee at UMass.

John F. Welch (or Jack to his friends) left UMass with his Bachelor of Science in chemical engineering in 1957, and joined GE in 1960. He became the chairman and CEO in 1981, creating a company that has been hailed by many as one of the best run in all of business.

The March 1, 1999 issue of Fortune named GE America's most admired company for the second year in a row. And Welch has always been seen as the reason. University of Michigan management professor Noel Tichy says: "The two greatest corporate leaders of this century are Alfred of General Motors and Jack Welch of GE. And Welch would be the greater of the two because he set a new, contemporary paradigm for the corporation that is a model for the 21st century."

According to GE's Website, Welch's values include: "See change as opportunity, not threat" and "Have a passion for excellence and hate bureaucracy." Looks like just like you and me, Welch stood in a Whitmore line.

For 16 days in 1995, Chatherine "Cady" Coleman circled the globe from the space shuttle Columbia, becoming one of the few UMass graduates to actually see if the Fine Arts Center does look like a piano from the air. An Air Force captain, Coleman recieved a Ph.D. in polymer science and engineering from UMass in 1991.

While some of us show our pride by putting UMass stickers on the back of our run-down Hondas, Coleman showed hers by taking a UMass sweatshirt she recieved from the Dean of Natural Sciences and Math, a banner from Chancellor David K. Scott and a four-inch glass ornament from a local artisan into space.

UMass can also boast about the U.S. Ambassador to Switzerland. Madeline Kunin was born in Switzerland on Sept. 28, 1933, but earned her bachelor's degree here in Amherst. She eventually earned master's degrees from Columbia and the University of Vermont.

Before becoming ambassador, Kunin served as a representative in Vermont's General Assembly for three terms beginning in 1973, as lieutenant governor from 1979- 83, and as a three-term governor of Vermont (1985-96).

A proud history is buried within the walls of our dormitories and classrooms. There are alumni out there who are changing the face of the world, alumni who walked the same halls and paths as we do right now. And they didn't even have a Baywatch pinball machine to play. Yet they still made it.

Notable alumni in the news

Chuck Steedman: Vice President, American Skiing Company
Richard Goldstein: CEO, Unilever, U.S. Inc.
Kathleen Cote: CEO, Computer Vision Corporation
George Ditomassi: CEO, Hasbro/Milton Bradley
Robert Mahoney: CEO, Citizens Bank Boston
Bob Meers: Vice President, Reebok
William Savel: CEO, Baskin-Robbins

For information about the University of Massachusetts Alumni Association, check out the Internet at www.umassalumni.com

Or write to:
University of Massachusetts Alumni Association
Memorial Hall
Box 35410
Amherst, MA 01003

Or call:
1-800-456-UMASS

Alums: Get your resume out there

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Staff

Some University of Massachusetts alumni say that graduating seniors just need to circulate their resumes enough and the job search should not be too hard.

Joseph Malcolm graduated from the University of Massachusetts in May of 1997 with a grade point average in the high 2.0s. While he attended UMass he majored in journalism and minored in political science. Malcolm spent five months after graduating without working.

Then, Malcolm interviewed three times with Mellon Trust and was hired a year and four months ago. Mellon Trust is a bank run on, and as a mutual custody administrator Malcolm said that although he liked to do something that pertains more to what he studied in school, he is getting good experience.

"Mellon Trust introduced me to the corporate world and to office responsibilities, I'm getting good experience," he said.

Malcolm says it is difficult to explain exactly what he does, and he describes himself as "an accountant for investment companies. Basically, I book the trades and move the money," he said.

He also said it wasn't hard to land this job and the key is to get your resume out there. "It feels scary at first, but there are a lot more positions available then people think. It's a matter of sending your resume everywhere," he said.

Although Malcolm may not stay at Mellon Trust, he likes making a good salary and says there is a lot of room to grow. In his spare time, Malcolm is writing a book called Stepping Westward.

Kerri Connors is also a UMass alumna who is making good things happen for herself. Connors, who graduated in May of 1996, now works at Chen P.R. in Waltham as an account executive. Chen P.R. deals with high tech companies, which according to Connors, means computers.

Connors has been working at Chen P.R. of two and a half years now and has already been promoted twice. She works on three different accounts in teams of four.

"We write press releases, set up trade shows, and act as a liaison between our clients and the outside world," said Connors.

Like Malcolm, Conners agrees that getting a job should not be too hard. "It's a good job market especially for jobs in technology. Use informational interviews. Figure out what area you want to be in then call all the companies you can find and ask them about their company," said Connors.

She also suggests using the Internet. "Utilize the Internet, put your resume on it, it shows companies that you have computer skills, which are very important today," Connors said.

Chen P.R. is a small company with only 28 people working there, but Conners like it this way. "I thought I wanted to do something like this and I love it," said Conners.

Conners' number is listed with the School of Management and she would be happy to talk with any student interested in the field.

Massachusetts alums making mark in world of arts & entertainment

By Mike Messaros
Collegian Staff

Last year my friends drove to Boston to see University of Massachusetts alums Buffalo Tom play. When they got there, they found out it was sold out. Coincidentally, they wandered into a Store 24 and ran into lead singer Bill Janovitz. They told them their story, and he told them not to worry, and took them into the show for free.

On the way in he asked if they went to school, and they said they went to UMass. He asked what they did there, and one of my friends said, "We just play video games a lot." Things haven't changed, Janovitz remarked.

Now, not everyone left here with such a rich experience as Bill Janovitz. Well, maybe. But with such a artistically supportive area as the Pioneer Valley, UMass has been blessed with many alumni that have gone on to great paint, limelights and fame. Yup, they're gonna live forever.

Taj Mahal — After more than three decades of music steeped in African American tradition, Taj Mahal received recognition for the 36th album of his career, 1997's Senor Blues, in the form of a Grammy.

The oldest of nine children, Henry Saint Claire Fredericks was born in Springfield and for college drove up I-91 to attend UMass. He graduated in 1964 with a degree in agriculture and animal husbandry. Like most agriculture and animal husbandry majors, he ended up in the folk music scene of the 1960s.

Taj Mahal's music is described as eccentric and eclectic, touching on zydeco, rhythm and blues, Hawaiian music and jazz. An engaging performer, he is skilled in 20 instruments. He just released a 3-CD, 54-track compilation called In Progress & In Motion (1965-1998). Animal husbandry does not come up much anymore.

Bill Cosby — One of the richest entertainers in America today, Bill Cosby has broken TV barriers more than once. First, he became the first African American star of a TV drama when he was partnered with Robert Culp in "I Spy" in 1965. Then, in the '80s, he was the star of one of the most watched, and most endearing shows of possibly all time, "The Cosby Show." Harvard professor Henry Louis Gates said of the show: "The brilliant thing Cosby did was to put race and economic issues on the back burner so we could see a black family dealing with all the things black people deal with the same as other people."

Before Cosby was entertaining blacks and whites alike, he was witnessing events in his hometown of Philadelphia, events he would later turn into bits for his stand-up and his popular comedy albums. He went to Temple on a football scholarship, then entered into the world of stand-up comedy, taking the stage of the Gaslight Cafe in 1962.

In the '70s he received a doctorate in education from the University of Massachusetts. To go along with that on his mantle, he's collected four Emmys, eight Grammys and has been inducted into the hall of fame for the Academy of Arts and Sciences. He is currently starring in "Cosby" on CBS.

Bill Pullman — Before he perfected the neo-Ralph Bellamy role as "the guy who gets dumped by Meg Ryan" in Sleepless in Seattle, or got the girl in While You Were Sleeping, Bill Pullman wanted to rebuild barns. He went to technical school to learn how, but got caught up in acting. He received a master's degree in directing from UMass before going out to Hollywood.

Notable alumni in arts/entertainment

-Bill Cosby: comedian/actor, star of "The Cosby Show"
-Natalie Cole: singer
-Richard Gere: actor, star of Pretty Woman, An Officer and a Gentleman and Primal Fear
-Bill Pullman: actor, star of Independence Day and While You Were Sleeping
-Jack Canfield: author, Chicken Soup for the Soul
-Andrew Gordon: co-producer, "Mad About You"
-The Pixies: band, album titles include Surfer Rosa, Doolittle and Bossanova
-Buffalo Tom: band, album titles include Big Red Letter Day, Sleepy Eyed and Let Me Come Over

COURTESY SONY MUSIC

Grammy-winning artist Taj Mahal got his start the University of Massachusetts with an agriculutre and animal husbandry degree.

Athletic alumni on the ball

Sports stars reap success at all levels

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

With the recent success that many of the University of Massachusetts sports teams have had in recent years, it is almost easy to overlook the significant athletic successes UMass alumni have had.

Consider the proverbial smokescreen that accomplishments like a Division I-AA National Championship in football, two consecutive Women's College World Series appearances, numerous NCAA tournament berths every season and Atlantic 10 conference victories create.

But the successes of those athletes who once called this Amherst campus their home are worth talking about as well.

Briana Scurry made quite a name for herself in women's soccer circles during the falls of 1990-93. The stellar goaltender completed her career in a Minutewoman uniform in the fall of 1993 when she was named national goaltender of the year by the Missouri Athletic Club. Scurry earned a degree in political science in May of '95.

Her biggest success to date, however, came in the summer of 1996 when she and the other members of the U.S. national team captured the gold medal at the Olympic Games in Atlanta. Scurry started every game and played every minute of action at the Centennial Games, allowing only three goals in five contests.

She also served as the starting goalie on the national team that took home third at the Women's World Championships in Sweden in 1995.

Mark Millon is one of UMass' most recognized lacrosse alums, having played to a level of national prominence as a Minuteman and in his post-collegiate lacrosse pursuits.

The 26-year-old Millon, who graduated from the University in 1993, scored an overtime goal to propel the United States to the International Lacrosse Federation World Championship title last summer in Baltimore.

Millon is not unfamiliar with that kind of success, having been named as the MVP of the 1994 World Games in Manchester, England.

Currently, Millon's 1994 national team jersey hangs at the Lacrosse Hall of Fame and Museum at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

Sal LoCasio, the U.S. National team starting goalie who made several crucial late-game saves in last summer's World Championship game, graduated from UMass in 1989.

Over the years, the University's baseball program has propelled over 50 players into the professional ranks. At last count, 12 Minutemen had reached the major league level.

Jeff Reardon, a two-time All Star relief pitcher who has played in two World Series (in 1987 with the Minnesota Twins and in 1992 with the Atlanta Braves) donned the Maroon and White during his years at UMass.

Reardon, who was born in Dalton on Oct. 1, 1955, made his major league debut on Aug. 8, 1979. During his career, he played for the New York Mets, the Montreal Expos, the Twins, the Boston Red Sox, the Braves, the Cincinnati Reds and the New York Yankees.

Gary DiSarcina, shortstop for the Anaheim Angels, joins Reardon on the list of baseball alums that also includes pitchers Ron Villone and Dave Telgheder and Baltimore Orioles pitching coach Mike Flanagan.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Once a standout UMass lacrosse player, Mark Millon was the MVP of the World Games in 1994 and a top member of last summer's U.S. National team, the World Games champion.

Notable alumni in sports

-Julius Erving: basketball superstar, currently working with Orlando Magic
-Rick Pitino: coach of the Boston Celtics, former coach of national champion Kentucky Wildcats
-Patty Shea: Olympic field hockey goalie/UMass field hockey coach
-Al Skinner: Boston College men's basketball coach
-Sal LoCasio: U.S. National lacrosse team goaltender
-Judy Strong: Smith College field hockey coach
-Greg Cannella: UMass men's lacrosse coach
-Ken O'Brien: UMass men's cross country/track coach
-Julie LaFreaniere: UMass women's cross country/track coach
-Russ Yarworth: UMass men's swimming/water polo coach

White men can't rap, can they?

Newcomer Eminem challenges race stereotype

David Katzoff

Malcolm X once proclaimed that the only thing he liked integrated was his coffee. Many closed-minded rap connoisseurs feel the same way about their hip-hop. This is one reason Detroit–based rapper Eminem has become a contemporary phenomenon in urban sound.

While some deem him 'the great white hope,' others remain skeptical of his self–critical flow and heap him with a slew of other "come and go" acts. But Marshall Mathers is not regarded as simply an encore (or rapper); he carries with him a much more dubious distinction, he is a white rapper.

The controversy of the Caucasian mic–holder rages far beyond musical barriers and enters dimensions of culturalism and ethnicity, whereas break dancers, graffiti artists and deejays are far less scrutinized.

The question of pertinence deals with authenticity. Do white rappers perpetrate the verbal art of emceeing by imitating the aesthetics and physical discourse of blacks and Hispanics? Or is true hip–hop so universal, so broad, so natural that race is not even an element of judgement in the face of the emcee?

On the dawn of his debut LP Slim Shady, Eminem's burden is treacherous. As the societal impact of rap music continues to expand, Eminem appears to be the missing link in hip–hop's "authentic," (yet recognized) spectrum of racially–diverse lyricists. While pioneering a unique and masochistic rhyming style, Mathers is often praised for his lyrical innovations — as a Caucasian. And although he is quite clever with the gab, his props and acclaim seem to be bubbling over his skin color and controversial lyrics.

Dr. Dre, who discovered Slim Shady and orchestrated the successfully underground "Just Don't Give a F*ck" of last year, has recently reaped the benefits of his gamble. (Let's face it, Dre 'rolled the dice' on this skinny white boy.) Currently, Eminem's darkly comedic video "My Name Is", is a mainstay in MTV's Buzz Bin and, in addition to guest–starring on Dr. Dre's highly anticipated Chronic 2000 album, he is lobbying for a spot in this year's Lollapalooza tour.

Dre speaks of his young protege the same way he spoke of Snoop Doggy Dogg back in 1992, but can Eminem enjoy the longevity of Snoop? Although he has generated outstanding hype, one wonders if his one–hit–wonder will manifest subsequent successes. Time will tell.

As for Marshall Mathers himself, he preaches that his lyrics appeal to a multitude of people, in that his experiences exemplify an impoverished, underprivileged adolescence. Downplaying the status of a rap racial icon, he claims that he is no different than any other emcee hailing from a depressed urban environment.

"I'm just trying to represent where I grew up and the type of lifestyle I led," Mathers said in an interview with Music Television. "Whether you white, black or whatever nationality you are, there's a lot of poor people, a lot of lower–class people that feel where I'm coming from."

Perhaps, but his scrutiny focuses more on his nationality than his societal class. He somewhat acknowledges this on "Just Don't Give a F*ck" by playfully attuning the inevitable comparisons with other white rappers: "I'm Nicer than Pete/ but I'm on a Serch to crush a Milkbone/ I'm Everlasting/ I melt Vanilla Ice like silicone..."

Ethnicity aside, Slim Shady has managed to captivate our attention with his skills, and even if we only see him as a fantastic white rapper, he probably just doesn't give a... Stay tuned.

David Katzoff is a Collegian columnist.

Everlast's breakthrough hit "What It's Like" is only one example of the recent explosion of hip–hop from white artists.

Matisse and Picasso: rivals and friends

By Christy Lemire
Associated Press

Henri Matisse and Pablo Picasso, who were both companions and competitors, helped define modern art. And the connection between the two masters becomes strikingly clear in "Matisse and Picasso: A Gentle Rivalry," an exhibit running at the Kimbell Art Museum through May 2.

Three years in the making, it is composed of more than 100 paintings, sculptures and drawings from collections around the world.

Picasso and Matisse began their rivalry in 1906, but the exhibit tracks them through the later stages of their careers, up to and after Matisse's death in 1954. It illustrates how they mimicked each other, borrowed from each other, respected each other and became best friends.

"Picasso really looked at Matisse toward the end of his life and after, but it's far less known that Matisse looked at Picasso very hard, as well," said the exhibit's guest curator Yve–Alain Bois, professor of modern art at Harvard University. Bringing these great works together for the first time "is like a dream come true. I'm so happy," he said.

The Kimbell's director, Timothy Potts, said the works have been studied and exhibited from many angles, but "there has not before been an exhibition that documents the keen and often touching rivalry, born of a strong mutual respect, between the two artists in the years of their maturity."

The exhibit begins with works from 1929, when Matisse lacked inspiration and was nearly unable to paint, and Picasso was in top form. The Spanish artist parodied Matisse's style by painting acrobats and dancers, which observers have speculated was an attempt to revive his inspiration.

A few years later, Matisse resumed work. Picasso became fascinated with a series of the older French artist's earlier sculptures and paintings and produced similar works. By 1933, Matisse was ready to respond to Picasso's challenge. His "Daisies" of 1939 features flowers identical to the primitive white daisies in Picasso's "Basket of Flowers and Pitcher" of 1937.

One of the earliest sections of the exhibit chronicles works from 1940–44. The two artists exchanged works, but had minimal direct contact with each other because of World War II — the Nazis prohibited Picasso from exhibiting, and Matisse kept a low profile. Yet each painted with the other in mind, trying to anticipate his next move. Matisse and Picasso produced some of their most similar works during these years.

Matisse's "The Dream" in 1940 is nearly a carbon copy of Picasso's "Woman With Yellow Hair" from nine years earlier. Both are side views of blond women leaning to the left and resting their heads across folded arms in sleep. Both rely heavily on yellow, pink and black.

Picasso painted "The Rocking Chair" in 1943, echoing Matisse's "Dancer in Repose" of a year earlier. Both works feature women leaning back in chairs with their legs folded underneath them, and both are on backgrounds of undulating tiles. While Matisse's faceless dancer wears a blue dress, Picasso's woman has distorted facial features and wears an amorphous frock of white, yellow and green.

Once the war ended, the two men reunited. They became closer than ever, meeting often and exhibiting together frequently.

After Picasso painted "Reclining Nude on Blue Bed" in 1946, Matisse recreated the work almost identically with pencil and paper in a sketchbook two years later. Both are on display, side by side.

The exhibit concludes with a series of Picasso's paintings after Matisse's death in 1954, which Bois says is the most moving part for him. Picasso, who had always been terrified by death, was devastated by the loss of his friend and rival, and refused to answer the phone when he expected it would be a call with news of Matisse's death. He didn't even attend Matisse's funeral.

Picasso, who would outlive Matisse by 19 years, did, however, posthu-

Turn to ARTISTS page 7

UVC TV–19 to unveil new editing system

UVC TV–19, UMass' student run television station, will get a big boost tomorrow at 12 p.m. as it unveils its new digital editing system during the Student Union Open House.

"This is a big thing for UMass," said Jessica King, UVC's publicity director. "It will be one of the few digital editing systems that students will have access to."

The system is a Media 100XS, which enables UVC to record, edit and create special effects in real time with professional quality. This way, students can arrange everything on a computer and edit simply with the push of a button, as opposed to the linear editing done previously.

"This is a vast improvement in technology," said UVC technical director Jim Gagne. "It's like the difference between a Model T and a Rolls... or a tape player and a computer."

King, Gagne and the UVC staff have labored long and hard for this crucial addition to their production capabilities.

"We were behind a lot of schools," King said. "People are already using these in high school... even in middle school."

The editing system will allow UVC to work on approximately two projects at a time. After training on the system, the Media 100XS will first be used on the Channel 19 News, UVC's news program.

The unveiling tomorrow is only part of an open house which includes a screening of a short student film, Happiness is a Warm Toaster. Produced in conjunction with UVC, the film screens at 2 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge.

Tours of the studio will be made available by UVC staff, who will be on hand to answer all questions.

— Bryan McAllister

Cage–d heat

Nicolas Cage portrays a private investigator driven by obsession in 8MM, an intense thriller soon to be released.

New World premiere

Playwright Azande's Sanango, a poetic work about birth and doubt, premieres Feb. 25 and runs through Feb. 27 at the Curtain Theater. The play will be performed by a cast of students from the Five Colleges pictured here.

Blondie plays again

By David Bauder
Associated Press

Research, not sloth, led members of Blondie to kill a few hours in the afternoon watching MTV in a luxury hotel suite. After 16 years away from the pop music world, these former chart–toppers needed to see what the competition was up to. Not much to hold Chris Stein's attention, it seemed.

"I don't really know any of this stuff," he muttered, "and I don't really have any interest in it, either."

Now it's time to wonder if the pop music world is interested in them. With a reputation burnished by nostalgia, Blondie has re–formed and released its first album of new material since 1982. Rock reunions are often depressing jokes, but early signs here are encouraging. The first single, "Maria," entered the British charts at No. 1, and VH1 filmed Blondie's first New York concert appearance for a special that airs Sunday at 10 p.m. EST.

Hits like "Heart of Glass," "Rapture" and "The Tide Is High" made Blondie among the most commercially successful bands to emerge from the punk rock scene. The band was engagingly eclectic and front–woman Deborah Harry was a tough girl with pinup looks who could sing, too.

Money tore them apart; when they weren't making much at the height of success, they turned on each other. Stein was also seriously ill for years with a rare genetic illness and Harry, then his wife, effectively disappeared to help nurse him back to health.

With artists like Garbage successfully mining Blondie's territory, Stein thought the time was right for a second try. Blondie's not ashamed to admit it's trying to cash in.

"I thought that if I didn't do it, I would look back in 10 years and say I probably should have done it," he said.

Disillusioned with the music business, keyboard player Jimmy Destri had spent years working as a contractor. He had renewed his interest in music and, oddly enough, was in England producing a Blondie tribute album when Stein called to talk about a reunion.

MIFA to host Blue Heart

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

Beginning this Thursday through Saturday, the Massachusetts International Festival of the Arts (MIFA) will present two one–act plays, Heart's Desire and Blue Kettle, written by one of Britain's leading playwrights, Caryl Churchill.

These two plays have been combined to form an award– winning diptych entitled Blue Heart. This rare engagement of Blue Heart will presented for six performances, Feb. 24– 28, at CityStage in Springfield.

At the heart of these two one–act plays are the notions of family reunion, dysfunction and disruption. Blue Heart is said to be humorous as well as full of surprises for the audience.

In Heart's Desire, the first of the two to be performed, a family nervously awaits the arrival of their long absent daughter from Australia.

In Blue Kettle, the central character Derek collects mothers, pretending to be the illegitimate son they gave up for adoption in the 1950s.

Directed by Max Stafford–Clark and performed by the acclaimed theatre troupe Out of Joint, the production has received accolades from critics.

Benedict Nightingale of The Times of London said, "Could there be a funnier, more vivid evocation of the tensions and terrors, resentments and fantasies beneath the family surface? No, not as Churchill writes the play and Max Stafford– Clark's cast deftly performs it... this is absurdism with attitude."

Blue Heart has been called "the play of the year" by the London Independent.

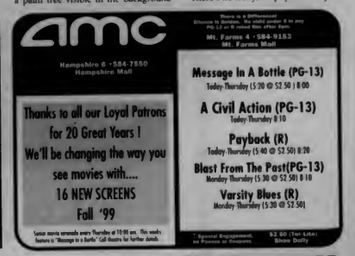
Caryl Churchill is Britain's most widely produced female playwright. At 59 years of age, Churchill is regarded as a trailblazer among female dramatists. Her works are considered intelligent, politically provocative and linguistically brilliant.

Max Stafford–Clark is one of Britain's leading directors and has been called by the BBC "the best director of new work in [England] if not the world."

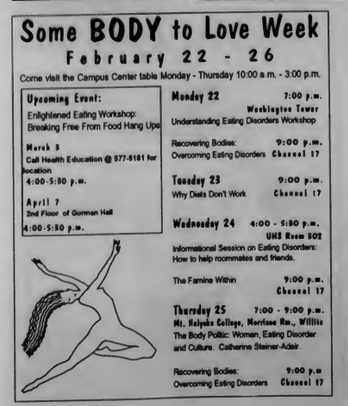
The MIFA's engagement of Blue Heart is the last of two appearances in the United States.

Performances are Wednesday through Saturday, 8 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 3 p.m. Tickets are $40 for preferred seating, $30 general seating and $10 students. For advance sales call CityStage Box Office at 413–788–7033. Discounts for groups of 12 or more can be arranged by calling the MIFA at 800–224–MIFA.

■ artists



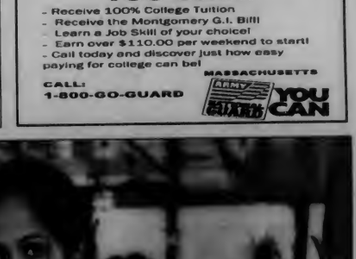
continued from page 6

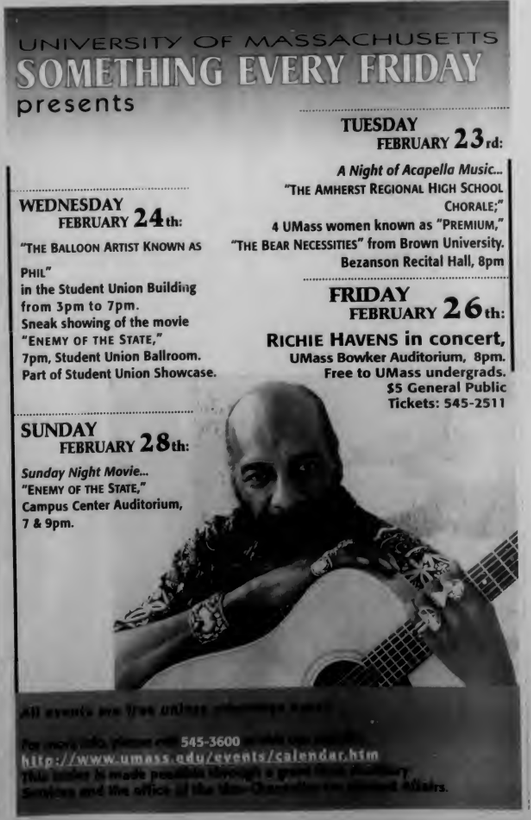


mously honor him through art. Reflective of Matisse's "Interior With Egyptian Curtains," the works use large amounts of black to create a contrast with blank white canvas space. Many of them picture empty studios, reminiscent of Matisse's large interiors.

The final piece of the exhibit, Picasso's "Woman in a Rocking Chair" of 1956, fuses both artists' styles. It has Matissean bright colors, a faceless woman sitting in a patterned chair and a palm tree visible in the background through a window. But Picasso adds his signature twisted body parts: The woman has a sharklike belly, a phallic arm and neck.

"He really is able to tell the world, 'I really like Matisse,'" Bois said. "There's no irony, no pity. The way it's painted, the way the white of the canvas vibrates, the pattern on the back of the rocking chair, all that is pure Matisse."





Men's track peaks at 3rd place in A–10s

By Adam White
Collegian Correspondent

Throughout this season, the athletes of the Massachusetts men's indoor track and field team have let their performances speak for themselves. Without a mess of flash and fanfare, they've earned their accolades in the heat of battle.

When the smoke cleared from this weekend's Atlantic 10 Championships at the University of Rhode Island, the Minutemen stood at a height previously unreached: third place overall.

Leading UMass to this unheralded position was freshman Wes Shaw of Auburn. Shaw soared to second in the high jump with a leap of 6–feet–7–inches, then flew to a solid third in the pole vault with a mark of 14–feet–9–inches.

Other standouts for UMass included seniors Andre Roach of Springfield and B.J. Cardoza of Mattapoisett, who earned fourth–place honors in the triple jump and weight throw, respectively. Cardoza's throw of 55–feet–10 1/2–inches neared his season–best throw from earlier in the week, at the Valentine Classic in Boston.

On the track, sophomore Brendan Sullivan nearly tasted victory in the 5,000m event, settling for second place a mere six seconds behind winner Chris Seton of Virginia Tech.

The Hokies captured the overall team title with a score of 212, followed by URI (104) and UMass (84).

Senior Tom Toye of Scarborough, Maine, a year–long "mainstay" among the Maroon and White's sprinting leaders, finished the 200m in a season–best time of 22.02. Toye also placed fourth in the 55m, with a time of 6.49.

Key third–place finishes were also captured by Neil Concepcion in the 500m (1:04.90) and freshman Kevin Curtin of Chelmsford in the 3,000m. Concepcion rode a wave of momentum created at the team's previous meet, when the Hayworth, N.J. native turned in a personal best run of 1:04.26 that also ranks as the second fastest 500m in school history.

Fellow fourth–year racer Ben Baraldi of Longmeadow cooked up a hot third–place run in a 55–m hurdle event that saw the most intense competition of the season.

Virginia Tech's Chris Stokes's time of 7.35 set a new conference record in that event, shattering the 1995 mark of 7.47 set by West Virginia's Rob Jones. Stokes earned all–conference honors for his performance.

The Minutemen will spend the week preparing for the New England Championships, slated for this coming weekend in Boston.

The NCAA championship is then scheduled for the weekend of March 5–6 in Indianapolis, Ind.

Women's swimming takes fourth

By Lawrence Redford
Collegian Correspondent

It was not the finish to the season they were hoping for. But this past week the members of the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team finished fourth at the Atlantic 10 Championships.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior tri–captain Julie Alexander competed in her final A– 10 Championships this weekend in Buffalo, N.Y.

Coming off a brilliant season in which the Minutewomen finished the regular season at 9–2, expectations were high for the A–10 championship meet.

Swimming and diving at the Flickinger Aquatic Center in Buffalo, N.Y., the Minutewomen were poised to improve upon their fourth place finish of last year in which they scored 278 points. The Minutewomen did improve by over 100 points in this year's championship, registering a score of 390.

Unfortunately this was only good for the same fourth place finish that they received at last year's meet. While at A–10s, the Minutewomen did set school records in two relays, the 200–yard medley relay (1:48.81) and in the 800 freestyle relay (7:44.85).

Elizabeth Risotto finished up a very good year with a strong showing in the both the 200 backstroke and the 100 back. Risotto made it to the finals in both events, finishing fourth in the 200 back with a solid time of 2:05.57. In the finals of the 100 back, Risotto had a blistering time of :58.53, almost breaking her own school record, which stands at 58.43.

The surprise of the meet for the UMass team was three freshmen making it to the finals in separate events. Anne Dettloff ended her record–breaking freshmen campaign with an eighth–place finish in the finals 1,000 free (17:27.89). Fellow classmate Andrea Kazanjian swam to a sixth–place finish in the 100 butterfly finals with a time 58.75.

Becky Hunneweil was the other freshman who made it to the finals in 100 back, finishing with a time of 1:00.02. The strong outing by the freshmen was a bonus and ensures a strong future for the Minutewomen.

In the consolation races, three Minutewomen took first place finishes. Sarah Newell in the 100 breaststroke (1:07.77), Andrea Spencer in the 200 individual medley and Kazanjian in the 50 free (24.78). Detloff finished third in the 200 free consolations, posting a time of 1:54.90.

While the popular thing to say is "there is always next year," this is not true for four of the Minutewoman seniors: Julie Alexander; Amy Mullen; Kim Shadt; and Shana Strothers. This was there last season of competitive swimming (in Shadt's case, diving) at UMass.

Men's tennis take losses of players and matches

By Seth Szilagyi and James Piehl
Collegian Correspondents

Friday, Feb. 19, the Massachusetts men's tennis team hit a bump in the road, both literally and figuratively.

One of the coaches for the men's team was driving a van full of team members when he hit a patch of black ice and got into an accident. Fabien Rabanal was injured in the crash, fracturing his pelvis and his sacrum, a bone in the lower back. The injuries will leave Rabanal on the sidelines for the remainder of the season.

The team already had Todd Chaney in the hospital with the flu and losing Rabanal didn't aid the team's hopes for victories this past weekend. The squad had to regroup and head to West Point to face No. 8 Army.

Upon arrival, the tragedies continued as the No. 2 man, Bo Navarro, came down with a flu of his own.

"It's like playing a baseball game, without your pitcher, catcher, and star hitter," UMass coach Judy Dixon said.

The Minutemen didn't fare well against the Cadets, losing the match, 7–0.

"We were simply outmatched," said assistant coach Justin Lynn.

After the loss to Army, UM waited a half an hour until its next match against SUNY Stonybrook. The undermanned Minutemen battled hard against the Seawolves, but once again could not forge a victory, going down 4–3.

"The odds were against us," said Dixon of the match. "We fought hard to win and almost pulled it out."

Picking up the slack for the hobbled Minutemen were the doubles teams. All three squads were victorious against the Seawolves. The No. 1 doubles team of Steve Prisco and Rob Manchester won easily, beating Tae Byon and Daniel Antonius, 8–3.

Navarro recovered from his sickness earlier in the day to team up with junior Parsa Samii. They played well, winning in a tight match, 9–7. The third victory came from Josh Baintom and Todd Champeau, winning 8–3.

The singles were more affected by the loss of starters, having to move Parsa Samii, normally No. 6, to the No. 3 position. However, Samii played tough in loss to Krasmier Kolev, 4–6, 6–4, 7–6 (7–5).

"Samii showed the competitiveness and spirit of an upperclassman," Lynn said.

The two wins of the day were by No. 4 Bainton and No. 5 Champeau. Bainton, who usually doesn't even play in singles competition, beat Mark Krasher 6–2, 6–4, while Champeau won, 6–5, 6–3.

"We definitely improved," said Dixon. "Under the terrible circumstances, we played tough tennis and I feel we were unlucky not to win."

The Minutemen travel to Maryland next, facing the Terrapins at 1 p.m. on March 5.

There will be a madatory meeting for sports writers Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the Collegian offices. Call Mike or Paul if you can't attend.

MERCHANTS GRAND OPENING

The days of having your older brother's best friend's sister's boyfriend rent you a car are officially over.

We know there's more to life than what's happening on campus. So, whether you need a 4x4 for a ski weekend, or a mini-van for that road trip during Spring Break, Merchants Rent-A-Car can get you going, no matter where you're going. And best of all, as part of our Youthful Operator Policy, we'll rent to any driver 18 and over*!

2 NEW LOCATIONS
Northampton at Cahillane Auto Body 32 Damon Road Hadley at Howard Johnson's on Route 9.

MERCHANTS RENT-A-CAR
413-584-8099
www.merchantsauto.com

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9.
2 miles East of Town Center
256-6446
Hurry, Our 15 Week Special Ends Sunday
($169)
AND GET A FREE HFC T SHIRT

Stretch Poplin

ZANA
downtown Amherst

No. 2 'Bama beats women's gym

By Matt Melo
Collegian Correspondent

There were infinite reasons to smile all throughout the meet and especially when the final scores were tallied. Except the smiles were a little wider on the visitor's side as the No. 2 University of Alabama (5–2, 2–2 Southeastern Conference) escaped the confines of the Curry Hicks Cage with a narrow 197.8–193.85 win over an unrelenting Massachusetts women's gymnastics team on a record– breaking day in Amherst.

Sunday's meet marked a day of new team high totals achieved in every event for the Minutewomen (4–3, 3–0 Atlantic 10), as well as six gymnasts setting or tying existing season and personal high marks for UMass.

The charge was led by the return of sophomore standout Jill Fisher, making her first appearance of the season after an injury. UMass was nearly flawless the entire day and performed up to the caliber of a powerful Alabama squad.

"By far this was the best meet of the year. We had a great day today and set many new season highs. Alabama has a tremendous, high quality gym team," UMass coach Dave Kuzara said. "They are so classy and cordial. There was no pressure on us and that clearly helped us."

And it showed as UMass came out for the first event clicking on all cylinders. The Minutewomen began on the vault and proceeded to record a new team high of 48.025 on this apparatus. The team's efforts were highlighted by a spectacular couple of vaults by Fisher. She posted a 9.875, shattering the previous team high of 9.7 set by Michelle LoPresti back in January against New Hampshire.

But as it seemed all afternoon, Alabama had the answer to each UMass surge. Freshman Andree Pickens received a 10 on the uneven bars, her first of two 10s on the afternoon. Pickens' 10 on the bars pushed Alabama to an early 49.375– 48.025 lead over UMass. Behind the courageous effort of Fisher on the vault, the Minutewomen gained momentum going to the next event.

The uneven bars were equally as friendly to UMass as seniors LoPresti and Jennifer Pokrana garnered a 9.85 and 9.9, respectively. Pokrana's 9.9 bested her own personal and team standard of 9.875 set last week in a victory over Yale.

The celebration was short lived because as soon as UMass received its new team high on bars with a 48.175, Pickens amassed another 10 on her last vault and Alabama also eclipsed its previous team high on vault with a 49.375. The lead now was up to 2.5 points after two complete events and the game of cat and mouse was on.

Fisher once again tried to catapult UMass out in front of the Crimson Tide who showed absolutely no signs of losing two straight and temporary displacement from their No. 1 ranking. Fisher danced and twirled down the length of the balance beam and finished up with a beautiful dismount to earn a 9.875. A one–tenth of a point deduction for technical merit dropped her to a 9.775.

The beam was also slippery for LoPresti who suffered a fall trying to perform a difficult maneuver, ultimately settling for a 9.15. Undaunted 4–foot–8 sophomore Mandy Mosby returned the smiles to the appreciative Curry Hicks crowd with an amazing 9.825. She broke her personal high on beam and in the process gave UMass a 48.675, and a new team high total as well.

The music in the ears of the UMass women's team was that juggernaut known as Alabama, skipping around its floor routines with all six competitors scoring a 9.825 or better. Now UMass had some dancing of its own to do, trailing 'Bama by just a handful of points, 148.375–144.875, heading into the last event of the day for each team.

Some of the UMass women must have been peeking over at Alabama's floor routines, as the Minutewomen went out and danced to impress. Five out of the six Minutewomen tied or set personal and team highs on the mat.

Jobi Goldberg led the way setting yet another new personal and team record for the season with a 9.875. Tracy Chew, Kyla Palombini, LoPresti and Mosby all improved on their previous scores on floor to combine for a 48.975, a tenth of a point better than their previous high on the floor.

The Crimson Tide completed an impressive day of their own as three of their last four scores posted were 10s. Lissy Smith received a 10 from one judge to earn an 9.975 overall. Raegan Tomasek left no doubts, finishing an astonishing day at the Cage with a perfect 10 on her beam routine.

After the meet, Kuzara was thrilled by the way his women came out and lived up to the challenge.

"Jill on vault provided a spark. She was awesome. Jobi was tremendous on vault and bars. We also received clutch performances by Mary Moore," Kuzara said. "There is so much hard work that goes into this. Our preparation has been excellent."

"The team looked awesome today. It's our [team] score that will get us into regionals. Everyone did great today," LoPresti said.

Though it chalks up to a L in the standings, the UMass women's gymnastics team accomplished numerous victories within the meet.

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

The women's gymnastics team competed in the A–10 Championships this past weekend.

■ men's swim

continued from page 12

He also turned in his best time in 200 IM, but he lost to another A–10 record–breaker, Juan Bocanegra from GW. In addition, he swam in nine of 19 swimming events. Without a doubt, he could give a better "time" performance if he swam less. But this was a MVP performance and he had done everything for the team.

Junior Ed Hefferon came in fourth in both the one–meter and three–meter diving events. Although he did not top his season stats, he qualified for NCAAs in diving.

Over the season, UMass had turned in great individual performances. The second–tier swimmers gave a solid outing and many first–tier swimmer stepped up to perform at their peak.

In sprint freestyle, Turner and Arsenault filled in the holes that last year's graduate, Sean Anderson, had left. Both turned in the top performance of the season. In breaststroke, Brown was dominating the conference. Sophomore Mike Sabina came out big as well.

As for backstroke, Wisniewski's crew repeated and topped their performance compared to last year. Senior tri–captain Devid Koritkoski gave his season's best. In the IM, it was Brown and Wisniewski who had been filling the spot and performed at tops.

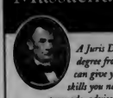
The sprint relay team did extremely well and turned in a couple top three finishes.

But then, it was the distance freestyle, butterfly and the distance relay team that hurt UMass. Senior captain B.J. Brannan last year's All–Conference selection, couldn't gave the same effort as last year due to his injuries.

"I felt really bad for him. He swam hard for four years and then had his senior year taken away from him," Yarworth said. "It was disappointing and not fair, and that's the way it is."

But Brannan did swim his heart out, and Yarworth was pleased by his performance as well as his team's performence.

"Not winning the championship is frustrating for the kids," Yarthsworth said. "[However] all the kids are swimming their lifetime best. That's what swimming is all about. We did the best we could. It was a tremendous work."



1/2 PRICE Appetizers
• Buffalo Chicken Wings
• Mozzarella Sticks
• Chicken or Beef Nachos
Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar

COMPLETE AUTO BODY REPAIRS
ALL MAKES AND MODELS
DANA Chevrolet Volkswagen
AUTOMOTIVE
COLLISION REPAIR • GLASS INSTALLATION
Authorized GM/VW Body Shop
Frame & Unibody Straightening
24 HR HOTLINE 586-7250 | FREE LOANERS!

Reason №2 why you should take our GRE course.
You'll score more...
2 Our students improve an average of 212 points. And they significantly out-score students who took that other course.
800-2-REVIEW www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

BARTENDING COURSE
Class Begins
Friday, February 26th @ 6:00pm
Mullin-Faeber Rm
Valentine Hall
Amherst College
✓ Student Discounts
✓ Professional Bartending Training
✓ Tips on Finding a Top Paying Job
✓ Become a Talented, Socially Conscious Bartender
✓ National Restaurant Association Alcohol Awareness Program
✓ Taught by Seasoned Boston Bartenders
✓ Great Part-time of Summer Job
We Accept
Call Now Space is Limited
1-800-467-2028

Massachusetts School of Law At Andover

A Juris Doctor degree from MSL can give you the skills you need to persuade, advise and be a leader in business, healthcare, law enforcement, government or law.
• LSAT NOT REQUIRED
• DAY AND EVENING PROGRAMS
• AFFORDABLE TUITION PLANS AND FINANCIAL AID AVAILABLE
• ROLLING ADMISSIONS
500 Federal Street, Andover, MA 01810 • (978) 681-0800
www.mslaw.edu
JURIS DOCTOR = A VARIETY OF CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Delivery Express → 549-0077
BYOB

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
✓ Complete Bartending Course
✓ On Campus
✓ For a Fraction of the Cost of other schools
✓ National Certification Available
✓ Hands on Pouring Lab
✓ Tips on how to get a fun, high paying job
Free Info Session
Wed, Feb. 24th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst

50% Off!!
Of Basic Program With valid college Student I.D.
1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 Savings on eyeglasses from the new on-site Optical Service at UHS.
2 A great place to get contacts lenses.
3 Convenient hours and location.
4 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
5 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
Frederick H Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

new balance
801AT

ZANA
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Corolla 1981 5 spd, 2Dr. 151k, good tires. Asking $750.00 582-1849

FOR SALE '89 Volvo 740 Turbo 158k miles excellent condition sunroof, heated seats, power locks, windows, anti-lock brakes, airbag, black $3500 584-6090

'95 FORD ASPIRE 4dr hatchback ONLY 21k miles! automatic, radio, cassette, dual airbag. $5200/best offer. 546-5366

'89 Ford ProbeLX, grey, good running, condition and clean, new brakes, new tires, 150K miles $2000. Call 253-1128

1986 Olds Cierra Well maintained 92k miles $850.00 256-3004

COMPUTERS

Packard Bell 8kspeecdCD-ROM 133MHz Intel Pentium Processor 16MB $550 or B/O Call Kondi 413-546-7069

MAC QUADRA 605 COMPUTER.-With CDROM Modem Printer Software Speakers Great for students. Please call 665-4853 $800 obo

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER JOBS for the environment. $2500-4000/summer campaign to save Wilderness, Endangered Species and to reduce Toxic Pollution. Make a difference. Offices in over 35 states Campaign To Save the environment 1-800-75-EARTH

Sbarro's Restaurant at Hampshire Mall needs closers. Flexible hours Good pay Apply in person

Housework good pay near by. Car needed. 548-9635

EMPLOYMENT

ACTION JOBS- Listings of America's Best Adventure Jobs: Alaska, Adventure Travel, Cruise Ships, Forest Fire Fighting, Sailing, White Water Rafting, Backpacking,& more... www.action-jobs.com

PRESTIGIOUS NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA CAMP
Enjoy working with kids? Do you want an experience of a lifetime? Baseball, Basketball, Golf, Volleyball, Mountain Biking, Tennis, Ropes/Challenge, Hockey, Woodworking, Ceramics, Photography, Fine Arts, Video, nature, Canoe, Sailing, Pool Musical Director and General Counselors. INTERVIEWS ON CAMPUS FEBRUARY 23rd TRAILS END CAMP 800-408-1404 www.trailsend-camp.com

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)—Sports oriented, Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports: Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Adventure, Mtn. Biking, Rocketry, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus interviews. Please call 1-888-549-2963 or waynebovs@aol.com

$20-40/hr in spare time? $100 signing bonus! 800-600-0343 ext 1927

$21+ HOUR! Easy Work Processing Mail or Email From Home or School! For Details Email: Apply4now@smartbot.net 770-937-6764

EMPLOYMENT

COUNSELORS, TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: All Competitive Team Sports, All Water Sports. PLUS: Camping/Hiking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Riflery, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top Salaries, Awesome Facilities, Rm/Bd/Lndry. Travel. CALL Steve Rubin at (800) 473-6104, or E-MAIL CDB-BACHIEF@AOL.COM

EARN $530 WEEKLY distributing phone cards no experience full/part time call 1-800-211-2067

FREE RADIO +$1250! Fundraiser open to student groups & organizations. Earn $3-$5 per Visa/MC app. We supply all material at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box. 1-800-932-0528 x 65. www.ocmconcepts.com

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT - Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benfits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 Ext.C50012

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sounds: Rave to Dorm party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413) 737-8561

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Phish Live 8 CD Set. $100. Import. '87-'95. Phenominal Quality. 549-PUKI

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE In Amherst. Classes filling soon. Free Info Session Wednesday, Feb 24th at the Lord Jeffrey Inn. Space in limited, call... 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

CASCO BAY BARTENDING Classes start soon Student Discounts Call for information 1-800-467-2028 SPACE IS LIMITED

LOST & FOUND

Lost Medic Alert Bracelet if you find it please call 6-8964 Thank you

ROOM FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease! Jan-July '98. Moving to California in two weeks & need to find someone. 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Furnished, spacious, & clean. $345, all inclusive + electric= @$15 per month. Awesome place, awesome roommate staying. Bus drops you off four doors from your own. Call Lori or Daniel @ 665-4149 till 11:30 at night.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom. Brandywine. For Spring/late December. Call Jeremy 549-6955.

ROOM WANTED

Want to Move, but need replacement? Willing to swap room in apt for similar Kevin 256-5961

SERVICES

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Do you need to pay off your bills once and for all? Personal, Debt Consolidation. Credit Card Repair Call 1-888-780-8082

TICKETS

Bruins vs NJ Devils on 2/25 $160.00 546-3219

TRAVEL

BE FLEXIBLE... Eruope $288 r/t plus taxes TRAVEL ANYTIME IN 1999! Mexico/Caribbean $159 r/t plus taxes CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!!! CALL: 800-326-2009 www.airhitch.org

#1 Spring Break Specials!Cancun & Jamaica $399, Bahamas $459, Florida $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" video included!!! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummer-tours.com

#1 Panama City vacations! Free Parties - No Cover. Best beach-front hotels from $129. Free "Spring Break Uncensored" Video! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummer-tours.com

SPRING BREAK'99 Hours & Hours of FREE Drinks! Group Discounts & FREE Trips FROM $99 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Lowest Prices/Best Meal Plan 1-800-426-7710/ www.sunsplash-tours.com

TRAVEL

CANCUN*NASSAU*JAMAICA 150% LOWEST PRICE GUARENTEED Blowout All-inclusive Specials Discounts up to $100 CLASS Travel 800-838-6411 www.classtravel.com

Spring Break: hundreds of student reviews, rankings, articles, and discussions: the unrivaled guide on where to go by people who went. http://www.studentadvantage.com/spring-break

WANTED

Women Volunteers needed for Graduate research study in zinc supplementaion. Must be non-smoking, between 18-40, excercising at least 4 times per week. Please call Christy at 532-2733

Are you running out of Cash?

Check out The Classifieds for wonderful Employment opportunities!

Spring Break is in less than a month!!

Do you know where you'll be?

Don't be left in the cold!

Check The Classifieds TODAY!!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, FEB. 23

Auditions — Auditions for Amherst College's musical "Once On This Island" will be held from 7–10 p.m. in the Amherst College Music Building. Bring a prepared song, with or without piano accompaniment.

Colloquium — A colloquium entitled "The Poetics of Compromise: How Does the Creative Process Survive the Literary Marketplace?" will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Center of Mount Holyoke College.

Film — The Black History Film Series sponsored by the UMass Black Student Union is featuring "Cry Freedom" at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Info-social — Pride Alliance, the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender and straight ally undergraduate student organization, will hold an info–social at 7 p.m. in rooms 174–176 of the Campus Center.

Meeting — There will be a general meeting of the Jewish Student Union at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House.

Meeting — There will be a Golden Key membership meeting at 7 p.m. in room 201 of Herter Hall.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 24

Dancing — There will be Israeli folk dancing at 8 p.m. in Butterfield. All are welcome.

Informational — A drop–in informational session on eating disorders will be held from 4–5:30 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. For more information call 577– 5181.

Meeting — Pride Alliance will hold an organizing meeting for all students interested in being involved in planning Queerfest '99 at 7 p.m. in the Pride Alliance office (413B Student Union).

Meeting — The French Department and the director of the Paris Program will hold a meeting and possible interview sessions at 2 p.m. in Herter 301. All interested French– speaking students of any discipline are welcome to attend.

Performances — The Student Union Showcase 1999 will be held from 12–6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. There will be student performances in theater, dance, poetry, music and visual arts. A free screening of "Enemy of the State" will show at 7 p.m.

Speaker — Israeli Consul General to New England, Itzhak Levanon, will speak at 4 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Abstracts — Present your community service, thesis research, creative work, independent study or study abroad at the state–wide conference on Undergraduate Research, Scholarly, Creative, and Public Service Activities. Applications can be picked up at 504 Goodell by March 1.

Information — The Alcohol and Drug Education Program at UHS offers general information, referral, and training workshops in room 248 of UHS weekdays from 8:30 a.m.–5 p.m. Call 577–5181 for more details.

Services — Accounting services from the UMass Accounting Department will be working out of the Hampshire Mall. It is free and open to the public, and open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4–7 p.m. in the Hampshire Mall Community Room, and on Wednesdays from 6–9 p.m. on the Hampshire Mall Stage.

Services — REFLECT offers grief services to any student who has experienced the death of someone they love. The small groups meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6–7:30 p.m. for 8 weeks. Call 577–5316 if interested.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

SALON SELECTIVES Shampoo, Conditioner, and Styling Products. Selected Styles, see store for details. SALE ENDS FEB. 27!

Minutemart $2.29

Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs

University Store — Now this is retail... Better.

University Store — UMass Campus Center — 413 - 545 - 2619

HSCN 2 Hampshire Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	16	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	17	UVC–TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CSN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 23, 1999

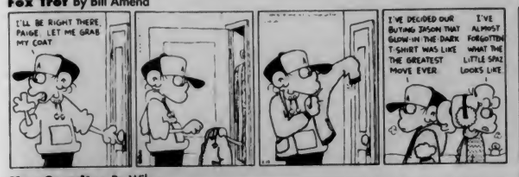
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	62	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Women's College Basketball: Connecticut at Syracuse. (Live)					None "Battle Alert in the Gulf"		Frontline "Russian Rockets"		UMS Juneau	Religion
WFSB	3	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Silent Service" (In Stereo)		7 On Rich — The Secret Life of Doris Duke" (1996) Lauren Bacall		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Silent Service" (In Stereo)		7 On Rich — The Secret Life of Doris Duke" (1996) Lauren Bacall		News		Nightline
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Home Imp.	Hughleys	Spin City	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "Dead Girl Walking"		News	Friends
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Felicity "Love and Marriage"		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Judge Lora	Moesha		Malcolm-Eddie	Between Bros.	News	Newsradio	Newsradio	Married...With
WVIT	30	News	Rosie O'D.	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Ned Ald. You
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	King of the Hill	PJs (In Stereo)	Guinness World Records		News		News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Battle Alert in the Gulf"		Frontline "Russian Rockets"		NYPD Blue "Dead Girl Walking"		News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Home Imp.	Hughleys	Spin City	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "Dead Girl Walking"		Frasier	Chicago
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha	Charlies	Malcolm-Eddie	Between Bros.	Wait Ald. You	Wait Ald. You	Frasier	Chicago
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	Hist. "MLK Jr." (1993, Western) John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara						Late Show
A&E	69	Northern Exposure	Law & Order "Confession"			Biography: Nicholas Brothers		Investigative Reports (R)		Cracker "Pilot" (Part 2 of 2)		Law & Order "Furies"
CNN	43	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour	Crossfire		World Today		Larry King Live		Late Edition Primetime		Sports	Moneyline
COM	49	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Block	Late Show Rerun (1981) (Comedy) John Candy, Harold Ramis				Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52		New House	Pit-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery	Witness Protection Program		New Detectives: Case Studies		Fifth Plane "Unabomber" (R)		Witness Protection Program
ESPN	45		Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Northwestern at Iowa. (Live)		College Basketball: Tennessee at Georgia. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	63		Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five "Daddy Beloved"	College Hope	Wild Cards	Any Day Now (R) (In Stereo)		Intimate Portrait "Delle Reese"		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53		Countdown	200 Cigarettes	Beavis-Butt.	Bill & Olly (R)	Say What?	Video Clicks	Grammy Preview (In Stereo)	Real World	Rorhythm	Blame Game	Loveline
NICK	44		Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Sheeter	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Unfiltered	Legal Lessy	Benched
SCIFI	64		Dominion Leag. (In Stereo)	Amaz. Stories	Star Trek "Friday's Child"				Highlander: The Series		Friday the 13th: The Series	Twilight Zone	Star Trek
TLC	48		Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Trauma" (R)	Trauma: Life in the ER (R)				RPR vs. LBJ	Into Vietnam	Trauma: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	54		Due South "Mounts and Sour"	ER "What Life" (In Stereo)	NBA Basketball: Seattle SuperSonics at Houston Rockets. (In Stereo Live)							Kung Fu: Legend	Shield NBA
USA	55		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.	Xena: Warrior Princess (R)	Walker, Texas Ranger							New York Undercover
HBO	50			Charlie Sheen "PG"		★★ "When Trumpets Fade" (1998, Action)						Sopranos "Down Neck" (R)
MAX	51			Chevy Chase "PG"		★★★½ "Bowl 'N the Hood" (1991, Drama) Cuba Gooding
SHOW	47			Ice Storm" (R) Kevin Bacon	Paul Rudd	★★ "Rogues Regiment" (1997) Tcuba Gooding

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Down by the Waterline By Charles L. Thayer



Von Hess By Joseph Hession

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You mustn't expect so much from yourself today, or you'll do nothing but disappoint yourself in the long run. Work within your limitations.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You're likely to reap the harvest of a recent emotional planting today, but you can make changes to the crop as it springs to life. Get to work!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You must be more choosy when it comes to what you want. There's no reason why you have to take what comes as a matter of course. Be active!

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You must be willing to take more care today even though you may have been quite easygoing and carefree yesterday. A more deliberate approach can work.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You will want to share your thoughts and feelings with someone you trust, but take care that you have everything in order on the inside first.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You'll be putting together a tricky sort of personal puzzle all day long, and a loved one will enable you to add the finishing touches at the end.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — It's time for another decision that will rock those around you. However, you can lead up to it today in a way that softens the blow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You will find yourself immersed today in a domestic situation that is not of your making, but it demands that you play an active role.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — It's a good day to do what is expected of you at first. Later, you'll have more freedom to do the things that spring from you organically.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You'll have mixed feelings about a recent development that you had a major hand in bringing about, but there's no turning back now!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may have to leave something or someone behind for the time being as you journey down a road that seems forbidding. Sometimes, you're better off alone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You can borrow from your own good ideas to see that things continue apace today. You needn't be entirely original at this time. Trust what works!

Quote of the Day

"Is there anything more beautiful than a beautiful, beautiful flamingo, flying across in front of a beautiful sunset? And he's carrying a beautiful rose in his beak, and also he's carrying a very beautiful painting with his feet. And also, you're drunk."
–Jack Handy

Close to Home By John McPherson

"She needs to be immobil for six weeks, after which we can upgrade her to a swimming cast."

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Vegetable Egg Roll
Fried Rice
Blak Eyed Peas

DINNER
Lemon Pepper Cod
Cavtelli Supreme
Savory Stuffed Peppers

Worcester
LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Vegetable Egg Roll
Fried Rice
Blak Eyed Peas

DINNER
Lemon Pepper Cod
Cavtelli Supreme
Savory Stuffed Peppers

Hampshire
LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Vegetable Egg Roll
Fried Rice

DINNER
Lemon Pepper Cod
Cavtelli Supreme
Savory Stuffed Peppers

Berkshire
LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Vegetable Egg Roll
Fried Rice
Blak Eyed Peas

DINNER
Lemon Pepper Cod
Cavtelli Supreme
Savory Stuffed Peppers

ACROSS
1 Zero
6 Church vestment
9 Slow mover
14 Pierre's farewell
15 Thai's neighbor
16 Multitude
17 Unimportant person
19 Novelist Zola
20 Broad-antlered deer
21 Cheers
22 Light beam
23 Wife of Osiris
25 More ancient
26 Grow incisors, e.g.
29 Poet Teasdale
31 Decks out
32 Wheel covers
36 Hoosegow
37 Clumsy one
38 Holster contents
40 Melodious bird
43 Ghost
45 Impulse
46 Fourscore and ten
47 Chandelier trim
50 Have a yen (for)
51 Dim
52 Take — (be recognized)
54 Enemy
57 Midwestern Indian
58 Swift dog
61 Fur-trading name
62 Domicile (abbr.)
63 Part of a pound
64 Beef and veal
65 TV spots
66 Enlarge

DOWN
1 Western writer Grey
2 Object of devotion
3 Piece of chain
4 Musical note
5 Attila the —
6 Police blotter datum
7 Slat
8 Fagin's crew
9 Varnish
10 Wanderer
11 Get out of bed
12 Lazy one
13 Smirk
18 Makes an effort
23 Where Pisa is
24 Like a shrinking violet
25 Sphere
26 — Mahal
27 Periods of time
28 Estrada of TV
29 Ice cream treat
30 — Wiedersehen
33 Maturing, as brandy
34 Not diluted
35 Tizzy
37 Asan.
39 Dirty place
41 Sheens
42 Tentacle
43 Drifting?
44 — the Tail on the Donkey"
47 Out-of-date
48 Cowboy's rope
49 Gold bar
50 Loamy soil
51 Type of shaving cream
52 Site of the 26 Down
53 Raised, as horses
54 Finance
55 First word in fairy tales
56 Garden spot
59 "— do I love thee?"
60 "Yes," to Yves

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

2-23-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Casey Kane
Photo Technition	Brian McDermott
Copy Editor	Ken Mc Donald
Production Supervisor	Rob Snow
Production Staff	D.J. Carey, Dave Parmenter

SPORTS

Next challenge for UMass: La Salle

Two A–10 teams with similar seasons look to improve

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

If anything, tonight's contest between the Massachusetts men's basketball team and La Salle will be a battle between two teams whose coaches have two of the more unusual nicknames in the country.

It's "Speedy" versus "Bruiser."

We know who Bruiser is, but who's Speedy?

William "Speedy" Morris has been the coach of the Explorers since 1987. In his 12–year tenure at the La Salle helm, Morris has led his team to the NCAA tournament four times, the last of which came in 1992.

And there's something funny about today's 9:30 p.m. tip–off at Gola Arena — both teams will play the same style of basketball indicated by their coaches' nicknames.

"Bruiser's" UMass squad plays a much slower and more physical game, while "Speedy" has an up–tempo offensive club which showcases four players who average over 14 points per contest.

COURTESY ATLANTIC 10
In one corner... William "Speedy" Morris

COURTESY ATLANTIC 10
And in the other... James "Bruiser" Flint

The Explorer charge is led by junior guard Donnie Carr, who is the second leading scorer in the Atlantic 10 conference at 19 points per game. Carr, who is very similar to UMass guard Monty Mack, lies just ahead of the latter in scoring average.

But the similarities between the programs stretch far beyond nicknames and players. Both teams share common opponents, and more importantly, a common victory. Despite sub–.500 records, the Minutemen (12–14, 8–6 A–10) and the Explorers (10–14, 6–8 A–10) have recently upset conference powerhouse Xavier.

UMass topped the Musketeers in double–overtime last Saturday, while La Salle stung them in Philadelphia, 88–75, on Feb. 6. A win tonight for either team would be enormous. Both programs are currently in third place in their respective divisions of the Atlantic 10 and are jockeying for position in the conference tournament.

"La Salle's a lot like Xavier. They've got a lot of weapons, good offensive players," Flint said of his team's next opponent, hinting that he knows what to expect from his coaching counterpart. "They can stretch you out because they all can shoot, they're playing a lot better. Speedy has done a great job with those guys."

Also contributing to the modest hype surrounding this game is the new basketball facility at La Salle. In years past, the Explorers have played all of their home games in the nearby Philadelphia Spectrum; however, the university has provided a 4,000–seat arena, inside of which the team has compiled an impressive 8–2 mark this season.

They've got a gym now, so they're tough in their building," Flint said of the Tom Gola Arena. "We've got to go out and play. It's another game where we have to guard [tightly] because they've got some weapons on their team."

The Minutemen enter this contest with a small head of steam after creeping by Xavier, 79–78. In its past two contests, UMass has received career–best numbers from junior forward Chris Kirkland. The Pittsburgh native was designated the A–10 Player of the Week after averaging 23.5 points, and 12.5 rebounds over the past two games.

Sunday marked the second consecutive week that a Minuteman was given this distinction. Mack was the other UMass player previously honored.

"Chris is one of the hardest workers on the team and I'm happy to see him put it together and play the way he has this season," Flint said of Kirkland, who was not even a member of the starting line–up until Dec. 29. "He's the most improved player on the team and I think he's the most improved player in the Atlantic 10 and I hope the conference recognizes that when they vote for the Chris Daniels Most Improved Player award."

UMass women's track captures 2nd at A–10s

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

On Saturday, the Massachusetts women's track and field team competed in the Atlantic 10 Championships held in Kingston, R.I. Another strong showing was turned in by the women, but in the end they fell just short of defending their crown.

The meet was not decided until the final race of the afternoon, the 4x800m relay. With a third–place finish in the race the Hokies of Virginia Tech (143 points) captured the title. The Minutewomen finished a close second with 137 points.

Rhode Island (123 points), St. Joseph's (54), Dayton (52), Temple (25), Duquesne (22), La Salle (20) and Fordham (13) rounded out the field.

With the win, Virginia Tech regained the conference championship (1997 champions) that they had lost to the Minutewomen (1998 champions).

Senior Nicole Way led the way for UMass. Way won the mile with a time of 5:03.31 and the 1,000m with a time 2:53.78. In the 1,000m, with a burst of speed, she passed Christine Kane of St. Joseph's in the last 50m to win the race in Atlantic 10 Championship time.

Before her day was complete she ran the anchor of the distance medley winners with freshman Kristin Cisowski, sophomore Erin Hankard and freshman Katherine Blais. With her performance, Way was named the Atlantic 10 Most Outstanding Performer.

Rose Bryan turned in a performance that has been familiar to her this season, taking first place in the 55m high hurdles in a time of 7.94 seconds. She also placed second in the 200m (25.32) and third in the triple jump (38–feet–9 1/4–inches).

Junior Andrea Comeau came away with first place in the high jump with a jump of 5–feet–8 3/4–inches.

Shelanda Irish, in her last Atlantic 10 competition, placed second in the long jump with a leap of 18–feet–4 1/4–inches.

Giselle Nicholas turned in a second place finish in the weight throw with a toss of 50–feet–4–inches. Cisowski, along with her first place finish in the distance medley captured third in the mile (5:07.42) just seconds behind the heels of winner and teammate Way. Sally Hirsch finished third in the 3,000m.

In pole vault action, UMass had its strongest performance of the year with Rhianna DaCruz taking third, Heather Palmer taking fourth, and Johanna Lelke taking fifth place with marks of 9–feet–8–inches, 9–feet–8 1/4–inches, and 9– feet–2 1/4–inches respectively.

At the end of the meet the All–Conference team was announced. The All–Conference team is comprised of the first–place finisher in every event and the four members of the relay teams.

UMass had six members of the All–Conference team at meet's end. Comeau took home honors in the high jump, Bryan captured it for the 55m high hurdles. Way took it home for the mile and the 1,000m. She also joined Cisowski, Hankard and Blais for honors in the distance medley.

The Minutewomen will return to action Feb. 27–28 when they travel to Boston to compete in the ECAC Championships.

Men's gym loses to Wolverines

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

This weekend, the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team went against the nation's No. 2 team, Michigan, and came home with a disappointing loss of 229.275–220.150.

Having high hopes for the match against the Wolverines, the Minutemen were not happy with their performances.

"We just didn't have a good meet," said sophomore Michael Alexander. "We had a rough start on pommel horse, and we never really got back into the swing of things. Michigan, on the other hand, was having one of the best meets they've ever had. They broke lots of school records and all–time highs."

Michigan's 229.275 is the highest score in the nation right now, knocking Penn State off its first–place pedestal.

"Although we didn't have much of a meet, Jeff [LaVallee] had some awesome sets," Alexander said.

The UMass junior placed second in the all–around with a 56.6 while setting career–highs on the vault (9.7) and the parallel bars (9.75). This impressive score on p–bars broke the all–time record for UMass set by LaVallee just two years ago. The Connecticut native also finished fifth on the high bar with a 9.4.

Senior captain Stephen Pryor finished fourth in the all–around with a 54.4, while snagging the third–place spot on high bar (9.45) and tying his teammate, senior Phil Lieberman, for fourth on vault (9.45). Lieberman and sophomore Bryan McNulty were members of a three–way tie for third place on floor exercise (9.45).

Also among the top finishers for the Minutemen was senior Dan Young in ninth on floor (9.15) and rings (8.85), while also taking the sixth spot on vault (9.35).

Freshman Matt Plumser took second for UMass and fifth overall on the parallel bars (9.15), and took the silver for UMass, finishing ninth overall on pommel horse (8.75).

Even with all of these high scores, the Minutemen just couldn't overtake the Wolverines. They are still stricken with injury, as sophomore Andy Leis is still not 100 percent recovered, sophomore Eric Bacon severely sprained his ankle, and sophomore Clayton Kent, who is one of the best tumblers in the nation, having ankle problems and not competing on floor.

UMass hosts Temple University this Saturday at 7 p.m., and hopes to walk away victoriously. The UMass gym team has both great athletes and difficult routines, but consistency is what it is lacking. The Minutemen have less than a week to prepare and regain its composure to go full–throttle against the Owls, and add one more victory to its collection.

Men's swim team breaks streak; finishes in 4th place at A–10s

By Jimmy Chan
Collegian Staff

They are winners. The Massachusetts men's swimming team wins in every respect.

"They are champions," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said. "This is a great team. They worked hard. They swam fast. Just about everyone of them did their best time this weekend. You can't ask for anything more than that as a coach."

But an era did end this weekend. After winning three straight Atlantic 10 titles, the Minutemen (scoring 426 points) took home a fourth–place finish out of nine teams in this year's Atlantic 10 championships, which were held in Buffalo, N.Y.

St. Bonaventure won the conference with 677 points. Virginia Tech scored 654 and took second, followed by George Washington, which sank to third with 641 points.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Chris Arsenault

"We didn't have the horses to win [the title] this year. We had a good run at it for three years in a row," Yarworth said. "Hats off to St. Bonaventure in taking the title. They are worthy and capable champs."

For the Bonnies, it was a hard fought tournament. George Washington came out early behind junior Tim Champney, the A–10's Most Outstanding Performer, breaking a couple of A–10 records. But, in the final day, St. Bonaventure had its own record breakers as teh Bonnies elevated their team to another level and took the crown.

For UMass, sophomore Chris Arsenault shone the brightest. He was named to the Atlantic 10 All–Conference team after claming the 200–yard freestyle title with a first–place time of 1:40.24, the fifth best all–time at UMass.

Another bright star was sophomore standout Billy Brown. He broke two school records he had set last year, finishing in second place in both the 100 breaststroke and the 200 breast. His time in the 200 breast made him qualify under the NCAA B–standard and was a consideration for NCAA Senior Nationals.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Brian Wisniewski

In the 400 individual medley, Brown set the third fastest time at UMass and finished fourth in the championships. Brown and Arsenault teamed up with senior Brian Wisniewski and junior Henry Turner to take third place in the 400 medley relay.

Wisniewski turned in his last, yet, perhaps his best performance as a Minuteman. He was only 0.14 seconds behind the school record in 100 backstroke as he took second in Atlantic 10. He topped his best time last year in 200 back but loss to GW's Champney, who set an A–10 record in that event.

Turn to MEN'S SWIM, page 9

Emerging from the UM women's basketball shadows

Senior Lucia Madajova overcomes injury to succeed

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

One of the most frustrating occurrences a talented athlete can experience is having to sit on the bench for an extended period of time and thus become virtually inconsequential in the team's on–court affairs.

For three years, Massachusetts senior forward Lucia Madajova faced these undesirable circumstances as a member of the women's basketball team.

But the fact that Madajova played only 281 minutes during her first three seasons had nothing to do with lack of skill.

Madajova has been hampered by a string of injuries that had prevented her from developing any rhythm on the court.

"Lutes" endured a hip flexor early on during her sophomore year, and then a stress fracture smack in the middle of last season.

"The timing of the injuries was terrible," Madajova said. "I always kept my spirits up, and just waited to get healthy and then get a chance to contribute to the team."

While Madajova did not see much playing time on the hardwood, her diligence in the classroom was quite evident, as she was named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll six straight semesters.

This season, Madajova's long awaited opportunity to play came to pass, and she made the most out of it.

After playing sparingly in the first six contests of the year, Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien inserted Madajova into the starting lineup for the first time on Dec. 2, before the game at Maine.

"Joanie just came up to me that afternoon, and said you're going to start you tonight," Madajova recalled. " I just wanted to play well, and make sure I didn't blow my chance."

Against the Black Bears, Madajova notched 11 points and five rebounds, in a 64–56 UMass victory.

"That game still sticks out in my mind," Madajova said. "To hear my name called and the crowd cheering was a great feeling. And to hear Slovakia announced before my name was like a little touch of home."

The 6–foot–2 forward is a native of Banska Bystrica, Slovakia, where her parents still reside.

Madajova arrived in the United States during her junior year in high school. After competing in a Massachusetts summer sports camp, she attended David Prouty High School in Spencer.

She grew up monstrous numbers her senior year, including 17.7 points, and 15.1 rebounds per game.

After being lured to UMass, Madajova figured to be an instant contributor to the Minutewomen but she was unable to fully adjust to this higher level of play.

"Lutes" played in 21 games her freshman year, averaging 1.1 in both points and rebounds per game. Her season was highlighted by a 14–point, five–rebound outing against Mississippi Valley State on Dec. 1, 1995.

The 121 minutes she complied in '95–96 would be her season high entering this year's campaign due to the aforementioned ailments.

But since that fateful night against Maine, Madajova has become one of the sharpest weapons in the UMass arsenal.

She has posted 6.0 points and a team–leading 7.6 rebounds per contest, while starting 23 of the 26 games she has entered.

"The improvement Lutes has shown is quite remarkable," O'Brien said. "She deserves serious consideration for Most Improved Player in the conference."

A finance major, Madajova has hopes of working for an international company possibly as an interpreter. But before pursuing her next set of goals, she is prepared to help lead the Minutewomen in their quest for an A–10 championship.

"Personally I just want of finish up my playing career by going all–out, and hopefully we can show people what this team is capable of doing," Madajova said.

VIRGINIA LOEB / COLLEGIAN
Senior forward Lucia Madajova (far left), with the help of coach Joanie O'Brien (right), rose to the occasion this season, earning a starting position for the UMass women's basketball team.

See the rest of A–10 Championship Results Inside

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 21 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, February 24, 1999

Chancellor Scott defends affirmative action plan

BETH KIRKORIAN / COLLEGIAN
University of Massachusetts Chancellor David K. Scott, among others, addressed the Graduate Student Senate last night about issues of affirmative aion on the University admission policy.

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Chancellor David K. Scott defended the University's change of approach on affirmative action at a meeting of the Graduate Student Senate last night.

"Affirmative action means to 'try harder'", the Chancellor said. "We now have to try differently."

On November 18, the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled that the Boston Latin School, a public high school, could no longer use race preferences in its admissions. Last week the University announced that, In light of the decision, income would be used as a primary factor in affirmative action rather than race.

The University's decision has caused controversy in the past week, as evidenced by the views of students at the meeting.

"What (the changes) say to me is that the struggle by my ancestors to let me go to this school is being put on hold," said Kiya Stokes, a graduate student senator.

Chancellor Scott insisted that, despite the changes, diversity remains the University's goal.

"There is no abandoning of affirmative action at this University," he said. "These strategies are now being changed, but the policy is not being changed."

Jennifer Fasulo, a member of the Educational Access Committee, disagrees.

"I think it's really disingenuous to say it isn't a policy change," she said.

"Everyone knows that the University is abandoning its affirmative action policy and that it's already resulted in an immediate drop in the number of incoming ALANA (Asian, Latino, African, Native American) students."

When a student pointed out that many graduate programs on campus have no minority students, Scott assured that he will make efforts to include such students in the future.

"I believe it would be appropriate for every graduate program that doesn't have any students of color to recruit at least one in the following year," he said. "And in the future there should be more recruited. I think it should be possible to recruit students of color where there are none at all."

Scott suggested that, instead of maintaining race preferences, the University should take other courses of action to recruit traditionally disadvantaged students.

"What we need to do is start a systemic outreach program," he said. "We need to form a collaboration between colleges and universities with high schools, families, business and industry and the state as to how to remove educational deficits."

"We also need to look at a new admissions program to find the way to measure the whole spectrum of human potential and creativity," he added. "The question is, how do we measure that beyond SATs?"

He also stated that he would like to "add more criteria" to admissions policies, such as a person's ability to overcome hardship.

When asked by Graduate Student Senator Ed Cutting whether or not the University would continue to maintain a database classifying students by race, Scott maintained that the University is required to do so by law. He also insisted that the University does not offer fellowships exclusively on the basis of race.

Despite the Chancellor's assurances that the "strategy changes" will not pose a threat to minorities, many students are wary of the administration's changes.

"The University doesn't have a clear policy to increase the diversity of the University in terms of recruiting and retaining more ALANA and low–income students," said Mahmood Ketabchi, chairman of the educational access commitee.

"This confusion leads to harm to those who are really disadvantaged," he added. "I don't claim that what the University had was really ideal, but when you throw it away you have to make sure you have something viable to replace it."

A pro–affirmative action rally is being held by the Graduate Employee Organization today at 12:30 on the steps of the Student Union.

Attempts for stress relief to residents in Lewis with IPO plan

By Veronica MacDonald
Collegian Correspondent

On Monday night, the International Programs Office (IPO) shared a proposal with the Northeast Residential Student Area Government and Lewis Residential Hall about turning the first three floors of Lewis into an International Program floor next fall.

The original proposal met with considerable dissent because the long–term residents of Lewis were either going be kicked out or forced to join the IPO if they wanted to remain in Lewis, according to Bu Navarro, SGA lieutenant governor of Northeast. Navarro also said many people were upset and began to search for apartments Monday night.

Last night, the IPO met with the Lewis community to discuss the new proposal and legislation agreed upon by the Northeast Government and leaders of IPO. Thea Costine, housing assistant manager, led the meeting by reassuring the Lewis residents that the new proposal allows current residents to either choose to stay in the room they have without compulsory admission into the IPO or be given first pickings in the lottery to move into another building. Costine also claimed that no one was going to be kicked out because of the upcoming program changes.

Carol Lebold, coordinator of the IPO, discussed with the Lewis community the importance of having language and international programs, like in the Thatcher community. Lebold claims that the common denominator in the international students is a strong interest in global issues. For other students, especially foreign students, this is a safe and welcoming haven when they enter UMass for the first time. The IPO accepts any students with global concerns, not necessarily only foreign students. In connection with IPO, the Language Program, which will now include Chinese and Italian, will focus on language acquisition and culture.

But the largest problem that Lebold and Terese Pasquale of the Foreign Language Programs (an affiliation of IPO) faced were the long waiting lists to enter Thatcher. Lewis was chosen as the expansion site because the two are located in the same cluster. "They have been thriving and growing here" and this would foster support for one another, according to Lebold. Lebold also suggested that Lewis and Thatcher students should convene to ease the transition.

Pasquale reiterated the point of the

Turn to PLAN, page 2

Feminist author invited by Women's Studies

Research on women examined

By Rebecca Sablo
Collegian Staff

The UMass Women's Studies Department continue their 1998–1999 lecture series, "Truth and Consequences: The Ethics and Epistemology of Research," today with a presentation from Professor of economic geography, Julie Graham.

Entitled "Stuffed I Know!: Reflections on Postmodern Feminist Social Research," Graham's lecture will be from 4–6 p.m. in Herter 301.

Graham will address the use of social research to create an alternative understanding of gendered subjects.

She will also be discussing current difficulties surrounding the research of women, during a period of post–structuralist feminism.

The lecture, which will mainly examine women in contemporary Australian mining towns, follows the publication of her latest book, "The End of Capitalism (As We Knew It): A Feminist Critique of Political Economy."

The book was co–written by Katherine Gibson, an associate professor of geography at Monash University in Melbourne, Australia, under the pen name J.K. Gibson–Graham.

Graham received her bachelor's degree from Smith in 1968 and her Ph.D. from Clark University in 1984.

She become a full professor at UMass in 1996 after entering the UMass community in 1984.

Although not currently teaching a class that deals with gender, Graham said, "I use feminist theory in my research... and in all my theoretical work."

She is presently working on a new project, "Rethinking Economy."

Funded by the National Science Foundation, the project involves community based research on the "hidden economies" of the Pioneer Valley to expose an economy that does not rely entirely on capitalism.

Eventually, the research will

Turn to AUTHOR, page 2

UMass looks into stolen credit cards

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Police Department has enlisted the help of the United States Postal Service to investigate the increasing number of credit card fraud incidents on campus.

According to UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, the department is currently investigating more than 50 cases of credit card theft and/or fraud. Many students have complained to the police that they received bills for credit cards they never applied for, or for cards they applied for but never received.

"[We are] working closely with the U.S. Postal Service, as well as the fraud units of the credit card companies, to identify the users through the tracks they leave in regards to the transactions they are making," he said.

One credit card company in particular is being investigated, Luippold said, but he was unable to release the name of that company. The police and postal service are also reviewing the protocol Housing Services follows concerning the delivery of on–campus mail.

"It's a real lousy system," said Cynthia McCluskey, assistant manager of Mail Services in Goodell.

She explained that mail is delivered to campus by the United States Postal Service, then handled by students who sort the mail in the individual residence halls. Packages and misdirected mail are collected in bins and kept in the cluster offices.

The misdirected mail, mail (including credit cards) addressed to students who have moved to different rooms or dormitories, is then handled by Mail Services. But sometimes the misdirected mail sits in the cluster offices for days at a time, she said, and many people have access to it.

Housing Services is responsible for the mail rooms and cluster offices, and the hiring and training of student mail sorters. Bob Campbell, the assistant director for administration of Housing Services, said he was not aware of the extent of the credit card fraud situation.

He admits, however, that the organization of the cluster offices lends to problems; some offices have individual secured mail rooms, but some, such as the Southwest towers, need to share functions. But short of putting up walls, Housing Services can only instaie vigilant overview and better training programs for student mail sorters.

"I believe that basically the program works well," he said, "but [in dealing with the mail of] 11,000 people, I'm not surprised that it happens."

Some residence directors, such as Oscar Jones of Kennedy Residence Hall, are trying to educate their residents about credit card fraud and theft.

Jones has been urging students to close mailboxes completely by turning the combination lock, instead of just shutting the mailbox door, leaving it unlocked.

Luippold had additional suggestions for students. He said that although some thefts seem to be occurring through the mail system, other thefts are the result of individuals taking advantage of new "streamlined" application processes to apply for credit cards using the

Turn to FRAUD, page 3

RSOs to showcase Student Union gems

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

A "melting pot" of Registered Student Organizations and groups at the University of Massachusetts will be showcasing their group efforts and the need to celebrate student involvement on campus at the 1999 Student Union Showcase today.

From 12–6 p.m., RSO's and student groups will be placed under one roof in what Paula Hodecker, director of the Crafts Center, calls a laboratory experiment.

"I see the Student Union as a laboratory where students can participate in various forms of dialogue," Hodecker said. "We don't know what is going to happen when you place so many organizations together, but we know it'll be something positive."

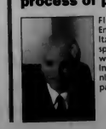
The event, organized by the Student Activities Cluster and organizations affiliated with Campus Activities, is focused on encouraging students to collaborate with each other through showcasing the numerous opportunities for student participation on campus.

Featuring music, dance, and poetry, the Student Union Showcase will be have group performances from Boundaries, the Juggling Club, Ballet Club, Soul–TV, and much more.

Free food will be included in a special reception at 3 p.m. in which various student businesses such as Greenough Snack Bar, Sweets N' More, and Co–Op will be supplying

Turn to GEMS, page 3

BETH KIRKORIAN/COLLEGIAN
This artwork by Geraldine Erman, is just a sampling of what will be in the Student Union Showcase today.



EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 28 LOW: 2	HIGH: 32 LOW: 12	HIGH: 34 LOW: 24

SOURCE: CNN.COM

NEWS PAGE 8

Consul councils process of peace

Find out what New England Consul General Itzhak Levanon will be speaking about today as well as the latest news in the Jewish community on the Jewish Affairs page.

ARTS PAGE 6

Knockin' on Mullins' Door

Get the info on Bob Dylan and Natalie Merchant's show at the Mullins Center tonight, also check out trax in today's Arts & Living.

SPORTS PAGE 10

What a long, strange trip

Michele LoPresti has seen the ups and downs of collegiate athletic life in her years at UM. The senior gymnast has recovered from a hobbling injury to become one of UMass's' best. Check out the back page for more sports action.

Arts & Living 7
Classifieds 10
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
FYI 10
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Correction

In the Feb. 18 issue of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, a news article on the Career Fair misquoted Helen Roth- Bassell. Pepsi Cola's recruitment of University of Massachusetts students is not associated with the University's contract with Coca-Cola.

■ author

continued from page 1

produce case studies of non- capitalist economies and provide alternatives for economic development policy. The research is in collaboration with similar studies in Australia.

The lecture series, "Truth and Consequences," is co- sponsored by the Graduate School, the School of Natural Sciences, the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, the School of Humanities and Fine Arts, and the Vice Chancellor of Research Affairs.

The series aims to create a better understanding of the relationship between traditional and social research. In addition, it examines the interaction of research with feminist methodology.

Presenters look at societal standards which limit true understanding and examination of gendered issues.

Lectures are free and open to the public.

■ plan

continued from page 1

IPO by comparing the University to other universities. The programs are a resource and "most good public universities have offerings to students like international houses...thats why they're here." Lewis does not promise to be as well funded as Thatcher, initially because the donations that sustain this new move are not as vast as the existing Thatcher funds, according to Darious Burton. Changes in any building occur slowly, according to Northeast Governor, Erik Jernberg, because only recently metal beds have left Lewis. Furniture upgrades take time to filter in.

Jernberg also reminded the students of Lewis that the new proposal as opposed to the old one has a noticeable student voice. Maju Varghese, SGA Northeast Area treasurer, was also extremely glad that the IPO answered everyone's questions and fears that had snowballed in the previous 24 hours. Varghese has nothing against Thatcher but it initially seemed that a step forward for Thatcher would mean a step backwards for Lewis. Overall, in Varghese's opinion, the meeting went well and IPO was very professional and receptive.

Navarro said his main concern is seeing the new proposal in writing with signatures from IPO.

BETH KIRKORIAN/COLLEGIAN

Bike tricks!

A Senior German/Film major does some difficult tricks outside the Student Union yesterday afternoon.

CAMPUS profile

BY DANIELLE FUGAZY
COLLEGIAN STAFF

After ten years in the army marked with travels to the Persian Gulf and Italy, Jonas Patruno is proof that service can pay off.

A University of Massachusetts senior, Patruno has achieved reputable leadership through the ROTC. This past summer he went to Fort Louis in Washington State with a handful of other senior cadets to be evaluated and left with the honor of being named cadet battalion commander of the Minuteman battalion. The evaluation is based on grade point average, prior preformance as well as other things, said Patruno.

Straight from high school Patruno enrolled full time in the Army. "When I joined I thought is was going to be like a movie, with everyone yelling and screaming at me, but it's not so bad — you learn your job and you do it. I learned from experience," said Patruno.

Patruno decided to go the Army rather then straight to college because he felt he needed a little more time to grow up.

"I always wanted to go to college but I didn't think I was smart enough or mature enough to handle college at that time. I hate to think of what I would be doing now if I didn't use the Army as a stepping stone."

While competely his service in the Army, Patruno did just that. He had plenty of time to grow up and experience things that most people never will. During six years of service, Petruno spent three years stationed in Naples, Italy.

"I went all over Europe and I wouldn't change that. I had this set up where I was basically was off more than I was on. I saw all the big cities. I went to Germany for Oktoberfest."

However Patruno's time in the service was not always fun. At the age of eighteen, he spent six months in the Persian Gulf during Dersert Storm. Patruno describes the experience as "weird. It's like a past dream. I was so young, it was a reality check for me," said Petruno.

Petruno left the Army after he had served his time, and as a Chicopee native decided to come to the UMass. Two years after he had been studying at UMass, Petruno joined the Army ROTC program, but only as a reserve.

As part of the reserve Petruno is required to work only one weekend a month at the Westover airport base helicopter unit. From his work at the base, Petruno has decided to put graduate school on hold and go to Army flight school instead. "It's a ten month flight school in Alabama and when I finish I want to fly helicopters for the Army," said Petruno. Eventually Petruno, 27, would like to put his major in exercise science to use and become a physical therapist, but right now he is "pumped up" to become a pilot.

As a full time student and a commander of ROTC Petruno "goes all day long. I don't get to take naps," said Petruno. He starts his day at 5:15 am and has to be at physical training by 6:00am. "It's a structured workout and we get one credit for doing it. We workout for a half of an hour and then run for a half of an hour. We also teach the juniors how to run the workouts," said Petruno.

Other then the one-credit he gets for workouts there is a three--credit class that all the cadets take. "Depending on what year you are determines what ROTC class you will be required to take, but everyone in the year of school takes the same class," said Petruno.

After Petruno's finishes his vigorous workout he meets with the officers that run the ROTC program. "I just sit and listen to what they are up to. I am like the middle man between them and the cadets," said Petruno.

Other then ROTC Petruno still has a full time schedule of classes and two jobs to worry about. He works about twenty hours a week, splitting his time between Telecom and Acedemic Instructional Media Serivce or AIMS. Even though Petruno is obviously very busy he still manages to maintain a 3.3 grade point average.

In addition, Petruno manages to find time for his passion — rugby. A player for the Springfield men's rugby club, Petruno started playing during his stay in Naples, Italy.

Despite all of his various commitments, Petruno never lets the pressure of being the leader of the Minutemen battalion (which includes cadets from UMass, Amherst, Smith, Western New England, and Mount Holyoke) get to him.

"I enjoy being a leader," he says, "it takes a while to be comfortable leading and even after ten years of military training I don't think anyone knows how to be a leader. Everyday is a learning experience, I sometimes learn things about myself and sometimes about other people. I like it that way."

Petruno describes the military as a positive thing in his life, but says it may not be that way for everybody. "The military is a amplifier of your personality. If you go in as a good person you come out excelling, if you go in as a bad person you come out worse off. I know this sounds corny but the Army really does let you be all that you can be. However there is no place for people who don't want to pull their own weight," Petruno said.

BETH KIRKORIAN/COLLEGIAN

UMass Army ROTC cadet battalion commander and senior, Jonas Patruno.

Paid advertisement

HOW TO LAND YOUR DREAM INTERNSHIP
(Even the one YOU didn't know existed)

If you're starting to think about your career, even just an inkling, it may be time to focus on finding a summer internship. Following are some "insider" insights about how to land your dream internship in some of today's fast-forward industries like media, entertainment, fashion and high-tech, that likely don't recruit on campus.

WHAT TURNS YOU ON?

Not the typical first question you might think of when plotting your first career experience, but you really should think about it. The best places to work are often the places that make or do things that already interest you. And who wrote the rule that work shouldn't be fun? "It helps to start by thinking about which classroom topics interest you the most and what hobbies get you excited," says Samer Hamadeh, President of Vaultreports.com and the co-author of "America's Top Internships" and "The Internship Bible," two of the most useful books on the subject. Take his advice and ask yourself some questions. Do you spend a lot of time listening to music and going to concerts? Maybe you should check out working for a local radio station, a record label or a music publishing company. Are you a devoted athlete? Try contacting a fun sporting goods company, a fitness magazine, or a sports talent agency.

CREATE YOUR OWN JOB

After you've asked yourself what you like, and thought of some of your favorite products and activities, you may find that many of your choices lead to smaller or less structured companies that likely don't recruit on campus, or that don't have a formal internship program. Don't get discouraged!! In fact, think of it as a huge opportunity because you can potentially create your own job! There's nothing wrong with calling or writing a company out of the blue and letting them know who you are and what you're interested in. Many of the smaller companies will be thrilled to have been approached and more than likely can use the extra hands for the summer. One of Hamadeh's favorite stories is about a college student who was interested in sports law. The guy figured that Michael Jordan's lawyer must be pretty good at it, so he read a bunch of newspaper articles until he found the guy's name, then he wrote him a letter explaining why he wanted to work for him. "The lawyer had never received a letter like that from anyone before," Hamadeh says. "So he brought him in for an interview and was so impressed that he hired him for the summer."

SELL YOUR SELF, NOT YOUR NUMBERS

Just because you may not graduate cum laude doesn't mean you won't qualify for some of the most selective internship programs. "You have to make yourself sound interesting," says Price Hicks, who hooks students up with summer jobs at places like Warner Brothers as part of her work with the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. "The guy who wrote about growing up on a dairy farm is the one we remember best." The people, who may have the best grades, but drone on and on about why they want to be television directors all tend to blend together, she says.

SCIENTISTS CAN BE JOURNALISTS

Remember that the purpose of an internship is to gain experience. The idea is to "test drive" career options that you think might interest you for your future. And what interests you for a career may have nothing to do with what interests you in school (How many psych majors actually become psychologists? How many history majors become historians? You get the point.) You never really know what someone might be looking for, so don't feel intimidated by internships that aren't directly in your field of study. Case in point, a biology major beat out a slew of journalism majors for one of three highly coveted internships at the Center for Investigative Reporting. Out of approximately 90 applicants, she was among those with the least direct experience. "It just so happened we were working on a project about chemicals in the environment, so her skills came in handy and she ended up playing a big role in the reporting," said Maryann Sargent, who is the internship coordinator at the Center.

REMEMBER THAT SMALL CAN BE BIG

Sometimes, you really may be better off going to work for a company where the duties of an intern aren't well defined. In small but super fast-growing internet companies, for instance, there's always a lot going on, so interns can often show up on day one and pick the things that interest them the most. "Our interns will always be working on several different projects," says Jeff Daniel, who runs a cool new service called CollegeHire.com that helps match up undergrads with high-tech and internet-related internships and entry-level jobs. "We look for people who can adapt well to the culture of fast-moving companies and can excel in an environment that's changing rapidly." Big change means new opportunities, and that's where a hungry intern can step into new, exciting areas and make a big contribution.

The Secret Success Series

brings you information designed to help you achieve your personal and career goals. Watch for the rest of this series in future issues of your school newspaper.

CHECK IT OUT.

Below are key resources for your internship hunt, including specific listings for openings by company, industry and location.

BOOKS:

America's Top Internships - Mark Oldman and Samer Hamadeh
The Internship Bible - Mark Oldman and Samer Hamadeh

WEB SITES:

www.internships.com - Comprehensive city and regional guides to internship opportunities nationwide.

www.emmys.org/eps/index.html - If you're interested in the television world, check out this site, which posts internships available through the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

www.aaf.org - For aspiring advertising and marketing execs, this is the site for The American Advertising Federation. It offers a comprehensive directory of internship opportunities in the advertising and media industries.

www.review.com/career/find/intern.cfm - This is the "Princeton Review's" on-line database of internships. You can search for openings on a city-by-city basis, and by industry. Listings are highly descriptive, and candid.

www.interns.org - Ideal for budding politicians, civil advocates and lawyers. The Washington Intern Foundation posts internship available both on and off Capitol Hill.

www.inroadsinc.org - Tells about national corporate-sponsored internship programs that give preferred placement to talented African-American, Hispanic and Native American students.

www.vaultreports.com - An invaluable way to learn more about specific companies where you may want to explore possible opportunities.

www.collegehire.com - An awesome site for anyone who wants to work in the high-tech industry. Submit your resume and a detailed form describing your background and interests. Collegehire will e-mail you with opportunities that match your qualifications and interests.

Secret
"Strong Enough for a Man. But Made for a Woman."

BETH KIRKORIAN/COLLEGIAN

Study...Study...Study

Junior communication major Jay Katz does some last minute studying outside Machmer yesterday.

■ gems

continued from page 1

food and drinks in recognition of student participation.

Craft demonstrations including mask making and silk screening will be exhibited as well as a raffle and balloon artist, Phil. Art will be displayed in the art exhibit, and the Colonial Lounge will be showing videos from various clubs including the Motorsport Club, Mutants Against Majority Organizations (MAMO), Muslim Student Association, and Alpha Phi Omega is presenting a ribbon campaign on the Mass. Society for Prevention Against Cruelty of Children.

Special events include live broadcasting from WMUA, an exhibit by Index Yearbook displaying old yearbooks and archives of the Student Union. An open house at UVC will be displaying the new video editing system they have incorporated into their broadcasting. The Student Nurse Association will also be present to inform students of the importance of bone marrow donations.

Krista Wilson, Campus Activities Accounts Manager, feels the showcase is an opportunity for students to display more than their academic potential.

"We want to show people that students are here for more than book-learning and to show that they have a lot to offer," Wilson said. "These are the students on campus, and this is what they do."

The Student Union was created as a meeting place for students, and Hodecker feels it has a rich history of accomplishments that add to the dynamic of the university.

"A lot of serious work is achieved by students in the organizations," Hodecker said. "There's such a variety of things that take place in the Student Union."

Hodecker feels the day's events give students a chance to explore what goes on in the Student Union which they may not have known about otherwise.

■ fraud

continued from page 1

names and personal information of other students.

Luippold also suspects many students may have been lured into signing up with credit card companies offering free give-aways, not aware that they signed an agreement authorizing a credit card.

Luippold advises students to be aware of what they are applying for, to have the credit card sent to their home address, and to ask the company when the card should arrive. If the card does not arrive in a timely manner, students should contact the credit card company and the police.

Students should also limit the amount of credit cards they apply for and keep tight control over the cards they have.

"[You should] really make sure you know where your credit card is at all times," he said. "It doesn't take long for someone to take your card, go out and run up a few hundred dollars in charges."

If a student loses a credit card or discovers it has been stolen, he or she should contact the police and the credit card company immediately, Luippold said. If a student receives an unwanted credit card, he or she should destroy the credit card by cutting it up.

Death penalty a possiblity for racism murder

By Terri Langford
Associated Press

JASPER, Texas — A white supremacist was convicted of murder yesterday and could get the death penalty for chaining a black man to a pickup truck and dragging him until his body was torn to pieces in a crime that shocked the nation with its savagery.

The jury of 11 whites and one black took less than 2 1/2 hours to reach a verdict against John William King in the slaying last June of James Byrd Jr. Courtroom spectators applauded and the victim's relatives broke into tears.

The jury then began hearing evidence on whether the 24-year-old laborer should get the death penalty or life in prison for one of the grisliest racial crimes in the United States since the civil rights era.

"I am relieved," said Stella Brumley, Byrd's sister. "That's all we wanted, was justice."

His son, Ross Byrd, said: "All I know is that there's one down and two to go."

Serbs come to agreement yet final resolution still uncertain

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

RAMBOUILLET, France — Serbs agreed in principle yesterday to give limited self-rule to majority ethnic Albanians in Kosovo, but the two sides failed after 17 days of intense negotiations to conclude a deal for ending their yearlong conflict. More talks were scheduled for March as a new round of violence shook the province. The partial settlement puts on hold, at least temporarily, NATO's threats to bomb Serb targets if they don't adopt the complex plan that would force them to withdraw troops from Kosovo and accept NATO peacekeepers.

After four days of strenuous personal diplomacy, shuttling between the two sides and even enlisting the help of 1996 GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright accepted less than she had insisted on.

There was no agreement on deploying NATO peacekeepers in the tense province to enforce the settlement, and the Serbs refused to give their consent to major elements of the self-rule sought by the ethnic Albanians.

According to senior U.S. officials, the Serbs still insist on Serbian courts for Serbs accused of crimes, refuse to permit the ethnic Albanians to have a president and are unwilling to cooperate with a war crimes tribunal looking into atrocities against civilians committed during the war that has claimed some 2,000 lives.

"But we have broken the stalemate that hung over Kosovo for so long," Albright said.

The Albanians also hedged. They were given two weeks for "consultations" with people in the province, and still are insisting on a referendum to vote for independence and secession from Serbia at the end of the three-year autonomy trial period envisioned by the accord formulated by the United States, Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Russia.

The settlement also calls for a restoration of the cease-fire that was arranged by U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke last October and for the staged removal of Serbian troops and special police units — but only after a NATO force is deployed to enforce the agreement. In order to put a halt to the protracted negotiations, which ran through two deadlines, the ethnic Albanians and Serbs agreed to another round of talks in France, beginning March 15.

In Washington, President Clinton noted that NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana still "has the authority in his pocket now" to order airstrikes. "That depends upon the actions of the Serbs," he said. "What we need is continued restraint." "I believe that the Kosovar Albanian people will strongly support what their negotiators have done, because the agreement represents the opportunity for a better life after years of repression and fear," Clinton said in a statement issued by the White House later.

At the same time, he warned, "the Serbs should be prepared to return to the negotiations on March 15 with a commitment to sign the full agreement."

British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook, who co-chaired the talks with French Foreign Minister Hubert Vedrine, said: "We have done a lot here even if we have not done enough."

BETH KIRKORIAN/COLLEGIAN

Need a job?

Tesia Volker and Krista Salomon of the Fund for Public Interest, campaign for summer jobs Tuesday.

Time to Party in Manhattan!

The New Habitat Hotel is offering students introductory rates* (from $65). Habitat guest rooms feature one or two twin beds and shared or private bathrooms.

HABITAT HOTEL

57th Street between Park and Lexington Avenues
New York, NY 10022
Tel (212) 753-8841
Fax (212) 829-9605

Toll Free 1-800-255-0482

Close to major attractions: Niketown, Bloomingdales, Planet Hollywood, Hard Rock Cafe, Carnegie Hall and more!

A PROPERTY OF CITYLIFE HOTEL GROUP

*Valid student identification or a copy of this ad required

THE 1999
STUDENT UNION
SHOWCASE

Come to celebrate our student involvement and to thank our patrons. The festivities will feature the services and programs offered by the student groups, agencies, businesses and governing bodies.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24

OPEN HOUSE NOON TO 6 P.M.

STUDENT PERFORMANCES!

Poetry! Dance! Music! Art!
Special Reception 3-6 All Invited
LIGHT FARE & BEVERAGES
• BALLOON ARTIST • RAFFLE
• CRAFT DEMOS • T-SHIRTS

Free Sneak Screening of "Enemy of the State" - Ballroom 7:00

Call for Information:
Krista Wilson @ 545.1282
Paula Hodecker @ 545.2096

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

To work or not to work

Everybody hates the English major. There wasn't a person on campus last week who didn't realize there was a career fair in the Campus Center on Wednesday. Those damn table tents were all over the Bluewall, booths were set up on the concourse, and the hallway to the Student Union was covered with giant laminated posters. All of this is very disconcerting to those of us who decided not to be engineers. I can hear it now... all of Northeast in a raucous chorus of barking. "Revenge of the Nerds" type laughter, directed at me. "We told you!" they'll scream, shaking their graphing calculators and calculus books. "We'll all have jobs when we graduate — fifty grand a year to start!" Yeah, but you still got wedgies every day in high school.

Paul Martinez

I wasn't even going to go, to tell you the truth, until my girlfriend guilted me into it. Besides, I thought, "what the hell am I going to say to the kind of companies that recruit at career fairs?"

"Uh... hi. My name's Paul. Here's my resume. Qualifications? Well, I'm a really good lifeguard. No, no never had to jump in and save anyone. I pulled a drowning kid out of the pool by his hair, though. I can do other stuff, too, like you know... uh, office stuff. Did I mention I write columns for the Collegian?"

"Interesting. What else can you tell me about yourself?"

"Uh, I'm a slacker?"

"Next!"

Doesn't anyone want to hire an unqualified smart-ass anymore? In case you haven't noticed, those of us in liberal arts majors who are in their last semester of school are getting a little antsy about graduation — or to be more specific, post-graduation. See, in exchange for four (or in my case a bit more) years of feeling really smart and cool, and hanging around Bartlett smoking cigarettes, we humanities majors sign away our futures.

It's a little known fact, but when you declare the English major, you sign away your hopes of ever being taken seriously by someone from another discipline. Just ask a philosophy major. Want to make a humanities major hate you? Ask them what they're planning to do when they graduate. Whatever they say, look at them with an expression of sincere concern and say "Yeah, but has your education prepared you for that?"

Then run. Don't worry, though. Most of us smoke and can't make it too far. Just duck when that twenty pound edition of the Norton Anthology of English Literature comes flying at you in a courier bag.

Since I live with a bunch of engineering majors, they find the whole situation I'm in incredibly funny. They laughed when I told them I was going to the career fair to find a job. They were going, too — to get those little foot-balls and multi-colored slinkies they hand out. Damn juniors. I morosely picked at my lunch while they gleefully made comments like "Glad I have a whole year left!" and "Thank God I'm gonna get a job when I graduate!" and the time honored "I hear Mickey-D's is hiring!"

So despite their "encouragement," I went to the hellish thing, mostly because the idea of working in a warehouse again makes me twitch. Everybody there except me had a suit, a resume, and a plan. I wandered from booth to booth, sobbing, searching for at least one company that had "Looking for English or Humanities majors" signs. They were few and far between. Every management and engineering major there saw me for what I was and laughed.

The experience wasn't a complete bust, though. I found out what I don't want to do. I don't want to make anything, sell anything, buy anything, or participate in any buying, selling or manufacturing of anything in any way (John Cusack never said it better). That pretty much cuts me entirely out of the economy, but as an English major I made that decision long ago.

I even found a job that will allow me to sleep with a clear conscience, knowing that the corporation I work for won't be destroying the environment or exploiting Third World workers. And even if that doesn't work out, I've got something else lined up. I'm going into business for myself. Check it out.. I've even got my sales pitch lined up.

"Spare change?"

Paul Martinez is a UMass student.

Attn: Chancellor!

If Frantz Fanon's The Wretched of the Earth was a "striptease of our (Western) humanism" as Sartre said, then the Chancellor's announcement on Friday to effectively end affirmative action at UMass is as brazen as a flasher in a schoolyard. The strange thing, however, is that in his email message announcing these "changes," the Chancellor sounds very committed to diversity. So although he may not yet realize the profound ramifications his decision will have on campus and at the national level as well, I'm sure he's not a racist. I'm sure he doesn't wear Klan costumes. I think he's just confused about his innate humanity, and can picture him cowering under his bed.

The Chancellor says he's "personally strongly committed to maintaining a diverse campus." He's also speaking about broadening the notion of diversity to include issues of generational and economic access as well. Fair enough. But what is quite bizarre is the fact that the administration has chosen, in an overwhelmingly Orwellian way, to declare the present move a step forward in the evolution of our thinking about diversity. The nasties in California may have voiced their racist war more crudely, but at UMass, the death of affirmative action is being hailed as a great step forward in the march of humankind to greatness and glory.

Vamsee Juluri

"As the country's ideas of diversity continue to evolve, so do the admissions policies necessary to reach our goals," says the Chancellor. So here we are, joining some grand historical evolution. Of course, the last time some folks were speaking about evolution and enlightenment, a few hundred million people were being slaughtered, enslaved, or colonized. The Chancellor, of course, recognizes a "moral imperative" for dealing with "past injustice" but it's not the past that's at stake here. Past injustices are beyond justice; it's the battle against the injustice of the present that's important.

That's why it's easy for the "powers that be" to pretend that the past is all that the historically marginalized care about. It's their way of avoiding what it takes for justice in the present, and avoiding facing up to the crisis in their own humanity.

Educational policies that supposedly favor minorities aren't doing them a favor. For the people who have little, they mean a lot, but they're not a handout. Minorities are merely politely and peacefully taking a bit of what everyone else already has in full stock. It just looks like minorities are a pampered bunch because this society is simply not yet used to seeing the tiniest piece of the share go into hands that never held them before. It's of course doubly damning that the classist corporate structure of the times is devouring even its own — white workers and families— who may not have historically been mauled as badly as blacks, but who also face a serious systemic threat to their own lives that are experienced as crisis in work, family, and faith.

To put it plainly, this is what is happening: (a) UMass/corporate America mauls everyone at large: (b) this hurts blacks and whites, especially if you're poor and black, and certainly if you're poor and white; (c) but now, white pain may be relatively new in comparison to black pain and so (d) UMass/corporate America sets up a climate where black gains can be cut back to appease white pain. So everybody's hurting. Instead of addressing this, the present solution seems to cause more hurt to those who already have a history of being hurt, so that everyone else who's beginning to get hurt will feel it less.

This is the real bottom line. Who will tell the Chancellor?

And tell him we must, lest the stench of the racist climate of our times settle on him and scuttle his good intentions. Not just because we need to empathize with the "oppressocracy" in a Gandhian spirit, but mainly because it is going to hurt us a great deal more than it's going to hurt them. So here's the deal. The Chancellor announces "changes" in admissions and financial aid policies that will, according to him (a) lead UMass into legality and a sigh of relief and (b) cause a revolutionary breakthrough in our understanding and practice of diversity and strengthen our commitment to all of our fine ideals. High on ideals, zip on common-sense.

